[fol. 1] Petition of Donnelly Garment Company for Review of Order of the National Labor Relations Board.

(Filed in United States Circuit Court of Appeals on June 21, 1943.)

Before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, Petitioner,
No. 12,641 vs.
National Labor Relations Board, Respondent.

To the Honorable United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit:

Comes now Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, and petitions this Court for a review of a certain order entered on June 9, 1943, by the National Labor Relations Board in a proceeding instituted by it against your petitioner in a cause entitled "In the Matter of Donnelly Garment Company and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to a Contract", numbered before the said National Labor Relations Board as Case No. C-1382.

Your petitioner, for convenience, will designate respondent National Labor Relations Board as the Board, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as DGWU, and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as ILGWU.

In support of said petition your petitioner respectfully represents:

(a) The nature of the proceedings as to which this review is sought is as follows: The Board, upon charges

[fol. 2] dated August 9, 1938 and amended charges dated April 6, 1939 filed by the ILGWU, did, on April 27, 1939, issue its complaint against your petitioner, whereby your petitioner was charged with having engaged within the jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3), and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the National Labor Relations Act, 49 Stat. 449 U. S. Code, Title 29. Said complaint and the divers amendments thereto were duly answered by petitioner denying said allegations of the unfair labor practices aforesaid and affirmatively pleading legal objections to the Board's jurisdiction and to the proceedings herein and further pleading an unlawful conspiracy on the part of the ILGWU to force petitioner by fraud, violence and secondary boycott to compel its employees to join said union against their will in violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and further pleading that the Board and its agents and representatives aided and assisted the ILGWU in said unlawful conspiracy.

A hearing was had upon said complaint and the amendments thereto before a Trial Examiner designated by the Board, Mr. James C. Batten, which said hearings began on June 5, 1939, and continued until July 15, 1939.

The said trial examiner ruled that testimony of petitioner's employees as to how and why they formed and maintained the DGWU was immaterial and of no value and refused to permit petitioner to show by such evidence that it had not dominated or interfered with the rights of its employees to self-organization, or to show that the [fol. 3] ILGWU was engaged in said unlawful conspiracy, and refused to permit petitioner to submit other competent and material evidence.

Thereafter, the trial examiner filed his Intermediate Report and the Board, on March 6, 1940, made its Decision and Order in said proceedings, sustaining the rulings, findings and recommendations of the trial examiner, and finding that your petitioner had engaged in unfair labor practices in that it had dominated and interfered with its employees in their free choice of a labor union, and discriminated against one May Fike by refusing to re-employ her.

Thereafter and on or about March 9, 1940, your petitioner filed in this Court its petition for a review of said order.

Thereafter and on November 6, 1941, this Court rendered its decision finding that your petitioner had been denied due process of law in said proceedings before the Board and its trial examiner because the said testimony of its employees so excluded and rejected as to how and why they formed and maintained the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was competent and material. This Court remanded the case to the Board for further proceedings, including the taking of said testimony which had been erroneously excluded.

On April 21, 192, the Board entered an order vacating its decision and order of March 6, 1940, and set said matter for further hearing on July 6, 1942, before the same Trial Examiner, Mr. James C. Batten, who had prejudged the testimony of petitioner's employees as being immaterial and of no value.

On July 8, 1942, prior to the taking of any testimony in said further hearing, your petitioner filed objections to [fol. 4] the designation of said James C. Batten as trial examiner in said further hearing because of his bias and prejudice against respondent and his prejudgment of the issues and particularly of the evidence of its employees to be adduced at such further hearings, and asked the Board to designate another trial examiner. On July 28, 1942, the Board denied your petitioner's application for designation of another trial examiner and said further hearing was had before said trial examiner, commencing on August 3, 1942, and concluded on September 17, 1942, who limited petitioner's evidence to the testimony of eleven employees with regard to how and why they voluntarily and without domination formed the DGWU, and the testimony of Mrs. James A. Reed, president of the Company, to matters occurring prior to July 15, 1939. He refused to receive other competent and material evidence, which we shall hereafter set forth more particularly.

Thereafter the trial examiner filed his Intermediate Report to the Board, again finding that your petitioner had engaged in unfair labor practices by dominating and interfering with its employees in their free choice of a labor union. Thereafter the Board, on June 9, 1943, filed and entered its decision and order in said proceeding, affirming all the rulings of the trial examiner and adopting in toto his findings, conclusions and recommendations, with one minor exception. It expressly stated, with regard to the testimony of petitioner's employees as to how and why they voluntarily and without domination formed and maintained the DGWU, as follows: "We are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in an administration of the Act, that conclusion-[fol. 5] ary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case". Said decision and order are made a part hereof by reference and will be printed and filed herein in accordance with Rule 27 (1) of this Court as amended January 12, 1943. Said order is in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

"Order

"Upon the entire record in the case, and pursuant to Section 10 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, the National Labor Relations Board hereby orders that the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, Kansas City, Missouri, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns shall:

"1. Cease and desist from:

"(a) Dominating or interfering with the administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union, or with the formation or administration of any other labor organization of its employees, and from contributing financial or other support to Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees;

"(b) Giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification, or supplement thereof, or to any superseding contract or agreement, with Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and from giving effect to its check-off agreement with said organization;

"(c) Discouraging membership in International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, or any other labor organization of its employees, or encouraging membership in Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees, by laying off any of its employees, or in any manner discriminating in regard to their hire and tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment;

"(d) Dominating, controlling, and using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain, and coerce the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

"(e) In any other manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

"2. Take the following affirmative action which the Board finds will effectuate the policies of the Act.

[fol. 6] "(a) Withdraw all recognition from Donnelly Garment Workers Union, as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment, and completely disestablish Donnelly Garment Workers as such representative;

"(b) Reimburse all of its employees for all dues and assessments, if any, which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

"(c) Post immediately in conspicuous places throughout the respondent's Kansas City factory, and maintain for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days, notices to its employees stating: (1) that the respondent will not engage in the conduct from which it is ordered to cease and desist in paragraphs 1 (a) to (e) hereof; (2) that the respondent will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraphs 2 (a) and (b) hereof; and (3) that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that the respondent will not in any manner discriminate against any employee because of membership or activity in said organization.

"(d) Notify the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region in writing within ten (10) days from the date of this Order what steps the respondent has taken to comply herewith.

"And It Is Further Ordered that the complaint, insofar as it alleges that the respondent, by discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike, has engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

"Signed at Washington, D. C., this 9 day of June 1943.

"Harry A. Millis,
Chairman,
"Gerard D. Reilly,
Member,
"John M. Houston,
Member,

(Seal) NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD."

(b) The facts and statutes upon which the venue in this proceeding are based are as follows:

Your petitioner, Donnelly Garment Company, is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State [fol. 7] of Missouri, and was at all the times herein referred to transacting business in the State of Missouri and within the jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

The National Labor Relations Act approved July 5, 1935 being Public Act, No. 198-74th Congress (49 Stat. 449; U.S. Code, Title 29, sections 151-166), in Section 10 (f) provides that "Any person aggrieved by a final order of the Board  may obtain a review of such order in any circuit court of appeals of the United States in the circuit wherein the unfair labor practice in question was alleged to have been engaged in or wherein such person resides or transacts business  by filing in such court a written petition praying that the order of the Board be modified or set aside."

The alleged unfair labor practices referred to in the complaint are alleged to have occurred within the territorial jurisdiction of this Court.

[fol. 8] (d) The points on which your petitioner intends to rely in support of [hits] its petition for review are as follows:

Your petitioner assigns as error each and all of the following matters, and each and all of the following rulings, actions and conduct of the Board and of the trial examiner in said proceedings, to-wit:

Your petitioner has been denied a fair trial before an impartial tribunal.

Trial Examiner, James C. Batten, from the inception of the hearings showed bias and prejudice against petitioner and a fixed and unalterable view and opinion that testimony of petitioner's employees concerning how and why they formed and maintained the DGWU as their bargaining representative was utterly worthless and immaterial. This Honorable Court ruled that said testimony was material and remanded the case for further proceedings. The Board again designated James C. Batten as trial examiner to conduct said further hearing; although he had prejudged the evidence and repeatedly stated during the first hearings his determined view that said evidence was of no value.

Petitioner filed with the Board its objections to the redesignation of the said James C. Batten as trial examiner and requested the designation of another trial examiner, which objections and motion (Board's Exhibit 1-CCCC) the Board overruled, said rulings being contained in Board's Exhibit 1-GGGGG. Your petitioner further protested to the said trial examiner, James C. Batten, against his proceeding as trial examiner, which said protests and [fol. 9] exceptions were designated Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQQ, which said protests and exceptions were disregarded and overruled by the trial examiner. The said James C. Batten as such trial examiner in such further hearings and in conformity with his fixed view and opinion as to the immateriality and worthlessness of said testimony of petitioner's employees disregarded said evidence and made the same ruling in his second Intermediate Report as he had previously made, and said bias and prejudice, and prejudgment of the issues were carried forward into the Board's Decision and Order by the Board's adopting the second Intermediate Report of James C. Batten and affirming all of his rulings and expressly stating (Decision and Order, P. 2) to-wit:

" . . . . We are, moreover, impelled to adhere to the opinion derived from our experience in the administration of the Act that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case";

although this Honorable Court had expressly held that said evidence was material. (123 F.2d 215) That by reason of the matters aforesaid your petitioner has been denied a fair and impartial trial herein, and has been deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Petitioner has been denied a fair trial herein by reason of the rulings and action of the trial examiner in striking from petitioner's answer and amendments thereto Part B thereof, and in excluding all proof thereon and concerning the unlawful conspiracy of the ILGWU to compel petitioner to force its employees, against their will, to join the [fol 10] ILGWU, and in furtherance of said conspiracy, and of the participation by the Board and its representatives to accomplish said unlawful purpose, and by reason of the affirmance by the Board of said rulings and action of the trial examiner.

Petitioner has been denied a fair trial herein by reason of the nonjudicial attitude and rulings of the trial examiner, James C. Batten, and his biased and unfair conduct throughout both the first and second hearings, and the adoption and approval thereof by the Board, to-wit:

(a) That during the first hearing of this matter said trial examiner, James C. Batten, became biased against petitioner and took a nonjudicial attitude toward petitioner's witnesses and evidence, and said bias, prejudice and nonjudicial attitude of this trial examiner continued in and throughout the second hearing held here[illegible] reason of which said trial examiner in both of said hearings refused to receive competent, material and proper evidence offered by your petitioner, and admitted improper, irrelevant and incompetent evidence offered by the Board and ILGWU, and made many unfair and improper rulings and findings against petitioner and intervener, throughout the course of both of said hearings, by reason of all of which your petitioner has been denied a fair trial herein and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) The exclusion by the trial examiner of testimony regarding violence of the ILGWU at other garment plants and of the testimony of employees as to the effect thereof upon them with reference to their attitude toward the [fol. 11] ILGWU and to the formation of the DGWU, was erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(c) The exclusion by the trial examiner of evidence regarding the ILGWU's conspiracy to force petitioner to force the employees to join the ILGWU and of the participation of the Board and its agents and representatives therein, was erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(d) The exclusion by the trial examiner of evidence of the terms of ILGWU contracts with other garment companies was erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial.

(e) The admission by the trial examiner of extended evidence concerning events prior to the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act and the basing of findings, conclusions and the Board's order thereon, was erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(f) The numerous rulings of the trial examiner limiting petitioner in the introduction of material and competent evidence and in permitting the Board and ILGWU to introduce immaterial and incompetent evidence were erroneous and show the bias of the trial examiner and Board against petitioner and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(g) The rulings of the trial examiner in the conduct of the second hearing in arbitrarily directing the order of proof and refusing to permit petitioner to proceed with its evidence in the order it desired, were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(h) The rulings of the trial examiner in the second hearing herein limiting the number of witnesses which petitioner and intervener were permitted to place on the stand, were erroneous and denied the petitioner a fair trial herein.

[fol. 12] (i) The rulings of the trial examiner in the second hearing herein, [confincing] the testimony of petitioner to the "offers of proof" which had been rejected by him at the previous hearing, and construing and limiting the scope of the evidence under said offers of proof, and refusing to receive other competent and material evidence which had been rejected by the trial examiner at the previous hearing were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(j) The rulings of the trial examiner erroneously interpreted the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals remanding this case for further hearing, and limiting the petitioner in the presentation of its evidence in accordance with said erroneous interpretations, were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(k) The rulings of the trial examiner refusing to permit petitioner to complete the examination of Wave Tobin and in striking out the testimony given by her while on the stand were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(l) The rulings of the trial examiner in the second hearing permitting the Board and ILGWU to introduce as "rebuttal" evidence, evidence that was not proper rebuttal evidence, and in limiting the denying to petitioner the right to present material and proper evidence in surrebuttal were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(m) The rulings of the trial examiner at the second hearing herein permitting the Board and ILGWU to introduce evidence upon various matters, and with reference to matters occurring during certain periods of time, and in refusing to permit petitioner or intervener to introduce [fol. 13] countervailing evidence as to said matters and with reference to said periods of time, were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(n) The rulings of the trial examiner herein refusing to permit petitioner to introduce competent, material and relevant evidence, and in requiring petitioner to submit "offers of proof" thereof, and in rejecting said offers of proof and each of same were erroneous and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein.

(o) The rulings and action of the trial examiner referred to above and in subsequent points herein, and the rulings and action of the Board in affirming and adopting same, show the bias and nonjudicial attitude of the trial examiner and of the Board toward petitioner and its evidence, and denied to petitioner a fair and impartial trial herein and deprived petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Decision and Order of the Board is not supported by the evidence.

None of the findings or conclusions of the trial examiner and the Board essential to support the decision and order of the Board are supported by any substantial evidence, or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but all are contrary to the overwhelming evidence in the case and are based upon speculation, conjecture, and unwarranted inferences, and show the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner and Board against petitioner.

[fol. 14] (A) Said findings and conclusions with reference to the Loyalty League are not supported by the evidence and are erroneous.

1. The Loyalty League was not a "prior labor union" and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was not a successor or outgrowth thereof and the holding of the Newport News Shipbuilding case (308 U. S. 241) and similar cases is not applicable here.

2. The Loyalty League was not formed, dominated or used by petitioner and its alleged activities are not attributable to petitioner.

3. The Loyalty League did not do the things the Board and trial examiner finds it did.

(a) The issuance of Loyalty League Check to Mr. Tyler does not show domination of the DGWU by the Loyalty League when the circumstances are considered.

(b) The meetings of March 18th, March 30th and April 27th were not Loyalty League meetings.

(c) The Loyalty League did not participate in the Fern Sigler or Sylvia Hull incidents.

(d) The March 2nd statement was not inspired or circulated by the Loyalty League.

(e) Most of the other activities attributed by the trial examiner and Board to the Loyalty League were not activities of the League, but if such alleged activities occurred they were activities by the employees, as such, and not as members of the Nelly Don Loyalty League.

(B) Said findings and conclusions with reference to [fol. 15] "supervisory" employees and your petitioner's responsibility for the activities of such employees are not supported by the evidence and are erroneous.

1. The findings and conclusions that Rose Todd was a supervisory employee or that she represented the management or was held out by the management as its representative or that the employees regarded her as such or that your petitioner is responsible for her activities are not supported by the evidence.

2. The findings and conclusions that the instructors or thread girls were supervisory employees or that they represented the management or were held out as representing the management or that the employees regarded them as representing the management or that your petitioner was responsible for their activities are not supported by the evidence.

3. The findings and conclusions that Hobart Atherton, Florence Strickland, Lena Tyhurst, Martha Gray, Ortense Root, Heath Cowan, Marvin Price, Ted Scoles, Mary Bogart and Dewey Atchison were supervisory employees or represented the management or were held out as representing the management or were regarded by the employees as representing the management or that your petitioner was responsible for their activities are not supported by the evidence.

(C) The findings and conclusions that petitioner dominated or interfered with its employees in the free choice of a labor union or in the formation and administration of the DGWU by permitting the use of its facilities, such as bulletin boards, telephone system, messenger service, mimeograph, ditto and typewriting machines, files, desks and meeting space, are not supported by the evidence and are erroneous.

[fol. 16] (D) The findings and conclusions that petitioner dominated and interfered with the free choice of its employees of a labor union by or through the circulation of the "March 2nd statement" or the circumstances surrounding same are not supported by the evidence.

(E) The findings and conclusions that petitioner dominated and interfered with the free choice of the employees of a labor union or bargaining representatives through the March 18th meeting of employees or by the remarks made by Mrs. Reed at said meeting are not supported by the evidence.

(F) The findings and conclusions that petitioner dominated the organization meeting of the DGWU on April 27, 1937 and thereby interfered with the free choice of its employees of a labor union or bargaining representatives are not supported by the evidence.

(G) The findings and conclusions that the prompt recognition of, and bargaining with, the DGWU by petitioner show domination of the DGWU or interference by petitioner with the free choice of its employees of a labor union or bargaining representatives, are not supported by the evidence.

(H) The findings and conclusions that the terms of the working agreements made between petitioner and the DGWU show domination of that union by petitioner or interference with its employees in their free choice of a labor union are not supported by the evidence.

1. Such findings and conclusions with reference to the "closed shop" provision in said contract are not supported by the evidence.

2. Such findings with reference to the method of determining piece work prices and that the appointment of [fol. 17] Rose Todd, Mrs. Nichols and Miss Spallito on the DGWU's committee for adjustment of piece work prices show domination of the DGWU by petitioner are not supported by the evidence.

(I) The findings and conclusions as to the instigation and approval of petitioner of the April 23d "demonstration" against Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler and that petitioner thereby dominated, coerced or interfered with its employees in their free choice of a labor union are not supported by the evidence.

(J) The findings and conclusions as to domination, coercion and interference by petitioner with its employees in their free choice of a labor union, based on petitioner's alleged hostility towards the ILGWU, are not supported by the evidence.

(K) The findings and conclusions that the petitioner contributed to the support of the DGWU or participated or interfered in its administration are not supported by the evidence.

(L) The findings and conclusions that Sylvia Hull was laid off by petitioner because of her membership in and activity on behalf of the ILGWU and the findings and conclusions that petitioner discriminated in regard to the tenure of employment of Sylvia Hull and thereby discouraged membership in the ILGWU and interfered with its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed to them in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act are not supported by the evidence.

(M) The findings and conclusions that petitioner entered into a check-off agreement with the DGWU and that the deduction by petitioner from the wages of its employees of their dues to the DGWU constituted domination or inter- [fol. 18] ference by petitioner with the rights of its employees in the free choice of a labor union are not supported by the evidence.

(N) The numerous findings and conclusions of the trial examiner, adverse to petitioner, and adopted by the Board, hereinafter set forth in subsequent points, are not supported by the evidence but are built and based on conjecture, speculation, and false inferences not warranted by the evidence.

The Board erred in the Decision and Order (in the second paragraph thereof) in finding that no prejudicial errors were committed in the rulings of the trial examiner, and erred in affirming the rulings of the trial examiner, for the reasons that said rulings were erroneous in law and contrary to the evidence, were prejudicial to petitioner, were due to the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner, and to his prejudgment of the evidence and issues against petitioner, and to his nonjudicial attitude in the conduct of the hearings, and for all the reasons and objections given and urged by petitioner at the time of the making of such rulings, and because same denied to petitioner a fair trial and deprived petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Board erred in its Decision and Order (in the third paragraph thereof) in adopting the findings, conclusions and recommendations made by the trial examiner in the Intermediate Report (excepting the conclusions of the trial examiner that petitioner has not discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike [fol. 19] and has not violated Section 8 (3) of the Act by refusing to reinstate Sylvia Hull, and excepting his recommendation that the complaint be dismissed insofar as the allegations that petitioner discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike), for the reasons that such findings and conclusions and each of same are not supported by the evidence or by any substantial evidence or by any reasonable inference therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence and to the law under the evidence and do not support any of the conclusions or orders of the Board and are insufficient therefor, and for the reason that same findings are biased, arbitrary, speculative and due to the prejudgment of the trial examiner and Board of the evidence and issues against petitioner, and not based upon a fair consideration and appraisal of all the evidence, and for the reason that said alleged acts do not tend to prove any of the charges against petitioner, are immaterial and irrelevant to any issue herein, and are not attributable to or binding upon petitioner, and deprived petitioner of a fair trial and of due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Board erred in its Decision and Order (in the paragraph under the heading "A". The Remand; the evidence adduced pursuant thereto" pp. 1-2), in its findings and conclusions that the Board at the second hearing herein, in compliance with the Court's mandate, and pursuant to the respective offers of proof submitted by respondent (petitioner) and the DGWU at the original hearings, permitted the introduction of the testimony of respondent's employees that they formed and joined the DGWU of their free will and that [there] were not influenced, interfered with or coerced by respondent (pe-

The Board erred in its order and each of the several paragraphs and provisions thereof numbered 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e) and 2 (a), (b), (c), (d), for the reasons that same and each of same are not supported by the evidence or any reasonable inferences therefrom, are arbitrary and contrary to the law under the evidence, are the result of the prejudgment of the trial examiner and Board of the evidence and issues against petitioner, and to the failure of the trial examiner and Board to give any fair or genuine consideration to petitioner's evidence, and said order deprives petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The trial examiner erred in making the finding, statement and conclusion contained on Page 2 of the Intermediate Report that "full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues was afforded all parties" at the hearing held beginning June 5 and ending July 15, 1939, and the Board erred in adopting said finding, statement and conclusion, for the reason that same is not supported by the record, but on the contrary the record shows that petitioner was repeatedly wrongfully denied opportunity to be heard and to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce evidence bearing on the issues and that the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was likewise denied such rights and opportunity, whereby petitioner was denied a fair trial herein.

and that the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was likewise denied such rights and opportunity, whereby petitioner was denied a fair trial herein.

The trial examiner erred in making the findings, statements and conclusions contained on Pages 9 and 10 of the Intermediate Report that "the undersigned accorded the respondent and the DGWU an opportunity to introduce all of the competent and material evidence which was rejected at the prior hearing and permitted Nell Quinlan Reed, the respondent's president, * * * to testify in the further hearing upon all the issues set forth in the pleadings", and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, for the reason that said findings, statements and conclusions are not supported by the record, but on the contrary the record shows that the petitioner and the intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were repeatedly wrongfully denied the opportunity and right to introduce competent and material evidence [fol. 23] rejected at the prior hearing, and that the trial examiner refused to permit Nell Quinlan Reed to testify at the hearing beginning July 6, 1942 and ending September 17, 1942, upon many of the issues set forth in the pleadings and in addition thereto, struck out, over the objection of respondent, a large part of the testimony of said witness after same had been given, whereby petitioner was denied a fair trial.

12.

The trial examiner erred in making the finding, statement and conclusion contained on Page 10 of the Intermediate Report that "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, affiliated with American Federation of Labor, is a labor organization admitting to membership the factory employees of the respondent", and the Board erred in adopting said finding, statement and conclusion, for the reason that same is not supported by the evidence or the record herein.

13.

The trial examiner erred in making the finding, statement and conclusion contained on Page 10 of the Intermediate Report, that the Donnelly Garment Workers'

Union "admits to membership all employees of the respondent", and the Board erred in adopting said finding, statement and conclusion, for the reason that same is not supported by the evidence or the record herein.

The trial examiner erred in making the following findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, A, of the Intermediate Report under the heading "Respondent's responsibility for the activities of various employees", and the subheadings numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, [fol. 24] appearing at pages 11 to 17 inclusive of the Intermediate Report, including the footnotes; and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and each of same and in [basins] its Decision and Order thereon, to-wit:

"* * * It is also admitted by the respondent that prior to the advent of Lee Baty as production manager and factory superintendent the instructors had a part in determining lay-offs and discharges in their respective sections and also had disciplinary authority. Baty testified that after he became factory manager in June 1935, he took from the instructors and from all other supervisory employees the authority to hire, discharge, and discipline and vested all such authority in himself, so that he has been since that time the sole supervisory employee in the factory and personally observed the conduct, character of work, efficiency and general attitude of all employees.

"* * * In view of the number of employees, and the size of the factory, the undersigned finds that Baty's testimony in regard to the elimination of supervisors to be incredible.[17]

(Footnote 17) "The undersigned is unimpressed by the evidence adduced by the respondent to establish that all supervisory authority in June 1935 was vested in Baty. Appraising the respondent's evidence in the light of the contradictions and implausibilities found throughout, especially in the testimony of Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Reeves and Baty, the undersigned is fully persuaded of its untrustworthy character. The evidence is further weakened by the plain indications during examination of the instructors, thread girls and employees, assuming arguendo, that any change in the supervisory set up of the plant was made when Baty took charge, it was known only to Baty and the respondent's officials. Finally, it is most improbable that such a far reaching reorganization of a large factory would occur without some notice to those affected and particularly to the employees who had for years, according to Mrs. Reed, been under * 'more supervision and more executives than — I know. I have more than are usual in the plant of this kind . . . yes our supervisors. Now in my plant I have 40 operators, 40 machines under one supervisor with an assistant one in charge.

"It is plain from all the circumstances disclosed by the record that after June 1935, the instructors and the thread girls continued in their capacity as supervisors in charge of the operators who work in the various sewing sections [fol. 25] of the factory. * * * There is substantial evidence, however, that they do perform functions which make them part of the supervisory staff.

"The instructors, assisted by the thread girls[18] assume complete charge of and are fully responsible for their respective sections of the factory. Among the duties of the instructor is the assignment of bundles containing the materials and supplies upon which the operators work, and the transmission to the operators of the respondent's instructions for the performance of the sewing processes. Mrs. Reeves, who [proceeded] Baty as factory manager and is now in charge of respondent's merchandising department, stated in an affidavit dated October 30, 1937, and confirmed the same in her testimony that: 'competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them and constantly supervise the same.' (emphasis supplied) In addition to these duties the instructors perform other functions as the representative of the management. When work is slack in the section the instructors determine who shall take a day off and in what order the operators will be released from the section. Although Baty denied that the instructors are charged with the duty of disciplining and reporting upon the efficiency of the operators who work in their respective section, the evidence is convincing that they do so the same as before the advent of Baty as factory manager, in June, 1935. The instructor constitutes the link through which the operators learn the management's directions and the management learns whether a girl is a desirable employee, her capacity for work, her attitude toward work, and her performance of the work.

(Footnote 18) "The evidence clearly indicates that in the absence of the instructor, her duties are performed by the thread girl.

"The record clearly reveals that the instructors exercise supervisory, economic control over the operators in their sections. This is particularly true when as here the operators are paid upon a piece-rate basis. The instructors plan the work in each section, determining when the work comes into the section which operator shall work upon the more desirable bundles. They keep the operators busy and correct their mistakes. When repair work is necessary, the instructor decides whether the operator must rip the work out and do it over on her own time or receive pay for the work. Instructors report to the office weekly at a 'going over of the cards' on the operators work for the past week. During temporary slack periods the instructors designate those operators who can be spared or transferred to other sections.

[fol. 26] "Over and above the supervisory and economic control exercised by the instructors, they regard themselves as supervisors and are so regarded by the operators; they are paid twice a month, their names being carried on a time workers pay roll, while the operators are paid on a piece rate basis weekly; and they are responsible to Baty for the quality and quantity of work in their respective sections. Although a substantial number of employee-operators testified during the hearing, none of them stated that Baty personally gave them any instructions or directions or conferred with them about their work. The undersigned is convinced that there was no apparent change in the conduct of instructors or thread girls after June 1935. Furthermore, it is undisputed that the respondent has continued to hold out the instructors and thread girls to the employee-operators as supervisory employees and has given no notice of any kind to the operators that the instructors' authority had been reduced or in any way changed in June 1935.

"The respondent contended that there is no distinction between the duties of the instructor and the thread girl, one having charge of quality and the other quantity, and that none of them act in a supervisory capacity. Even if it be assumed arguendo that there is no appreciable distinction, the undersigned is of the opinion that instructors and thread girls have supervisory authority. Mrs. Reeves testified that the word instructor and floor (thread) girls and the word supervisory 'means one and the same to me.' Rose Todd, hereinafter found to represent the management, testified that the respondent does not use the term 'supervisor' but that it does have an employee called an instructor in charge of 40 operators and a second girl that might be called an assistant instructor. It is clear from the record and the undersigned is convinced and so finds, that the instructors and thread girls actually and in all respects serve as foremen and assistant foremen of the sections of 40 operators.[19]

(Footnote 19) "The absence of any heirarchy of supervisors between the operators and Baty, with solely the instructors to transmit orders and report on work, renders the instructors more nearly approximate to foremen than any other commonly known class of supervisors. The descriptions of foremen in works on labor relations often point to the "teacher" aspect of his duties. ***

"It is plain from the foregoing, that the instructors and thread girls are supervisory employees, and exercise economic control over the operators, that prior to June 1935, the instructors and the thread girls were admittedly supervisory employees, that since that time the respondent has continued to hold them out to the operators as supervisory [fol. 27] employees, and that the respondent has given no notice of any kind to the operators that the instructors and thread girls have any less authority than formerly. Since the instructors and thread girls are charged with certain duties and economic control which are supervisory, and disciplinary in nature, their interests are closely related to those of the management and are often incompatible with those of the ordinary worker. On the basis of all the evidence, the undersigned finds that instructors and thread girls are supervisory employees and that they act as representatives of the management in the factory.[20]

(Footnote 20) "The instructors are as important as the lead men and group leaders held by the Supreme Court to be employees of such a kind that the Board may base employer liability for unfair labor practices upon the employer's failure to prevent their activities in behalf of a favored union. ***"

"2. Rose Todd.

"Todd was one of the most active and outstanding among the employees of the respondent in the affairs of the League and in the formation and administration of the DGWU. She was president of the League during the time that it played so effective a part in resisting the organizational campaign of the ILGWU. * * * Her status in the factory and her relation to the management is in dispute.

"Todd, with an interruption of 2 years, has worked for the respondent for approximately 13 years. She was a nurse by profession and through acquaintance with Mrs. Reed as a nurse, secured a job at the respondent's factory in 1926. She worked for a short time as an operator and as a thread girl, during the early part of her employment. Also, prior to the interruption, Todd held various responsible positions with the respondent, including that of an instructor[21] and as an assistant to Dewey Atchison, production engineer, in making time studies, studying production methods and studying rates of piece-work wages. * * * When she returned to the employ of the respondent in 1933 Todd worked for several months as a thread girl. Until sometime in the spring of 1937 she helped in various sections of the factory * * *.

"From the record it is impossible to determine that Todd in 1937, 1938 and 1939 had any well defined duties. During this period she was not assigned to any particular department, being directly responsible to Baty, the factory manager. Todd was assigned a desk in the factory—first on the ninth floor and later on the seventh floor—charged with the responsibility of keeping the various [fol. 28] sections supplied with the necessary materials for maintaining operations and checking up on the delivery of various supplies that should be in the sections. In addition, if any of the sections were short of supplies which delayed the work Todd was notified and arranged for the proper supplies to be forwarded to the department. These duties required that Todd move throughout the various sections of the factory and contact instructors and thread girls. For a period of 1938 Todd again worked with Dewey Atchison on some special work. Baty testified that Todd received the same vacations as given to the instructors and that in August 1937, 'he couldn't let Todd go (on vacation) in August as she was indispensable'. The president of the First National Bank of Kansas City with which the company carried its account testified that he had known Todd for 10 or 12 years as 'a kind of all round man' for the company and that she had come into the bank for several years as respondent's representative.

"During the period from April 16 to 30, 1937, Todd was carried on the designing pay roll, from May 1 to 31, 1937, on the hand sewing pay roll, from June 1 to June 30, 1937, on the button and button hole pay roll and from July 1 to 15, 1937, on the receiving department pay roll, although she did not work in these sections during these pay periods. When the DGWU was organized she was receiving a salary of $130 a month and although the DGWU expressed to the respondent a desire to have her services part time, the respondent continued to pay her the $130 a month, in addition to which the DGWU paid her $65 per month.

"The undersigned, appraising Todd's entire employment record with the respondent, is persuaded and finds that her position in the factory was one of considerable responsibility, involving duties of a supervisory nature.

"Evidence on Todd's activities in the factory plainly points to the fact that she occupied a close and confidential relation to the management which was made known to the employees by respondent's conduct. On April 23, 1937, when anti-ILGWU demonstrations against Fern Sigler, a member of the ILGWU, took place in the factory, the disturbance was reported to Rose Todd. When Baty ordered Sigler from her section to the office he was accompanied by Todd. At the conference which followed, Todd dominated the same and took the lead in questioning Sigler about her union affiliation although both Baty and Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, were present. A reading of the transcript of that conference shows that Todd opened the conference and talked to Sigler of the respondent's policy of operating an open shop as if she represented the respondent, for example: '* We have had union people work here for years  we don't care. We have [fol. 29] hired union people  I talked to some of the girls yesterday afternoon and tried to get them to see that it is all right if you want to work and belong to the union. However, they feel so keenly about it, we don't think we can do anything about it.  We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way.' Todd also said: 'My advice to you is, that if you feel that strongly about the union and have enough people to back you up, be in a union shop. I wouldn't any more think I could join the union than a man in the moon. I'd expect to be put out on the street and left there.' Baty and Hyde acquiesced in all that Todd said and talked in the same vein. Todd also discoursed at length upon 'our' employment policy. After the demonstrations in Sigler's section and the conference in the office it was Todd who finally sent the employees back to work. Todd's status around the plant was such that the respondent's telephone operators announced meetings over the interdepartmental telephone when Rose Todd asked them to, and instructors took directions from Todd when she directed the form in which they were to turn in time slips for employees absent from work on DGWU business. In addition, Rose Todd's position as president of the League, in which all of the respondent's supervisory force including Mr. Keyes, sales manager, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Reeves and Dewey Atchison were members, and which came into existence to counteract the activities of the ILGWU, marked her in the eyes of the employees as a person in whom the management had confidence and whose views reflected those of the management. The respondent did nothing to discourage Todd's activities, although fully aware of them.

"Irrespective of Todd's supervisory status, the undersigned is of the view that the evidence, as a whole, clearly identifies her with the management in the minds of the employees. [22] The undersigned finds that Rose Todd occupied a close and confidential position with the respondent and further finds that in such position she was acting for and on behalf of the respondent.

"3. Hobart Atherton.

"* He transmits orders to six employees who work with him in that department, shows them how to do the work when occasion demands, and [deeps] a record of the jobs performed. He also assists with repair work whenever needed. * There is no evidence that any one else exercises any supervision or guidance over the work performed in the maintenance department, or that Baty, the factory superintendent, in any way directs these employees.

"The undersigned finds that Hobart Atherton is a supervisory employee of the respondent in charge of the main-
[fol. 30] tenance department of the plant. [23]

(Footnote 23) "Atherton's position corresponds to those of the "group leaders" whose supervisory status was an issue in H. J. Heinz Co. v. N.L.R.B. 311 U.S. 514, 518, 521.

"4. Other supervisory employees.

"The status of certain other employees who were active in the League or the DGWU and who occupy responsible positions with the respondent is in dispute. These persons are Florence Stickland, in charge of the pattern department; Lena Tyhurst, assistant factory manager and in charge of the inspection department; Martha Gray, in charge of the outlet store; Ortense Root, in charge of the sample department; Heath Cowan, in charge of the receiving department (piece goods); Marvin Price, in charge of building maintenance; Ted Scholes, in charge of the cutting department; and Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing department. Some of these employees admittedly had supervisory authority before the appointment of Baty as factory manager. They are all, except Martha Gray, under the supervision of Baty and so far as the record indicates, their relationship to the management after Baty assumed charge was identical with their prior duties and responsibilities as far as the employees in the various departments were concerned. The employees in these departments were not aware of any curtailment in the authority of those in charge, after Baty was made factory manager.

"The undersigned finds that the above named persons are supervisory employees and as such were representatives of the management. [24]

(Footnote 24) "The respondent contends that in Baty resided the sole supervisory responsibility over the employees in each of these departments. See footnote 17 supra, for the undersigned's rejection of this untenable position."

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, do not show, or support a finding or conclusion, that the instructors, Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton or the various employees referred to in subparagraph 4, p. 17 or any of them, were supervisory employees of respondent or represented "The management" or were acting for or in behalf of the management with respect to the formation of the Donnelly Gar-

be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on petitioner; and because petitioner has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied a fair trial and has been deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, B, of the Intermediate Report (pp. 17-20) under the heading "Events prior to the effective date of the Act" and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to-wit:

"On both occasions the respondent's supervisory force attended the meetings (i.e. meetings of ILGWU at Musicians' Hall, March 15, 1934, and at Eagles Hall December 4, 1934) in a group, including Mrs. Reeves, then production manager, Mrs. Hyde, personnel manager, and many of the instructors. Rose Todd, whose relation to the management is discussed hereinbefore, attended the meeting at the Musicians Hall. Dewey Atchison, production engineer, attended the meeting at Eagles Hall.

[fol. 33] "During this period at least a dozen of the employees joined the ILGWU, several of whom became active, passing out notices of meetings and soliciting their fellow workers to join the organization. Many of the employees attending the meeting and others, irrespective of membership in the ILGWU, were called to the office where Mrs. Reeves questioned them about their interest in the union and warned them that joining would do them no good. Employees were variously told by Mrs. Reeves that they had been 'listening too much to somebody outside', that 'Donnelly's don't belong to the union and they never will' and she had thought they had better 'sense' than to join the ILGWU and that they had been 'misled' in doing so, and they ought to have 'a darn good spanking' for their own good. Mrs. Gray, in charge of respondent's outlet store, told employees it was a 'shame' that an employee had joined the ILGWU.

"Dewey Atchinson asked employees why they did not come to the management instead of 'going down to a bunch of foreigners', advised against getting 'messed up' with the union and warned they would be fired if they did. The instructors warned many of the employees that those who joined the ILGWU would be discharged and urged employees not to give their money 'to those foreigners'. One instructor, referred to the ILGWU members as 'scum'.

"A substantial number of the employees who joined the ILGWU were laid off or discharged shortly after joining. [25]  Yarnell was discharged in July 1934 although she had worked for the respondent since December 1924. Within a few months all except one of the employees who attended the dinner were either laid off or discharged. As a result of these lay offs or discharges the ILGWU on December 6, 1934, filed a charge against the respondent under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, alleging that eight employees had been laid off because they joined the ILGWU: ****

"In the latter part of 1934 and the first part of 1935 all the other employees who were known to have joined the ILGWU were transferred from the main factory of the respondent to a temporary branch which was used by the respondent during the busy season. When the rush of work was over and the use of the temporary building discontinued the employees, most of whom had several years service, were laid off. Employees working in the main factory with less service were retained. ****

"As a result of this sequence of events the employees became hesitant to join the ILGWU and those who had joined denied their membership when questioned. Employees who had not joined were even careful not to talk [fol. 34] to those suspected of ILGWU membership for fear of some discrimination with respect to their jobs.

"In February 1935, Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store, and Florence Strickland, in charge of the pattern department, formed an organization among the respondent's employees known as the "Nelly Don Loyalty League". The initial step in its organization was a meeting at the home of Gray, attended by approximately 50 employees representing the various sections of the factory. Within the next three days membership cards were circulated and were signed by substantially all the employees. Florence Strickland, in circulating the cards, stated 'that Mrs. Donnelly (Nell Quinlan Reed) would close her doors before she would have a union shop, and (employees) should sign these cards to keep — (their) jobs and keep (them) in work because she would close the doors.' A statement was circulated along with the membership cards stating that: ****

"Florence Strickland refused to allow Virginia Stroup, who was president of the ILGWU local, to sign a membership card because she belonged to 'another organization.' Similarly Lena Allison, an instructor, refused to allow Frances Reidel a card on the ground that she was an ILGWU member. Following the signing of the cards, on February 8, 1935, a mass meeting of all employees was held during working hours on the second floor of the building occupied by the respondent's plant, presided over by Martha Gray, who explained the meaning of the word 'loyalty'.

"Meetings were regularly held on the second floor of the building.[27] The meetings were announced by a notice to the instructors transmitted either by Mrs. Wherry, factory manager, or by the respondent's switchboard operator, calling each section and the instructors in each section notifying the employees to attend the meeting. Each of the sections in the plant had a representative elected by the employees in the section to represent them in the League. These representatives were chosen by passing a sheet of paper among the employees in each section while at their machines, on which nominations were made and then repassing the same sheet around in a similar manner so that each employee could [makr] his vote on the sheet. Virtually all the respondent's supervisors, including Mrs. Reeves, Mae Hyde, Dewey Atchison, Martha Gray, and Florence Strickland were members of the League. The League had songs of loyalty and sponsored the wearing of pins bearing the initial "L" as a demonstration of loyalty to Nell Quinlan Reed.

[fol. 35] "It is clear from the events cited above, that prior to the effective date of the Act, the respondent's supervisors expressed to employees the uncompromising hostility of the respondent toward all labor unions and particularly toward the ILGWU. Employees were made fully aware of their employer's attitude and those who applied for membership or joined the ILGWU did so with a great deal of hesitancy. During this period it was made plain to the employees by their supervisors that loyalty to the respondent meant the renunciation of the Union. Membership and influence in the League enabled the respondent to foster an organized employee resistance to outside unions. Membership of management representatives and supervisory employees, in the League, convinced the rank and file of the respondent's employees that the League was an organization approved by the respondent to which they must give their support, and that they must correspondingly refrain from joining or assisting the ILGWU which the League so consistently opposed.[28]

(Footnote 28) "Since the League was set up as a rival to the ILGWU, the League cannot be held out as a 'purely social organization', as contended by the respondent. ****

* * * * This contention (i. e. that evidence prior to passage of the National Labor Relations Act) fails to recognize that the League continued in existence after effective date of the Act. Furthermore, evidence of an employer's attitude and conduct with respect to labor unions for a reasonable period before the effective date of the Act has often been admitted for the purpose of evaluating the significance of events occurring after such date.[29]

"Since the League was inspired by the respondent and fully supported by its representatives from its inception, the undersigned is convinced that the respondent thereby forcibly impressed upon its employees its anti-union sentiments.

"Further, the League was dominated and controlled by the respondent, and prior to the effective date of the Act, the respondent used it to prevent its employees from joining the ILGWU or any other outside labor organization."[30] for the following reasons, to-wit:

Because said findings, statements and conclusions and portions thereof, and each of same, are not supported by the evidence; or by any findings supported by the evidence; are contrary to competent and material evidence [fol. 36] offered by petitioner and excluded by the trial examiner and contrary to the offers of proof made by petitioner and rejected by the trial examiner; are immaterial and irrelevant and do not, by inference or otherwise, prove or tend to prove any of the charges against petitioner or support any of the trial examiner's conclusions or recommendations adverse to petitioner, and are insufficient in law and in fact therefor; are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence; are not supported by the alleged evidence therein set forth or referred to, either alone or in conjunction with other evidence or by any reasonable inferences therefrom, but are contrary to the evidence; do not fairly state the evidence, and show that the trial examiner failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to said matters; are biased, arbitrary and capricious, conjectural and speculative, consisting of mere inference or surmise, and not based on any substantial, competent evidence; do not support a finding or conclusion that the petitioner was or is guilty of any unlawful labor practice or of any of the charges alleged in the complaint; show and are the result of the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner against petitioner and his nonjudicial attitude toward the evidence; because the trial examiner in said Intermediate Report has misstated and distorted the evidence and the true meaning thereof for the purpose of making same appear adverse to petitioner; because petitioner is not responsible for said alleged facts, findings and statements or any of them or any adverse inferences, if any, drawn or to be drawn therefrom and same are not binding on petitioner; and because petitioner has, for each and all of the foregoing reasons, been denied [fol. 37] a fair trial and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

16.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, C of the Intermediate Report (pp. 21-25) under the heading "Events prior to April 27, 1937; interference, restraint, and coercion", and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and each of same, to-wit:

"Following the lay off and discharge of the ILGWU members in late 1934 and early 1935, the organization of the League in 1935, and the inability of the ILGWU to carry to a successful conclusion the case under the NRA, due to the decision declaring the Act unconstitutional, labor relations at respondent's factory remained in a quiescent condition until March 1937. During this period the ILGWU abandoned temporarily its efforts to organize the factory. * * * In some instances, instructors brought new employees notices that they were eligible to membership, directed them to the desk of the League president and later brought them their League pins.

"* * * With six exceptions the instructors and thread girls did not sign when the petition went through their respective section, although they knew the petition was being circulated. * * * Two of these individuals, later signed for fear of losing their jobs, their names being later erased.

"* * * Thereafter, as the result of arrangements made between Mrs. Reed and a newspaper representative, a picture of the employees presenting the pledge was taken and appeared on the front page of the Kansas City Star, accompanied by the statement that Mrs. Reed was going to place the pledge in the cornerstone of the new building she was planning to erect.

"Mrs. Reed shortly thereafter expressed to her office manager, Marguerite Keyes, a wish that all employees, not [fol. 38] merely factory employees, would sign the petition. Keyes requested an employee in her department, Pauline Shartzer, to circulate the pledge of refusal to acknowledge any labor organization, among all the employees who had theretofore not signed. As a result, everyone in the plant including the supervisory employees, watchmen, porters, maids and stenographers, indeed every employee except the three heretofore mentioned, signed the 'loyalty' pledge. The instructors and thread girls who signed when the petition first went through their section, signed again a second time on the same page with the other instructors and thread girls. The additional pledge was thereafter presented to Mrs. Reed.

"Under all the circumstances above related the undersigned finds that the respondent, by permitting Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren, and requesting Pauline Shartzer to circulate the pledges in the factory during working hours and by requesting that additional signatures be secured, gave approval and lent assistance and encouragement to the solicitation of its employees to pledge themselves not to join the ILGWU.[31] and thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced them in the free choice of a collective bargaining agent.[32]

"A meeting of all the respondent's employees took place during working hours[33] on the afternoon of March 18, 1937, on the second floor of the building housing the respondent's plant.[34] Employees were notified orally by their instructors that they were to attend the meeting, the instructors having been notified by either Mrs. Wherry or over the factory telephone system. Most all of the supervisory force were in attendance at the meeting, including Ella Mae Hyde, Martha Gray, and Elizabeth Reeves, the instructors and the thread girls. Rose Todd, with the assistance of Hobart Atherton, both of whom were officials of the League and supervisory employees, called the meeting and Todd presided. Chairs for the meeting were rented from the Kansas [fol. 39] City Rental Chair Company under the name of the League. From these facts, the undersigned concludes, despite the denial of Rose Todd[35] that the meeting was sponsored by the League and its officials.

(Footnote 33) " * Evaluating the evidence in its entirety, the undersigned is not persuaded by the testimony adduced by the respondent. A finding favorable to the respondent's position would necessitate the acceptance of testimony which is contrary to the weight of the evidence. The indefinite and routine testimony of respondent's witnesses with their lack of knowledge of details and the mutually corroborative testimony of Board's witnesses, supported by other evidence, that operators attended meetings in their uniforms, that employees went to the meetings in groups and that no definite time was given in the call for the meetings, although the hours of work were staggered and the operators were working overtime, convinces the undersigned that the meetings of March 18 and April 27, 1937, were held during working hours.

(Footnote 34) "  Employees had regularly attended Loyalty League meetings and company style shows held on these floors and did not know whether they were leased by the respondent.

"Rose Todd made a few opening remarks, after which Mrs. Reed was requested to come in and address the employees. Mrs. Reed brought with her the letter which the respondent had received from the ILGWU under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a conference. The letter was read to the employees. Mrs. Reed then made a talk in which she expressed her pleasure at receiving the 'loyalty' pledge which had been presented to her on March 2, told the employees that the respondent was an institution to be proud of, that it had taken care of its employees by keeping the factory in operation during the depression, and that she intended to continue to run the business. Then she spoke of threats of violence, that the ILGWU was alleged to have made against employees of the company, and promised protection against such violence. Finally she directed her remarks to the question of unionization of the factory. What she said at this point is a matter of dispute. The Board's witnesses testified that Mrs. Reed stated she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized and that she would not allow 'Dubinsky or any other sky to tell her how to run her business'. According to respondent's version, Mrs. Reed stated 'Neither Dubinsky or any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you to join the International (ILGWU) against your will'. The under-

[fol. 40] signed does not consider it necessary to resolve the precise conflict in this testimony since the undersigned's view, Mrs. Reed's own version of her speech at the March 18 meeting, and the events which took place there, constituted an unfair labor practice. The meeting was sponsored by the League, which is controlled by the respondent, and was attended by most of the respondent's supervisory employees. Through the presence of supervisors and the sponsorship of the League which had for its purpose the exclusion of outside union organization from the factory, the employees must inevitably have been aware of the anti-union character of the meeting and could not have been free to express their independent views. It may be true, as the respondent contends, that many of them feared the alleged threats of the ILGWU but instead of permitting the employees to decide for themselves what attitude they would adopt with regard to the ILGWU the respondent seized upon such fears as may have existed to build up and strengthen a militant employee opposition toward that labor organization. Mrs. Reed's remarks indicated that the ILGWU was the common enemy of both the respondent and its employees and promised the employees the respondent's protection and assistance against that organization. Mrs. Reed disparagingly labeled David Dubinsky, president of the ILGWU a "buttinsky" who was seeking to force the respondent's employees to join that Union.  against the background of the respondent's widely publicized hostility to the ILGWU and the past repeated reminders to the employees that 'loyalty' to the respondent demanded repudiation of outside union organizations, the undersigned is convinced that Mrs. Reed's remarks [36] made it plain that the respondent's attitude toward unionization had not changed and the membership of any of the employees in the ILGWU was not to be tolerated.

(Footnote 36) " The undersigned cannot agree, however, that the reference to the employees' rights rendered them wholly free with respect to joining unions. On the contrary, in view of the respondent's past hostility to labor organizations, the undersigned believes that the employees could not fail to be discouraged from joining the ILGWU or any other labor organization.

"The undersigned finds that by its sponsorship and domination of the March 18 meeting and by Mrs. Reed's talk at said meeting the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

" A few minutes after 8 o'clock while she (Sylvia Hull) was working at her machine on the 8th floor of the [fol. 41] plant, two groups of employees—each consisting of 12 or 20 persons—successively gathered at her machine. They demanded to know what authority she had to represent them at the ILGWU convention. Some of the operators stood on top of nearby tables, others sang Loyalty League songs. They told Hull that they would not allow her to belong to the Union, and demanded that she surrender her League pin, which she refused unless they returned to her the cost of the pin. Shortly thereafter, the operators returned, gave Hull 35 cents and she surrendered the pin. Lena Allison, the instructor in charge of Hull's section, was present throughout the demonstrations, but did not order the girls back to work or take any action of any kind; Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing section, was present and pointed Hull out to some of the demonstrators. * Hyde thereupon took her down to the office on another floor. * According to Hull's testimony, which is undenied, Hyde told her she would have to go home. Hull replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day. Hyde took her employee-identification badge and Hull left a telephone number through which she might be reached. [37]

"Later, during the same morning on which the above described incident occurred, Fern Sigler, an operator who had displayed on that day for the first time her ILGWU membership pin, was subjected to similar demonstrations. The employees surrounded Sigler's machine and sang songs, derided her, took her League pin from her and shouted 'get up and go home, we don't want you in here'. The demonstrations subsided when Baty, factory manager, accompanied by Rose Todd ordered Sigler from her machine to the office. As Sigler left the floor the operators shouted, 'we are not going to work as long as she remains here'. When Baty insisted on sending Sigler home she argued with him that she had a right to join the ILGWU and it was the employer's duty to control the employees.

Baty replied 'We don't go in for the Wagner Act, we are just running our business here not a law office.' Todd then stated 'We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way.' After the conference participated in by Baty, Hyde, Todd and Sigler, Sigler was sent home. Baty promised to talk to the operators and 'quiet them down' and to call her back when the unrest had subsided. Despite his promise Baty admitted at the hearing that he did nothing to allay antagonism toward the ILGWU in the plant. [38]

"The undersigned finds that the respondent approved of and encouraged the (Hull and Sigler) demonstrations and took advantage of them to reveal once more to the [fol. 42] employees its hostility to the ILGWU and its support of anti-ILGWU activities. Further the undersigned finds that by such acts the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees of the rights guaranteed by Section 7 of the Act.

"The undersigned further finds that by using the League and its officers as hereinabove described for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the ILGWU, the respondent has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act. [39]

(Footnote 39) " The respondent condoned, approved and encouraged these demonstrations and made no sincere effort to check the demonstrators. Neither did it in any way discipline the demonstrators who had disrupted the normal operation of the factory nor did it take any steps to make it possible for these employees to return to their work in the factory unmolested. No deductions were made in the wages of time workers who participated in these incidents. " for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The board erred in its decision and order, in making each and all of the findings and conclusions set forth in assignment of error No. 16 herein, for the reason that none of the alleged statements therein referred to, or remarks therein referred to, were coercive upon petitioner's employees but all were within the rights and privileges of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and such findings and conclusions and the order and decision of the Board based thereon constitute an infringement upon the right of free speech guaranteed by said Amendment.

The Board erred in basing its findings, conclusions, decision and order upon the statements or remarks appearing in the record and alleged to have been made by officers or employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, for the reason that if such remarks or statements were made, they were not coercive but were within the rights or privileges of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and such findings, conclusions and decision that said alleged statements or utterances constitute a violation of the National Labor Relations Act, constitute an infringement upon the right of free speech guaranteed by said Amendment.

16-c.

That if the National Labor Relations Act be so construed as to make or hold any of the alleged statements or remarks by the officers or employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, including said alleged remarks by Mrs. Reed at the meeting of employees on March 18, 1937, a violation of the National Labor Relations Act (as it is construed by the Board in its order), such holding would be and is in contravention of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States guaranteeing the right of free speech and said Act is unconstitutional, and the Order and Decision of the Board herein are void.

17.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, of the Intermediate Report (pp. 26-28) under the heading "Domination and interference with the formation and administration of the DGWU and contribution of support; interference, restraint, and coercion", and to sub-heading "1. The formation of the DGWU", and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and of each of same, to-wit:

"Shortly after the March 18 meeting a committee, which had been appointed at the close of that meeting, consisting of Rose Todd, Loyalty League President, and the representative of the respondent, Hobart Atherton, an officer of the League and a supervisor, and Sally Ormsby, employed Tyler, an attorney. *****

"On April 27, 1937, a mass meeting of all respondent's employees was held during working hours, [40] on the second [fol. 43] floor of the building in which the respondent's plant was located. [41] Notice of the meeting was given to the employees through their respective instructors who had been notified by Mrs. Wherry, or over the factory telephone system. Instructors and thread girls attended the meeting along with the operators in their sections. Chairs for the meeting were rented in the name of and paid for by the Loyalty League.

" Her (Rose Todd's) opening remarks indicated that she regarded the meeting as a part of the series which preceded it for she stated she hoped, 'this meeting is going to be as enthusiastic as our last one was' and explained that she had called the meeting 'as chairman of the committee of employees.' [42] Todd stated that she had consulted two lawyers, Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler, whom she had known for years, and they advised forming a plant union. She explained that the Loyalty League, being a purely social organization, would not take care of the situation; that another organization was necessary to give them representation to definitely confer with the proper representatives of the respondent at times when they felt that it was necessary. She pointed out that a union would have to be formed if they were to successfully resist attempts of organization by an outside union. She then told the employees that the new organization would be called the 'Donnelly Garment Workers Union' and although she was distressed as they were at having to use the word 'union' it seemed to be necessary.

(Footnote 43) "The bylaws indicate the purpose of the DGWU was in part the same as that of the Loyalty League which, in the words of Rose Todd, had become inadequate to give the employees the 'protection' they needed. *****

"The facts as related above, make it plain that the organizational meeting of the DGWU was planned, organized and under the complete control of respondent's representatives. Under all the circumstances the undersigned concludes and finds, that the concept of an independent union originated with respondent's supervisory employees and further, that the respondent through the activities of its supervisory employees gave approval, and lent assistance and encouragement to the DGWU.

"From all the circumstances above related the undersigned finds that the meeting of April 27 was sponsored and financed by the Loyalty League through Todd, Atherton and Ormsby, and further that the League financed the employment of Tyler, paid him a retainer fee of $500 and that the fee covered the cost of his services in connection with the formation of the DGWU and the drafting of its bylaws."

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, thereof, under the subheading "2. Membership and participation by other supervisors in the DGWU" thereof, (pp. 29-30), and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to-wit:

"In addition to Todd's and Atherton's membership and participation in the DGWU as representatives of the management, the instructors and thread girls all attended the meeting of April 27 and signed cards for membership in the DGWU. Dewey Atchison, production engineer, joined but resigned July 14, 1937. The minutes of the meeting show that instructors and thread girls and others closely allied with the management regularly attended and participated in the meetings. ***

(Footnote 45) "This payroll (1938) heading covers the executive force of the factory, including heads of departments such as factory manager, head of the retail store, personnel manager, and Mrs. Wherry who was variously described as factory manager and head of instructors.

[fol. 45] "The election in April, 1939, repeated in many respects the occurrences of the previous year. However, this time Rose Todd herself appointed the nominating committees without going through the formality of nominations and unanimous elections. Hilda Richmond, whose closeness to management is indicated by appearance of her name on the 'Buying Record's' payroll [46] was named by Todd as chairman of one of the committees and Harry Grogan whose name appeared on the payroll under "Instructors and Floor ladies' was a member of the other. These two nominating committees each brought in slates naming Todd chairman; Jack McConaughey treasurer, Marjorie Green, secretary, and Walter Higgins representative of mechanics. Again the election was by an open standing vote.

"Heath Cowan, in charge of the receiving department; Marvin Price, in charge of building maintenance; and Ortense Root, in charge of the sample department were members of the DGWU and, as shown by its minutes, attended meetings and participated in its affairs. Ted Scoles, in charge of the cutting department; Lena Tyhurst, in charge of the inspection department; and Mary Bogart, in charge of the dividing department were also members of the DGWU. At various times the question was raised by employees as to whether department heads and instructors should have the right to be members of the DGWU and attend and participate in its meetings. However, Todd's statement of the DGWU policy that all employees except the executives Mr. Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Mr. Green, Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde were eligible remained in effect. Employees, nevertheless, at various times expressed the view that the presence of such persons at meetings excluded them from speaking freely of their complaints. In a meeting of the DGWU Group Chairmen, Hobart Atherton when he stated, 'I think department heads, instructors and so forth, should have all the privileges of membership except that they shall not be allowed the right to vote,' realized the danger of participation by supervisory employees in the affairs of an organization devoted to the improvement of the employees economic relationship with the employer.

"Inasmuch as the respondent through its supervisory employees' membership and participation in the activities of the DGWU, continued its control and direction of that organization, the undersigned finds that respondent is responsible for their activities, and that they were acting for and in behalf of the respondent"

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, of the Intermediate [fol. 46] Report (pp. 30-32) under the heading "3. The contracts; closed shop, check off and piece work rates", and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and each of same, to-wit:

"  Tyler prepared a contract which was accepted by the respondent without substantial change. Terms of the supplemental agreement were never submitted to the DGWU membership for approval before or after its execution, although it set the employees wages for a period of one year with a provision for an automatic extension. * Todd explained that the ILGWU had announced that it was seeking a $16 weekly minimum in the garment industry, and she therefore thought it a good idea to improve a little on that minimum to defeat efforts of the ILGWU to organize the respondent's employees. The respondent acceded to this demand. *****

"In August or September 1937 the company agreed, at the request of the DGWU, to a check off of the monthly dues of the members. Employees signed a card prepared and distributed by the respondent [areeing] to permit the dues to be checked off at the end of each month. Pursuant to this agreement the respondent submits to the DGWU a memorandum showing the number of employees on the payroll during the month and a check covering their dues. The DGWU issues no receipts, keeps no record of individual dues payments and has no means of knowing what individuals paid dues during any month. The General Chairman or Treasurer of the DGWU were unable to state at the hearing what proportion of each month an employee must work to entitle the DGWU to collect the dues from the respondent. The checks turned over for each month subsequent to July 1937 range from about $250 to $325. The amount deducted from each employee appears on the employees' respective check stub. Although the DGWU has never furnished the respondent with a list of its members, every employee of the respondent, upon the assumption that all employees under the closed shop are eligible to belong to the DGWU, except the salesmen whose dues the company's decline to check off, authorized the checking off of the dues.

" ••••• Nichols is a supervisory employee and Spallito her assistant, both of whom are employed by the respondent for the purpose of establishing for it the piece work prices paid the employees. Nichols was described, by Mrs. Hyde, as an 'executive' of the respondent, and admittedly has final authority in setting piece work prices in the first [fol. 47] instance, and of adjusting subsequent complaints of operators that the price set is too low. •••••

"Thus the same persons who set rates on behalf of the respondent in the first instance are also representatives of the DGWU for the purpose of protesting and negotiating in regard to those rates in behalf of the DGWU and the employees.

"The respondent's immediate recognition of the DGWU and its ready acquiescence to a closed shop and check off through the medium of an organization which allowed it to retain control of the piece work rates, when viewed in the light of respondent's persistent hostility to independently functioning unions clearly reveals its determination to prevent the employees from enjoying the rights conferred upon them by the Act, by forcing them to become members of an impotent collective bargaining agency to which, by its closed shop and check off, it had given assurances of financial stability."

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, D, of the Intermediate Report (pp. 33-35) under the heading "4. Respondent's contribution of support to the DGWU", and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and each of same, to-wit:

"In addition to the holding of the organizational meeting of the DGWU on respondent's time [48] the succeeding three or four membership meetings were likewise held during working hours.  Although the DGWU met on the property under lease by the respondent monthly from May 1937 on, it was not until November 1937 that the question of paying rental was raised.  It is plain that prior to November, 1937, rent free use of the respondent's premises was contemplated and that the retroactive payment of rent was an afterthought. Rose Todd the General Chairman, twice announced in meetings of the DGWU that such use of the respondent's facilities was entirely proper. Meetings of the Group Chairmen, who composed the executive committee of the DGWU, prior to May 1938, were held in the office of Beulah Spilsbury, in charge of the designing department and thereafter in the auditorium on the first floor. No fental was ever paid for the use of this property. [49] [fol. 48] (Footnote 49) "The DGWU's treasury book shows only two payments to the respondent for use of space. Both of these were for meetings of the entire membership, as may be seen from the testimony of McConaughey concerning the first of these payments and the fact that the second payment was for 'for 13 meetings' one less than the number of general membership meetings as shown by the minutes of the DGWU to have taken place between the two payments.

"The general meetings of the DGWU and the meetings of the Group Chairmen were called through the respondent's facilities, either by the use of the respondent's interdepartmental telephone system or by sending a so called I.D.M. to each department of the factory through the respondent's regular messenger service. Announcement of the meeting over the respondent's factory telephone system was accomplished by Todd notifying the telephone operator to call each department. [50] Each section has a telephone, and it is the duty of the instructor or thread girl to answer the phone and convey any message that might be given either to the employees generally if it was a general meeting or to the specific employee in question if it was a Group Chairmen meeting. The interdepartmental telephones were not available to the employees generally and could only be used for calls by supervisory employees pertaining to official business. An I.D.M. is the respondent's term for interdepartmental memoranda. When Todd wished to call a meeting of the employees generally, or of the Group Chairmen, she regularly prepared a notice on the company's I.D.M. paper which was sent to each section of the factory by the respondent's messenger service. Upon the arrival of the I.D.M. in any section, it was the duty of the instructor or thread girl to read the I.D.M. and pass it to the operators in the section.

"Miss Todd also utilized the I.D.M. system for collecting assessments and sending instructions pertaining to DGWU business to the members on the respondent's time. [51] The DGWU receives its mail at the factory through respondent's messengers and freely uses the factory bulletin board.

"Piece work operators who served as Group Chairmen or officers were paid by the respondent for the time lost at work while attending DGWU business, the time workers being allowed to take time from work with no deductions from their pay.

"Rose Todd was a full time employee of the respondent. While a request was made to Mrs. Reed immediately after the formation of the DGWU that it should pay part of her salary, she continued to receive a full salary of $130 a month from the respondent and in addition thereto received $65 from the DGWU.

[fol. 49] Despite receiving her full salary from the respondent, the nature of the work given her by the respondent to perform permitted her to devote as much time as she desired to the DGWU business without deduction from her pay. Thus she carried on the business of the DGWU, representing 1300 or more employees, during the respondent's normal working hours. Soon after formation of the DGWU at the respondent's Kansas City plant, Todd went to the respondent's temporary auxiliary plant at St. Joseph, Missouri, to organize the employees in that factory. She was absent from her employment about a half day without a salary deduction.

"At a meeting on May 11, 1937, Rose Todd announced that 'our (DGWU) work will be conducted' at a desk on the ninth floor of the plant and that she could be reached on union business at 'any time necessary'. Todd's desk was the DGWU's only office. Its records were kept there in a file belonging to the respondent and its business was regularly transacted by employees who went there for that purpose. The check off cards which were printed and distributed by the respondent were signed and turned in at this desk over a two weeks' period by employees who came there from all over the factory. Membership cards of those who were absent from the April 27, 1937 meeting, or of new members were signed and left at this desk. Grievances of members were reported to Todd during the working day and she attended to them during her hours of work. She collected money for the DGWU on the respondent's time and directed the DGWU representatives to do the same. When Todd left on her vacation in December 1937, she informed the Group Chairmen that a substitute, Miss Riddle, would be at the desk from 11 a. m. to 12:45 each day—much longer than the usual half hour's lunch hour—to transact DGWU business.

"It is apparent from the facts set forth above, and the undersigned finds, that the respondent has contributed a large measure of support to the DGWU."

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in and under the heading "Summary and conclusions" (pp. 35-37), and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions and each of same, to-wit:

[fol. 50] "From the foregoing facts, conclusions, and findings, it is clear that, notwithstanding the contention by the respondent and the DGWU that the DGWU's formation was the result of the employees' own choice of a collective bargaining representative, the respondent has not permitted the employees to freely exercise that right of self-organization free from employer influence and domination.

"Prior to the effective date of the act the respondent adopted a policy of opposition and hostility to labor organizations generally and to the ILGWU specifically. In furtherance of this policy, the management made it plain to the employees that 'loyalty' to the respondent was synonymous with the rejection of membership in any labor organization. To solidify its purpose, the respondent inspired and dominated the Loyalty League, which had for its primary purpose the frustration of the efforts of the ILGWU to organize the employees. In 1937, when the ILGWU announced a renewal of its efforts to organize the respondent's employees after the Act had been held constitutional, the respondent through the medium of its Loyalty League and supervisory employees formed the DGWU to prevent its employees from selecting any 'outside' labor organization as their representative. It was the League's officers and representatives of the management, Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton who hired the attorney who planned the DGWU and wrote its bylaws. It was the League which borrowed $1,000 at the bank on the security of its members, including Rose Todd and other supervisory employees, with which to pay a retainer fee of $500 to the attorney, a part of which retainer was for advice and services in connection with the formation of the DGWU. The meeting of April 27, 1937, at which the DGWU was formed was sponsored and financed by the League. Rose Todd, at the time President of the League, directed and dominated the course of the meeting. The employees had heard nothing of the formation of a labor union prior to the meeting, but under the stimulus and pressure provided by the respondent they emerged from that gathering with a labor organization free from employer domination does not persuade employees to join its ranks so rapidly. Like the League, membership in the DGWU includes a large number of the respondent's supervisory employees whose presence inevitably prevents the organization from being free of the respondent's domination. Through Rose Todd, General Chairman of the DGWU, the respondent has retained complete control of that organization.

"The record conclusively shows that the respondent contributed substantial support to the DGWU. The organization has no office or headquarters of any kind apart from the respondent's factory. Respondent's facilities have been freely used in carrying on the business of the DGWU, and while the respondent contends it had no knowledge of the use of its various facilities, the practice has been so persistent and frequent that the undersigned is of the opinion that such a contention is impossible of belief and finds that the respondent had knowledge of these activities.

[fol. 51] "Rose Todd is allowed to take whatever time during working hours that is necessary for the handling of DGWU business without any deduction from her salary and makes a practice of taking up its business at any time during the day. Also Todd, as President of the League and General Chairman of the DGWU, was accorded almost complete freedom to roam through the factory engaging alternately in performing duties in connection with the factory's operation and handling matters relating first to the Loyalty League and then to the DGWU without interference or objection from the respondent. These facts demonstrate that the respondent has permitted and encouraged Todd to make use of the respondent's time in conducting the business of the DGWU. This necessarily conveys to the employees of the respondent its approval of the League and the DGWU. That the respondent lent encouragement and assistance to the DGWU, becomes even more evident when its cooperative attitude toward the DGWU is compared with the hostility with which it met the efforts of the ILGWU to organize the employees.

"The completeness of the respondent's domination becomes more clear, as shown by the personnel of the DGWU committee for the adjustment of piece work rates. Two of the three of this committee are persons employed by the respondent to set piece work rates in the first instance and when one of these two, Lulu Nichols, is the respondent's authority on the finality of the rate, the result is that the respondent sits on both sides of the bargaining table and the aggrieved operators are left without any means of independent collective bargaining with regard to piece work rates, ordinarily a matter jealously guarded for the promotion of the employees.

"Negotiations between the respondent and the DGWU with respect to the provisions in the Articles of Agreement signed on May 27, 1937, were completed within a few hours, and signed on the same day it was submitted to the respondent. Despite Mrs. Reed's determined opposition to a closed shop, she made no protest when the DGWU made such a proposal. She stated: 'I understand that (a closed shop) is very essential to industrial peace'. The closed shop was granted and membership in a labor organization of the respondent's choice became obligatory upon the employees, buttressed with a check off of dues, to guarantee financial stability to the organization that the respondent initiated and thereafter controlled.

"On all the evidence, the undersigned finds the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the DGWU and contributed support thereto and that the respondent thereby interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

[fol. 52] "The DGWU is not and never has been the lawful representative of the respondent's employees for the purpose of collective bargaining in regard to the rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, and other conditions of employment. Under these circumstances, the undersigned finds that the contract, supplemental wage agreement, any extension, renewal, modification or supplement thereof, and any superseding contract between the respondent and the DGWU are void and of no effect. Independent of this finding of the invalidity of the aoove mentionad contracts, the closed shop provision is invalid, having been made with a labor organization established, maintained, and assisted by unfair labor practices, therefore, the closed shop provision does not fall within the proviso of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

"The undersigned further finds that the respondent, by entering into a contract containing a closed shop provision with the DGWU, discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure and other terms of employment of its employees, thereby encouraging membership in the DGWU and discouraging membership in the ILGWU, and that it thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed them in Section 7 of the Act.

"In addition, the undersigned concludes and finds that the respondent, by using the dominated Loyalty League to impede and prevent the employees from choice of labor organization, by permitting the circulation and requesting the employees to sign the pledge of March 2, 1937, and by the speech of Mrs. Reed at the March 18, 1937 meeting, has in these and other respects set forth above interfered with, restrained, and coerced the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act."

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part III, E, of the Intermediate Report (pp. 37-39) under the heading "E. The alleged discharges" and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to wit:

"The undersigned has previously described the anti-union demonstration by employees against Hull on the morning of April 23, 1937, which the undersigned found was condoned and encouraged by the respondent. During the demonstration, Mrs. Hyde, respondent's employment manager removed Hull from her machine and told her [fol. 53] that she would have to go home. Hull replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day. Hyde took her employee identification card which was necessary for admission to the factory. When Hull asked how she would get back into the plant, Hyde told her that she would come down to the door and admit her. * * *

"* * * This contention was based on Hull's statement made when a number of the anti-union demonstrators demanded that she go home, and also from the fact that she did not seek to return. However, when Mrs. Hyde told her she would have to leave the plant, Hull refused to quit her employment but agreed to go home for the day. These facts plainly show that Hull did not voluntarily give up her position with the respondent and only acquiesced in a one day lay off under pressure from the respondent. Furthermore, from the fact that Hyde agreed to call her indicates that the respondent did not consider Hull's statement a resignation of her employment.

"The undersigned finds that Sylvia Hull did not voluntarily leave the employment of the respondent but that she was temporarily laid off by the respondent because of her membership in and activity on behalf of the ILGWU. The undersigned therefore finds that the respondent discriminated in the regard to her tenure of employment, thereby discouraging membership in the ILGWU and interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act. * * *

"Fike's testimony as to conversations with respondent's agents and an alleged discriminatory lay off, if credited, provides a foundation which would afford an inference that her relationship to Sigler and her union membership was in part at least a motivating reason for the refusal of the respondent to reemploy her after she left on a vacation which was unauthorized. * * *"

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part IV of the Intermediate Report (p. 39) under the heading "The effect of the unfair labor practices upon commerce", and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, that respondent engaged in the activities set forth in Section III of the Intermediate Report, for the reason that same [fol. 54] are not supported by the evidence or by any reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, and for each and all the reasons heretofore set forth in the foregoing Point No. 15. Petitioner does not dispute that it was engaged in interstate commerce as set forth in the stipulation concerning said matter filed in this proceeding.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in Part V of the Intermediate Report (pp. 39-40) under the heading "The remedy", and particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to wit:

"Since it has been found that the respondent has engaged in certain unfair labor practices, the undersigned will recommend that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action designed to effectuate the policies of the Act.

"The undersigned, having found that the respondent has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the DGWU and contributed support to it, in order to effectuate the policies of the Act and free the employees of the respondent from such domination and interference and the effects thereof, which constitute a continuing obstacle to the exercise by the employees of the rights guaranteed them by the Act, will recommend that the respondent withdraw all recognition from the DGWU as the representative of any of the respondent's employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, and other conditions of employment, and completely to disestablish it as such representative.[53]

"The undersigned, having also found that the respondent entered into an unlawful contract with the DGWU providing for a closed shop, and in addition, agreed to the deduction of DGWU dues from the employees' wages as an integral part of the respondent's campaign to deny the employees the rights guaranteed them in the Act, will recommend that the respondent cease and desist from giving effect to the contract of May 21, 1937, and to the supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification or supplement thereof, or any superseding contract or agreement which may now be in force. Nothing in this recom-

stances, the propriety of a recommendation requiring reimbursement of dues is particularly applicable, if the unfair labor practices are to be fully remedied and the purposes and policies of the Act are to be completely effectuated by restoration of the status quo. Hence, the undersigned will recommend that respondent reimburse its former and present employees for the amounts deducted from their wages for dues and assessments in the DGWU.[55]

"The respondent's entire course of conduct, including its many and varied forms of interference, restraint, and coercion, its domination and support of the DGWU, and its discriminatory discharge of Sylvia Hull discloses a fixed purpose on the part of respondent to defeat self-organization and its objects. Because of the respondent's unlawful conduct in the past and its underlying purpose, the undersigned is convinced that there is a real danger of the respondent engaging in other related unfair labor practices proscribed by the Act in the future. The preventative purpose of the Act will be thwarted unless the undersigned's recommendation is coextensive with the threat. In order, therefore, to make effective the interdependent guarantees of Section 7 of the Act, to prevent a recurrence of unfair labor practices, and thereby to minimize strife which burdens and obstructs commerce, and [fol. 56] thus effectuate the policies of the Act, the undersigned will recommend that the respondent cease and desist from in any manner infringing the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act."

for all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in each of paragraphs numbered 2, 3, 4 and 5, under the heading "Conclusions of Law" (p. 41) of the Intermediate Report, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to-wit:

"2. R-- dominating and interfering with the formation and administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union and contributing support to it, the respondent has engaged and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the Act.

"3. By discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure and terms and conditions of employment of Sylvia Hull and other employees, thereby encouraging membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and discouraging membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the respondent has engaged and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

"4. By interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act, the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of the Act.

"5. The aforesaid unfair labor practices are unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act."

for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

1. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent has engaged in, or is engaging in, any of the unfair labor practices referred to in said paragraphs and each of same.

2. Because same are contrary to the evidence and contrary to the law under the evidence.

3. Because same are not supported or justified by the evidence or any inferences which may be properly drawn [fol. 57] therefrom, or by any findings of fact by the Trial Examiner which are supported by the evidence or any reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom.

4. Because same are partisan, biased, arbitrary, conjectural and speculative, and are not based on all the evidence or upon a fair consideration of the evidence.

5. Because same are based on conjecture, surmise and improper inferences and on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence and upon findings of fact not supported by the evidence.

6. Because the findings of fact upon which same are based are not supported by the evidence; and because the findings of fact are insufficient in law and in fact to support or justify said conclusions, for all the reasons set forth in Point No. 15.

7. Because the evidence does not show that the petitioner has violated the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act therein referred to.

8. Because said conclusions and determinations deprive petitioner of its property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

9. Because said conclusions are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, petitioner was denied a fair trial.

10. Petitioner assigns as error the said findings, statements and conclusions for all the reasons set forth in Point No. 15.

[fol. 58] 26.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in his Intermediate Report under the heading "Recommendations" (pp. 42-44) under subparagraphs 1 (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e), particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to-wit:

"Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, the undersigned recommends that the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company (Kansas City, Missouri) and its officers, agents, successors and assigns, shall:

"1. Cease and desist from:

"(a) Dominating or interfering with the formation and administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union or the formation or administration of any other labor organization of its employees, or from contributing support to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees;

"(b) Giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification, or supplement thereof, or to any superseding contract or agreement which may now be in force with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and from giving effect to its check off agreement with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

"(c) Discouraging membership in International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees, or encouraging membership in Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees, by laying off any of its employees, or in any manner discriminating in regard to their hire and tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment;

"(d) Dominating, controlling, and using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain, and coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act;

"(e) In any other manner interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of the right of self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purposes of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act."

[fol. 59] for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

1. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inference therefrom.

2. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the findings of fact or conclusions or any reasonable inferences therefrom made by the trial examiner.

3. Because said recommendations are contrary to the evidence and to the law under the evidence.

4. Because said recommendations are based upon the findings of fact and conclusions of the trial examiner in said Intermediate Report, which findings of fact and conclusions are in turn not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inference therefrom.

5. Because under the law and the evidence petitioner should not be required or ordered to cease and desist from doing the acts and things enumerated in said recommendations of the trial examiner.

6. Because said recommendations or any order based upon same would deprive petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

7. Because said recommendations are not based on a fair consideration of all the evidence, but are partisan, biased and arbitrary, and are based on conjecture and speculation, inference and surmise, not supported by any substantial competent evidence.

8. Because said recommendations are made in utter disregard of the evidence and of the obligation of the trial examiner to consider and weigh all the evidence.

[fol. 60] 9. Because the evidence does not show that the petitioner has violated any of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

10. Because there is an absence of evidence in the record to justify said recommendations or any of them, or to justify a finding or order of the National Labor Relations Board in accordance with said recommendations.

11. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, petitioner has been denied a fair trial.

12. Because said recommendations and each of same are based on incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant evidence.

13. Because said recommendations and each of same are contrary to and thwart the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

14. Because said recommendations and each of same are not conducive to effectuate the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and are beyond the power of the Board to impose or require under the facts here existing.

15. For all the reasons stated in the foregoing Point No. 15.

16. Because the evidence does not show that the respondent is doing or has done any of the acts or things set forth in said recommendations and for said reason petitioner cannot desist and cease from doing same, and said assumption by the trial examiner is erroneous and not supported by the evidence.

The trial examiner erred in his findings, statements and conclusions contained in his Intermediate Report under the [fol. 61] heading "Recommendations" (pp. 42-44) under subparagraph 2, particularly the following portions thereof, and the Board erred in adopting said findings, statements and conclusions, and each of same, to-wit:

"2. Take the following affirmative action which the undersigned finds will effectuate the policies of the Act:

"(a) Withdraw all recognition from Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment, and completely disestablish Donnelly Garment Workers as such representatives;

"(b) Reimburse its former and present employees for all dues and assessments, if any, which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

"(c) Post immediately in conspicuous places on every floor throughout the respondent's Kansas City factory, and maintain for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days, notices to its employees stating: (1) that the respondent will not engage in the conduct from which it is recommended that it cease and desist in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) hereof; (2) that it will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraph 2 (a) and (b) hereof; and (3) that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and that the respondent will not in any manner discriminate against any employee because of membership or activity in such organization.

"Notify the Executive Secretary of the Board in writing within ten (10) days of the receipt of this Intermediate Report what steps the respondent has taken to comply herewith.

* * * * * * *

"It is further recommended that unless on or before ten (10) days from the date of the receipt of this Intermediate Report, the respondent notifies said Executive Secretary in writing that it will comply with the foregoing recommendations, the National Labor Relations Board issue an order requiring the respondent to take the action aforesaid.

* * * * * * *"

[fol. 62] for each and all of the following reasons, to-wit:

1. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inference therefrom.

2. Because said recommendations are not supported or justified by the findings of fact or conclusions or any reasonable inferences therefrom made by the trial examiner.

3. Because said recommendations are contrary to the evidence and to the law under the evidence.

4. Because said recommendations are based upon the findings of fact and conclusions of the trial examiner in said Intermediate Report, which findings of fact and conclusions are in turn not supported or justified by the evidence or any reasonable inferences therefrom.

5. Because under the law and the evidence petitioner should not be required or ordered to do any of the acts and things enumerated in said recommendations of the trial examiner.

6. Because said recommendations or any order based upon same would deprive petitioner of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

7. Because said recommendations are not based on a fair consideration of all the evidence, but are partisan, biased and arbitrary, and are based on conjecture and speculation, inference and surmise, not supported by any substantial competent evidence.

8. Because said recommendations are made in utter disregard of the evidence and of the obligations of the trial examiner to consider and weigh all the evidence.

[fol. 63] 9. Because the evidence does not show that the petitioner has violated any of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

10. Because there is an absence of evidence in the record to justify said recommendations or any of them, or to justify a finding or order of the National Labor Relations Board in accordance with said recommendations.

11. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence.

12. Because said recommendations and each of same are contrary to and thwart the purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

13. Because said recommendations and each of same are based upon a hearing in which, and in the conduct of which, petitioner has been denied a fair trial.

14. Because said recommendations and each of same are not conducive to effectuating the purposes and provisions [of the purposes and provisions] of the National Labor Relations Act and are beyond the power of the Board to impose or require under the facts here existing.

15. For all the reasons stated in the foregoing point No. 15.

By omitting certain sentences and paragraphs in the foregoing quotations from the Intermediate Report, petitioner does not admit or intend to admit that the statements, findings or conclusions contained in said excepted sentences or paragraphs are true or are supported or justified by the evidence, or that any adverse inferences [fol. 64] or implications that may be drawn therefrom are supported or justified by the evidence. The trial examiner, in preparing the Intermediate Report, has so intermingled statements that are supported by the evidence with statements that are not supported by the evidence that it is impossible to separate the true from the false even in single sentences, and the findings and statements in the Intermediate Report often set forth clauses, sentences, or portions of the evidence which, standing alone, are strictly true, but do not fully or fairly state the whole evidence or the true purport thereof, and the inferences that might be drawn from the portions stated are not and would not be justified by the whole evidence if same had been fairly stated by the trial examiner. For these reasons, petitioner excepts to and assigns as error any and all inferences adverse to petitioner which are or may be drawn from such partial or unfair statements of the evidence.

Petitioner assigns as error the Board's denial of petitioner's application (Board's Exhibit 1-EEEEE) for a continuance of said further hearing and excepts to each and all the rulings and action of the Board contained and set forth in its order, Exhibit 1-GGGGG, denying said continuance for and upon each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in said application for continuance; and for like reasons excepts to the action of the trial examiner in proceeding with said further hearing in denial of the application.

Petitioner has been denied a fair trial and due process of law herein in this, to-wit: that petitioner in Part B of its Answer alleged, among other things, that during all the times mentioned in the Amended Complaint, the ILGWU, Wave Tobin, manager of its Kansas City Joint Board, and others, had been and were engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy petitioner's business and to force petitioner, in violation of the National Labor Relations Act, to compel its employees against their will to join the ILGWU, and that in furtherance of said conspiracy said ILGWU, its officers and agents, published false and libelous reports about petitioner and the working conditions in its plant and inaugurated and threatened secondary boycotts against petitioner's customers and threatened to cause gangs of lawless persons to assault petitioner's employees and perpetrate the same unlawful acts of violence and intimidation, including stripping of women naked in the public streets, assaulting them with knives, razor blades and other deadly weapons, which they perpetrated or caused to be perpetrated against employees of other garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas; that the ILGWU, on or about March 15, 1937 began an attack of fraud and violence upon the Missouri Garment Company, Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company and Gernes Garment Company, all of Kansas City, Mo., for the purpose of compelling those companies to force their employees to join the ILGWU; that at said time, the ILGWU did not represent a single employee of the Gernes Garment Company, and a very small minority in the other two of said companies; that agents of the ILGWU an- [fol. 66] nounced that the acts of violence perpetrated against the employees of said companies would be perpetrated against the employees of petitioner's company and would be commenced against petitioner's employees after the above mentioned companies had been forced to capitulate and yield to the demands of the ILGWU for a closed shop, and thereby compel their employees to join the ILGWU; that petitioner further alleged in said Part B of its Answer herein that the Board filed the complaint herein and maintained this proceeding with knowledge of said unlawful conspiracy and activities of the ILGWU and assisted the ILGWU in said unlawful conspiracy, to force petitioner to compel its employees to join the ILGWU, in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

That the trial examiner struck out erroneously Part B of Petitioner's Answer (R. 6100) and refused to permit petitioner to adduce evidence in support thereof and rejected petitioner's offer of proof thereon; refused to permit petitioner to show, among other things, the ruthless, violent and unlawful methods used by the ILGWU in their various strikes at St. Louis, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., Dallas, Texas, and in the strike conducted by the ILGWU in Kansas City, Mo. against the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri Garment plants in March and April, 1937 (just prior to the organization of the DGWU), and the threats to use the same or worse tactics against the Donnelly employees, or to show the effect which said methods and threats of the ILGWU had upon the petitioner's employees with reference to the formation of the DGWU and their selection of bargaining representatives.

That said evidence was highly material and relevant upon the chief issue herein, as to whether petitioner coerced its employees into forming the DGWU or whether they [fol. 67] formed that union of their own free will and because they did not want to be represented by a union employing the unlawful tactics used by the ILGWU; that said evidence was material and relevant upon the credibility of the Board's witnesses who were affiliated with the ILGWU. That said evidence was material and relevant upon the question of whether the charges filed by the ILGWU herein were bona fide or an unlawful effort of the ILGWU to coerce petitioner to require its employees to join that union against their will and hence upon the question of whether the Board should institute or continue this proceeding for the purpose of benefiting the ILGWU and removing from its path the DGWU, its only competing union among the Donnelly employees, by ordering the disestablishment of the DGWU and specifically prohibiting petitioner from interfering with the organizational activities of the ILGWU (although accompanied by fraud and violence of the most despicable character), or whether the Board should dismiss the complaint herein. That said evidence was material and relevant upon the interpretation to be given by the Board not only of the acts and testimony of the Board's witnesses who were affiliated with the ILGWU, but also of the acts and testimony of petitioner's employees and their good faith in testifying to the reasons for preferring an association of their own

(the DGWU) instead of the ILGWU. That the refusal of the trial examiner and Board to receive and consider said evidence was also material and relevant upon the question of the finality to be given to the Board's findings of fact made in the absence of such evidence.

That by reason of the matters aforesaid and the refusal of the trial examiner and Board to receive such testimony, [fol. 68] the petitioner has been denied a fair trial herein and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The spirit and letter of the Order of this Court remanding the case to the Board for the purpose of taking further testimony held to be material, has been nullified by the trial examiner's and Board's continued refusal to regard as material the testimony of petitioner's employees as to how and why they came to form the DGWU, as exemplified in the Board's statement in its Decision and Order (p. 2) that:

"* We are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case."

That by reason of the fixed and unalterable view of the Trial Examiner and Board as to the immateriality of said evidence, it is apparent that they gave no real or genuine consideration to said evidence; because of which petitioner has been denied the benefit of said evidence and the Board's order should be set aside and for naught held.

That the spirit and letter of this Court's order remanding the case to the Board for the taking of further testimony has also been nullified by the trial examiner's rulings (affirmed by the Board) erroneously interpreting the Court's remand and restricting the additional testimony to be taken to employee witnesses, and in restricting the testimony of such employee witnesses to the trial examiner's [fol. 69] erroneous construction of the scope of evidence covered by petitioner's offers of proof which had been rejected at the previous hearing, and in refusing to permit petitioner to adduce testimony as to the activities and threats of the ILGWU and "other material evidence" bearing on the issues of whether petitioner dominated, coerced or interfered with its employees in their free choice of a labor union, by reason of which petitioner has been denied the benefit of the order of remand, and the Board's order should be set aside and for naught held.

The Board erred by its Order dated June 10, 1943, denying petitioner's Motion for Correction of the Transcript.

34.

35.

"Q. Are you still a member of the Loyalty League?
A. Yes, sir."

Mr. Tyler: Just a moment, Mr. Examiner. I object to any testimony or questions in regard to the Donnelly Loyalty League, for the reason it is purely a social organization that has no connection whatever with the matters involved in this case or with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Tyler, they allege it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way I could determine that is to get some facts that will enable me to do it. So, I will overrule the objection."

[fol. 71] "Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 2.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object for the reason that there has been no showing that the Donnelly Company Athletic Club —what is the name of this? The N. D. A. A. represents the company in any shape, way, shape or form, and nothing that it publishes in any way is binding upon the respondent. • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you are offering it in its entirety?

"Mr. Leary: I am, Mr. Examiner; yes, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener desires to object to it on the ground that nothing done or said by the Athletic Association would be binding on the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any of their members; also, that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batter: Well, of course, at this stage in the proceeding, it is pretty difficult for me to determine what, if anything, has any relevancy. So I will receive it subject to the connection with later testimony. In other words, the first day this hearing starts, I certainly can't tell what relevancy anything has.

37.

same) set forth on Page 360 (R. I.-58) of the transcript of the record as follows:

"Q. Your memory is a complete blank on this matter of a stenographer and how she was obtained and who she was and so forth?

"Mr. Tyler: Well, I object to that as repetition and argument with his witness. She said she doesn't remember. I object to this method of cross-examination and browbeating of this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, there is no browbeating or even indication of it thus far, not even a semblance of it thus far. I think Mr. Leary has been very gentlemanly, and that is what I expect all counsel to be in this hearing. Now, I am here for some purpose and if it got to the point in this hearing where anybody attempts to browbeat a witness, I will see that they are amply protected.

[fol. 72] "Mr. Tyler: I submit that repeating the question with emphasis after she once answered it amounts to improper cross-examination, and it is not proper at this time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer."

38.

"Q. Well, did you know on April 22d that Fern Sigler was in the union?

"A. Mr. Leary, I am not clear on the date of that.

"Q. Well, that would be the day before this meeting.

"A. In the evening; possibly that night.

"Q. April 22d?

"A. It was either the 22d or the 23d. I don't know which it was. Whatever date that you say will have to stand, because I couldn't remember the date. It was the first time that I knew anything about Sylvia Hull. I didn't know anything about Fern Sigler until this morning.

So, what,—in that conversation there, I don't think I am referring to Fern at the time. It was just a general discussion of different people, about their feeling toward peop[illegible] that belonged to the International Union. As you will remember, that feeling was created by the disturbance that was going on around town, and particularly up at 26th and Grand.

"Mr. Leary: I move, Mr. Examiner, that be stricken as not responsive.

"Mr. Leary: Let the whole answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The entire answer may be stricken, * * *."

39.

[fol. 73] "Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, prior to Mr. Langsdale's cross-examination, I renew my objection as to his right to cross-examine this witness on the ground that he is taking the position adversary to that of the Board, which he, being counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which is the claimant in this case.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled.

"Mr. Langsdale: Shall I proceed?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, sir."

40.

udice of the Trial Examiner against the petitioner, and show his failure and refusal to consider testimony favorable to petitioner and show that petitioner was denied a fair and impartial hearing herein by the trial examiner and for the reason that the trial examiner was thereby attempting to intimidate and confuse the witness and inject into the record a highly prejudicial conclusion and statement concerning the said witness for the purpose of misleading the Labor Board and any Court that might review the evidence, and for the reason that said bias and prejudice of the trial examiner were and are highly prejudicial to petitioner in that same were carried forward into, and permeate, the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations of the trial examiner which comments and action of the trial examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the record (pp. 557, 558, 559), (R. I. 124, 125, 126) to wit:

[fol. 74] "Q. Did you discuss any one of the points that you recall?

"A. I surely did. I think I probably discussed—I think I probably should say, then, that I particularly discussed with her these piecework guarantees. Now, there were operators there, and they may have said something too. No doubt they did.

"Q. Now, Miss Todd, 'may'—of course, 'may' anything. I don't want what may have happened or what might have happened. If you don't know anything about this meeting, just tell me you don't remember anything about it, and we will let it go.

"A. I just told you, Mr. Batten, that I could never forget that meeting the longest day I live.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I want to except to your remarks. This witness hasn't said she knows nothing about this meeting. She said they discussed every single point.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I said as to specific things that transpired at the meeting. Now, when she says she discussed everything, Mr. Ingraham, surely you don't think that means anything from the standpoint of evidence, do you?

"Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think when she says they discussed every point, that that is about as far as anybody can go. You mean that she is to tell some conversation?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I think that a person who attended one of these bargaining meetings, if that is all she can tell about it, I think she has a very, very faint recollection of what happened, not sufficient to accept in any way, in any form, as evidence of anything.

"Mr. Ingraham: I except to Your Honor's remarks.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may except, but I am saying that I don't think it amounts to anything.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener wishes to except, also, and calls your Honor's attention to the fact that this meeting occurred more than two years ago, attended by many people, that the results of it were principalized (crystallized) in written form, which is the summary of the witness' memory of what was done; that there is no provision or presumption that she doesn't remember conversations connected with it, any further than that, that her evidence is, you say, worthless.

If the court will recall, she has testified that these demands were submitted as demands of the union.

[fol. 75] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my only position about this witness is this: that either she has an extremely poor memory or else she doesn't want to remember some of these things. Now, you may take exceptions to that, because that is clearly, Mr. Tyler, my impression thus far of this witness' testimony, and I think, as the Examiner in this hearing, I have a perfect right to express such an opinion, and instead of expressing it in my report, I express it now so you may take the necessary exceptions to it.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to the remark.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener excepts.

"Mr. Ingraham: As highly prejudicial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is incorrect, I think it is, Mr. Ingraham.

"Mr. Ingraham: I think it is incorrect.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I doubt if anyone present could state what question Mr. Leary last asked, and that occurred less than an hour ago."

41.

"Q. Let us take in this same person with the $18 guarantee, who worked during certain weeks only 20 hours, but who during those 20 hours of work earned only $9, or rather $8.50, on a piecework basis. What would be the person's pay check for that week?

A. I am not very good at mathematics.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent doesn't object to the witness telling what she can about that, but we do object to a witness trying to interpret a written contract, which is here in evidence, and * * * allow those interpretations of a written contract to be deemed as binding on the respondent. We don't believe that is proper.

[fol. 76] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, don't you think, Mr. Stottle, a person who is a party to the contract has a right to give their idea of how it should be interpreted; whether it is binding, I am not passing on that, but surely the person who signed it ought to be in a position to say what they think about it.

"Mr. Leary: I will withdraw the question, if Mr. Stottle will point that portion out in the contract to me.

"Mr. Stottle: I say, there is a written contract that provides, that all of that is provided about the guarantee.

"Mr. Leary: Will you point that particular part out to me now?

"Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may answer the question. I have said she is qualified as a party to this contract to give her idea of what it is."

42.

"Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner pleases, before Mr. Langsdale begins any examination of this witness, I desire to object to counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union being permitted to interrogate this witness or to cross examine this witness, for the reason that counsel for that organization, the claimant in this case, having during the entire progress of this hearing sat across the counsel table from the attorneys for the Board, have continuously and constantly consulted with the attorneys for the Board, have been in numerous conferences with them, have passed notes back and forth across the counsel table, have participated in directing the course of the examination made by the Board's counsel of this witness; to permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which has shown itself to be so identified with the Board in this case, it being the complaining party, as to have a unity of interest and to be essentially the same as the Board in this case, for purposes of prosecuting this case. To permit counsel to interrogate this witness at this time would permit a double [fol. 77] cross-examination by the same parties of this witness. This witness has, over our objection, been subjected to what we consider cross-examination for pretty nearly three days, and to now permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to take over examination at this point, and further cross-examine, or to cross-examine this witness at all, would be unfair to this witness, would be illegal examination, and--

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a moment. Whenever you say a thing is illegal, I want you to tell me why. I mean, I can't accept that.

"Mr. Lane: On the ground that it is so far a departure from the rules of procedure and progress which obtain in courts of law, and which should obtain in administrative tribunals as to be a negation of the rules of fair play, as to deprive the intervener in this case of due process.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is very clear the rules permit a party to call witnesses, examine them, cross-examine them, and take part in the proceedings.

Mr. Langsdale, you may proceed."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting Mr. Langsdale, as counsel for the International Union, to read into the record and interrogate the witness concerning a purported affidavit of Mrs. Reed given in another proceeding, over the objection of the Intervener and the Petitioner as disclosed by the transcript of the record, pages 674 through 680 (R. I. 149, 150), and from the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. Let me ask you if you have read or heard read the affidavit filed in that suit, signed by Nell Quinlan Reed, dated November 5, 1937, in which she stated, 'In the first place, a group of employees—

"Mr. Lane (interrupting): Just a moment. I am objecting, of course, to his reading the affidavit made in that trial as not being proper cross-examination of this witness and an improper way of trying to get that into this record:

"Q. (Mr. Langsdale) Have you heard this part of Mrs. Reed's affidavit read:—

[fol. 78] "Mr. Lane (interrupting): Just a minute. The witness' testimony, as I understand it, is she has not read or heard read any portion of that affidavit.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, there is no objection to asking her if she has? You don't mean this has anything to do with the evidence, because an attorney reads it in here? I suppose if you got up and read this whole case in here, line by line, then when you got through you asked the witness if she had ever heard it read before —It doesn't mean anything when the attorney reads it.

"Mr. Lane: I object to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed:

"Q. (Mr. Langsdale) Let me ask you if you heard read in that lawsuit this part of Mrs. Reed's affidavit: 'In the first place, a group of employees on or about March 18, 1937, came to my office and told me that all of the employees were going to meet and discuss ways and means to protect themselves against any assaults or acts of violence on the part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.'

"A. I did not know that.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, if your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness if she had read or heard read, rather, Mrs. Reed's affidavit, and then he proceeded to read from that affidavit, and he is still referring to some record and I think the inference is that he is still reading from an affidavit of Mrs. Reed, which would be confusing to the witness, when, in fact, he is not reading from Mrs. Reed's affidavit."

44.

[fol. 79] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this whole line of testimony on this exhibit for the reason that Mr. Leary went through the same exhibit and asked the same questions, and it is repetition, for one thing; and, for another thing, the transcript speaks for itself. As to why she said a certain thing or didn't say it is immaterial to any issue in the case. I believe the examiner in his own statements made some such remark as that when this was gone into before.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume you are referring to this entire line of questioning, are you not?

"Mr. Stottle: As to this exhibit, yes.

"Trial Examiner Batter: I am going to sustain the objection unless you take the position that you are an entirely independent and separate party to this action, Mr. Langsdale. If you are, then I will permit you to proceed as an entirely separate and independent party.

"Mr. Langsdale: I have taken that position, and I take it now.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object to his being accorded the right to take that position.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not according it. The rules so provide. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is mentioned in this complaint. And if that is Mr. Langsdale's position, he may proceed as a separate and independent party and assume the responsibility for the conduct of his case independent of the Board's Attorneys.

"Mr. Ingraham: If the Examiner please, if Mr. Langsdale is representing a separate part he should also apprise all other parties of the position he takes, and all other parties should have pleadings setting forth his position.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to complicate this question I have raised by the matter of pleadings. I will permit you to raise it when I get my point settled.

"Mr. Lane: We do not agree with your Honor's position. Our position is, if the Examiner please, this witness is produced by the Board, and that the I. L. G. W. U., by rule 5, is made a party to the proceeding, the complaint being filed in the name of the Board, and that in attempting to cross-examine this witness Mr. Langsdale is in effect attempting to cross-examine his own witness.

"There is not anything in rule 25 which gives the Board or Mr. Langsdale the right to cross-examine his own witness."

[fol. 80] 45.

46.

"Q. Now, despite the fact that you said on the 23rd day of April that 'we're going to run an open shop', you presided at a meeting four days later where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I object to that for the reason the question omits certain important additions made in the statement as shown by the transcript. The full statement attributed to Miss Todd being 'We're going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule, as always'.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, now I object to his incorporating anything in my question. I have a right to take such parts of the statement as I desire to examine her about and not use her self-serving —

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Read the question, please.

"(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter).

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer."

47.

"Q. If you should have some person who had had years of experience in negotiating contracts with garment companies similar to yours who should go to work for the Donnelly Garment Company and you should want them to represent you, even though they had only been there a week —

"Mr. Stottle (interrupting): Respondent objects to the questions as being wholly argumentative and speculative as to what might happen in the future and what might happen.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you will permit him to finish the question, Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: I did wait a while.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) — would you think you should be limited in your right to employ that person or anyone else to represent you?

"Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Examiner, we renew the objection.

48.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting counsel for the International Union to examine the witness concerning her interpretation of a written contract over the objection of the petitioner and the intervener and requiring the witness to testify to said matters, as shown by excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 754, 759, 760, 761, 762 (R.I. 160f, 160g, 160h).

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the contract speaks for itself, whatever it may say, and we object to asking the witness to interpret something that is perfectly plain in whatever it says. If it wasn't plain I don't believe this witness would have the right to interpret a written contract.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Miss Todd, paragraph 11 of the working agreement entered into on May 27, 1937, is as follows:

"Will you tell me why you as a member of this contracting committee submitted to paragraph 11, placing a limita[fol. 82] tion upon the activities of the representatives of that union as paragraph 11 does limit them?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as it does or if it does?

"Mr. Langsdale: As it does.

"Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, intervener objects to the question, adopting for that purpose the objection heretofore made by Mr. Stottle, and sustained, and the objection made by Mr. Lane; and further —

* * * * *

"Mr. Patten: * * * We further object because the question assumes, as other questions have assumed, that this committee submitted to it. There is no evidence whatever that they submitted to anything. For that reason we ask that the question be excluded.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

"Mr. Langsdale: The union makes an offer to prove that this witness, if permitted to answer the question, would testify she intentionally desired to limit the activities of the representatives of the union for the purpose of crippling that representation and, in addition to that, the further motive was developed by propaganda indulged in by the management of this company against union representation and the necessity therefor.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if this witness will answer as you have just said, I will permit you to ask the question, because you have said if she is permitted to testify she would testify in a certain way. On the basis of that you certainly can proceed.

"Mr. Patten: If the Examiner please, I suggest that Mr. Langsdale agree to be bound by the witness' answer. Otherwise his offer is improper.

* * * * *

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Now, then, will you say why you did submit to the limitation of paragraph 11 upon the activities of the representatives of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * *

"A. There are no limitations on the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

They all take an active interest. They all have time at noon or after work, the same as I have, and you will find continuously through these minutes where they have done a lot of work and taken an active interest in it. I couldn't dominate those people if I wanted to.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move that the answer be stricken out as not responsive.

The question was, why did she submit to paragraph 11, [fol. 83] which puts a limitation upon the activities of the members?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects in that the offer of proof is not being made, and asks that it be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

49.

in overruling petitioner's objection and permitting the witness Rose Todd to testify to her interpretation of written by-laws and contract as disclosed by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 774, 775 (R.I. 164, 165), to-wit:

"Q. But under your by-laws, in your contract, [on] one can continue to work for the Donnelly Garment Company who joins the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; is that correct?

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, we object to this question for the reason, as we have several times, this just involves an interpretation of the by-laws and contract. If this witness gave an answer, your Honor wouldn't feel bound by it, if you thought the contract meant something else, and what is the materiality of having her answer something that wouldn't bind you and bind Mr. Langsdale and not bind the respondent. It possibly might be binding on the intervener, I don't know that it would be, within a written contract made by the intervener.

"Mr. Langsdale: The question is provoked by the long answer of this witness that anyone could join an organization anyone wanted to with the Donnelly Garment Company, and of course, this is very plainly written that cannot be done.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it isn't so much a question of interpretation of the contract. It is a question of this witness on the basis of her volunteering a statement that anybody can join anything they please.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Now, the question, Miss Todd, is this, or at least, my question: How can a person join any union they please under the restrictions in these contracts?"

[fol. 84] 50.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as disclosed by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 784, 785, 786, 787 (R.I. 167, 168, 169), to-wit:

"Q. But who passed upon who belonged to that classification, group 1 operators, performing their work efficiently?

"A. Who passed on this, at this time?

"Q. Yes, under this contract.

"Mr. Stottle: If the Examiner please, respondent objects to the question as to who passed upon it. There is nothing to indicate the question has ever arisen as to whether the operator was efficient or otherwise.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course Miss Todd is reading this. Apparently someone has to pass on it if the question arises. I think the witness should testify who. The statement is there, as Mr. Langsdale has read it — I haven't read it.

It seems to me that this witness should state that. That apparently is the [sume] and substance of the paragraph.

"Mr. Stottle: How could the witness state who passed on something if it never has been passed upon?

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Miss Todd, in those classifications, where it states 'who efficiently performs . . . . .' who would determine that efficient performance?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I think we should make our objection to your own question, also —

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): You are perfectly free to.

"Mr. Stottle: — for the reason that you are asking the witness to interpret a provision of the contract which does not say who is to, and you are asking her to say who is to do something that is not provided for.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is why I cannot possibly determine it myself by reading the contract, it does not say who it is.

"Mr. Stottle: There are lots of things that contract has not mentioned; that is one of them. If it isn't stated in the contract it is not a part of the contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As far as the Examiner is concerned I would like to know what this witness, who was a party to the contract, representing this organization, says as to who performs efficiently.

[fol. 85] "Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Who determines that?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Your objection is overruled. I didn't say so, but by the following question I asked I supposed it was understood.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may respondent have a continuing objection to this kind of questioning as asks for an interpretation of provisions of the contract?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I prefer that you not have it, because I don't know that I am going to make the same ruling on all of the questions that may be asked. I would prefer that you make your objections, Mr. Stottle, as the questions are asked; that is, on this matter."

51.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to the introduction of this exhibit at this time because there hasn't been any identification that would show that it has any materiality on the case.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, now, there are two objections in one. You object to it once because it isn't identified and another because it isn't material.

"Mr. Stottle: Yes. I am making both of them, neither identified properly or material if it were identified properly.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, I think it has been sufficiently identified and certainly it is material.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't see; I will receive it subject to further identification. I don't think this witness' statement, Mr. Langsdale, is sufficient to receive it without qualification. ******

"I said I would receive it subject to further identification."

52.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in excluding competent and material evidence offered by petitioner through the witness Rose Todd concerning the threats of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' [fol. 86] Union against the Petitioner's employees and the violence of the strikes and other activities of the I. L. G. W. U. at other garment factories for the purpose of showing the effect of said activities upon the petitioner's employees as being a motivating cause for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and as disproving the allegations in the amended complaint that petitioner dominated said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or caused its formation.

In connection with the foregoing exception, petitioner also assigns as error the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 839 (R. I. 190), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Miss Todd, you had read in the paper what was going on at the other garment company plants, had you not?

"A. The papers were full of it, and I could see what was going on at Twenty-Sixth and Grand as I came to and from work.

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not material, and if it is material we want to be permitted to show that when A. A. Ahner hired strikebreakers it was to prevent most of the violence she claims she saw.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We are not going to try out the newspaper in this case and have all of those articles brought in, and then have the reporters brought in and prove that it is true or not true. If there were threats and violence, bring the people in here that were threatened, and the people violence was done to, and let them testify.

"I will sustain the objection as far as that part of it goes. We are not going to try out all of those matters."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit the petitioner to show the provisions contained in working agreements between the International Union and other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City, Missouri, as tending to show the bona fides of the negotiations between petitioner and intervener as to the bargaining contracts between petitioner and intervener, and as tending to refute testimony offered by the Board [fol. 87] and the International Union that said contracts between petitioner and intervener were not bona fide and did not show genuine bargaining.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 857, 858, 862, 864, 865, 866 (R. I, 201-206 incl.), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Miss Todd, do you know what the minimum wage provision is in the Gernes, Gordon, and other contracts—* in this city with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: Let the record show my objection, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection?

"Mr. Leary: On the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness in regard to the terms and conditions of the contract which she negotiated with the company, and his questions were directed at showing that the contract was not a good contract for the employees. Now, I think we have a right to come in and show that it is a far better contract for the employees than any contract that the International has entered into with any other garment company in this part of the county. It is competent for that purpose.

"The point has been raised that Miss Todd and other members of the committee didn't really negotiate.

"Here is a company that has been paying good wages, here is a company that treats its employees fairly, here is a company that does not try to beat down the wages. These employees come in and say they want to bargain collectively and want to enter into a written contract.

"The company enters into a written contract, and in doing that, because it doesn't get into a fight with the employees, and because it doesn't haggle, and because they do arrive at a fair kind of a contract and the employees have better wages than are contained in any of these other contracts, I think that is very conclusive evidence that this union is properly representing the employees.

[fol. 88] "Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think, Your Honor, that since Mr. Langsdale has gone into the question of the negotiations, and he said, 'Now, do you think this was good for your people? Do you think that provision was good for the members of your union?' I think in view of that examination of this witness we are certainly entitled to show just what contract was obtained, and of course it will show that the company gave up a great deal. The company signed a contract—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Mr. Ingraham, you may go ahead on the basis you are now taking just as fully as you desire. In fact, I want you to show the negotiations, the bargaining, and the process that was gone through in arriving at it. You may go into that as fully as you care to, but I am not going to go into this matter from the standpoint of comparison with other companies here or any other place.

"Mr. Lane: It has been asserted here by Mr. Langsdale from time to time that he expects to offer evidence to establish that the intervener union is merely a sham union, that it is not in fact and under the law a representative of the employees. Now, in that connection the intervener asserts that the establishment of the results that were obtained in the contract which was entered into is an important point to be considered in determining the bona fideness of the intervener union, and in connection with determining the results that were obtained by that contract the prices and the minimum wages guaranteed by other garment concerns, the same industry, in the same community, is a point to be taken into consideration, so that a comparison of those figures will at least tend to show one of the results obtained by this contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it would be well now to settle this quesetion so that everyone will know, as I have done once or twice already, what my position is.

"I want you to be prepared for it, although the evidence is not submitted. I can tell you now, Mr. Lane, I do not propose to go into that matter. The only reason I tell you that is this, that you may be making your preparation and preparing an offer of proof: I want to advise the attorneys now that I am not going to try this case by comparison with other plants in this town or in other towns. It is not material to the issues in this case.

[fol. 89] "Q. Miss Todd, it is alleged in the complaint that the company caused a violent demonstration against Fern Sigler and others as a means of causing the employees either to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or to refrain from joining the International Union. I hand you here a paper which is marked Respondent's Exhibit No. 1, and will ask you if that is one of the notices in the newspapers that you have referred to that caused the incident at the plant that you testified about?

(Thereupon, the newspaper clipping above referred to was marked 'Respondent's Exhibit No. 1' for identification.)

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as an improper question. She is merely handed the document and asked to identify it, and he tacks onto that question, 'Was it something that caused the incident about Fern Sigler at the plant'.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Have you seen that before, or read it?

"A. Yes.

"Q. At the time it was in the paper, is that it?

"A. Yes, sir. That is very definitely what caused that disturbance that morning.

"Mr. Leary: What was that?

"The Witness: That article in the paper, Sylvia saying she was going to represent the employees—

"Mr. Leary: I move that the witness' statement be stricken out. I asked the reporter what the witness' answer was.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter)

"Mr. Leary: I move that it be stricken as not responsive.

"The Witness: [Wy], yes, it is, Mr. Leary, isn't it?

"Mr. Leary: I said I move that the last statement of the witness be stricken as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be stricken."

And in refusing to admit petitioner's Exhibit No. 1 for the purpose of showing that the matters recited in said exhibit were the cause of the alleged demonstration against Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937 which ruling and action appear on Pages 873 through 878 of the transcript of the record.

55.

[fol. 90] "Q. And is that, the printing of that article in the paper and the seeing of it by the employees, is that what caused the demonstration against Fern Sigler on the morning of April 23d?"

and in refusing to permit the witness Rose Todd to testify that the matters in the paper referred to in said question, to wit, petitioner's Exhibit No. 1, was the cause of the demonstration against Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937.

"Q. Miss Todd, there has been some question raised here as to whether there was real bargaining between your union and the company with regard to your union contracts. I will ask you to state if there were any provisions in the contracts that were favorable to the company, did you feel that they were more than offset by the provisions which you obtained favorable to the union?

"A. Yes we felt like that is a good contract. We have certain things that we had to give—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I object to this part of the answer as voluntary and not responsive. Her answer to the question was 'Yes'.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection."

57.

[fol. 91] "Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Had you or had you not seen notices in the papers of physical violence at the Gernes plant?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in this case, as to what occurred at the Gernes plant.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit what is endeavored to be shown here is whether these people of their own volition desired to form their own labor union, and in so doing they are entitled to give reasons for taking that action. If the actions are probable they are persuasive; if they are not probable they are not persuasive. But they are entitled to give such reasons as they say they had to stay out of the International and join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and if they did understand violence was being exerted by the International, that might well be a reason —whether it was true or not, if they so understood, that might well be a reason for their choice, and they are entitled to show good faith for their choice by citing their reasons.

"Mr. Langsdale: That speech might be proper at some other stage of the proceedings.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will forget about speeches. I will sustain the objection. As I said yesterday, I am not going into all of these rumors. If you have any evidence of anyone who was threatened personally, they may come up and testify to it personally and I will receive that testimony, but I am not in this hearing going into all of the rumors that fly around during an organizational campaign of unions.

"Mr. Tyler: It is not the truth of the violence I am establishing. It is merely the reason these people had for staying out of the International and forming their own union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material for the purpose for which you have offered it."

58.

"Q. Did you see any of the banners or signs the pickets carried? A. Yes, Sir.

"Q. Do you remember what they said on them?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Tyler, I do not intend to receive any of that, either, unless it is something which was unlawful or illegal. If these pickets picketed this plant in the way in which they are permitted to under the law and there was nothing unlawful about it which amounted to actual coercion, I do not intend to go into all of those matters.

[fol. 92] "Mr. Tyler: I expect to show, if the Court please, that these signs contained untruthful statements, and that that had some effect on the choice these people made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest you embody that all in an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit to your Honor that in showing what their real choice of labor unions was they have a right to refer to any conduct, lawful or unlawful, of the International to show why they didn't want to join it. That is the vital crux. If the International had a habit of wearing red neckties and they didn't like red neckties and they didn't want to join the union for that reason, I submit they have a right to give their reasons for preferring their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I say, I do not propose to go into it with this witness, and if that is your theory on this particular matter you may submit it as an offer of proof.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, you have stated every party has an exception without asking for it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

"Mr. Stottle: In order that it might be clear, would the respondent be granted an exception to a question asked by the intervener when it is overruled?

"Trial Examiner Batten: All parties receive exceptions to all adverse rulings.

"Mr. Stottle: You might not deem it adverse to us.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to pass on that. If the parties deem it adverse you may have the exception. In other words, I do not intend to go through the record and determine whether it is adverse to certain parties or not.

"Mr. Stottle: I am not objecting to the intervener—I asked if I would have an exception to the Examiner's ruling, even though the ruling was made to a question asked by the Intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would say yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: Even if he does not make an objection?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if it is adverse."

59.

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to make an offer of proof.

"Intervener offers to prove by this witness that for months before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the employees had seen numerous accounts of violence by the International against employees of other garment plants in Kansas City and had, many of them, seen such violence with their own eyes, and had, many of them if not all, heard reports of such violence, that they were in a state of almost hysteria from constantly overheard statements that the same tactics were to be applied to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, and that this was a reason which affected them in their choice as to forming their own union or joining the International or staying out of all unions.

"Mr. Leary: I object to the offer of proof, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is denied."

60.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) appearing on Pages 956, 957 of the transcript of the record (R. I. 238g, 238h), with reference to the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because such comments show the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner and his intention to disregard the minutes as evidence in this proceeding, in so far as same are favorable to petitioner.

61.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Now, what was the situation before the contract?

"A. The situation before had been that the employer had the right to increase or reduce his working force, but [fol. 94] this contract gives the union also the right to interfere if he feels so—if we feel that someone is being allowed to go unnecessarily.

"Q. You mean because of the union activity?

"A. Well, no, not necessarily that. We certainly would do that if they were being let go because of union activity, but if they were being let go and we felt it was not right, the union still has the right to go to the employer and see if these people couldn't be retained.

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to that answer and ask that it be stricken out as an explanation for paragraph 14, because there isn't anything in paragraph 14 upon which to base that statement or conclusion, not anything. That says, 'The employer shall have the right to discharge.'

"Trial Examiner Batten: I was just getting ready to ask another question or two, but in view of your motion I will have it stricken. I was going into that some more. You may proceed."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner and his comments (and the Board's action in affirming same) upon the testimony of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Page 970 (R. I. 238k), to wit:

"* * * * * This Group 1 operators gives these operators a much higher guarantee than they had ever been guaranteed before. [Forth] per cent of them receiving—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): Now, I object to that answer as a conclusion upon the part of the witness. The evidence ought to be as to what the increase [it].

"Mr. Tyler: I think it is desirable that she should give the figures as she knows them, but I think that if she can say as a fact that the figures are higher, she is entitled to state that, even if she can't give the figures.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it means a thing in the way she answered, much higher. If she doesn't know, let's get somebody here that does. I mean, there is no use trying to have a witness answer questions that they can't answer. Now, surely there is somebody in the organization or with the respondent who could very definitely state, Mr. Tyler."

[fol. 95] 63.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) excluding and refusing to hear or consider evidence comparing the wages and other working conditions provided for in the contract between the petitioner and Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in comparison with like wages and conditions existing under contracts between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and other garment manufacturing companies in and about Kansas City, Missouri.

In connection with the foregoing exception, petitioner assigns as error the rulings, comments and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 981, 982, 983 (R. I, 238r, 239), to-wit:

"Q. Miss Todd, did you hear the testimony of Velma Dowdy in the injunction suit tried before Judge Miller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had occasion to use the figures she testified that she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union for a period of a year—* * * the figures she testified she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union with the figures which the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid to their union, each for a period of one year?

"Now, don't answer yet.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issues in this case. It involves a lot of collateral issues which will greatly prolong this hearing, as we should be entitled to show what we do with that money and why we need it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I now rule it is absolutely immaterial and irrelevant to this hearing. I do not intend to have a comparison between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is not on trial here, neither is the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is the respondent who is here answering to charges of unfair labor practices. That is the thing we are going to try. If you have any further testimony of any kind pertaining to this matter you can present it in the form of an offer of proof, but I do not intend to receive it."

[fol. 96] 64.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to hear or consider evidence concerning the application of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that the Labor Board hold an election by petitioner's employees as to the bargaining agency or union which they desired to represent them.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 1000, 1001 (R. I. 242, 243), to-wit:

"Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever petition the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election of employees? A. Yes, sir.

"Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, and move the answer be stricken. I think if there is any petition they might have filed, it would be the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think that it is immaterial whether they have or haven't, so far as this hearing is concerned. . . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I don't see it has anything to do with this hearing at all. Any matter connected with the petition or anything with relation to it.

"Mr. Tyler: Then, I wish to make an offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may make an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has filed two petitions with the National Labor Relations Board for an election of the employees as to bargaining representatives and labor unions, both recently, before the beginning of this hearing; that the reason they did not file any such petition earlier was because they had a contract with their employer and were operating satisfactorily under it through representatives of their own choosing, and they felt that their situation was satisfactory and that if any outsider disputed the claim that they were being represented by representatives of their own choice, it was, devolved upon such outsider to ask for such an election to change the status quo. Also, that the union on several occasions authorized their attor- [fol. 97] ney to agree to submit to an election of the employees and abide by the result, and that that was done in the record and the three-judge court hearing and again during the hearing before Judge Miller."

"Q. Have any requests been made by the union from the company for permission to use those bulletin boards?

"A. No, sir. Anybody uses them, and we have just used them.

"Mr. Leary: I move to strike all except the first two words of her answer as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

66.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) upon testimony of the witness Rose Todd as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1018, 1019, (R. I. 248a), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Now, at the time you received what I believe you have testified to as the only raise you have had from the company, is it or is it not a fact that a large number of employees received raises at the same time? A. It is a fact.

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to this constant leading of this witness, his own witness, his own client, and I suggest that the payroll is the best evidence of that. How does this woman know what was on everybody's envelope or everybody's check?

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) She has not testified to everybody's envelope or everybody's check.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I think your objection goes to the weight that may be given this testimony. If that remains as it now stands, without any cooperation, or anything of the kind, certainly the Examiner nor the Board could give a great deal of weight to it."

[fol. 98] 67.

"Q. Had you prior to March 18, 1937, ever been required to show an identification card in order to gain admittance to the plant?

A. No sir, I don't recall any need for one before that.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that the latter part of the answer be striken out as not responsive, and voluntary.

68.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner also assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting the testimony and refusing to sustain petitioner's and intervener's objections, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at Pages 1158, 1159, 1160, 1161, 1163, to-wit:

"Q. Is there another association, I mean different from any of those that have up to now been mentioned, to which you pay $2 a year dues?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to getting into still additional organizations, if there are any. Certainly the respondent has a right to provide a country club for its employees if they want to, and let them pay so much a month. There is no showing that it is done for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 99] "Trial Examiner Batten: I don't suppose there is any argument that the respondent could furnish the employees a country club for nothing if they wanted to.

"Mr. Stottle: And of course it would not be material to these issues.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I can't determine whether it is material or not until I find out about this matter of these rentals Mr. Langsdale is inquiring about.

"Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter)

"A. I haven't mentioned all of the ones there are.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) To whom do you pay this $2 a year?

"A. I think that card says 'Nelly Don Country Club'.

"Q. I hand you this card which has been marked International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's Exhibit No. 3 and ask you to state what it is—not what is on it, but what it is.

"A. It is a membership card of the club out there.

(Thereupon the card above referred to was marked 'International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's Exhibit No. 3).

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer Exhibit No. 3.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it is wholly immaterial to any of the issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Thus far I don't see that it has any bearing.

"Mr. Langsdale: I want to ask some questions about it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to International's Exhibit No. 3 for the reason that it is not material—it is not within any of the pleadings in this case, and for the reason that it opens up ramifications that are wholly outside of any proper inquiry in this investigation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed until I can determine. And if when he completes this matter, Mr. Lane, if it is not connected up with the issues in any way you may make a motion to have it stricken and it will be stricken.

"Q. Well, has the membership, the club membership, anything to do with whether or not members of the Loyalty League have the privilege of going to the club house to a Loyalty League party?

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to that as being speculative as to whether there was a Loyalty League party or what Loyalty League party, wholly immaterial or any issues. It has been testified heretofore that the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, a great many of them, belong to the Loyalty League, that a great many of them belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that a great many of them belong to this club business, a great many of them belong to the Athletic Association. [fol. 100] If anything is done down there that involves employees, there is bound to be certain overlapping."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting counsel for the International Union to prove his offer of proof by the witness Rose Todd and in doing so to ask the questions to which the Examiner had sustained objections, and in failing and refusing to strike said offer of proof when it appeared that the International Union was unable to prove such offer by the witness, as appears from the transcript of the record, Pages 1189 to 1193.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) referred to in the foregoing assignment as same further appear in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1189, 1192, 1193 (R.I. 292b), to-wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: All right, I offer to prove that, and also offer to prove that she examined all of this data during working hours, and that sometimes it amounted to 1,300 different employees or thereabouts, and that it took, many, many hours of the company's time to make the examination. That is the offer of proof I make.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will permit you to prove that by this witness.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent, if Mr. Langsdale is finished with that offer of proof, moves that the latter part be stricken from the record as not made in good faith, because he hasn't asked the witness to go ahead and state that she spent hundreds of hours, or whatever this offer of proof was, on this matter.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, I —

"Mr. Stottle (interrupting): It was just — it is not fair to have it appear in the record that he made an offer of proof by this witness —

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Stottle, I think — I think that Mr. Langsdale's offer of proof, and the questioning of the witness subsequent thereto speaks for itself."

[fol. 101] 70.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in overruling petitioner's objection and receiving evidence as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 1196, 1197 (R.I. 292c, 292d), to-wit:

"Q. I note that in January, 1938, Fred Brown got another raise, from $97 to $108.54 every two weeks. Do you know whether or not that is a fact?

"A. No, Mr. Langsdale, I don't.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this evidence as being immaterial, what different employees, of which there are 1,200 or 1,300 down there—what raises in pay they received. The answers have all been in the negative and there is probably no evidence on it as yet, but it seems to me it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Mr. Stottle, in the first place, I don't suppose she knows about these matters. And, in the second place, I cannot tell now whether it is material or whether it isn't. If Mr. Langsdale has the records and that is what they show —

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): We will bring them in, but I think I have a right to inquire whether or not the president of the union knew about these matters.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not telling you to discontinue.

71.

Petitioner assigns as error to the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth on Page 1199 of the transcript of the record, to-wit:

"Q. Do you know whether or not Mr. McConaughey's change from the mechanical department to the bookkeeping department was because he was a member of your board of chairmen?

"Mr. Lane: I object to that as calling for a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume the president of the organization, Mr. Lane, ought to know or not know. As far as she knows, she may state whether that was the reason."

[fol. 102] 72.

"Q. Now, are those percentages invariable? Are they fixed or do they vary?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I make the objection that the written contract provides concerning that, and it is binding, and that this is asking the witness to interpret the contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, if it is applied to this question, I have no objection. I would over rule the objection."

73.

"Q. Who would tell you to lay off when your vacation was coming?

"A. Well, I don't remember how we knew our vacation was coming. I suppose our instructor would tell us when it came time for our vacation or when our vacation time was up.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken. She 'supposes' that that was done.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will permit it to stand. I have permitted a lot of others to stand that were apparently supposing or thinking. It may stand for whatever value it has."

[fol. 103] 74.

"Mr. Lane: I object to exhibit No. 14 for the reason that it has not been properly identified. There has been no showing as to where it originated, how it originated, or who was responsible for getting it up, and for that reason it could be in no way binding here on anybody.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection, and the further objection that it is immaterial to any issue in this case."

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is received."

75.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) overruling the objections of the petitioner to testimony of the witness May Fike as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1269 (R.I. 305), to-wit:

"Q. Do you know whether or not she said anything at the time?

"A. She said we should sign and pass that to the next girl, if I remember right.

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I move the answer be stricken out as not binding on respondent, what the instructor said.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled. By overruling the objection I am not saying it is binding, but I am overruling the objection.

"Mr. Stottle: We further object because it is not identified as to what instructor said that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may proceed."

[fol. 104]

76.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing to sustain the objections to the testimony above referred to and the continuing objection of the petitioner and intervener to said line of testimony, and further excepts to the action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting said witness to [coninue] to testify to said matters.

77.

"Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, do you know whether or not the instructor can see any papers that pass down the table which the girls read and sign?

"A. There is never no papers come into that section that she don't know about it before the girls get them, and —.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let her finish.

"Mr. Lane: I thought she had finished.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She was saying something else there.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): What were you saying?

"A. She is notified of what comes into that section before the girls get it. Sometimes she personally brings it to us. At that time it was started up at the other end of the machine.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary): Can she see —

"Mr Lane. (Interrupting): Just a moment. If the witness has now finished her answer, I move that it be stricken [fol. 105] for the reason that it is not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection. because

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"Mr. Lane: I object to it further for the reason that it calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

78.

"Q. What, if anything, did Fern Sigler say to you about the union button?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. She told me that she had on her pin that morning and that she was going to wear it into the shop, and I told her she had better not or she would lose her job.

"She said, well, she was going to wear it anyway. And I said, 'Well, I will lose mine too'. And she said, well, she didn't think I would—I don't remember her exact words, but something to that effect.

"She told me to go on up and not stay with her at all, so I went upstairs. Her locker wasn't in the same place mine was. That is the last I talked to her until the evening of the 23rd.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out — I object to the part of the answer that relates to what Fern Sigler said; and I move that the balance of the answer be stricken out as self-serving.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and the same motion to strike.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled— ••••• and the motion to strike is denied."

[fol. 106] 79.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the Trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1305, 1306, 1307 (R. I. 320, 321), to wit:

"Q. Now, can you identify any of the individuals that you heard say any of those things, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Well, of course, they were all hollering. I couldn't describe now which ones did say which.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener renews the motion to strike this testimony for the reason that the persons alleged to have made such remarks have not been identified.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same motion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

"Q. Have you told the examiner all of the things that you heard said to Fern Sigler by this crowd of girls?

"A. They told her she couldn't belong to the International Union and work in their shop.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection that has been heretofore made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"Mr. Lane: In order not to burden the record, may I have a continuing objection?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to this incident of April 23?

"Mr. Lane: Yes, sir.

[fol. 107] "Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves to strike the answer out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony; and for the further reason that anything the employees said is not binding on the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

"Mr. Ingraham: And, Your Honor, may I have a continuing objection to this incident?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, to this incident."

80.

"Q. Do you know whether or not the instructors made any effort to stop the second or third demonstration?

"A. No, sir, they didn't.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike that out as a conclusion. She may state what she observed but not the conclusion that they made no effort.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand as it is."

81.

"Q. Did you hear any threats made to Fern Sigler?

"A. The last bunch that came in there threatened to throw her out of the window. They said they didn't want her in there, and kept hollering at her to go home, that she couldn't work with them and belong to that union—to our union—the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and kept suggesting they throw her out of the window.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony, not binding on the respondent; and for the further reason, the witness has not identified a single individual in this third group, and has not identified anyone as making the remarks she has just stated.

[fol. 108] "Trial Examiner Batten: I will deny it as to the second reason. As to the third reason, the matter of identification, Mr. Leary, I think you should further identify this group.

82.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Can you identify any of the people in the third group who said any particular thing, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Well, Ethel Carpenter and Mary Sprofera told her they didn't want her in there. I am not sure about who said 'throw her out the window'. I think that was Mary Sprofera, but I am not sure about it.

"Mr. Shepard: I ask that her answer about throwing the girl out the window be stricken out for the reason that she is not sure who said it.

83.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting the witness May Fike to testify to the conversations and incident relating to Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937 and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's various objections thereto, including the continuing objections to said testimony, some of which objections and rulings appear on pages 1319, 1320 of the transcript of the record (R. I. 326, 327), as follows, to wit:

"Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): Now, just a minute. Your Honor, is my objection standing that it is hearsay and not binding?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I understood both Mr. Lane and Mr. Ingraham had a continuing objection to the incident of April 23, 1937.

"Mr. Ingraham: That is all—this, yes.

[fol. 109] "Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, concerning all of this incident.

"Mr. Shepard: If your Honor please, I object to all of this as being absolutely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't tend to prove anything in the case as to what these other operators have told her what they would do if Fern Sigler were her sister.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed. I think we should have the whole story about these instances, irrespective of who said it."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) overruling the objections and motions of the petitioner and intervener as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1339 (R. I. 328d), to wit:

"Q. Did you consider that second floor company property?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Mr. Leary, it certainly calls for a conclusion. If you want to let it stand, however, as it is, I will overrule the objection.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves that all statements as to what Pearl Atchison said be stricken out as not binding on respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Denied. I think the objection goes primarily to the weight that can be given such testimony."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting the witness May Fike to read the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meeting of April 27, 1937, prior to the examination of said witness by counsel for the International Ladies' Workers' Union, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1341, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345 (R. I. 328e, 328f, 328g), to wit:

[fol. 110] "Q. Now, I show you, Mrs. Fike, what have been identified as Board's Exhibits Nos. 8-1 to 8-11 inclusive, which purport to be notes on a meeting held April 27, 1937, and ask you to read those notes or minutes and, at the conclusion of your reading them will you state to the Examiner whether the things related in those minutes actually happened, to the best of your recollection?

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, Your Honor, I submit that is highly improper procedure for an examination. He can ask this witness what took place at this meeting, or what she heard, but to hand her minutes and have her read the minutes and refresh her memory or put some ideas into her head, and then have her answer the question Yes or No about the minutes I say is improper.

"Mr. Shepard: Further, Your Honor, there has been no showing that the witness' memory needs to be refreshed. She says she attended that meeting. She should be questioned from her memory of that meeting.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener desires to object on the ground it is an illegal and improper method of examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, as I stated, if Mr. Leary wants to proceed this way, you may go ahead and read it and answer the question.

"Mr. Leary: Now, I will withdraw the question.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Who presided at that meeting, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Rose Todd.

"Mr. Tyler: I would like to ask if the witness has finished reading the minutes.

"The Witness: I haven't finished looking through them.

"Mr. Tyler (interrupting): I think the record ought to show—

"Mr. Tyler: I objected, that the record will show that Mr. Leary has handed the witness what purports to be, and I presume is, copies of the minutes of the first meeting, and asked her to read it, and then tell him whether that expresses what happened, and then, after waiting long enough for her to almost read all of them, he then withdraws the question and presents another question as to what happened. Now, that destroys the possibility of ruling on whether it is a proper method of examination to ask her to read the minutes first, and then ask her what happened.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Tyler, I have already ruled that as far as the Examiner is concerned, Mr. Leary's question was proper. I said it was not improper and I overruled the objection and permitted him to proceed in that manner if he wanted to, and he chose to withdraw the question, which he has a perfect right to do."

[fol. 111] 86.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Go ahead, Mr. Langsdale.

"Mr. Lane: Before Mr. Langsdale begins his examination, I desire to renew the objection I made at the time he began his examination of Miss Todd. I don't want to burden the record by being compelled to make that objection with respect to every witness' examination, but I do renew it here so the record is clear that I am not waiving that objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just what was that objection?

"Mr. Lane: I objected to his examination of Miss Todd for the reason that his position as counsel for the International is one in unity with interest of that of the Board, and in view of that fact, he should not be permitted to have a separate examination of the witness the Board produces, separate from that of the Board itself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Supposing that you be allowed a continuing objection.

"Mr. Lane: I would like the record to show that that objection will continue throughout the trial as to the witnesses the Board produces.

"Trial Examiner Batten: On that matter—and I will make the same ruling.

"Mr. Shepard: Your Honor, may the record show that the respondent makes the same objection and requests the same objection throughout the trial?

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same objection and the same ruling, and a continuing objection."

[fol. 112] 87.

"Q. And wasn't it common talk around the Donnelly plant that there was a great deal of commotion out there around those Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial; wouldn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and opens up a new avenue for testimony. I think the Examiner has ruled that line out up to now.

"Mr. Lane: The purpose of my making this offer, or asking this question and similar questions, is to refute the charge that has been made here by counsel for the International and Board that this union we represent is a sham union, and my purpose is to show that atmosphere that surrounded the employees at that time, and their reaction and attitude, as having some bearing upon why they took the action they did take on the part of the union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I will make the same ruling that I did once before. That is this: if there were any actual threats or actual violence at this plant, that in any way can be chargeable to the respondent, I certainly want to receive it.

"Now I am not going into this organizational campaign that took in the city of Kansas City. Now, I am not going all over that again, and if you want to, you may make as complete an offer of proof on that, and, after all, that may be probably the best way to present that whole problem of this campaign that was going on by the Union here in Kansas City, but I can say now that I am not going to receive it in this hearing.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As I remember it. Well, now, I am going to take that position very definitely with respect to the intervener on this entire campaign that went on here in Kansas City, and I think we can just as well determine now that you shall prepare a complete offer of proof on it, because I don't intend to receive it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, not quite that broad. I said that if any threats were made against these Donnelly employees, or any violence there, I even question how material that may be, but I will receive that, but on the other, on your whole idea there that that was one of the reasons for the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and a valid reason, I want an offer of proof submitted on it.

"Mr. Langsdale: I want to understand the Examiner's ruling on this particular matter. I have understood up to now you have permitted both respondent and the intervener to show threats made to any of the employees but not to go into disturbances that may have occurred at Gerne's or Gordon's or anything of that sort.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. I want to eliminate everything by this offer of proof except direct threats and direct violence. I think I asked Miss Todd on several occasions, 'Did anybody threaten you? Did anybody ever commit any violence as far as you were concerned?' I will receive that in this hearing; I don't want that in the form of an offer of proof.

"Mr. Lane: I want to make this further observation with respect to the question I asked:

"I desire to show the attitude or state of mind of the employees, whether that attitude was created by rumor or by ideas of terrorism, which may or may not be true, nevertheless, it is the state of mind which I want to show; and to show further that that state of mind actuated to cause them to want to form their own union, and that would go to the bona fideness of their union and would be a good reason for the formation of their union whether founded upon fact or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Lane. And, even if founded upon information which was absolutely false, if it is relevant to these issues—I mean, the truth or falsity of these things is not in issue.

"Mr. Lane: That was the purpose of my question, to show that fact.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And that matter, of course, will be included in this offer of proof."

[fol. 114] 88.

"Q. Now, I wonder, Mr. Slotkin, if you would turn to your books and state for the record the date, and the number of chairs delivered since 1935.

* * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to this upon the ground that it is immaterial as the way the question reads. Certainly, the company has a right to order chairs, and I don't see that it would have any ten dency to prove or disprove any issue in this case, unless it is identified as certain times and places that would give it some relevancy.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I presume after we get the record of deliveries we can determine whether or not it has any relevancy or whether it has anything to do with this hearing. I will overrule the objection. You may state.

* * * * *

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten, interrupting) You mean, those are the original [sheets], or those are copies?

"A. No, these are the original sheets from my ledger, as far back as I could go.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object on the ground those are not the books of original entries, but his original entries have been transferred to these sheets, and, further on the ground that the entries there have not been shown to have been made by this particular witness.

* * * * *

"Q. (interrupting) Pardon me, Mr. Slotkin. Can you tell who ordered those chairs?

"A. I can't tell you that at all. I have no invoices going back to this particular year. The only record I have is from 1938, August, until now, when I had a regular system installed by an auditor.

"Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects further on the ground there is no showing as to who ordered the chairs that he is purporting to testify about.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, he can read into the record what this ledger sheet shows. Now, if there are any further questions, Mr. Foster, I would suggest that you wait until he has read into the record just what this ledger sheet shows."

[fol. 115] 89.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting the testimony of the witness Slotkin concerning chairs furnished by that company and in permitting said witness to testify concerning the account books and records of that company relative to chairs furnished and in admitting said accounts, ledger sheets and records as exhibits in this proceeding over the repeated objections of the petitioner and intervener for the reason that said evidence is and was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to the issues herein, and because there was no showing as to what person or company ordered the chairs referred to in said testimony or paid for same, and because the records and entries testified from were not the original entries and there was not sufficient identification to show the authenticity of such entries or by whom same were made, and because said testimony and said entries and records did not constitute the best evidence, and because it affirmatively appeared that the witness did not know what person, union or company was chargeable with ordering the chairs referred to, and because it appeared from said witness' testimony that the entries concerning chairs ordered by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and chairs ordered by the Donnelly Garment Company and chairs if any ordered by the Donnelly Loyalty League and by the Nelly Don Athletic Association and any other chairs furnished to the address of petitioner in the Corrigan Building were all entered under the same general account and no proper or sufficient designation made therein to show which of said organizations ordered or paid for the chairs referred to, for each and all of which reasons said testimony is not binding upon the petitioner and is prejudicial to petitioner and does not support the findings, conclusions or recommendations of the trial examiner and [fol. 116] does not constitute proper or competent evidence upon which the trial examiner or the Board should base findings or conclusions or any order against petitioner.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) contained in the Intermediate Report for the reason that same are based in part upon the incompetent and indefinite evidence of the witness Slotkin.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting the evidence of the witness Slotkin over the repeated and continued objections of the petitioner which objections were directed to the whole line of testimony of said witness and which objections and rulings of the trial examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1444, 1449, 1450, 1458, 1459, 1460, 1475, 1476, 1478, 1479, 1480, to-wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood our objection continues to all of this testimony, on the same ground, the witness did not make the entries, doesn't know who ordered the chairs—

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection Mr. Stottle. (R. I. 337).

• • • • •

"Q. I wonder if you would read whatever information is on those deposit slips pertaining to the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. All the way through?

"Mr. Stottle: Do I understand, Mr. Examiner, our objection continues as to this testimony, also?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, it may. (R. I. 339) [fol. 117] "Mr. Foster: I want to find out, if I can, who paid for these invoices for the use of these chairs; if there is anything on those deposit slips tending to show that, I want it read into the record.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, we add to our objection that this would not be the best evidence of whether the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid for them, as to what they might have written on the deposit slips.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I can't tell until I see what he is going to read, Mr. Stottle. (R. I. 340). • • •

"Mr. Patten: I want to make a further objection and ask a qualifying question, that is, a preliminary question.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Mr. Slotkin, did you prepare the deposit slips yourself?

"A. Well, a few of them when the girl happened not to be at work or on vacation.

"Q. Is the person present who prepared the deposit slips? A. No, sir.

"Q. Is she still in the employ of your company?

"A. Well, part of these were prepared before she ever came to work at our company.

"Mr. Patten: Now, the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, objects to the reading or introduction of these deposit slips for the reason that they are not the best evidence. Mr. Slotkin did not prepare them himself, and what somebody, some absent person unknown to this intervener may have put on there is not binding on this intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. (R. I. 340), (P. 1451.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale.

Cross-Examination.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mr. Slotkin, I hand you these pages which have been marked 'I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7' and ask you to state just what they are.

"A. They are the ledger sheets taken from the accounts receivable ledger.

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer Exhibits 4, 5, 6, and 7 in evidence.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that they are not the best evidence, and that the witness personally didn't make the entries; that there is no showing that any persons authorized by the Donnelly Garment Company ordered any particular item on the list; that it is not binding on the respondent and constitutes hearsay, and is wholly immaterial to the issues.

[fol. 118] "Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they are taken from the regular records used and maintained in the business of this witness, and are material for whatever they prove.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener objects for the reason that how the Chair Rental Company may have kept the books is a matter wholly beyond the control of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or the respondent, for that matter. There is no showing here, either the respondent or the intervening union directed these accounts to be mixed up and [kep] on one ledger sheet.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled. They will be received. (R. I. 344.)

"Q. Let me have those deposit slips you testified from (The deposit slips referred to were handed by the witness to Mr. Langsdale).

"A. Those are the ones I testified to.

"Mr. Langsdale: Will you mark these as exhibits, please?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you mark those exhibits No. 8, 8-A, B, C, and so forth.

(Thereupon the deposit slips above referred to were marked 'I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive')

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent objects to the introduction of these exhibits for all the reasons that we have heretofore urged, including the fact that they are not the best evidence; that there is no showing by this witness—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a minute, on that point. What would be the best evidence?

"Mr. Stottle: The best evidence I would say, or some of the best evidence, would be an invoice that had been sent to these different persons and the payment of this. This is just a deposit slip in the bank.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the payment—you mean the check it was paid with?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, an invoice that it had been paid with. This is not even the check. It is just a notation on a bank slip.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, but I assume that what we are trying to do here is get a complete record. I presume we will have to take it in part.

[fol. 119] "Mr. Stottle: Well, that is one of the objections, that it is not the best evidence and hasn't any sufficient relation to this to have any probative effect or tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case. Furthermore, we object that the items on here were not made by this particular witness, and not shown to have been made by any person that would bind the respondent or the intervener, even bind this company; that it constitutes hearsay testimony and is so mixed up with other records and so mixed up between the parties here, charges to one and payment by another, that it is wholly impossible to be separated.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That doesn't indicate that on these slips, does it?

"Mr. Stottle: But the testimony taken together with these slips indicates that.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we wish to add, also, that it is not made from—it doesn't constitute the original entry made in this company. It is about 3 or 4 degrees off from that. The original records, entries, would be the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no further objection, they will be received.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection as the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received." (R. I. 347, 348.)

91.

In connection with the foregoing assignment of the petitioner, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in overruling the motion of the petitioner to strike the evidence of the witness Slotkin, which motion and ruling are set forth in the transcript of the record, Pages 1483, 1484, (R. I. 348), as follows, to-wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I think that is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, Respondent now renews its motion to strike out all of the evidence of this witness, including the exhibits introduced while he has been on the stand, for the reason that there hasn't been any showing that would make them probative evidence in this case. The items are all lumped together under one account, when the witness has stated that some of them might have been for other accounts. The deposit slips are all lumped together and there is nothing here that would enable the Examiner [fol. 120] to give any credence to the statements because they are so mixed up and were kept in such a way that they don't show the true facts, and for the further objection that we have already made, it is not the best evidence, and not the original record entries, and not binding on the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is denied:

92.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in overruling petitioner's motion to strike I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits 4, 5, 6, and 7, which motion and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1489, 1490, 1491, (R. I. 350, 351), to-wit:

"Q. Isn't it a fact that these ledger sheets, ILGWU Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7, were made up from those invoices or from other records of your Company?

"A. They were supposed to have been made up from the invoices.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) When you have a person call in for some chairs you immediately write out an order, is that it? A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Is that written out in triplicate, duplicate, or—

"A. In triplicate.

"Q. Then it is from that record that the entries are made on this sheet, is that right? A. That is right.

"Q. Then, you do have an invoice down there for each one of these items?

"A. I don't know, for all of them. You see, our records were destroyed, a lot of them, when I came to work there. After a year I managed to get myself lined up so I could install a regular system.

"Q. You mean, up to a year ago you had no regular invoice records?

"A. Nothing I could go to like I can now.

"Q. Have you anything—

[fol. 121] "A. I might have some old invoices, a few of them, pertaining to those ledger sheets, and I might not.

"Q. What records were destroyed?

"A. The invoices, you see, they are all mixed up.

"Q. You say you destroyed the invoice records?

"A. They were destroyed. I didn't destroy them myself.

"Q. Someone representing your company destroyed them?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In other words, then, you do not have the invoices or the carbons for these invoices running back over a year ago?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent now renews its objection to strike I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7 for the reason that they are not the original entries, but are made up from some other records which were not the original entries.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I denied the same motion awhile ago.

"Mr. Stottle: I understand, Mr. Examiner, but this fact has been brought out since then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You certainly wouldn't expect him to produce invoices that had been destroyed, would you?

"Mr. Stottle: No. But he says these are not the original entries.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that would go to the weight to be given to these.

"Mr. Stottle: May I explain the point is, those original entries might have had Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on the invoice. If we had those it would show who was the person who ordered them.

"Trial Examiner Barren: But, Mr. Stottle, they are destroyed. If the record is destroyed it is impossible to get it."

93.

[fol. 122] "Redirect Examination.

"Q. (By Mr. Foster): Mr. Slotkin, I hand you what has been marked for the purpose of identification as Board's exhibits Nos. 16-A to E, inclusive, and ask you what these are.

"A They are invoices made out to the Donnelly Garment Company.

(Thereupon the invoices referred to above were marked 'Board's Exhibits Nos. 16-A to 16-E, inclusive.)

"Q. Are they carbon copies of invoices that were sent to the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. They are supposed to be. They are carbon copies.
"Q. What do you mean by 'They are supposed to be'? Are they or are they not?

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this as not proper redirect examination. It should have been gone into in chief.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

• • • • •

"Mr. Foster: Then, the Board will offer in evidence at this time what has been marked for identification Board's exhibits Nos. 16-A to 16-E, inclusive.

• • • • •

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to the introduction of Exhibits 16-A to 16-E, for the reason that they are [testifed] to be carbon copies of Intervener's Exhibits 11 and others, whereas, an examination of Intervener's Exhibit 11 shows that they are written in ink and that this is not a carbon copy of it.

• • • • •

"Mr. Stottle: Well, the objection is that it is purportedly testified that these are carbon copies of intervener's Exhibits and an inspection of it will show they are not carbon copies at all of this, because the handwriting is entirely different. This is in ink and it doesn't show through on the same working that is on the alleged carbon copy at all, and for the further reason they haven't been identified in such a way as to make them admissible, or to show they are original records.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener objects on the ground the witness ought to be allowed to examine the original rather than what is alleged to be a carbon copy before he is asked to testify whether they are carbon copies or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness has already testified these are carbon copies, which he has taken out of his office, and if there are any discrepancies I presume this would be the place to explain them, if there is any explaining to do. They will be received."

[fol. 123] 94.

Petitioners assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing and refusing to sustain petitioner's motion to strike answer of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1596, to-wit:

"Q. Did Miss Alexander have an assistant?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Who was that?

"A. Miss Elizabeth Nobles, who, I think, would be called her assistant.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move the answer be stricken out, as the witness says she thinks Miss Nobles would be an assistant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume on cross-examination Mr. Ingraham, you may go into that and see whether there is any basis for the statement. I hardly think at this stage that I would strike out or sustain an objection when the witness says she has an opinion, because I think we have had quite a few of them thus far.

"You may proceed, Mr. Leary."

95.

Petitioner assigns as error the fulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 17 over the objection of the petitioner which objection and ruling are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1598, 1599, 1600, to-wit:

"Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit No. 17 and ask you to state briefly what that document is.

"A. It was a record of the amount of letters written by the department that day, and who dictated them, and who wrote them. A few were written by the girls themselves; that is, form letters or letters that were of a similar nature; some of the girls, of course, would transpose those themselves.

• • • • •

"Mr. Leary: The Board offers its exhibit No. 17.

• • • • •

[fol. 124] "Mr. Ingraham: Respondent objects to the introduction of Board's Exhibit No. 17 for the reason that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case. And, respondent moves that the witness' testimony be stricken out for the same reason.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and motion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, what have you to say?

"Mr. Leary: I believe there has been testimony regarding the membership of Miss Alexander and Miss Nobles in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mr. Examiner, and I believe this goes to show these persons were of a supervisory nature. There is no better proof in the world than to have this daily check-off; it is somewhat like an efficiency system the company uses to check up on the work done by even the stenographs in the office daily, all handled by the persons Alexander and Nobles.

96.

"Q. Now, with reference to this meeting where Mrs. Reed talked to the employees, I ask you to state in what manner you were advised that the meeting would be held?

"A. I think we were informed by the [heard] of our department.

Mr. Ingraham: I move the answer be stricken out as speculative.

97.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 18 also referred to as Board's Exhibits 18-A to 18-J inclusive, over the objections of the petitioner and intervener, which objections [fol. 125] and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1610, 1611, 1613 (R.I. 354e, 354f, 354g), to-wit:

"Q. I show you what has been marked as Board's Exhibit 18, Mr. Greenhaw, and ask you to state briefly what that is.

"A. This is a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on May 25, 1937.

* * * * *

"(Thereupon, the documents above referred to were marked as 'Board's Exhibits Nos. 18-A to 18-J, inclusive' for identification.)

* * * * *

"Mr. Leary: The Board offers its Exhibits 18-A to 18-J.

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to the introduction of Board's exhibit 18 for the reason that it purports to be a copy of some minutes, and the original would be the best evidence.

"Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they have produced what they say is the original, and these minutes that we have had photostated I told the Examiner we proposed to show they 'doctored' those minutes, and now we have what she says is a carbon copy of the minutes she turned over to Marjorie Green, and Margorie Green produces what she says is the original.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to it on the ground that it is not identified.

"Mr. Leary: In what particular?

"Mr. Lane: It purports to be some copy of an original instrument which is supposed to be in existence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

98.

"Q. Do you know what Mr. Marvin Price's work was?
"A. Yes.
"Q. Will you please state what it was?
"A. I think he was called custodian, and I believe he was in charge of the ordering of materials of all sorts for that building.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out [fol. 126] as a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary): And when you say 'materials for the building' do you distinguish in your answer from other materials that are ordered in the operation of the business?
"A. Yes. He had no connection with the ordering of piece goods and that sort of thing.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out as a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

99.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary): During the months of March and April and May, 1937, Mrs. Greenhaw, did you note anything unusual in the conduct of Miss Rose Todd while she was on the tenth floor?

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, now, you can just say 'yes' or 'no' to that question, whether you did.

"A. Yes.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary): What was it that you noticed, Mrs. Greenhaw?

"Mr. Ingraham: I make the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

"A. I noticed that she was more than usually active in contact with the executives of the company.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer out as a mere conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Mr. Ingraham: [Sam] objection. Respondent makes the same objection — the same motion to strike.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied."

[fol. 127] 100.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) admitting in evidence testimony of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1622, 1623, 1624, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Did this occasion when you saw the representative group of employees with Miss Todd to the tenth floor occur after the meeting when the Donnelly Garment Workers' was formed—Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

"Mr. Patten: Just a moment, please. I don't believe she has testified she saw a group of employees with Miss Todd. The question assumes she has so testified.

"Mr. Leary: I submit her testimony was that it was a representative group from the employees all over the plant.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Was Miss Todd with this group?

"A. I couldn't testify as to that, but I remember the occasion because it was rather unusual for people from the factory to be brought up on the tenth floor.

"Q. Now, do you remember about when this was?

"A. I remember, because a meeting took place the same day.

"Q. Well, what meeting?

"A. I am assuming it was the meeting—

"Q. (Interrupting) Well, tell me what occurred at the meeting that you say occurred this same day.

"A. There was, a committee was announced, who would represent the employees as—I don't remember how they were designated, but they were to be union representatives among the employees.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) Was it before that meeting, Mrs. Greenhaw, that you saw this group of employees up on the tenth floor?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In Mrs. Reed's office?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike it out for the reason that the time is not fixed.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

101.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence testimony of the witness [fol. 128] Mrs. Greenhaw over the objections of the petitioner and intervenor, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1624, 1625, to wit:

"Q. Did you have occasion to talk with Mr. Green some time in March or April, 1937?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Do you remember any particular conversation that you had with him?

"A. We had a short discussion of the strike that was being held at Gordon's at that time.

"Q. And what, if anything, was said by Mr. Green—

"Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): I object. It calls for hearsay—

"Mr. Leary (interrupting): Wait until I finish my question, please.

"Q. (By Mr. Leary) What, if anything, was said by Mr. Green at that time with regard to the strike at Gordon's?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object. It calls for hearsay testimony.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will overrule the objection as to hearsay, but the thing I am concerned about, I don't want to get into all these other strikes. Now, she may answer the question and then I will determine whether or not it may be stricken.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection, that it is hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling."

102.

"Q. When you first went to work for the Donnelly Company you stated that you were in the returns department. Who was your superior in that department?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as repetition.

"Mr. Langsdale: She hasn't stated that.

"Mr. Ingraham: It calls for a conclusion of the witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't make any note of it—You may answer. I don't think she mentioned anybody."

[fol. 129] 103.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, comments and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) announcing his purpose and refusal to permit testimony of petitioner's employees to the effect that they selected the Donnelly Garment Workers Union of their own free will or to tell the circumstances under which they signed petition marked I. L. G. W. U. Exhibits Nos. 11-A to 11-MM inclusive, and in refusing to admit said exhibits in evidence, and in stating and announcing that the Trial Examiner would not allow petitioner's employees to take the stand and testify that they were dominated and that they did form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of their own free will, over the objections of the petitioner and intervener, and in overruling petitioner's motion to strike from the complaint and dismiss the charge that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a dominated union, which rulings, comments, objections and motions are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655 and 1656 (R. I. 355, 356, 357, 358), to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, I show you a document which has been marked I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-A to No. 11-MM, inclusive, and call your attention to the first page and ask you if you ever saw that document before.

"A. Yes, I have seen it.

"Q. That is a document that purports to have been signed on the 8th day of July, 1937.

I call your attention to that page of the document which has been marked I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-H and ask you if you find a photostat of your signature on there.

"A. Yes, I do.

"Q. This document reads—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting) Now, are you going to offer it?

"Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I am. Is there any objection?

"Mr. Ingraham: No.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. I may have. Is that an affidavit signed by all of the Donnelly Garment Company employees that they want the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Langsdale: You can read it better than I can tell you. (Handing I. L. G. W. U. exhibit No. 11-A to 11-MM, inclusive, to Trial Examiner Batten.)

[fol. 130] "Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly will not receive it.

"Mr. Langsdale: On what ground do you object to it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I won't receive it, at least if it is offered for any purpose to show that these people have selected this union, that it is their free selection, or anything of that kind. I positively won't receive it for that purpose.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am offering it for the purpose of showing under what circumstances this witness was induced to sign this document, which states that 'Each of us formed our own union and selected our own representatives'.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I won't receive it for that purpose, because I am not going to have 1,200 employees come up here and tell me the circumstances under which they signed this petition; and it wouldn't mean anything if they did.

"Mr. Langsdale: Then, are you going to permit them to cross-examine her with reference to her signature on there?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly am not.

"Mr. Langsdale: I have no object in offering it except—

"Trial Examiner Batten: (interrupting): Well, Mr. Langsdale my position on this situation is just this—and I have had it come up in about six cases where I have been presented [wither] with a petition or with membership cards of a large number of employees in a plant, stating that they joined of their own free will, and so forth. Now, I don't consider that testimony, if it were given, of any value when they are put up here on the stand and testify under oath, with the respondent, and in some cases, the foreman and the superintendent present. It might result in coercion, and it might not.

"There is only one way to determine this question of majority, and that is by an election, which is not involved in this hearing. I am not going to have a parade of witnesses here on this stand testifying, and for that reason I will not accept it.

"Now, I am making that as a very definite statement now, so that all of you, if you have any offer to make on this particular matter, may prepare your offer and I will receive it at any time before the close of the hearing, but I want it thoroughly understood that I am not going into this matter.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, do I understand that you are not going to allow witnesses to take the stand and testify that they were not dominated and that they did form this union of their own free will?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is exactly what I mean.

"Mr. Ingraham: Of course, respondent excepts to the ruling.

[fol. 131] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that the intervener will, too.

Mr. Langsdale: You have nothing to except to.

"Mr. Lane: Yes, we do. We assume we have an exception.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to make it very clear at this time to everybody, while I am not attempting to rule on the matter the point, as I said once before, if you want to bring some witnesses up here and offer it, I want you to do it. In other words, I don't want the respondent's attorney, or the intervener's attorney, to fail to do something that you think you should do to protect your record, but I do think I ought to tell you just exactly what my position is.

"I am not going to receive it, and—

"Mr. Stottle (interrupting): Mr. Examiner, don't you think you should make a ruling now striking out the charge that it is a dominated union, if you are not going to permit us—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Do you want to make that motion?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: It appears to me this is my offer; not yours.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, does Mr. Stottle want to make that motion now? If so, he may do so.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, in view of the Examiner's statemen. as to his position on the matter, the respondent does move that the charge in the complaint that the union is a dominated union should be dismissed.

104.

[fol. 132] "Now, Mrs. Greenhaw, let me ask you with reference to the meeting of April 27, 1937, which was the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed, if you heard Miss Todd say anything at that meeting about the—officers of the Loyalty League meeting the night before and deciding the only thing to be done was to form this union?

"Mr. Ingraham: I move the question be—I object to the question for the reason that it is leading and suggestive and an improper way to examine this witness. He can ask the witness what Miss Todd said, but I don't think it is proper for him to read from what purports to be some statement, and then ask if she heard that.

"Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me it—

"Mr. Patten (interrupting): The intervener makes the same objection.

"Mr. Langsdale: The Examiner has many times said the attorney is responsible for the form in which he asks his questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I still say that is true, and, of course, if the attorney wants to ask a question such as this, why, of course, it will have to be weighed. If it has any value, it will receive it, and if it hasn't of course, it won't.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am willing to take that chance.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think under my ruling that is your privilege.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, the intervener further objects for the reason that that question was asked by counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by reference to some statement which, for his previous statement, was made by this witness in the presence of some stenographer, outside of the presence of anybody representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. The statement itself is hearsay and in no sense binding upon the intervener, and for that reason is an improper document to be used to refresh this witness' memory. The question itself calls for hearsay and cannot be binding on the intervener.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

"Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter)

"A. She did make such a statement."

[fol. 133] 105.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Mrs. Greenhaw, referring to the meeting of March 18, you identified that meeting as the one at which the letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was read, and at which meeting Mrs. Nelly Don Reed spoke. I will ask you if at that meeting Mrs. Reed stated that she would close her shop before she would permit it to be unionized.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to the question for the same reason that I have objected to the previous question that Mr. Langsdale asked when he was reading from this document that he has in his hand.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

"A. Mrs. Reed did state she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did Mrs. Reed state at that meeting that she would make plans to protect the employees from the union?

"Mr. Ingraham: [Sam] objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"A. I don't remember the exact words, but it was definitely stated that the employees would be protected against the union, the union's activities."

106.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, comments and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1673, 1674 (R. I. 366, 367), to-wit:

[fol. 134] "Q. Do you recall at that time the International was conducting a strike at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri Garment Companies?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is this just for the purpose of establishing a time?

"Mr. Ingraham: I think, in view of this witness' testimony as to what was said by Mrs. Reed at this March 18th meeting, that we have the right to show what was going on.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't propose to go into it, Mr. Ingraham. I have said before that on that matter, in the first place, supposing that Mrs. Reed did say that, supposing that Mrs. Reed got up and said other things about it, I still can't see, as I asked you this morning, why you should be permitted to show it, whether it is true or untrue. The thing is, did Mrs. Reed get up in this meeting and make certain statements. Are the statements she made—are they of such a nature that they intimidate, coerce or restrain the employee. It isn't a question of whether they are true or not. They may be true and they may still have the same effect. I still can't see by your explanation this morning how it can be material. The only thing is, what did Mrs. Reed say at this meeting.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, it is our theory that we are entitled to show what the situation was, and the purpose, or one of the purposes of the March 18th meeting, and that Mrs. Reed did make a speech, and the reason she had for making the speech."

107.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) and the bias and prejudice of the Trial examiner against petitioner indicated thereby, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1681, 1682, (R. I. 370, 371), to-wit:

"Q. Now, who are some of the department heads that were engaging in coercion?

"A. Of course, that is a hard thing to answer.

"Q. Well, you are testifying now. Just give the names, please Mrs. Greenhaw, of these people that were engaging in coercion.

"A. Because it was a general feeling—

"Q. (interrupting) I am not—just answer—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Just a minute. Let her finish.

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to it as not responsive.

[fol. 135] "Trial Examiner Batten: Don't stop her. Let her say what she wanted to. We have had witnesses here before and, certainly, no one stopped them yet when they wanted to explain an answer, or talk.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I don't object if she will answer and then explain.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let her answer. We can't tell, Mr. Ingraham, until she gets through.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) What were you saying?

"A. Well, I have worked in a number of other places, you know, and then when I went to work there there was a very different atmosphere and a different attitude among the employees and toward them, and there was a feeling that they were held very closely in line at all times by the officials of the company, and I am sure that for years the company had been building up that sort of thing.

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move the answer be stricken out. It is not responsive.

"Mr. Lane: The intervener moves it be stricken out as stating a conclusion, not founded upon any fact testified to by the witness.

108.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Let me ask you, in the statement you gave to Mr. Walsh you stated:

'Either on the day or the day before the suggestion was first made that there should be a company union organized I saw a group of seven or eight employees going into Mrs. Reed's office.' Is that right? A. Yes.

[fol. 136]. "Mr. Lane; Now, Mr. Examiner, may I have a continuing objection to all questions asked by counsel for the International with respect to the statement he holds in his hand, and questions where he reads from the statement, on the grounds I have heretofore stated?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection.

"of course, I want that marked as an exhibit. It has always been my practice, whenever an attorney examines a witness from a memorandum or statement they have previously made, to ask to have that made a part of the record.

"Mr. Langsdale: I have only a copy here, Mr. Examiner, shall I identify it and offer it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think you had better have it marked as Trial Examiner's exhibit No. 1, and it will be received only in so far as you have asked these questions from it. In other words, I am not receiving the entire thing.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to the document for the reason that it is not identified, and for the reason that it has been stated by counsel to be a mere copy, when there is apparently an original in existence; and for the further reason it is inadmissible for any purpose, the intervener not having been present when any statements contained therein were made; and for the further reason that they are self-serving and hearsay. Intervener objects to its being received for any purpose.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is received for whatever it purports to be.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener further objects on the ground that it is highly prejudicial and improper to permit a memorandum of that kind to be used to refresh the recollection of a witness who has testified she has no independent recollection of the matter. I say it is prejudicially erroneous to permit it to be used for that purpose.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

* * *

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects to the Examiner's exhibit No. 1 for the reason that it is not taken under oath, not testified to under oath, that the witness who is purported to have signed it is here on the stand now, and her own testimony should be the testimony of this witness, and not any statement that she may have prepared at some prior time. It is not even signed by the witness, and is—purports to be a carbon copy of some statement which she may have signed.

[fol. 137] "Mr. Stottle: We also object that it is just immaterial and improper for any purpose whatsoever.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Mrs. Greenhaw, will you look this over and tell me whether or not that it a statement that you made, and if so, when?

"A. Yes, this is a statement I made.

"Mr. Langsdale: Read it through, will you, Mrs. Greenhaw, so you can testify from all of it.

"Mr. Lane: * * * I object to the Examiner's question for the reason that this document is not the best evidence, and whether this witness can, by reading it, refresh her recollection or not, could not supply the defect; it does not cure the defect that this is not the best evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled. I am merely trying to get into the record whatever it is. I don't know what it is, but whatever it is, she apparently testified from it, and as such, she is entitled to, whether it is an affidavit or a memorandum or whatever it is, and I merely want it in the record so that it will show what it was that refreshed her memory.

"Mr. Stottle: The respondent adds to its objection that it would be prejudicial to have it in the record, the whole document, which—only a portion of it is purportedly received, because whoever reads the record to ascertain those portions must necessarily read the whole document.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, do you mean by that that it has always been a practice to cut part of something out which is introduced for a certain purpose, and that you never introduce the whole of anything?

"Mr. Stottle: No, I don't mean that. I just say that it would be necessary for anyone, in reviewing the record, yourself, or anyone else, to read this whole document in order to read the portions that you are admitting, and that it would be prejudicial to the respondent to have a document in there which is not the testimony of this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the objection is overruled."

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner also assigns as error (and the Board's action in affirming same) the receipt of the document referred to as Trial Examiner's Exhibit No. 1 and to the testimony received concerning same and based upon same from the witness Mrs. Greenhaw, for the reason that same wrongfully and erroneously injected into the mind of the trial examiner prejudice against petitioner, which prejudice and bias later manifested itself in the trial examiner's finds, con-
[fol. 138] clusions and recommendations in the Intermediate Report.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to strike answers of the witness Mrs. Greenhaw and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections to the questions propounded to said witness, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1729, 1730, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did any incident occur while you were there in which Mr. or Mrs. Keyes was engaged that in your opinion was coercion?

"A. There were so many incidents that I can hardly recall them.

"Q. Can you recall any one?

"A. There was hardly a day—

"Mr. Shepard (interrupting): Your Honor, I ask that these answers be stricken.

"Mr. Leary: Why?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will not strike them.

"Mr. Stottle: They are so general, your Honor—

"Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr. Stottle, if you will just look back toward the beginning of this hearing you will find plenty of answers that are general. I am not going to start now—

"Mr. Lane (Interrupting): Intervener objects on the ground that it is not responsive to the question, and it is not a statement of any facts.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, do you mean an attorney who is not asking a question can object on the ground that it is not responsive? Are you, the attorney who does not ask the question, going to object that it is not responsive?

"Mr. Lane: I think if the witness gives an answer to Mr. Langsdale's question that I think is not responsive, I have a right to object, and I do object.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it calls for a conclusion. There was no definition of the word 'coercion', and the answer she made was that it was of a general nature and did not state the facts, which you stated she should do.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Objection overruled."

[fol. 139] 110.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1733, 1734, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you ever hear Mr. Keyes talk to the employees about loyalty to the company?

"A. Yes.

"Mr. Lane: That is objected to as leading.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Lane, you know my ruling on leading question; I have made it so many times. You may have a continuing objection to leading questions.

"Mr. Lane: The Board, of course, will not know what I consider leading questions unless I make my objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I thought it would save all of these interruptions.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I would be very glad not to make that objection at all if there were any way of making it known what I regard as leading questions, but unless I make my objection I don't see how the Board or anybody else can tell what I regard as leading questions.

"Mr. Langsdale. The Board is supposed to have some intelligence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume the persons who have to pass on this will know what weight should be given a question, irrespective of whether you think it is leading or not. If the Examiner and the Board feel it is the attorney who is doing the testifying, no weight will be given to it."

111.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner also assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) throughout the hearing in permitting counsel for the Board and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to ask leading questions and place the answers desired in the mouth of the witness, and stating and announcing that testimony in response to such questions would not be given weight, and thereafter in the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations the trial examiner based same upon the testimony so elicited.

[fol. 140]

112.

"'Q. Prior to 1933 was there any minimum wage scale at the Donnelly Plant?'

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to that question as being immaterial and relating to a time so remote as not to have any bearing on this issue here.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As to the remoteness, the objection is overruled."

113.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence testimony concerning the Loyalty League and in overruling objections of the petitioner and intervener thereto, and in overruling continuing objections of petitioner and intervener to all testimony concerning the Loyalty League and permitting the witnesses to continue to testify thereto, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1769, 1770; 1771 (R. H. 378l, 378m), to wit:

"Q. Showing you your bank statement for the month of March, 1937, is it not a fact that a deposit of $1,000 was made on March 30, 1937?

"A. That is right.

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this question, and all questions relating to the Loyalty League, on the ground that it is immaterial. We understand the allegation in the complaint that there is a connection, but there has been no testimony indicating that the Loyalty League has anything to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is merely a social organization, and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a separate organization.

"We think it is encumbering the record to go into these activities of the Loyalty League.

"We haven't objected a great deal to this, but we think the matter should be presented to the Examiner, and that we should have a continuing objection to any testimony regarding the Loyalty League.

[fol. 141] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection. As I recall it, you have, on about three occasions objected to it at the beginning of the hearing, and I at this time will make the same ruling I have in the past. I will overrule the objection, but you may have a continuing objection.

"Mr. Stottle: And also on the ground it is not binding on the respondent, anything this witness may say, as well as being immaterial to the issues.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That may be incorporated.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection, and adds to it the testimony as to what may have happened in the Loyalty League prior to the organization of the Union is immaterial and irrelevant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled. You desire a continuing objection, Mr. Patten?

"Mr. Patten: I do."

114.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence throughout the hearing over the objections and continuing objections allowed to petitioner and intervener of testimony of the various witnesses concerning the Loyalty League and in failing and refusing to exclude said testimony and in taking said testimony into consideration in the findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations of the trial examiner and in refusing to strike same from the record, for the reason that the evidence shows that the Loyalty League, as such, had no part in the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and did not assist it in any way, and for the further reason that the evidence shows that the petitioner did not participate in the formation or administration of the Loyalty League and did not act through it in any way, and for the further reason that the evidence affirmatively shows that the Loyalty League's activities were purely of a social character and that all evidence concerning the Loyalty League is immaterial to any of the [fol. 142] issues involved in this proceeding and should not have been taken into consideration by the Trial Examiner in making his findings of fact, conclusions or recommendations set forth in the Intermediate Report.

115.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 19 and in overruling petitioner's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1773, 1774 (R.II. 378n, 378o), to-wit:

"Q. I show you, Miss Hartman, what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 19, and ask you to state whether or not that is the note taken from the official records of the Nelly Don Loyalty League that you just referred to in your testimony.

"A. That is right.

"Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 19.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to the exhibit for the grounds already stated, that it is immaterial to the issues here, and also that it is not binding on the respondent in any way.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I assume that your continuing objection applies to the note as well.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I thought it might, I wasn't sure that it would.

"Mr. Patten: The intervener desires its continuing objection to apply to the note.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received, subject to those objections."

116.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibits Nos. 21-A to 21-O inclusive, and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1793 (R.II. 378w), and 1842 (R.II. 384), to-wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: We offer these checks which have been identified as Board's exhibits Nos. 21-A to 21-O, inclusive.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to these exhibits.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

[fol. 143] "Mr. Lane: We make our general objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is, the same continuing objection you have made?

"Mr. Lane: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve decision on the offer.

• • • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 21, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, and Board's Exhibit 25, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, subject to the same objections.

117.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 25 and in overruling the objections of the petitioner thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1800, 1801, 1802 and 1842 (R.II. 378aa, 384), to-wit:

"Q. Now, I hand you this, what has been marked as Board's Exhibit 25, and ask you to state what it is, if you know.

"A. That is a statement from the First National Bank, the balance of our loan plus the interest.

• • • • •

"Mr. Langsdale: The Board offers its Exhibit 25.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same continuing objection to this exhibit.

• • • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: On Board's Exhibit 25, I will reserve my decision.

• • • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibit 21, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, and Board's Exhibit 25, in which I reserved a decision, will be received on the same basis, subject to the same objections."

118.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 26 and in overruling petitioner's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1807, 1808 (R.II. 378dd), to-wit:

[fol. 144] "Q. I show you what has been marked for identification Board's exhibit No. 26 and ask you to state briefly what that is.

"A. A list of the dates of meetings, the first one beginning May 11, 1937 and ending with April 5, 1938.

* * * * *

"Mr. Leary: The Board offers its exhibit No. 26.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects that it is immaterial and does not seem to throw any light upon the issues in this case.

"Mr. Patten: Intervener has no objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

119.

"Cross-Examination.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Mrs. Tobin, you are familiar with the contracts the International has made with garment companies located in Kansas City?

"A. I am.

"Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 2 and ask you if these are photostatic copies of contracts which the International has with other garment manufacturers in Kansas City.

"A. There are two contracts here, one for the Liberty, and one for the Mayfair, which were the contracts negotiated in 1937, but have since been renewed with changes. The others are the contracts that are in force now.

"Q. What are the names of the other companies?

"A. Missouri, Gernes, and Gordon.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence exhibit No. 2.

"Mr. Leary: Now, I object to that, Mr. Examiner, as being entirely incompetent, immaterial, and irrelevant. It has no bearing on the issues in this matter that we are trying now.

[fol. 145] "Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, counsel for the Board and counsel for the International have called the Examiner's attention to various provisions in the Donnelly Garment contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I want to show that similar provisions are in the contracts that the International makes with other garment manufacturers.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the exhibit for the reason that the only purpose of offering the contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company and the only purpose of calling attention to any provisions thereof was upon the question of whether or not there was bargaining as provided by the Wagner Act. The provisions of these contracts are in no way material. The comparison between these and the Donnelly Garment Company are in no way material. The only question is, were the contracts made with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company the result of collective bargaining by a free and independent union, as provided by the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Act?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, do you agree with Mr. Langsdale that the only purpose of the Donnelly contracts and the questions with respect to them was for the purpose of showing what negotiations were conducted, and that is all?

"Mr. Leary: That is it, yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if that testimony is limited, as you say it is, I will reject the offer of these contracts, because any comparison of the contracts would be unnecessary."

120.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit the witness Wave Tobin to testify in response to question asked by counsel for petitioner and in sustaining the objection of the I.L.G.W.U. thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1831 (R.II. 379, 380), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): I will ask you if that contract did not contain the provision that 'Present prices for piece workers shall remain intact and shall be based on a basis that not less than 75 per cent of the workers in the different departments of the shop shall be able to earn not less than $15 per week per capita.'?

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union objects to the question for all of the reasons heretofore stated as objections to the offer of the [fol. 146] contract itself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

121.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence the stipulation set forth on pages 1838 and 1835 of the transcript of the record with reference to the [to the] portions of the building at 1828-30 Walnut Street which was leased or occupied by petitioner and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto, for the reason that while the parties stipulated as to what the facts were, the petitioner and intervener objected to said facts being admitted in evidence because same were immaterial to any of the issues herein, which said objections and ruling of the trial examiner are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1836 (R.II. 381), to-wit:

"Mr. Tyler: It is agreeable to me, of course, subject to the objection that it is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent also objects that it is immaterial. We are stipulating as to the facts.

"Trial Examiner Batten: When asking you about the stipulation I am not asking you to forego any objection. All you are agreeing to is the facts; whether or not they are relevant is an entirely different matter.

"We will proceed."

122.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 20 and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objectons thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1841, 1842 (R.II. 384), to-wit:

"Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, we have had prepared from the bank statements which were used during the testimony of Miss Hartman in regard to the Nelly Don Loyalty League this morning, the exhibit for which Board's Exhibit No. 20 was reserved. I now offer that exhibit.

• • • • •

[fol. 147] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, that is subject to our continuing objection as to materiality as to the Loyalty League matter.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the objections of the respondent and the intervener, both that is, your continuing objections."

123.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 27 and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1843, 1844, 1845, to wit:

"Mr. Leary: * * * Now, I offer, Mr. Examiner, what has been identified as Board's Exhibit No. 27, a newspaper clipping from the Kansas City Times under date of May 11, 1937. Is it not a fact, Mr. Ingraham, that you agree that the reporter who took this statement, if called to testify, would testify that the statements that were attributed to Senator Reed were made to that reporter by Senator Reed?

"Mr. Ingraham: That is correct. I am not admitting that Senator Reed made the statements, but just that the reporter would so testify.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener admits that the reporter would so testify, and objects that nothing that Senator Reed said could in any way be binding on the intervener.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it will be received on the basis of the allegations that you have in your complaint. As to what bearing it has on the issues, I think would be a matter for the Examiner to determine."

124.

[fol. 148] "Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I offer for the record what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 29-A and 29-B, which is a computation of the salaries received by certain individuals who are officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, such computations of these persons' salaries being from January 15th, 1937 to and including December 31, 1938.

"Mr. Stottle: Yes. Respondent wants to object to the materiality of this, assuming that it is correct.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener makes the same objection. It has no tendency to prove or disprove any issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received."

125.

"Mr. Leary: Board offers Exhibits 23 and 24-A, 24-B, 24-C.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Board's Exhibits 23 and 24 were those accounts; 23 was the special fund account of the Donnelly Loyalty League and 24 was the general fund account.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes its continuing objection to any of these exhibits that refer to the Loyalty League matters, and also, we haven't as yet had an opportunity to check the correctness of the figures.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I might say this: that any exhibits which are received, of course, are received subject to correction if there are figures or dates that are found to be incorrect.

"Mr. Stottle: Then, our continuing objection was as to the materiality of that Loyalty League evidence.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener renews its objection to any evidence in connection with the Loyalty League on the ground that it is purely a social organization, having no connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that any of its actions would not in any way be binding on the intervener, and that it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, they will be received."

[fol. 149] 126.

"Mr. Leary: Board offers what purports to be Miss Hartman's memoranda of the Loyalty League and special account maintained at the First National Bank, identified as Board's Exhibit 22. I will have this photostated, and ask permission to insert the photostat.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received subject to the same objections by respondent and intervener as to Board's Exhibits 23 and 24."

127.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing and refusing to exclude Board's Exhibit No. 30 and in failing and refusing to sustain petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1858 and 1859 (R. II. 388), and in later accepting the N. R. A. testimony contained in said Board's Exhibit 30 and permitting the Board to offer evidence under said offer of proof (Transcript of Record, Page 2552; R. II. 598a):

"Mr. Leary: Yes, I have several matters. I have the offer of proof that I desire to make at this time, in connection with certain sub-sections of paragraph 11.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be marked Board's Exhibit 30.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, the respondent objects to the exhibit 30 for the reason it is immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in this case, and refers to matters that occurred prior to the passage of the Wagner Act.

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve the decision on it."

[fol. 150] 128.

"Trial Examiner Batten: In accordance with the stipulation, which is marked Board's exhibit N. 1-DDDD, the Board has served upon all of the parties certain testimony taken from the N. R. A. proceeding and the so-called Judge Miller case.

"The first exhibit, N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 1-A to BBBB is certain testimony which is offered by the Board from the N. R. A. proceedings and it consists of 80 pages.

"N. R. A.-Judge Miller case exhibit No. 2-A, B, and C are the objections and motions of the respondent and intervener to strike the N. R. A. testimony offered by the Board. That is exhibit No. 1-A to BBBB, containing 80 pages, and the following ruling is made, endorsed on exhibit 2-A, B, and C, on sheet 2-C:—

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * The objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied, and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections."

129.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections and [fol. 151] motions to strike the testimony contained in N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit No. 1-A to 1-BBBB and to the following limitation included in said ruling; to wit: "* * * and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections (subjects)", which ruling is set forth on Pages 1861-2 of the record (R. II. 389), and further assigns as error the failure and refusal of the trial examiner to clarify said ruling and designate what parts of said testimony were being received and what parts were being excluded by the above quoted ruling over the objections of petitioner, which objections and rulings are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record, Pages 1862, 1863 (R. II. 390), to wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: I don't understand what you are ruling out and what you are leaving in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think if you take this and read it, Mr. Ingraham, you will understand just what I am receiving.

"If there is any question about it after you go over it, I will be very glad to clarify it."

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner calls attention to the fact that the trial examiner later refused to clarify the above quoted ruling and overruled petitioner's motion therefor.

130.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in receiving in evidence N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit 5-A to 5-GG inclusive, and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto and motions to strike same (as contained in N. R. A.-Judge Miller case Exhibit 6-A, 6-B and 6-C), as set forth in the following excerpts from [fol. 152] the transcript of the record, Page 1864 (R. II. 390a), to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * N. R. A.—Judge Miller Case exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG is certain testimony offered by the Board from the Judge Miller case, consisting of 33 pages.

"Exhibit No. 6-A, B, and C, the objections and motions to strike, of the respondent and intervener.

"Exhibit No. 5-A to 5-GG, the objection to such testimony is overruled, and the motion to strike is denied; and the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

131.

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner also assigns as error the limitation contained in the ruling and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) that "the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects", for the reason that said ruling and limitation renders it vague and indefinite what portions of the testimony referred to the Examiner intended to and did receive or exclude and what portions of said testimony the Examiner considered in arriving at his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations, and petitioner makes this assignment to each and every ruling of the trial examiner to which said above quoted limitation was appended.

132.

"Trial Examiner Batten: • • • 9-A to 9-CC is certain testimony from the Judge Miller case, offered by the Board, being the testimony of Sylvia Hull.

"In the case of Exhibit 9-A to 9-CC, the respondent has indicated on the exhibit objections to certain questions through the entire testimony of 29 pages. The intervener objects to all of the testimony.

"The rulings of the Trial Examiner are indicated on the various pages where the individual objections of the respondent appear, and as to the intervener's objection, the objection is overruled and the motion to strike is denied and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects. The objections being marked 10-A, consisting of one sheet, and the rulings entered thereon."

133.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in receiving in evidence N. R. A.—Judge Miller case Exhibits 13-A to 13-R inclusive, and in overruling the objections of the petitioner thereto (contained in Exhibit 14), and further excepts to the limitation included in said ruling, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 1866, (R. II. 390b), to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: • • • NRA-Judge Miller Case Exhibits 13-A to 13-R, consisting of 18 pages, is certain testimony from the Judge Miller case offered by the Board.

"Exhibit 14 is the objections by the respondent to 13-A to 13-R, and the following ruling:

"Objection is overruled and acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings, and, further, it is not the purpose in accepting the testimony to reverse any rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

134.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) sustaining the Board's motion of June 21 to amend the complaint; which ruling is set forth on page 1870 of the transcript of the record, (R. II. 390d).

[fol. 154]

135.

136.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent desires to file its motion to dismiss the complaint in its entirety.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be marked Board's exhibit No. 1-FFFF.

"Mr. Stottle: The grounds of the motion, Mr. Examiner, are that there has been no substantial evidence in the record to support any of the charges. In some instances there has been some evidence but it has been of a conjectural and speculative nature that would not be sufficient to constitute a case against the respondent.

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener wishes at this point to demur to the evidence of the Board and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and move to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the evidence [intodnced], if taken as true, would not be sufficient upon which to base any finding which would affect the rights of the intervener; it would be insufficient to base an order on just establishing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as bargaining representatives; it would be insufficient to base an order upon which would in any way cancel or affect the contract which the Donnelly Garment Work-[fol. 155] ers' Union have with their employers, or their contract rights; it would be insufficient in any way to use as a basis for any decree, order, or judgment affecting the rights and interests of the intervener.

* * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: * * * of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in.

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: Yes. If the Court please, I wish to amplify the motion of the intervener heretofore made to dismiss by adding as a basis for that motion that no evidentiary basis for any finding that the union was organized by the company or is company dominated has been laid, and that therefore no finding could be made, because no evidence has been submitted as a basis;

"That no basis has been laid for any finding that the company coerced or intimidated or influenced any employee in joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

"And that no basis has been laid for any possible finding that the company contributed, directly or indirectly financial aid or other aid to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

"No basis has been laid that the union is not a bona fide labor union, with all of the rights guaranteed such union under the Wagner Act:

"And that no basis has been laid for any finding that the union is not a free will choice of the majority of the employees and is not entitled to representation of all of the employees in collective bargaining.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Those additional reasons, I presume you call them, Mr. Tyler—* * * will be considered in connection with the disposition of the motion."

137.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing to sustain or rule upon petitioner's motion to dismiss each of the separate paragraphs of the Complaint which motion was marked Board's Exhibit 1-GGGG and was made and filed at the close of the Board's case (Page 1874) (and argued at Pages 1874 to 1889 inclusive), and further assigns the ruling and action of the trial examiner in requiring petitioner to proceed with its case and evidence prior to a ruling upon said motion, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1874, 1889, (R. II. 390e, 390f), to wit:

[fol. 156] "Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we have another motion to dismiss that goes to each of the paragraphs separately.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The first is a general motion, and this is a specific motion.

"Mr. Stottle: To practically all of the paragraphs, yes, but not every one of them. We will submit it at this time if you will give me a number.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That will be Board's exhibit No. 1-GGGG.

* * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: * * * Of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in."

133.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing and refusing to strike from the record all the evidence upon each and all of the various paragraphs of the Complaint and in failing and refusing to sustain petitioner's motions therefor, contained and set forth at the bottom of petitioner's motion to dismiss, and in requiring petitioner to proceed with its case and evidence prior to a ruling upon said motion to [stike], as set forth in the following [exceprts] from the transcript of the record, Page 1889, to-wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Then, at the bottom of our motion we have moved that the Examiner strike from the record all evidence upon the various paragraphs which the Examiner does dismiss.

* * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: The motion goes to striking all evidence on the other paragraphs that you may dismiss, as well as (s).

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve decision on that.

* * * * *

"Mr. Stottle: * * * * Of course, Mr. Examiner, we would like to have a ruling on these matters so that we might know —

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will tell you now, and I am not going to rule on them today or tomorrow; I may not even rule on them until all of the evidence is in."

In connection with the foregoing assignment, petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in later failing and refusing to sustain petitioner's said motion to [fol. 157] strike all the evidence introduced under each and all of the paragraphs of the Complaint and in permitting said evidence to remain in the record, and further assigns as error the action of the trial examiner in taking said evidence into consideration in his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations set forth in the Intermediate Report.

139.

"Trial Examiner Batten: * Mr. Stottle, you have something further?

"Mr. Stottle: This has reference, Mr. Examiner, to your ruling made this morning on the N.R.A. and Judge Miller case testimony submitted by the Board.

"In substance the ruling was the same on all of them, and reads: ' . . . the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings. It is not the purpose in accepting the testimony to reverse any rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.'

"Of course, we are somewhat in a dilemma to understand just what we are required to meet there.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would say, Mr. Stottle, if there is the least doubt in your mind, you submit your evidence and then I will tell you whether it is material or not.

"Mr. Stottle: You mentioned that there are certain subjects you do not want to go into. If you could just tell us what subjects you mean —

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is clear on that. If it is not, I will clear it up as we go along."

[fol. 158] 140.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in limiting and excluding evidence offered by the petitioner as set forth on Pages 1903 and 1904 of the transcript of the record, and further assigns as error the ruling and comment of the trial examiner therein set forth to the effect that the testimony in N.R.A.-Judge Miller case exhibits Nos. 1 to 16 with reference to the discharge of certain employees (except Tubbesing, Fry and Brooks) should be stricken, and in thereafter considering said testimony so stated to be stricken, and basing his findings of fact, conclusions and recommendations thereon, for the reason that said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner were highly misleading, unfair and prejudicial to petitioner, and in preventing petitioner from putting in evidence concerning the matters stated by the trial examiner to be stricken by the said witness then on the stand, to-wit, Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, and by other witnesses which petitioner might have called if said misleading ruling had not been made, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1903, 1904 (R.II. 396, 397), to-wit:

"Q. I will ask you, Mrs. Reeves, if among the 300 employees that were laid off there was Ellen Fry, Tillie Shirlie, Pauline Lutz, Mamie Tubbesing, Thelma Owen, Glynn Brooks, Nora McKee, Olive Thompson —

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Now, are we interested in that entire list?

"Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, the next question I intend to ask Mrs. Reeves is whether or not over half of these people were called back to work.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Oh, well, then, I thought perhaps, you —

"Mr. Langsdale: If he is permitted to ask that we certainly want to disprove it on rebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You go ahead and make your objections and I will pass upon the objections when they are made.

[fol. 159] "Mr. Ingraham: That is just what I don't understand. I understood Mr. Langsdale and the Board have offered evidence regarding these people, and their offers have been received.

"Mr. Leary: Not regarding all of the persons you have named, I suggest you read Board's exhibit No. 30 and note that it includes only three names.

"Mr. Ingraham: But you submitted evidence on more than those three people, and the evidence has been received, as I understand it. You submitted evidence on about ten of them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean in some of those other exhibits this morning?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course if there is other evidence there with respect to their discharge it should be stricken out, shouldn't it, Mr. Leary?

"Mr. Leary: If it is limited strictly so their discharge, yes, but as to discriminatory remarks, and so forth, made to these persons, I don't think it should be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will say now, if there is any such testimony, Mr. Ingraham, in the exhibit, it certainly wasn't my intention that any of that testimony should remain in there with respect to the discharge of these people except those three, and in the N.R.A.-Judge Miller case exhibits Nos, 1 to 16 if there is any testimony of that nature it may be stricken, with respect to the discharge of all of the persons except — what were those three, Mr. Leary?

"Mr. Leary: Tubbesing, Fry, and Brooks."

141.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to admit in evidence petitioner's exhibit No. 6 for the purposes for which same was offered by petitioner and in limiting its admission in evidence, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911 (R.II. 398, 399, 400, 401), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham): Mrs. Reeves, I hand you respondent's Exhibit 6, which is a newspaper article appearing in the Kansas City Star, February 26, 1937, setting out statements by Meyer Purlstein and Wave Tobin, and ask you if you have read that article.

"A. I did.

"Mr. Ingraham: The respondent offers in evidence Exhibit 6.

* * * * *

[fol. 160] "Trial Examiner Batten: For what purpose?

"Mr. Ingraham: For the purpose of showing the situation at this time, and I will offer other articles up until April 23d, when Sylvia Hull and May Fike had their difficulty at the plant.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I might say that I don't like trying these Labor Board cases in the newspapers.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, Mr. Leary offered a long article of Senator Reed's, and it set out the background and the history, and I am showing our side of this background. Now I am asking this witness—

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is this all contained in the Judge Miller testimony?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, I will say you had better submit it as a transcript from that.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will prove as to the truth of this statement from the Judge Miller testimony, but I would like to examine this witness in regard to whether or not she read this and what occurred. As far as the facts being true, I will prove that by the Judge Miller evidence.

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: I am setting it up for the purpose of showing the situation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The general situation?

"Mr. Ingraham: At that time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, background?

"Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

"Mr. Tyler: If the court please, the intervener will also wish to use it on the ground that we are trying motives here, and inner intent, and you can't adequately try a question of that kind without showing the situation, to show what things would affect their intent, or their actual motive. There is no other way to get at motive and intent without showing the surrounding circumstances and things that would influence it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you expect me to be able to determine people's inner feelings?

"Mr. Tyler: I think Your Honor is going to have to determine what the motive was, and you have got to base it on surrounding influence that would—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I am perfectly willing that you should have a reasonable amount of background, as the Board had in the NRA proceeding. They showed it almost entirely by transcript of that [fol. 161] testimony. Now, if this means calling a large number of witnesses for that purpose, I don't want to have the background, as I have said so many times in this case, become the picture.

"Mr. Ingraham: I don't think it will result in that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you want to offer it on that basis, I will receive it on that basis, that you offer it for, Mr. Ingraham, but not for the purpose which Mr. Tyler stated that he expects to use it for."

142.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) concerning petitioner's exhibit No. 7, and the failure and refusal of the trial examiner to give consideration to said exhibit, and his comments that said exhibit "doesn't prove anything", as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 1917 (R. II. 404), to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: On the basis I received the other one, and this one, it doesn't open up anything, because I am not receiving it to show the truth or the untruth of any statements in the article, merely as an article from the newspaper for whatever it is worth.

"Mr. Langsdale: If it is worth anything, it is worth rebutting.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there is nothing to rebut if it doesn't prove anything. If it doesn't prove the truth or the untruth of any statement contained in it, I don't think it opens up anything.

"Mr. Leary: For all of your reasons, I don't think it should be admitted, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am admitting it, Mr. Leary, as I told Mr. Ingraham, and he is offering it for the purpose of showing the background of what was occurring about that time, and on that basis I will receive it."

143.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, then, respondent offers Exhibits 8-A and 8-B.

* * * * *

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, I assume that this letter is admitted that it will be admitted as one of the newspaper articles, not as a matter in controversy that we have a right to prove was true, or they would have a right to prove was false, unless the matters are within the issues as have been defined by this complaint and by the Examiner? This letter goes into a great many matters that are not before the Examiner here, and if they are going to try to offer—set up an automaton and knock him down, we want to be permitted to prop him up again.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, if Your Honor please, the Board and Mr. Langsdale have offered evidence that Mrs. Reed read this letter to a meeting, and they have brought the letter into issue.

"Mr. Langsdale: We didn't read the contents.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I don't propose to try the truth or the untruth of any of the statements in the letter.

"Mr. Langsdale: That is all I want to know.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I said at one stage in this case that, granting that everything that was said in the answer were true, it still wouldn't answer the charge of an unfair labor practice. In other words, everything that is said might be true, and still there would be an unfair labor practice. I will receive it on the same basis that I received the others, and for the additional reason that it is the letter referred to in the meeting of March 18, 1937, which has been testified to here, I think by two or three different people.

"Mr. Tyler: Well, I ask your Honor to receive it also on the ground that it would throw some light on the question of whether these employees were dominated by their employer and forced to form a labor union, or whether this letter and the effect it had on them was not a cause of their forming a labor union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will reserve my decision on that, Mr. Tyler, because I assume that you will want to go over a good many of these and make an offer all together.

[fol. 163] Wouldn't you prefer to do that, without waiving any of your rights?"

144.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent, of course, objects to this N. R. A. testimony as being immaterial because it related to matters long before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and before the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, and we would object to these questions on the same basis that we have to the N. R. A. testimony.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I don't know whether the record is clear or that it is understood, but, as I recall, you made a continuing objection to all testimony that refers to a time prior to the passage of the Wagner Act. And, if I am not mistaken, Mr. Tyler, you joined in that objection.

"Mr. Tyler: I intended to.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think the record is quite clear.

"Mr. Stottle: May it be understood, if it isn't clear our objection is made?

"Trial Examiner Batten: If it isn't clear, it is understood that you have an objection; and Mr. Tyler, also."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, comments and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit petitioner or intervenor to introduce evidence relating to a comparison of the contracts between petitioner and intervener union with contracts made between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City and [fol. 164] vicinity, and in refusing to permit testimony as to the terms and conditions contained in such contracts between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment companies in Kansas City and vicinity, which rulings and comments are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2033, 2034, 2035 (R. II. 435, 436), to-wit:

"A  Then the vacation schedule came up, and while I individually, of course, learning this from Mrs. Reed when I came out here nearly seven years ago, believed in vacations, inasmuch as this clause is the only kind that I know of in the needle work industry contract, I wasn't sure that the company should bind itself to give vacations with pay, which prior to that time had been optional and in the discretion of the management.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, Mr. Keyes. Mr. Keyes, volunteering that statement there, I thought that we had the understanding that—I mean, I advised you, rather—I don't know as you all agree with me—that I didn't want to get into a comparison of this contract with other contracts, and I limited the Board's testimony the other day, when I asked them the direct question, if all the questions which they asked applied only to how the contract was negotiated.

"Now this, of course, brings up—Mr. Keyes volunteering this statement that no needle contract has such a phrase any place, you are beginning to compare the contracts.

"The important thing with this contract, and with this union, is not what is in this contract. The important thing is, did the union, in good faith, and the respondent, sit down and negotiate a contract?

"Now, a union can negotiate any terms they see fit in a contract. So, the only question here is did Mr. Tyler and the committee representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union negotiate in good faith, did the respondent negotiate in good faith? And, having arrived at an agreement, they put it in writing and signed it. Therefore, Mr. Keyes' statement about this particular paragraph in comparing it with some other contract, I don't consider that it should be accepted, in accordance with my prior ruling. Therefore, I won't receive it.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor has in mind that the intervener asserts that comparison with other contracts is valid and admissible evidence to show the genuine negotiation of this contract and the genuineness of the desires of the employees to negotiate in this matter, and have their own union, and we except to your ruling that comparisons are not proper.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I understand your position, Mr. Tyler, and I only say in answer to that, this: that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or any other union can negotiate any contract they want. I mean, they could go out here and negotiate a contract for less [fol. 165] wages, less salaries, no vacations, and abominable conditions, if the union wanted to do it. So I say that I am not concerned about comparison of these contracts. I am concerned about, did they actually negotiate, and agree on these things, and when they agreed, sign the contracts; and, of course, as I understand it, that is the matter, Mr. Tyler, which you except to?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts."

146.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and actions of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in sustaining objections to the testimony offered by petitioner, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2071, 2072 (R. II. 445), to-wit:

"Q. Did Fern Sigler leave after that conversation?

"A. She left. I think it was some 30 minutes, or something like that, after she got to the office.

"Q. State whether or not she then performed services for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Do you know whether or not she called on the customers of the Donnelly Garment Company in Kansas City?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. This is not an 8 (3) case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

147.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in denying to petitioner the right to examine witness with respect to Sylvia Hull's being in Atlantic City, and the Examiner's comments that said testimony was not material, and his action in striking same from the record, as set forth in the following excerpts of the record, Pages 2073, 2074 (R. II. 446), to-wit:

[fol. 166] "Q. Did you later learn that Sylvia Hull was in Atlantic City attending the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union convention?

"A. I did.

"Q. Was there a newspaper article in the papers regarding that?

"A. There was.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) You mean, she was there at the time these calls were made?

"A. No. She was there after the calls were made trying to locate her.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Then, I don't see what that has to do with it. I don't think it has anything to do with it if it was after these calls were made.

"Mr. Ingraham: If Your Honor please, I want to show that we not only called but later learned she was in Atlantic City, and therefore there wouldn't have been any use to call, if she was there.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think that is material at all. The testimony about her being in Atlantic City, if it was after your attempts to call, may be stricken out."

148.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to admit in evidence Petitioner's Exhibit No. 10 for all purposes as offered by petitioner and in limiting its admission in evidence, and in ruling and stating that the Examiner would receive same "for just what they are worth as newspaper articles and that is all", as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2076, 2077, 2078 (R. II. 448, 449), to wit:

"Q. I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 10 and ask you to state what publication that is.

"A. It is 'Justice', published by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

"Mr. Ingraham: I offer in evidence respondent's exhibit No. 10, the report of Sylvia Hull's speech.

"Trial Examiner Batten: What date is that?

"Mr. Langsdale: June 1, 1937.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, what is the purpose of this, if you are to disclose it? Is it to show the situation as it existed? It is not to prove the truth or untruth of anything in there, is it?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes, indeed. This is the official paper of the International.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly won't receive it to prove anything, an article in a newspaper.

[fol. 167] "Mr. Ingraham: Even though it is published by the International?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care whom it is published by.

"Mr. Ingraham: Wouldn't that be considered as an admission?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe in trying any of these hearings on newspapers, trade papers, or anything of that kind. If you want to offer it on the same basis you offered the other newspaper articles, I will receive it on that basis.

"Mr. Ingraham: I offer it, of course, for all purposes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am saying I will not receive it for all purposes. But if you want to offer it on the same basis as exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, although it restricts your general offer, I will receive it on that basis, on the basis of respondent's exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, and [they] you may have your exception.

"Mr. Ingraham: I am still offering it for all purposes; and you are not allowing it to be received for all purposes?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. But my question still is, do you want me to receive it on the same basis I did receive exhibits Nos. 6 and 7, having refused to receive it for general purposes?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may it not also be received to show that she said these things, even though the things she did say were not true?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I assume this article is in the same class as the other two, it speaks for itself.

"Mr. Stottle: You let Senator Reed's statement in to show that he said certain things, didn't you?

"Trial Examiner Batten: It was stated, in connection with that, that if the reporter were here he would testify Senator Reed said those things. I will receive it on that basis, although that is not Mr. Ingraham's offer. I am not going to receive these newspaper articles as proving or disproving anything that is said in them. I will receive them for just what they are worth as newspaper articles, and that is all."

149.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Was any other official of the company there at the time?

"A. There was not.

"Q. Did you do all you could to stop the demonstration?

"Mr. Langsdale: Now, just a moment. I still think that this answer should be based upon the question as to whether or not he knows. The fact that no other executive was there at the time doesn't show that it wasn't planned the night before or the night before that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand for whatever value it has. What was the last question?

(Whereupon, the last question was read by the reporter).

"Trial Examiner Batten: That certainly is repetition. You went into quite some detail yesterday about what he did when he went up on the floor with these different girls, and sent the others back, and so forth. Of course, if you want him to just categorically deny everything that is in the complaint, just read it to him and then I have no objection to him denying it, Mr. Ingraham."

150.

151.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence Board's Exhibit No. 30 and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto and their motions to reject said offer of proof and the N. R. A. testimony in said offer, and in permitting witness to testify under said offer of proof, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, [fol. 169] Pages 2367, 2368 and 2552 (R. II. 598a), to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the Board has filed an exhibit, Marked 30, which is an offer of proof concerning Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks, and Mamie Tubbesing. The respondent has prepared an objection and motion to reject that offer of proof, which we now wish to present to you. "I might say that this objection was made in the name of the respo dent only but that this morning Mr. Tyler, representing the intervener, has added a clause at the bottom stating that he joins in the objection and motion, and that appears upon the paper which we are presenting.

"Trial Examiner Batten: This will be marked Board's exhibit No. 1-HHHH. I will take the original with me.

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to state I have gone over this paper and considered it, and wish to join in it, as indicated by the signature at the bottom.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be taken under advisement.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on the matter of the Board's Exhibit L-IIII, which is the objection and motion of the respondent and the intervener to the Board's offer, which is marked 'Board's Exhibit 30', the objections are overruled and the motion to strike is denied, which means, Mr. Leary, that the NRA testimony which was in the offer will be accepted, and you will have one witness ready for presentation of her testimony, strictly limited to the point in your offer."

152.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit petitioner to call and examine witnesses concerning the circulation and signing of the petition of March 2, 1937, and in limiting the number of witnesses which might be called to testify concerning same and in requiring petitioner to make an offer of proof thereon as to other witnesses, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2457, 2458 (R. II. 552), to wit:

"Q. Did you sign the petition that was circulated March 2d?

"A. I did.

"Q. Did any officer of the company ask you to sign that petition?

"A. No.

[fol. 170] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, Mr. Ingraham, do I understand that you intend to call a large number of individual employees?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes, your Honor.

"Trial Examiner Batten: To testify?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, of course, I don't propose to have a large number called to testify to this point. You may call a reasonable number, and use your own judgment as to what is reasonable.

"Mr. Ingraham: All right, your Honor.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And make an offer of proof on the entire balance, if you want to, but I am not going to listen to all of them, but you use your own judgment as to what you think is a reasonable number, and at that time I think we can probably determine what will be done."

153.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in sustaining objection to the following question asked by petitioner of the witness Atherton, as shown in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 2463 (R. II. 553), to wit:

"Q. Mr. Atherton, did you witness any violence at the Missouri, Gernes, or Gordon plants during the month of March, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

154.

"Mr. Langsdale: Is that the March 18th meeting?

"Mr. Ingraham: March 18th.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Did the employees take any action at that meeting?

"A. They did not.

"Q. Did the violence at the Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants increase from that date on?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

[fol. 171] 155.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in sustaining objections of the Board and I.L.G.W.U. to question asked of the witness Atherton by counsel for the intervener on Page 2500 of the record, and in refusing the offer of proof made by counsel for the intervener on Page 2501 of the record, concerning the disturbances at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes factories prior to March 18, 1937, and to the question asked of said witness by counsel for intervener on Page 2501 of the record as to the state of mind of employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in regard to said conditions at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants, and the comments of the trial examiner concerning said matters, and the ruling and action of the trial examiner in making the same ruling upon petitioner's objection to said ruling and to petitioner's offer of proof on said matters; as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506 (R.II. 574, 575, 576, 577), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Mr. Atherton, was the subject of disturbances at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, a subject of common discussion among the employees at the Donnelly Garment plant?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): What was the state of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company in regard to conditions at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as being without a foundation, that this witness knows what the state of mind of the employees at the plant was; and immaterial, also.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I will sustain it on the ground it is immaterial.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the subject of the violence at the Missouri, Gordon and Gernes plants before March 18, 1937, was one of almost continual conversation by the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company plant, and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and that the condition of the employees' minds at that plant was one almost bordering on hysteria and continued to increase in intensity as the strikes went on at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri plants, and that that was one of the main causes of their employing attorneys, and later on was one of the impelling reasons for them to [fol. 172] organize their own labor union.

"Mr. Leary: I will object to the offer on the same grounds.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union objects to the offer upon the ground that it includes, a part of it, to permit this witness to pass upon the mental attitude of other employees, and he has shown no knowledge, laid no foundation to show that he is capable of passing on the mental attitude of those employees.

"Mr. Tyler: The record shows that this witness was employed at the plant; that his duties caused him to circulate about the plant, and I submit that any employee in such circumstances is competent to tell what the subjects of discussion were which were uppermost, and what the general attitude of employees was.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I assume — I don't know — I wasn't here, but I assume that probably there was so much talk in the plant that it even interfered with production. In fact, I have never seen a case yet where two unions, or one union, is conducting an intensive organizational campaign that it doesn't affect production in the plant. I mean, it just goes without saying that it is a part of it. You can't separate it, so I don't suppose there is any argument but what in this plant and all the rest of the plants, if it was all material to this hearing, the production was reduced.

"Now, my point on this is this: that if the respondent, or any of its officers formed this union or assisted in forming it, or after it was formed they sponsored it or in any way assisted it, even if you were to prove that all the 1,350 employees in here were ready to shoot the next International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union member which they met, it still wouldn't detract one ounce from the fact that the respondent had either formed, sponsored or dominated the union, and even though you were to definitely prove that and permit it on the record, if the Board hasn't proved that this union was either formed, sponsored or is now dominated by this company, the respondent is not guilty of an unfair labor [practive], irrespective of what the employees do, because they can do whatever they please, I mean, within reasonable limits, and I thought I ought to make that statement just in explanation of my ruling.

"Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I intend to make no point as to reduction of production by these difficulties.

I do say that there is no more important fact, and no fact approaching in importance the fact of that caused the employees of this company to form their own union. The Board is claiming that it was domination or fear or bribery, or some such influence by the employer.

"I submit that the employees asserting that they formed the plant of their own free will, will, in establishing that fact, have the right to refer to the causes which influenced them in making that choice, and undertake to show by this witness that one of the causes was not the employer domi- [fol. 173] nation, but was fear and dislike of what the International was doing in its campaign to organize garment workers in Kansas City.

"I take it I have an exception to your Honor's ruling without —

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, of course, you have an automatic exception.

"Mr. Stottle: And, Mr. Examiner, you will recall that Mr. Ingraham asked similar questions as to violence down at the Gordon and Gernes plant, and whether it increased, and your Honor sustained the objection to those questions. Our position also is that that would show a motive or a reason for the formation of this union, and would tend to show that it was not company domination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have an objection and I will make the same ruling, Mr. Stottle.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Ingraham didn't make an offer of proof. When he comes back, I will ask him if he desires to enter it, or let the question go.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let him decide when he comes back, and I will determine it, and I would make the same ruling, and I would say the same to the respondent. It isn't a question of whether these people had a motive to organize the union. The only question is, did the respondent have anything to do with it, and if they didn't they can have any motive they please.

* * * * *

"Mr. Shepard: Respondent makes the same offer of proof, and takes exception to your ruling."

156.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit testimony offered by intervener concerning the visit of employees of petitioner to Chief Higgins of the police force or to call and examine witnesses with reference thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2523, 2524 (R.II. 585, 586), to-wit:

"Q. Was there any particular incident that you know of that brought about the visit of the employees to Chief Higgins of the police force?

"A. Yes; the rumored threats that we would be next on the list. . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. I think that is covered entirely by the offer of proof that I have asked for, Mr. Tyler.

"Mr. Tyler: Very well.

[fol. 174] "Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, in those paragraphs which Mr. Langsdale has asked to have stricken, as I recall it, those matters are covered.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor rules this witness cannot testify as to the visit of the employees to Chief Higgins and what it was for?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I have merely said, when I receive those offers of proof, which includes this matter, I will then determine how much, if any, of what we will take testimony upon."

157.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale): I will ask you if you heard Mrs. Reed make this statement [this] is contained in the affidavit on page 861:

"'In the first place, a group of employees on or about March 18, 1937, came to my office and told me that all of the employees were going to meet to discuss ways and means to protect themselves'.

"And then skipping —

"Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): I object to Mr. Langsdale skipping. If he is going to read from this affidavit, he ought to read it so it is connected up.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am merely asking this witness if he heard this statement read.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think that thus far in the hearing, there have been many instances where a witness has been asked whether they heard a certain thing, and certainly, they haven't read the entire affidavit or the entire testimony, either.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale): Skipping down to the last sentence of that paragraph, taking it up with that sentence, in which she says:

"'  I went to the meeting and told them that the Company's attorneys would consider what legal steps might be advisable in the event the union carried out its threats.'

"Did you hear Mrs. Reed make that statement?".

[fol. 175] 158.

"Q. Now, you have been here in the court room waiting to testify how long, Mr. Atherton?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is immaterial to any issue in this case. He has a perfect right to be in the court room.

• • • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, and I will determine whether it has anything to do with it."

159.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit petitioner to produce further witnesses or testimony concerning the March 18 meeting and forcing petitioner to make offers of proof as to other witnesses concerning same, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 2607 (R.II. 610d, 611), to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I will permit this witness to testify, but I certainly don't intend to listen to any more witnesses of what occurred at the March 18th meeting, because thus far in the record, there is apparently no dispute. I mean, there is no use of going on with an unlimited number of witnesses telling about a meeting. So if there is any further witness to be offered on the March 18th meeting, it will have to be in the form of an offer of proof.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, of course, the respondent's position is that if that matter is controverted, we are entitled to show by any number of witnesses as to what did happen.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, — [fol. 176] "Mr. Stottle (Interrupting) And we are willing to make an offer of proof as to this Witness, or succeeding witnesses.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, you may proceed with this witness, but I am telling you now that if you had in mind offering any further witnesses about this March 18th meeting, I don't propose to go into it.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, in view of your Honor's ruling, we will make offers of proof as to other witnesses."

160.

Stites and the comments, ruling and action of the trial examiner refusing to permit petitioner to introduce testimony that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and its executive committee represent the free choice of petitioner's employees as their bargaining agency concerning wages, hours and working conditions in the Donnelly plant and requiring petitioner to submit offers of proof concerning said matter, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2610, 2611, 2612 (R. II. 612, 613, 614), to wit:

"Q. Does that union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and its bargaining committee represent your free choice in that matter?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: What was the ruling, Mr. Examiner?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we are charged with preventing the employees from exercising their free will in the choice of bargaining representatives. That is one of these three complaints or charges in the the complaint, and we submit that one of the best ways of finding out whether a person did a thing of their own free will is to ask that person whether they did, and it is our purpose to ask this witness, and as many other witnesses—[fol. 177] "Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting): Well, I don't think that is any indication, to put these witnesses up on the stand in a hearing of this kind, in a "C" case, in front of all the other employees and representatives of the company, and ask them, 'Is this your free choice?'. I mean it may possibly have some remote bearing, but I don't think it has sufficient that we should spend the time necessary to listen to 1300 employees get on the witness stand and testify to that point.

"Now, if that is your idea, you may make an offer of testimony with respect to these 1305 employees, or whatever it is, but certainly, we are not going to determine that in this hearing on that basis, at least.

"Mr. Tyler: Could I ask you if the Examiner holds that there is any presumption that these people are being dominated by somebody in the court room in this matter, or any presumption that they would commit perjury?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't even intimate such a thing.

"Mr. Tyler: I understood you to say that their testimony as to what they wish, would be either of no value or extremely little value.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't say any such thing, I don't think.

"Mr. Tyler: I misunderstood you, then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The record will state what I said in my remarks.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, don't you think we should have the testimony of this witness with the persons that you have referred to excluded from the court room?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think it is of any value in the issues in this case, to parade these people on the stand. Now, if that is your idea, you may make as complete an offer as you care to with respect to that matter."

161.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) sustaining objection to question asked the witness Mrs. Stites, and refusing to permit petitioner to introduce evidence concerning strikes and disturbances caused by the I. L. G. W. U. at the Gordon, Gernes and [fol. 178] other garment factories in Kansas City and the effect thereof upon the employees of petitioner and requiring petitioner to make offers of proof concerning said matters, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2612, 2613 (R. II. 614), to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: But you have had Mr. Patten or Mr. Lane, or someone, representing you every day of this hearing, have you not?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Mr. Stottle: But, Mr. Examiner, I have never discussed with Mr. McConaughey one word as to what his negotiations were—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I want the record to show that while the witnesses have not been here all of the time, the attorneys have been."

178.

"Q. Were you familiar with the principal subjects of discussion among the employees of the two companies during the months of March and April, 1937?

"A. Yes Sir.

"Q. What were the principal subjects of discussion?

"A. Strikes at the Gernes plant, and what we might be able to do to protect ourselves from the apparent danger that was due us in a short while.

"Q. Did you hear of any threats that the same proceedings would be taken as to employees of the Donnelly companies as were being taken against employees at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained."

179.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit evidence concerning strikes and violence at other garment plants in Kansas City and the effect thereof upon petitioner's employees [fol. 191] and in striking the answer of the witness Jack other witnesses have testified to, I don't think it is necessary.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent desires to show in an offer of proof that the witness is excluded from testifying, for the reason you have indicated, that is an important matter; and, for the reasons Mr. Tyler has stated.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is an exceedingly important matter. I agree with you on that.

"Mr. Stottle: What is the ruling on the objection to this witness being excluded from testifying on it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reserve my decision.

"Mr. Tyler: For the present the ruling is, this witness is not allowed to go into the negotiations of May 27, 1937?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Excepting in so far as he testifies to matters that have not yet been covered.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Do you know, Mr. McConaughey, as to what matters have been described in this hearing as being covered by the negotiations of May 27?

"A. I wasn't present at the time of the testimony of any other witnesses in this courtroom on that subject, so I don't know exactly what has been covered.

"Q. Has anybody told you fully, in detail, as to what has been covered by the other witnesses?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Were you present at any negotiations of June 21 or June 22, 1937?

"Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, in view of the witness' last two responses, respondent renews its objection to his being excluded from testifying, because it is apparent that no one could determine now whether he has any new matters or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, you have been present every day of this hearing, haven't you?

[fol. 190] "Mr. Stottle: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And you, Mr. Tyler?

"Mr. Tyler: I have been absent a day or two.

testify to new matters, and the Examiner's refusal to permit the offering and questions of witnesses upon said matter to determine whether such witnesses can testify as to matters not theretofore covered by other witnesses, and in overruling petitioner's objections thereto, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2833, 2834, 2835, 2836, 2837 (R.II. 697, 698, 699), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): I hand you Board's exhibit No. 6, being the articles of agreement between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, and ask you what matters were discussed in those negotiations between the union and the companies on May 26, 1937.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I want to make the same ruling on this that I just made on the other. There have two members of this executive committee testify in detail about this, and either two or three of the respondent's witnesses. So, unless you are going to cover matters that have not thus far been covered, I don't want to go into it with this witness. Now, if there is anything else, anything new, I want you to cover it with this witness, but Miss Todd and Mr. Atherton, both of whom were at this meeting testified quite extensively about these negotiations—and Mr. Baty, and I believe Mrs. Reeves. So, unless there is something new, I think it is cumulative.

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent would say in that connection, that your statement that unless some new matters were to be gone into—it could hardly be determined what the witness would testify to unless he is permitted to answer the questions and state what did occur.

[fol. 189] "Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I presume Mr. Tyler has interviewed this witness as to his testimony, and gone over it thoroughly, as every attorney should before examining his witness, so that he should be able to judge that. I can't. I am simply saying, if there is anything this witness can testify to about these negotiations that will add to the information in this record, certainly the Examiner wants it and the Board wants it. If it is simply a matter of repeating what at least four

"She said, 'Glynn, we have a lot of old girls out we would have to place before we place you'.

"I said, 'Well, I would like to work if there is any chance for me to'.

"She said, 'If you do we will not recognize your union. You will have to join ours'.

"I said that was all right, I didn't expect her to.

"Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out. It goes beyond the allegations of the complaint.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled."

175.

176.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, as far as this March 18 meeting is concerned, there is no need of any more witnesses testifying to it, unless you have something you want to go into that has not already been covered."

[fol. 188] 177.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit intervenor to offer further witnesses or testimony concerning the negotiations between the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and petitioner concerning the contract of May 27, 1937, and the Examiner's action, ruling and comments that further witnesses will not be permitted on said subject unless they can may submit your offer of proof as though the witnesses were here and present.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stoltle, if you have finished your questions about the April 27 meeting, I don't care to listen to any further witnesses on it, unless it is something that has not yet been covered by the previous witnesses".

173.

"Mr. Stoltle: Mr. Examiner, respondent is not objecting to the lack of identification, but respondent does object that it does not tend to prove or disprove any issue in the case and would therefore be immaterial.

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: We have no objection to the offer of the picture, but we do object if the picture is [tofered] with the inference that it is of the meeting of April 27, because the context shows it refers to a meeting of May 11.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received for whatever value it has."

174.

"A. I told her I had been informed that the old Donnelly girls, that is, the union girls were being reinstated, and I told her I would like to come back to work if that was true.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten, on this question, which has come up frequently, I think about the first week, in fact, Mr. Tyler brought it up; this question of the mental attitude of these people, due to the organizational campaign of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and all that that goes along with it. I think I should tell you now that if there is any further testimony of that kind, you can put in an offer or proof, because I don't think it is material to the issues here, and I think I told Mr. Tyler one day when he spoke about it, said that he felt that it was a motive or would be one motive, that would explain the organization of the independent union, and I think at that time I disagreed with Mr. Tyler. So if you have any further evidence in that line, you will submit it in an offer of proof, and if you care to, of course, you may submit another witness and ask those questions to make your record. If you don't care to do that, you may submit it without offering another witness."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit petitioner to offer further witnesses concerning the meeting of April 27, 1937, [fol. 186] and requiring petitioner to submit offers of proof thereon, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2731 and 2766 (R.II. 662, 676), to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I think after this witness covers the meeting of April 27, unless there are some new matters, I will not hear from any further witnesses about it, because I think there has been sufficient testimony about that meeting. As I said in other instances, you might call another witness and ask the questions and show that the witness was not permitted to answer, or you

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Have you ever heard any employee complain that they didn't want to join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for hearsay, and also, that it is immaterial.

"Mr. Patton: I asked what she heard.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection. It is immaterial, and I will overrule the matter of hearsay.

"Mr. Leary: I move the answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

170.

"Q. Do you know of any employee that is dissatisfied with the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as their bargaining agent?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

[fol. 185] "The Witness: May I answer that question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten): Are you afraid of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten): Were you afraid of that union in the spring of 1937?

"Mr. Leary: [Same] objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling."

"Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mrs. Stites, did any officer of the company, or representative of officers of the company, tell you about these things you have said you heard about, or did you hear them from other people?

"Mr. Langedale: I object to that as immaterial.

168.

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Davis, did you hear any statement made at the March 18th meeting by Mrs. Reed or anyone else that she wanted the names of the Donnelly Garment Company employees reported to her or reported to the management of any employees who belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as cumulative.

[fol. 184] "Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"(By Mr. Stottle) Did you hear Mrs. Reed state that she would never let the International Union into her plant?

"Mr. Leary: [Sam] objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained."

169.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in sustaining objections to question asked the witness Mrs. Martin by counsel for intervener and striking the answer made thereto (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2702, 2703 (R. II. 654, 655), to-wit:

told that they were coming over to our plant—the expression they used was 'to get us next.' And there was quite a bit of fighting over there, and tearing of clothes off. Naturally, we felt we needed some protection of some kind.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that all of that part of the answer about what had been going on [other] there be stricken out as not responsive to the question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

167.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit the witness Nellie Stites to answer questions propounded by counsel for the intervener and in refusing the offer of proof made by intervener thereon, and in sustaining objection to subsequent [fol. 183] question asked said witness, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2650, 2651 (R. II. 631, 632), to-wit:—

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) You talked to people who told you they had met with violence at the Gordon and Gerngs plants?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think I have indicated all through this hearing that I am not going into these matters, Mr. Tyler.

"Mr. Tyler: Then, intervener joins in the same offer of proof on this matter just offered by the respondent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean page 5, Mr. Tyler? That is the page that applies to this matter.

"Mr. Tyler: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: With reference to the offer on page 5, it will be refused.

"Mr. Tyler: And also, repeat the offer of proof which intervener made on the same subject heretofore.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused. In order to identify that, the respondent's offer of proof has been marked I-1111, and you are not referring to the fifth page of that?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may ask your questions, but then I will ask you to present an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: We will be very glad to join in the offer of proof, if the Examiner doesn't want to hear that.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't overlook that you were asking the questions, but I thought, in order to have [fol. 182] the record indicate it, your question and the answer could go in, but then I intended to ask for an offer of proof.

"Mr. Tyler: Your Honor rules that she may answer this question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

"Mr. Langsdale: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wants to object on the ground that it calls for a conclusion of the witness and is invading the province of the Examiner, without any basis for showing that this witness knew what the effect was upon any other employee than herself.

"Mr. Tyler: I think it is a matter of fact which one constantly in a plant can testify to, as to the general attitude in the plant as to certain things—if she knows.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if she knows, that is always different.

"Mr. Langsdale: He didn't put that in his other questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. We had been reading all of these articles in the paper about the strikes over there—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I object to that and ask that it be stricken as not responsive.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A (continuing)—and we had talked to a lot of the girls, and a lot of them had been talked to by people who worked over at these other plants, and of course, we were

N. I-1111, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2637, 2638 (R. II. 626, 627), to wit:

[fol. 181] "Q. Mrs. Stites, I will ask you to state whether you knew or heard of strikes—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, Mr. Stottle,—that finishes that offer?

"Mr. Stottle: That finishes that part of it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think it is at all necessary for her to answer any questions about the strikes and trouble in the other plant, because that, if you have an offer ready on that, I can pass on that one now.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, it is the last page of what I have given you.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is all in one, is it?

"Mr. Stottle: I put it all together as an offer of proof by this witness.

"Trial Examiner Batten: * Now, as to the last page, which is page 5, of the offer of proof on the Gernes and Gordon factories, and that other matter, that offer, as in accordance with my rulings, several rulings during the hearing, is refused."

166.

"Q. Did you have knowledge of the disturbances down at the Gordon, Gernes, and Missouri Plants in the spring of 1937?

"A. Yes, sir, I did.

"Q. What was the effect on the Donnelly Garment Company employees of these disturbances at the Gordon, Gernes and Missouri plants in the spring of 1937?

"Q. (By Mr. Stoltle) Well, Mrs. Stites, I will ask you whether at the time of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, on April 27th, or prior thereto, there was any coercion, intimidation, pressure or suggestion of any kind, directly or indirectly, brought to bear upon you by the management of the Donnelly Garment [fol. 180] Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company through any of its officers, executives, or anyone representing the management, to cause or influence you, or which did cause or influence you to join or support the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. None.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now just a moment. The answer may be stricken."

164.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit the witness Nellie Stites to testify concerning the domination of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the petitioner and concerning coercion upon or interference with the petitioner's employees concerning their free choice of a union or bargaining agency and requiring petitioner to make offers of proof concerning said matters and when petitioner proceeded to make offers of proof thereon, stating and ruling that such offers are outside said matters and in requiring as a condition precedent to the making of such offers of proof that the petitioner prepare "appropriate questions", as appears in the transcript of the record, Pages 2620 to 2631 (R. II. 618 to 624) and in later rejecting the offers of proof made by petitioner and joined in by intervener (page 2632) (R. II. 631) as to said witness Nellie Stites and as to other witnesses.

165.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in refusing to permit petitioner to ask the witness Nellie Stites' questions regarding strikes and disturbances at other garment plants and in refusing the offer of proof made by petitioner concerning said matters as to said witness Nellie Stites contained on Page 5 of Board's Exhibit

[fol. 179] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, that is with respect to what ruling? The one on the meeting of March 18th?

"Mr. Stottle: No, as with respect to the ruling that she joined this of her own free will, if Your Honor will permit her to testify that she did, and other witnesses to testify on the question of whether she did join of her own free will, of course, we would prefer to call the witnesses.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, what do you mean, reverse my ruling? Is that what you mean?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I thought you were intimating that I was making a different offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I do think it is different [that] even my ruling. You say to this witness 'You join of your own free will.' Now, you offer to show that the respondent in no way coerced or intimidated this witness. I don't think that is quite the same thing, do you?

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I will ask the question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, do you think it is the same?

"Mr. Stottle: I do think so. If she joined of her own free will, I don't think she was coerced by the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if you think it is the same thing, and that is what you mean by what you just said, then I will reject the offer.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, I would rather ask the question and have your Honor rule it out or let it in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't care to pass upon it. If you think it is the same thing, I will reject that part of the offer."

163.

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Stites, had you heard of the strikes and disturbances down at the Gordon and Gerres plants at about that time in March and April, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that for the reason that it is immaterial.

"Trial-Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we want to go into that matter to show that it did affect the employees and that that was one of the reasons why they formed this union, as tending to show that it was not due to the domination of the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think, Mr. Stottle, that I don't need to make any statement with respect to that ruling, because I have indicated on several occasions in this hearing just what my position is about that matter. You may make such offer as in your opinion is necessary to protect the interests of your client."

162.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) made while the witness Nellie Stites was on the stand, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2615, 2616, 2617 (R. Li. 615, 616, 617), to wit:

"Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, as to the two matters which you have excluded this witness from testifying to, respondent desires to make this offer of proof:

"Respondent offers to prove by this witness that if permitted to answer appropriate questions, she would testify that at or prior to the time of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on April 27, 1937, there was no coercion, intimidation, pressure or suggestion of any kind, directly or indirectly, brought to bear upon her by the management of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company through any of its officers, executives or supervisory officials, or anyone representing the management, to cause or influence her, or which did cause or influence her to join or support the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

189.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in overruling the motion of petitioner to strike Board's Exhibit No. 18 (18-A to 18-J) (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Page 3068, to-wit:

[fol. 202] Mr. Ingraham: I move to strike exhibit No. 18. There has been no showing that the exhibit was in the possession of the witness Greenbaw up to the time that she testified, and it now appears it has been in the possession of other parties, who have not appeared and testified it is the document which Elsa Graham Greenbaw transcribed.

"Mr. Langsdale: Of course Elsa Graham Greenbaw had the exhibit in her hands when she testified, and said this was the carbon of the minutes she took and turned over to Mr. Walsh's office.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled."

190.

191.

"Q. Was there ever any change, as far as you knew, in the duties of the instructors at the Donnelly Garment Company plant from the time you went to work there in 1926 or 1927 up to the time you left there in May, 1937?

* * * * *

"Mr. Lane: There is no showing who wrote this article, Board's exhibit No. 2, or that it was accurate.

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: There is no evidence that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Nelly Don Loyalty League had anything to do with that publication, regardless of who got it out.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is the allegation in here, I believe that the Loyalty League is a labor organization—in the complaint.

"It will be received for whatever value it has.

(Thereupon the editorial above referred to was marked for identification 'I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 19,' and received in evidence).

* * * * *

"Mr. Langedale: * I offer I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No. 19.

"Mr. Shepard: Respondent is making the same objection previously made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Subject to the objection both parties have made, it is received."

188.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in denying the motion of intervener to strike out all the rebuttal testimony offered by Mr. Langsdale from Mrs. Gray, as set forth in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record, Page 3062 (R. III. 734b), to-wit:

"Mr. Tyler: I would like to move to strike out all of the rebuttal testimony offered by Mr. Langsdale from Mrs. Gray on the ground that there is no evidence that she was acting on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Donnelly Garment Company, and that nothing said or done at that meeting could in any way bind the respondent or the intervener.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied."

(Thereupon the photographs above referred to were marked for identification "Intervenor's Exhibit No. 20-A to 20-KK, inclusive.

"Mr. Tyler: That is an affidavit for an election.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You are offering these?

"Mr. Tyler: Yes, sir.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It will not be received. You may incorporate it in the offers of proof if you want to.

"Mr. Ingraham: We have made an offer—

"Trial Examiner Batten: (interrupting) I say, this is refused, and if any of the parties want to incorporate the material in an offer of proof, you may do so.

"Mr. Tyler, Very well.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: It is refused now as an offer of proof."

187.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in admitting in evidence I. L. G. W. U. Exhibit No 19 over the objections of the petitioner and intervener, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 3057, 3058, 3059, 3060, 3061, 3062 (R. III. 734, 734a, 734b), to-wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I offer from the February 15th issue of Liberty magazine the only editorial in that magazine. I do not offer anything except the one-page editorial.

"Mr. Ingraham: We object. It is immaterial to any issue in this case. There is no showing that this is the editorial referred to.

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: We object. There is no showing this is the [fol. 201] editorial that was read.

* * * * *

"Mr. Patten: And that those threats were made in connection with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. The other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same or similar to that we have offered—that this witness has testified to and Your Honor has ordered stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is refused.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent excepts to the striking of the answer and to the refusal of the offer."

185.

"A. Miss Todd said as she called the names of the ones to be on the nominating committee, to stand up, and she called my name.

"Q. Were you surprised or not when that happened?

"Mr. Leary: Oh, I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Leary: And I move that the answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

[fol. 200] 186.

"(Mr. Tyler) I now offer in evidence the exhibit, which I will ask the stenographer to mark intervenor's exhibit No. 18, lettering it from A to whatever that results in.

"Q. (By Mr. Patten): Mr. Jeter, did you interpret that as a threat to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company?'

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

"Mr. Patten: The only thing lacking, apparently, under your definition of a threat, was for them to address him personally and say, 'You, Mr. Jeter, are going to be—'

"Trial Examiner Batten: (interrupting): Now, Mr. Patten, if a Donnelly employee was threatened personally, or any violence committed, I will receive that testimony. The fact that this man happened to be down there where something was going on and heard some remarks—I think there were some remarks like that in the paper, too, but I don't consider that matter an issue in this case. I think that is a matter between the employees. I don't see how the company can be held responsible for that situation.

"Mr. Patten: It shows the circumstances leading up to the formation of this union. If we can show the circumstances, that the union was inspired by the employees and did not rise out of the action of the company—In sofar as we show these circumstances which motivated them we negative the contention of the Board and the International.

[fol. 199] "Trial Examiner Batten: That might be possible, remotely. It may be stricken. I am not going to receive that type of testimony on that question.

"Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, the intervener offers to prove by this witness, and others, that threats were made in their presence in connection with physical acts of violence, which they personally witnessed, to the effect that those acts of violence were only circumstances to show what would be done to the Donnelly Garment Company employees when the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union [stated] its drive to organize the Donnelly plant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And the other witnesses' testimony would be substantially the same as this testimony?

"A. Threatened the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Q. Tell me what they said, and who it was.

"A. As this old lady got up and started in the building somebody said, 'Isn't that awful, the way they are treating her?' And Miss Tobin said, 'That's just a sample of what we are going to do down at Donnelly's.'

"Q. (By Mr. Patten): Did you report that at the plant?

"A. I talked it over with the employees.

"Q. Mr. Jeter, did you take any part in the meeting at which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized?

"A. I did.

[fol. 198] "Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Patten—

"Mr. Patten (interrupting): This is a point that has not been covered.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The point you have finished covering, I don't think that is material to this case.

"Mr. Patten: I understood you had said if we had cases involving actual threats to persons employed by the Donnelly Garment Company we could put that in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if you have any actual threats of violence committed as to any employee of the Donnelly Garment Company, that should be in here. I don't think this sort of testimony has anything to do with it.

"Mr. Patten: That was a personal threat. He was an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company, standing around and heard this remark.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I do not consider that as a personal threat to him. That is something that may have occurred a thousand times. If somebody personally threatened this man, or something of that sort, I think that testimony would be relevant.

"Mr. Langsdale: Is this answer to be stricken then, so that it is not subject to cross-examination or rebuttal?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I want to hear the attorneys first.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We are not interested in the reason for joining.

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I will ask her those questions but before doing so, I understand Your Honor excludes her answering the questions as to the effect the testimony of Velma Dowdy had on her?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes."

[fol. 197] 184

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in excluding evidence by the witness Lyle Jeter concerning violence to employees at other garment companies in Kansas City and threats that similar violence would be done at the Donnelly plant and as to the effect thereof upon the petitioner's employees and further assigns as error the comments of the trial examiner concerning the materiality of such evidence, and his action and rulings in sustaining objections thereto, and in striking answers given, and refusing intervener's offer of proof thereon, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2293, 2294, 2295, 2296, 2297 (R.II. 718z, 718aa, 718bb), to-wit:

"A. One morning I was standing up there and Miss Tobin went back and forth across the street—I was standing in front of the plants—and an elderly lady started in the building and five or six ladies jumped on her and beat her up —

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Tell me how you were threatened.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move that that part, the last part of his answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken. Tell me how you were threatened.

"A. I have to tell a little bit about this first part, if I may.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Did somebody threaten you personally?

[fol. 196] "Mr. Tyler: My theory is, it must be determined whether these employees are operating the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union out of either fear or favoritism of their employer, or whether they are doing it by their own wish. And, in order to show they are doing it by their own choice, they should be allowed to state the reasons for that choice, and whether those reasons are probably or improbably should throw some light on whether they are telling the truth.

"If this witness testifies she saves a substantial amount of money by belonging to this union over which she would be forced to pay if she belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union —

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): She wouldn't be forced to pay it unless she joined it, would she?

"Mr. Tyler: No, but it has been shown that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wanted to organize these people.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is not in this case. Wouldn't it be possible to have a union which was absolutely dominated by the employer, and they, not knowing it, would freely join it and pay their dues?

* * * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I submit the reason for the employees choosing this union is the most vital kind of evidence as to whether the company does dominate it or not.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material to the issues in this case. I think this lady has a personal right to join any union she wants to join, and if she prefers the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union she doesn't have to give the Labor Board or anybody else any reason for joining it. She doesn't have to show the Labor Board she has a reason. She may join it because the first name of it starts with a D and the last word with a U.

"Mr. Tyler: I agree, she doesn't have to give the Labor Board any reason, but I submit she has a right to give a reason in sustaining that it was her own free choice.

* * * * *

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit the witness Mrs. Weigand to answer questions propounded to her by counsel for intervener, and in sustaining objections of counsel for the I.L.G.W.U. thereto, and in ruling and announcing that such evidence is not material to the issues in this case, and in refusing to receive further testimony from said witness or other witnesses upon said matters, as set forth in the following [excerpts] from the transcript of the record, Pages 2939, 2940, 2941, 2942, 2943 (R.II. 718b, 718i, 718j, 718k), to-wit:

"Q. Did you ever hear Velma Dowdy testify in that case?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Q. Did her testimony have any effect upon your choice as to what union you wanted to belong to?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not tending to prove or disprove any issue in this case. In the Miller case this witness testified how much dues were paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and I suppose that is what you want her to testify to here.

"Mr. Tyler: That is what I am leading up to.

"Mr. Langsdale: And I say it is immaterial to this case, the difference between the dues paid by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the dues paid by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the purpose, I want to ask you, Mr. Tyler, how you think it is material. As I have previously stated, the employees can select their own union, one where the dues are nothing, or one where they are $10 a week. The Board has nothing to do with the union the employees select. As long as that union is not dominated or influenced by the company, the employees have a right to select any union they want to select, and pay any dues they want to pay.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Mr. Tyler, I don't think it is material what her reasons are. She has a perfect right, as an employee of this company, to select any union she wants.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit, one of the questions involved here is whether she does prefer it or whether the company is so dominating her that she has to belong to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean by that, you contemplate calling all of the employees to testify to this question?

"Mr. Tyler: I contemplate calling a large number.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I can tell you now, I do not intend to listen to them.

"Mr. Tyler: Well, on the present question—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): She may answer this. I just don't think you should call these employees and put them on the stand and say 'Now, is this the union you want?' And so on, and so forth. This is no place to determine what the employees want. An election is the place to determine that. The thing we are trying to determine in this hearing is, did this company have anything to do with forming this union, or sponsoring it? That is the question we are trying to determine.

"Mr. Tyler: We are not, also, endeavoring to determine whether the employer is now dominating it or dominating these employees?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes; but you couldn't determine it by having these girls get up on the stand and testify here, in front of the management. The place to determine that is by a secret election, where they can vote and no one know how they vote. If you have a large number [fol. 195] her of witnesses to offer on that, you may make an offer of proof, because I don't intend to sit here and let you call all of these girls up here to testify whether they want this union to represent them.

"Mr. Tyler: Does that ruling go into effect immediately preceding this witness?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is right."

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you intend, as Mr. Ingraham indicated to me that he did, calling a very large number of witnesses to testify to that point, I say you had better submit it in the form of an offer of proof. If you submit witnesses on other matters and you incidentally ask them that question, I have no objection, although I still don't consider it material, for the reasons I have previously stated in the record, but I wouldn't have any objection to it."

181.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you know at the Judge Miller hearing the position of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was that Judge Miller of the District Court had no right to pass upon whether or not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was legally formed, and for that reason defendants put in no testimony tending to show it was legally formed!

"Mr. Tyler: I object to the question as calling for a conclusion of law by this witness.

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: He may testify, if he knows.

[fol. 194] 182.

"Q. What are your reasons for preferring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union!

"A. Well, in the first place—

veyer of material and competent evidence and of a fair trial upon the charges contained in the Complaint, which rulings, action and comments are set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2837, 2838, 2839 (R. Il. 7046, 7047), to wit:

"Q. Do you know of any employee in the plant ever complaining that pressure was brought on him or her with regard to his or her affiliation with any labor union?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: That is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, on the three matters this witness has testified to, one being the last question you just asked, of his own free will, if you call a witness for some other purpose—I don't know as there is any objection to asking that question, although I don't consider it material to ask a witness that on the stand. From the respondent yesterday I asked for an offer of proof on that, so I don't want you to think that by passing the matter up—In other words, If you contemplate calling 1,200 [fol. 193] employees and asking them that question, it is an entirely different matter.

"On the meeting of April 27, which this witness testified to, unless you have witnesses that can add something to what has already been testified to, I don't want you to offer any further witnesses on it. You may make it an offer of proof.

"As to the March 27 to April 5 meeting, I permitted this witness to testify, because I thought perhaps he would be able to definitely place the date. Now, unless other witnesses have something to add to the testimony we have already received on this meeting, you may make an offer of proof as to that.

"Mr. Tyler: And as to the other matter, the free will of the witnesses, of course, Your Honor understand my position, that that is as much a fact as his indigestion or whether he has a broken leg and the best way to get that is to ask him about it.

* * *

I will offer a written offer of proof on that point, without endeavoring to go into it with individual witnesses.

"Mr. Langsdale: What about this answer be just made to the last question? Does that stand, so that it will be the subject of cross-examination?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I do not expect to have cross-examination on a matter which I have asked for an offer of proof on and stated that I don't consider it to be material. Therefore, I wouldn't consider the witness' answer, or the question, material.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move to strike the answer of the witness to the last question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

[fol. 192] * * *

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent does except to the striking of this answer."

180.

McConaughey, as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, Pages 2838, 2839, 2840, 2841, 2843 (R. II. 700, 701, 702, 703), to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the attitude of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company during March, 1937, in regard to the possible action of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against them.

"A. Everyone felt that—I talked to numbers of them on my job in the service department at that time—I talked to hundreds of people every day, and they were all expressing concern over the happenings that were [talking] place all over town, and many of them told me of having heard directly from people they knew there, or else overheard people who were in the line of strikers, that we were going to be the next on the list, which naturally caused an agitated state of mind throughout the plant and no one could pursue his job with a great deal of peace of mind, because he didn't know at what time he was going to be kept from coming into the building himself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I think I have indicated previously on this matter of violence and this situation in Kansas City that I didn't think it was material, and therefore asked the respondent to make an offer of proof.

"And I think yesterday I indicated, on this attitude of mind of the employees as a result of this situation, that I didn't consider it material.

"Therefore, I will ask that you prepare an offer of proof on it, because I don't think the respondent can be held responsible for a situation that is a matter of employees organization by unions and matters of that kind.

"I think I have stated before, I don't think it is material to the issue as to whether or not the respondent formed this union, dominates it, or sponsors it. Therefore, I would ask that you prepare an offer of proof on that question.

"Mr. Tyler: I wanted to make it clear I wasn't waiving my point heretofore made on that matter. Hereafter, then, ing, I am not going back; I don't think, now, on this record, and revise it from page 1 up to 3200, whatever it is, including all of the numerous exhibits. (pp. 3632, 3633) (R.VII, 2337).

"Mr. Langsdale: My point is this, Mr. Examiner; if there is going to be any contention that the records they bring in here are the originals, I think it would be well to send someone representing the National Labor Relations Board down there this afternoon to see where they get them, and how they get them and whether or not these are people who have been there any length of time.

[fol. 216] "Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think so, Mr. Langsdale, because I think the burden is entirely on Mr. Ingraham's shoulders. He signed this stipulation and agreed to this. It is in the record and has been used since—what is it now? —since July 1939.

"If it isn't correct, I think the burden is on you, Mr. Ingraham, to produce whatever is necessary to show that it is correct. You agreed to the stipulation.

"Mr. Ingraham: I agreed to the stipulation but—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, on that basis, as I said awhile ago, we are going to proceed on the assumption that this is correct.

"Mr. Langsdale: I say, if they are going to come in later with a lot of—"The Witness: I didn't say this was incorrect. I said it was incorrect in the way it is put together. Sometimes the heading is carried over and sometimes refers to the employees on the next page, when it shouldn't. (p. 3634) (R. VII, 2337-38).

"Mr. Ingraham: I didn't make up this exhibit. I produced the pay rolls and Mr. Leary took the pay rolls and checked them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Whether you prepared them or not, you were the attorney who signed the stipulation.

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. The Board had these pay rolls before them—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that the original pay rolls be marked and photostats be provided.

"Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, I object to that change from the record as it now exists, until we look at the record and see what actually happened. * * * (pp. 3613, 3614) (R. VII. 2324, 2325).

"Mr. Ingraham: I was asked to produce these pay roll records, and I did produce them, and the next thing that appears is this stipulation.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, you signed the stipulation, didn't you?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Then, it seems to me, if there is anything wrong with it, it is up to you folks to check it up—

"Mr. Ingraham: We will produce the pay roll records.

"Mr. Langsdale: I don't agree with that. I want to rely upon what they did produce in 1939.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may rely completely, Mr. Langsdale, upon what is in the record, unless it is changed. Unless what is now in the record is corrected, it will remain, and any counsel may use it. * * * (p. 3615) (R. VII. 2325-26).

"Mr. Ingraham: That's true. Miss Weyand, and the Board, as I recall, never challenged the division of the people in the pay roll, there never was any question raised.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we will proceed on the assumption it is correct, until otherwise shown. * * * (p. 3631, 3632) (R. VII. 2336).

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, we produced the record the last time, that the Labor Board asked for, and I brought them in, and I have a receipt in my pocket.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, just a minute. I just said we are going to proceed on the basis this record is correct. Now, if the parties who contend it is not, may or may not have an opportunity to present it in this hear-

In connection with the foregoing assignment of error, petitioner calls particular attention to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, to-wit:

"A. I don't find it.

"I would like to call the Examiner's attention to the fact that I was puzzled about this pay roll list yesterday, and last night I looked up to see why these queer headings would be on certain pages, and I saw the original pay roll that was put in evidence, and apparently when this was copied the pages were not followed. Now, when—

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Well, do you have the original pay roll? (p. 3013) (R. VII. 2324)

"Mr. Ingraham. We brought in the original pay rolls.

"Trial Examiner Batten: And wasn't this supposed to be a copy of it?

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I do not have any recollection of making a copy of those pay rolls. We brought the original pay rolls in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Whoever made them, they were marked as an exhibit and were received on the assumption that they were a copy of the pay roll. Now, are they a copy or aren't they, Mr. Ingraham?

"Mr. Ingraham: They are a copy, as far as the names and wages are concerned.

"I think this is what actually happened: I was asked by the Board's counsel to produce the pay rolls for their inspection, and I brought up the pay rolls, including the ones for the particular exhibits that you were inquiring about yesterday, and the Board took those pay rolls—

"The Witness: The pages were mixed.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Do you mean the Board inserted these titles?

[fol. 215] "Mr. Ingraham: No. But the pages got mixed up.

"The Witness: A title would be carried over to the next page, and the wrong page would be there.

[fol. 213] "Trial Examiner Batten. In other words, she was not a part of any sewing section or department of the plant or the business; is that right?

"The Witness. She was a part of all of them. She simply went from one place to another, and when there was something missing, she would find out what it was, and then she would go to the motions department, if it was to get more thread, or—"

204.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) with reference to Board's Exhibit No. 28 (being purported copies of certain pay rolls of petitioner, which copies were prepared by the Board), as shown by the transcript of the record, pages 3612 to 3635 inclusive, pages 3688, 3689 (R. VII. 2323-2338, inclusive, 2366-2367), for the reason that such record shows the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner toward petitioner and its counsel and his evident desire to make use of error or mistakes of the Board in copying exhibits furnished by petitioner to the Board and because such record shows the trial examiner's fixed purpose to take said erroneous record as true and not accept testimony of the witness, Mrs. Reed, that same was incorrect, although the error therein was plainly pointed out by both counsel for the petitioner and by said witness Mrs. Reed, and shows the evident purpose and intention of the trial examiner to enlarge the terms of the stipulation with reference to said Exhibit 28 in a manner unfavorable to petitioner, casting the entire burden upon petitioner's counsel for the correctness of said exhibit when the error was wholly that of the Board in copying same, and in representing to petitioner's counsel that same was a true copy and thus obtaining the signature of petitioner's counsel to said stipulation, by reason of all of which the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner against petitioner [fol. 214] and its evidence is shown and the non-judicial attitude of the trial examiner is shown by his refusal to permit correction by the witness of palpable errors in evidence caused by the Board and the correction of which would result in favorable inferences to petitioner and the non-correction of which might be used for the purpose of drawing unfavorable inferences against petitioner.

"Mr. Hogsett: I can't see the remotest connection between that. I really have no objection, but I can't see it is at all relevant. I object to it, to save time.

[fol. 212] "Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us: . . .

"Q. Could you indicate what factors in her experience impressed you with her qualifications for being an instructor?

"Mr. Reed: I think that is a ridiculous waste of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection, Senator?

"Mr. Reed: I object. It is a ridiculous waste of time."

Petitioner further assigns as error the failure of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) to instruct and require counsel for the Board to desist from such questioning upon utterly immaterial and irrelevant matters whereby the record is encumbered therewith and the true issues obscured and the trial examiner's findings and conclusions influenced by immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant evidence, all to petitioner's prejudice.

203.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, page 3806 (R. VII. 2319, 2320), as showing the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner towards petitioner and its witnesses and his endeavor to get the witness to make a statement contrary to the facts:

"Q. Turning now to April 1937, was Rose Todd assigned to any department of the plant?

"A. I testified about three times that she went through the plant supplying notions of thread, or whatever supplies might be missing to complete cuts.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Mrs. Reed, the question is, was she assigned to any department? Was she assigned to any definite department or section in April of 1937?

"The Witness. No, her job was just to go through the plant from one section to another.

[fol. 211] "Miss Weyand. I do not intend to pursue this line of questioning further.

"Mr. Hogsett: She always says that, and then—

"Trial Examiner Batten: In view of Miss Weyand's statement that she does not intend to pursue it any further—

"Mr. Hogsett. —there is nothing you can do about it.

"Trial Examiner Batten. —that will dispose of the matter.

"I didn't assume, Miss Weyand, that when you said you didn't intend to pursue that further, you were precluded from asking any further questions it, in your opinion, it was necessary."

Petitioner further assigns as error the action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in permitting counsel for the Board to examine and cross-examine witnesses at great length upon immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant matters, and when objection is made, permitting said testimony to stand as a result of counsel's statement that she does not intend to pursue the line of questioning further, or the statement that the questions asked are preliminary, or the statements that the questions are asked for the purpose of testing the witness' credibility, as a result of which the record is filled with incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence which has improperly influenced the trial examiner's findings and conclusions adverse to petitioner.

202.

"Q. Do your employees have credits for the purpose of purchasing dresses in your retail store, is that a cash transaction?

I. L. G. W. U. after the Trial Examiner had stricken said testimony, to further examine the witness with reference [fol. 210] thereto by reading into the record portions of said stricken testimony; and assigns as error each and all the rulings of the Trial Examiner with reference to said matter, all of which rulings and action of the Trial Examiner and said actions of counsel for the Board and for the I. L. G. W. U. were highly prejudicial to petitioner and show the Trial Examiner's bias against petitioner and his desire to acquit counsel for the Board of said improper examination, by reason of all of which petitioner has been denied a fair and impartial trial.

The matters herein referred to appear in the record at pages 3326 to 3335, 3350 to 3386, 3748 to 3750, 3847 to 3859, 3873 to 3881, 3910 to 3920, 3932 to 3940, and 3947 to 3952, inclusive. (R. VII. 2269-2275, 2283-2307, 2400-2402, 2441-2449, 2454-2460, 2477-2484, 2491-2497, 2497-2501, inclusive).

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Do you know what was the largest number of girls you ever employed in St. Joseph at one time?

"A. I do not.

"Q. Do you have any idea?

"A. Not any very definite idea.

"Q. Could you give us an approximation?

"A I really couldn't.

"Mr. Hogsett. If it please the Examiner, I object as wholly pointless. We have again run into a line of questions that haven't any bearing on this case at all. It might be of interest if someone were writing a history of the Donnelly Garment Company, but it hasn't anything to do with whether this company dominated, sponsored, or coerced the formation of the employees' union, which is the issue here to try. It is far afield.

has been asked what were his duties at a certain time, and what they were at another time. Now it is asked, to state the difference.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the witness may state what the difference is, in her opinion.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I object to this interminable repetition.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us what she considers to be the difference."

200.

[fol. 209] Petitioner assigns as error the action of counsel for the National Labor Relations Board in introducing in evidence Board's Exhibit 32-E as a part of Board's Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D, and cross-examining the witness Mrs. Reed with reference to said Exhibit 32-E as being a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D, and as being filed in the Wages and Hours Division on October 31, 1940 as a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D in the files of the Wages and Hours Division, when as a matter of fact said Exhibit 32-E had not been prepared on said date and was not filed in said Wages and Hours Division on October 31, 1940 and was never a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D in the Wages and Hours Division, but on the contrary the data in said Exhibit 32-E was assembled and related to a much later date and was not filed in the Wages and Hours Division until after December 20, 1940, and was never filed therein as a part of said Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D; and petitioner assigns as error the attempt of counsel for the Board by the use of said official document Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D having the apparent authenticity of a document signed by the petitioner's Vice President and duly filed in the Wages and Hours Division and bearing its date-stamp as having been received therein on October 31, 1940, and by attaching said Exhibit 32-E thereto as a part thereof, to mislead, confuse and entrap the witness Mrs. Reed and thereby obtain testimony that the matter set forth in said Exhibit 32-E existed on and before said date of October 31, 1940; and assigns as error the examination by the Trial Examiner of said witness Mrs. Reed with reference thereto and the Trial Examiner's action in permitting counsel for the [fol. 208] "Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Mrs. Reed, if you understood the question, that you answer the questions, and then I think we will get along.

"A. Well, I will make a note of something then, when I get back.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think when Miss Weyand gets through, if your counsel wants to clarify these points, he can ask you questions regarding them.

"I told you yesterday, when you get through with your testimony, if you want to make a statement, you may do do, the witness may do so.

"Mr. Hogsett: Well, it is just a matter of her making a note now.

"Mr. Reed: I submit if the witness wants, at this time, to make a statement to clarify any answer she has made, she has a right to do it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: There is a question pending and I would like to clear that up first."

199.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) contained in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 3476 and 3485 (R. VII. 2240, 2245), to wit:

"Q. What was Ted Scales's position in January of 1935?

"Mr. Reed: That has been gone into, if Your Honor, please, these identical questions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am sure I couldn't say, Senator. Will you answer the question, Mrs. Reed? • • •

"Q. Prior to 1942, what difference was there between Jack McConaughey's duties and his present duties?

"A. Well, for—

"Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) I submit that question has been answered and the details given in each instance. It

"Mr. Hogsett: (Interrupting) It seems to me that is carrying this question of authority to an absurdity. Now, a truck driver might be driving a truck, and another assistant on the truck might say, 'You have got a flat tire, you'd better stop.' Would anybody say the assistant had authority to speak for the company, because he ordered the truck to stop? In other words, we reach a point beyond all reason.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I think the important point is the statement which Miss Weyand made yesterday, I believe, along with other matters, what was actually done in this plant.

"Mr. Hogsett: I agree.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, it seems to me the way to show what was done would be in the daily and ordinary operation of this plant. Now, you might call a person a foreman, when he is not a foreman, and you might call him a superintendent when he is not a superintendent; I think that is, as far as I am concerned, and I think as far as the Board is concerned, with what actually took place in this plant at these various times.

"Now, it seems to me some of these questions Miss Weyand has asked are hypothetical, and it seems there is no showing here that many of these things, which have been asked Mrs. Reed and answered, have ever occurred.

"Mr. Hogsett: That is exactly the point.

"Trial Examiner Batten: But I will say again, I am not going to attempt to tell any of the attorneys how to ask their questions. Thus far, with Mrs. Reed, I feel I have been very lenient with all of counsel, and I intend to pursue that policy until we are through with this witness, because she is the president of the company, and unfortunately was unable to testify in the prior hearing.

"Now, on that basis, Miss Weyand, you may proceed. Now, what was the question?

"A. Mr. Batten, may I try to throw a little light on this thing we are doing?

"Miss Weyand: No, the question was—

"A. (Interrupting) Well, I don't know what you mean.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Even if that did not occur, would the operator be free to—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I don't understand it then, myself. I am afraid I'd better quit.

"Mr. Hogsett: May I make a general observation?

We have sat here for hours, listening to hypothetical questions that are not predicated on any facts. In other words, Miss Weyand is working out questions with geometrical precision, and has spun out of that geometrical precision a psychological vacuum, and has predicated her questions on that theory of hypothetical assumptions; and I submit it doesn't get us any place. That technicality of interrogation, in character, is objectionable, and not founded upon anything that is known to exist, I submit.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't believe I will sustain your objection. As I previously stated, Mrs. Reed is the president of the company, and thus far I have permitted, I think, somewhat more latitude with Mrs. Reed than I perhaps would have with other witnesses, in view of the fact she is the president of the company. I will permit Miss Weyand to proceed but I want to be sure that the witness understands the question.

"So, Miss Weyand, will you proceed, please?"

198.

[fol. 207] Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same), appearing in the record at pages 3454, 3455 and 3456 (R. VII. 2228, 2229), as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) So Mrs. Tyburst has the authority to speak for the company in saying the notch should be put in?

"A. When you talk about authority—196.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) You are referring to circulars be distributed to your customers?

"A. He had a circular made of the letter, copy of the letter be sent to me, he had that made and distributed to my employees, shortly after the letter come to me; I don't remember what date. I also know that he tried to put it in the newspaper and they wouldn't put it in.

"Mr. Langsdale: I ask that that be stricken out as hearsay.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken."

[fol. 206] 197.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Then your answer would be she would decide for herself whether she wanted to follow the method given her by Mrs. Tyburst, or given to her by someone else, or some other method that she wanted to follow, without regard to the fact that she had other instructions?

"A. I don't know what you are getting at.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think what you are trying to get at, when that situation existed in the plant that you just described, that is, Mr. Baty was responsible for the entire production, the sewing section, and the instructions suggested one method and Mrs. Tyburst should come through the section and suggest another, the operator then decided for herself which method she would use, is that correct?

and, also, renew our motion to dismiss each and all of the paragraphs in the complaint, which is Board's Exhibit No. 1-GGGG.

. . . . .

"Mr. Tyler: Intervener renews its motion to dismiss as heretofore filed."

[fol. 204] 194.

Petitioner assigns as error the action of the trial examiner and of counsel for the Board and I. L. G. W. U. with respect to the introduction of an examination of Mrs. Reed with reference to Board's Exhibit 32-A-B-C-D-E and Board's Exhibits 33 and 34 and 35, and the action of the Board in adopting and affirming all the rulings and findings of the trial examiner based thereon, as constituting prejudicial error against petitioner and as showing the bias and prejudice of the Board and its counsel and of the trial examiner against petitioner, said matters appearing in the record at pages 3326-33, 3350-86, 3748-3750, 3817-39, 3873-81, 3910-20, 3932-40, 3947-52, (R. VII, 2269-2275, 2283-2307, 2400-2402, 2411-2443, 2454-2460, 2477-2484, 2491-2497, and 2497-2501, all inclusive).

[fol. 205] 195.

Petitioner assigns as error each and all the rulings and action of the trial examiner James C. Batten made or taken during the second or further hearing of this matter over the objections or exceptions of petitioner or which are adverse to petitioner (as to which adverse rulings petitioner was allowed an automatic exception) and the Board's action in affirming said rulings and actions of the trial examiner, for each and all the reasons and grounds stated in the record and for the further reason that the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner toward petitioner and its evidence permeated said rulings and because by virtue of said rulings and each of same the record is filled with incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence upon which the trial examiner has based his findings, conclusions and recommendations and by virtue of all of which petitioner has been denied a fair trial.

"Mr. Tyler: I object that she is not in a position to testify to what the duties were of the instructors at the Donnelly Garment Company plant.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer. Objection overruled."

[fol. 203] 192.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Was there any change, as far as you observed, in the authority of the instructors from the time you went to work there in 1933 until you left on March 8, 1937?

"A. No, sir.

"Mr. Tyler: I object that this witness cannot tell by observation whether there was any change in the authority of the instructors.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume she is answering [us] to what she knows."

193.

Petitioner assigns as error the action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in failing and refusing to sustain petitioner's motion to dismiss the entire complaint and also its motion to dismiss each and all of the paragraphs of the complaint which motions were renewed at the close of the case, and also assigns to the action of the trial examiner in failing and refusing to sustain intervenor's motion to dismiss the complaint which motion was renewed at the close of the case, which motions appear in the transcript of the record, at Pages 3102, 3103 (R. III. 734n), as follows, to-wit:

"Mr. Stoltze: Mr. Examiner, we desire to renew our motion to dismiss, which I think was marked Board's exhibit No. 1-FFFF, and related to the whole complaint;

In connection with this assignment of error, petitioner calls attention to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record and assigns as error each and all of said rulings and comments of the Trial Examiner, to-wit:

[fol. 229] "Trial Examiner Batten: I say to you, is this an introductory question opening up the question of violence through this witness?

"Mr. Ingraham. We made an offer of proof by the employees on the facts involved in the so-called strikes at 26th and Grand, and I was briefly going to inquire of Miss Tobin who had charge of the strikes up there and if it was the I. L. G. W. U. and what went on." (pp. 4031-32) (R. VIII. 2541)

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham. I think that we have a right to show by this witness what the facts were up there, so that—

"Trial Examiner Batten. As to violence, yes.

"Mr. Ingraham. —so that there will not be any question but what this violence did occur.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Then, I will say I am going to rule that it is immaterial, to this extent: I am now going to direct the order of proof to this extent, I am going to direct that we first receive the testimony of the 1,200 witnesses, if they testify to material evidence that was ordered by the court, in accordance with the order of the court remanding the case.

* * * * *

"I am going to direct that order of proof at this time. * * * Now, I am going to spend the rest of the afternoon listening to any argument which counsel have on my ruling that we will proceed with the 1,200 witnesses, as the court stated that testimony should be received. * * * (pp. 4032-33) (R. VIII. 2541-42)

"Mr. Ingraham. Before Miss Tobin is excused, and before making any offer of proof, I have just one other question.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Well, she has not answered the last one, has she?

"Q. (By Mr. Langedale) While you were reading articles in the newspapers about the I. L. G. W. U., let me ask you if you read this article in the magazine 'Life', August 1st, 1938."

"Mr. Ingraham: Yes. We object to this kind of an inquiry. This purports to be an article concerning the recreational activities of the I. L. G. W. U. I don't know what the purpose of it would be in this hearing.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't either. I think the question to Mrs. Reed is, did she read this article or see it. Now, I will permit her to answer that question."

[fol. 228] 219.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in directing the order of proof herein by requiring petitioner to proceed first with employee witnesses and by confining their testimony strictly to the offers of proof by "the 1200 employees", and in refusing to receive testimony under other offers of proof made by petitioner, and in denying to petitioner the right to put on its proof in the order it desires (when there was no reason such as the convenience of a witness involved which might call for the Trial Examiner's discretion in receiving particular evidence first), and in refusing to permit witnesses, while on the stand, to testify to matters which the Trial Examiner did not consider came within his strict construction of said "employee" offers of proof, and in refusing to receive pertinent and material testimony from said witnesses and other witnesses for petitioner bearing on the question "how and why" the DGWU was formed and on whether there was any coercion, interference or support on the part of petitioner in connection with the formation of said union.

These rulings and action and petitioner's objections and exceptions thereto made at the time appear in the transcript of the record at pages 4049 to 4096 inclusive (R. VIII 2540-2564, incl.)

[fol. 227] "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you make any order at all with reference to the use of the i. d. m. system by the Donnelly Garment Workers' representatives?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as immaterial. The evidence so far, if it shows anything about this, is that this information, if it ever was received, came during the trial of these cases. If so, it is long subsequent to the charge that is filed here. If after this case was started or after this case was tried or while it was being tried the witness heard something in the trial, it is immaterial whether she went to investigate to find out whether it was going on or not.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am past that. I am asking her now if she made any order with reference to the use of the i. d. m. system by the Donnelly Garment Workers' representatives.

"Mr. Reed: If it was an order, it was the same thing.

"Trial Examiner Batten: At what time?

"Mr. Langsdale: At any time after she learned it was charged that they were using the i. d. m. system to pass information among the employees connected with that union.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Mrs. Reed, you have stated you did not make any investigation of it. Did you take any action with respect to it?

"A. I never made an order—

"Mr. Reed: I make the same objection to the Examiner's question that I made to Mr. Langsdale's.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Did you take any action on that?"

218.

women who was on the job, but he could tell us how much work we had of a certain type that this woman could do. We didn't lay off any double-stitchers if we had—

"Q. Mrs. Reed, I think you have explained that several times.

"A. But it comes back all of the time, Mr. Batten, and it would seem that Dewey had control of managing the plant.

"Q. No, we are not interested in managing the plant. We are interested in what these people did.

"A. I am trying to explain it to you.

"Q. Well, Mrs. Reed, you have already explained it several times. In fact, I think it was explained to Mr. Ingraham on direct examination and to Miss Wyland on cross-examination.

"A. Well, Mr. Langsdale seems to want to know about it again.

"Mr. Langsdale: I just don't want you to be confused about it, Mrs. Reed.

"The Witness: I am not confused about Dewey. You are the one that is confused about Dewey.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Didn't Mrs. Reeves testify: 'Nobody is let out of the Donnelly Garment Company unless four people pass on it.' Would you say that is true?

"A. That was my general knowledge.

"Q. Would you say this is true:

'Then that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison and Mr. Atchison discusses them very thoroughly and he sees what they have made and he knows the reasons about what happened each week because he analyzes each week our pay roll cards with the instructor and Mrs. Wheery.'?

"A. That wasn't my testimony, was it, Mr. Langsdale?

"Q. I asked you if that was true. That was Mrs. Reeve's testimony."

217.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3968-69), to-wit:

Petitioner assigns as error the action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in repeatedly interposing in the examining of witnesses, an illustration of which appears in the excerpts from the transcript of the record hereinafter quoted from pages 3888-3889, and petitioner further assigns as error the said testimony so elicited by the Trial Examiner for the reason that same relates to a period prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, and for further reason that said evidence contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner. As a part of this assignment of error petitioner calls attention to the following excerpts from the testimony (pp. 3888-3890), (R. VII. 2464, 2465), to-wit:

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Well, I thought this morning, in that old N. R. A. record—wasn't be one of the four that were mentioned as passing upon the people?

"A. I am saying they would get his opinion and—The reason they would get his opinion, Mr. Batten, was to see how much—if we had a lot of double-stitching to do, he would be the one to know it and—

"Q. Irrespective of what they got this opinion on, be was one of the four, was he not, Mrs. Reed?

"A. But his opinion was always on the work.

"Q. Whatever his opinion was on, he was one of the four mentioned by Mrs. Reeves, wasn't he, when she said they always got the opinion of these four people before they did anything?

"A. That is right. But I am trying to say, Mr. Batten, the reason his opinion would be worth something was because of his knowledge of how much of a specific kind of work we had to get through and how many machines we had to do it with, and from that point of view.

"Q. Well, of course, I didn't ask you why he is there.

"A. I think you ought to let me explain.

"Q. Mrs. Reed, I have no objection to your explaining. My only question to you was, was he one of the four mentioned this morning?

[fol. 226] "A. But it seems to me you ought to let me explain. It wasn't that he had personal control over the

"A. (Continuing)—and take two or three hours to do it, and—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Reed, the question is, would you have approved this young lady's—I have forgotten her name—spending a day getting a petition signed in the plant?"

215.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3863-64) (R. VII. 2450-51), to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Lampsdale) I asked you if you have any information that Lena Tyburst was not in the position that she is described as here in the handwriting of Lee Baty on June 1, 1937?

"A. Mr. Lampsdale, I have said over and over and over again here that while Mrs. Reeves and Mr. Baty were managing the factory I had no knowledge of my own of the details of how they did it and what they called the people who are in the plant.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter).

"Mr. Reed: That is calling for hearsay evidence. Whether you have heard something about it, that doesn't make evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Reed?

"The Witness: I have said over and over and over again—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mrs. Reed. Do you understand the question?

"The Witness: Will you read the question again?

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is this: Do you have any information that Lena Tyburst was not assistant factory manager on this date as described on this document by Mr. Baty?"

"Mr. Reed: All right.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is, with respect to the 1935 situation.

"Mr. Reed: I just think it is encumbering the record.

214.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, pages 3825-26 (R. VII. 2437), to wit:

"Q. Would you have approved of her going around and getting these petitions signed and taking a whole day?

"Mr. Reed: We object to that. That is purely a hypothetical question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may tell us whether she would have approved.

"Mr. Reed: Approved something that never took place?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Whether she would have approved of Mrs. Shartzer's going around and spending a day getting a petition signed.

"Mr. Reed: There is no evidence that she took a day.

"Mr. Langsdale: I am going to assume it would have taken a day to get 1,000 names signed.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) On that assumption, would you have approved of that?

[fol. 224] "Mr. Reed. How can she talk on an assumption made for the first time by Mr. Langsdale in this courtroom? I object to the question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled. You may proceed.

"A. I know we had week workers that would go out and have their hair done and—

"Mr. Langsdale: You said that before

"Mr. Reed: I insist, if your Honor please, this witness ought to be asked direct questions, and not have things read.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is not whether Mrs. Reeves' testimony is true, but was that the true situation in the plant at the time, if this witness knows.

"Mr. Reed: I object to that method of examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

"Mr. Reed: As incompetent, and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know if that was the method?"

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) throughout the hearing in permitting testimony and evidence to be introduced concerning matters which occurred prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, for the reason that said evidence is immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent, and for the further reason that same has contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner, and in connection with this assignment of error petitioner calls attention to the testimony at pages 3760-3784 (R. VII. 2407-2417, incl.), and to the ruling of the Trial Examiner concerning same as shown in the following excerpt from pages 3775-76 (R. VII. 2412), to wit:

[fol. 223] "Q. And Mrs. Reeves was your production manager at that time, was she not?

"A. Yes.

"Q. And reading further from the same testimony—

"Mr. Reed: (interrupting) Just for the record, we object to the testimony with reference to what happened in 1935 and prior thereto, as entirely remote. It does not throw any light, it does not furnish a background for this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may have a continuing objection to each question.

Mrs. Reed. I do not intend, Senator, as I previously stated, to attempt to limit the matter at this time. When Mrs. Reed is through, I am more than convinced we have to work out some sort of a limitation on this thing.

"Mr. Reed: This is something we didn't go into at all. It raises the question, if it raises anything, whether or not these girls were properly discharged.

"Miss Weyand: The company did go into the resignation of various persons, Jack McConaughey and Lyle Peter, that happened in 1939, 1940, and 1941.

"Mr. Reed: If the company went into the question of Jack McConaughey and somebody else who resigned from the union, that has nothing to do with the discharge of these two girls. There is no connection between them.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question please.

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter as follows:

"'Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?')

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. Do you know whether you received a written notice, Mrs. Reed?"

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth from the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (p. 3765), (R. VII. 2410, 2411), to wit:

"Mr. Langsdale: I would like to ask one more question.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Then, that group of people are taken up with Mr. Atchison, and Mr. Atchison discusses with them very thoroughly, he sees what they have made and he knows the reason that happened, he has listed each week on pay roll cards with the instructor, and Mrs. Sheery, was that true?

action and comments set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3695-96 and pp. 3703-04), R. VII. 2371, 2375-6), to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question was, Mrs. Reed, did you make any investigation of it yourself after Mr. Baty reported the incident to you?

"A. After the incident was reported to me I made no further investigation.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did you give any directions that the girls should be contacted and assured protection to remain in the plant and work?

"A. Mr. Baty was in charge of the plant, and I didn't feel that it was necessary for me to go into that incident at all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Mrs. Reed, did you? Did you do anything about it?

"The Witness: But I say I didn't feel any reason for it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let's assume that you felt that way, did you do anything about it?

The Witness: I did not."

[fol. 221] 211.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as shown from the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 3743-44), (R. VII. 2398, 2399), to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union give the company a written notice that it desired the company to discharge these two girls?

"A. That is my remembrance.

"Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. We object to that. That is opening up exactly the question the Commissioner has ruled out.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't rule it out, Senator.

"Mr. Reed: If you didn't rule it out—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I have been trying to arrive at some sort of a limitation. I said we will proceed with

"At the time I wasn't thinking how they were dressed, so I don't remember whether they were wearing uniforms or not.

"Q. I would suggest that you give some thought to these questions, because after all that is the reason you are here, to answer these questions.

"A. I have been on the stand about five hours, and I am tired.

"Q. Irrespective of that, I would suggest that you give thought to these questions, and take your time.

"A. All right. Thank you.

"Q. And don't proceed to make an answer, and then make the statement later that you don't remember. I would think about the question first.

"A. Well, thank you very much.

209.

[fol. 220] "Q. (By Miss Weyand) Is the door to your office one that leads into an outer reception office, or is it directly connected with the main part of the building?

"Mr. Reed: Now, Mr. Examiner, I have to object. This is a mere consumption of time. What difference does it make where her office door leads, or how many minutes it is open during a period six or seven years? I can't see the reason for questions of this character.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, as I have indicated before, I am not going to attempt to limit the examination at this point in any way. Whether it is material or not, I presume will appear. I don't suppose I can ask any of counsel on preliminary or introductory question just the purpose.

"I will permit you to proceed, Miss Weyand."

210.

Petitioner assigns as error the repeated interposition of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in the examination of witnesses and his rulings, 207.

Petitioner assigns as error the refusal of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) to exclude testimony as to whether petitioner ever issued instructions to the instructors directing them to maintain a neutral attitude in labor matters, and the Trial Examiner's interposing and asking questions to elicit said testimony over the objection of the petitioner as same appears at page 3678 of the transcript of the record (R. VII. 2363), for the reason that said testimony is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to any issue in this case and said action of the Trial Examiner shows bis prejudice against petitioner and his prejudgment of the charges against petitioner, and because said incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner herein.

208.

Petitioner assigns as error the comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth on pages 3680, 3681 of the transcript of the record (R. VII. 2364, 2365), which shows the prejudice of the Trial [fol. 213] Examiner against petitioner and its witnesses. The following are excerpts from said comments:

"Q. Were the employees present there at the meeting wearing uniforms?

"A. A number of them were. I don't remember specifically how they were dressed. My plant employees do wear white uniforms.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten:) You thought some of them were wearing uniforms?

"A. If this hadn't come to my attention, I don't think I would have thought about it. I didn't think about it.

"Q. Is that your recollection?

"A. I don't remember.

"Q. Then, Mrs. Reed, when you are asked these questions and you don't remember, say you don't remember.

"A. The first thing I was thinking of, naturally, Mr. Batten, my plant employees do wear white uniforms, and, it being time to go home in the evening, some of them may have changed or they may not.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) appearing at pages 3636 to 3638 inclusive (R. VII. 2351, 2352), and to the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"A. I don't call to mind in a definite way a pin. I have heard discussions of a Loyalty pin, or a pin with the name Loyalty on it, but I don't remember that it was ever brought to my particular attention.

"Q. Was such a pin sold to employees around the plant?

"A. Not to my knowledge.

"Mr. Hogsett: If the Examiner please, I object to this line of questioning as being wholly immaterial, and not having the remotest infinitesimal value, whether proving the Donnelly Garment Company dominated a garment union. It has not, even a faint tendency to prove that. We are all sitting here, wasting the time of the government, and every individual in this room, to no purpose at all, listening to such examination.

"I know that Your Honor, and I think I might say that it is commendable—I know that you have been liberal in the examination in chief and in cross of this witness, for the reason, I think, that was commendable and a proper thing to do, but there must be a limit. • • •

[fol. 218] "Trial Examiner Batten: • • • Well, I am going to pursue the same policy I have consistently followed, unless I feel that it is entirely beyond any matter which we covered in the original hearing, and there was a great deal of testimony in the first hearing concerning the Donnelly Loyalty League. I will permit you to continue, Miss Weyand."

Petitioner further assigns as error said ruling (and the Board's action in affirming same) for the reason that the failure of the Trial Examiner to exclude said immaterial and irrelevant evidence encumbers the record therewith and obscures the real issues involved and has contributed to the erroneous findings of the Trial Examiner against petitioner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Therefore, you must assume the responsibility of entering into the stipulation.

"The Witness: We didn't know the Board would do a thing like that until this morning.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If you find it is incorrect, check it up and— The burden is on you. (p. 3635) (R. VII. 2338). • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, I said we will proceed on the assumption that it is correct. It is in the record, and it was stipulated, and unless some action is taken by one of the parties to make a motion or take some step to correct it, we will proceed on the assumption that the record is correct. (p. 3688) (R. VII. 2366). • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to initiate any action to change the record. The record stands. It has gone through the hearing, it has gone through the Board, and it has gone through the Court, and as far as I am concerned, I will accept the record as it is." (p. 3689) (R. VII. 2367).

[fol. 217] 205.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record, page 3662 (R. VII. 2343), for the reason, among others, that same shows the purpose of the Trial Examiner to have elicited immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent evidence and then to base findings against petitioner thereon:

"Q. Did you ever hear of a Twilight Club, prior to reading that today?

"A. I did not.

"Mr. Hogsett: What possible difference would it make if she did or did not? I object; it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I overrule the objection; the answer is necessary."

"Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment, Mrs. Cooper, I don't believe at this point of the proceeding I would exclude hearsay, hardly.

"Mr. Reed: Well, we object to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I'll overrule the objection."

[fol. 239] 224.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) appearing on pages 1256-57 as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Would it have made any difference in your mental attitude toward the ILGWU had you believed Mr. Reed was telling the truth when he said that Mr. Dubinsky was a Communist and a Bolshevist?

"Mr. Reed: That is a purely hypothetical question, and the hypothesis is a mere assumption, 'Would it make any difference to you if something else had happened?'

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Cooper?

"A. I think he wants to know if I had heard that he was a Communist, if it made any difference in my opinion of the union.

"Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, if you had believed Senator Reed's statement, would it make any difference?

"A. I was going mostly by their actions here in the city.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Now, Mrs. Cooper, that isn't the question.

"Mr. Langsdale. Will you read the question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please read the question?

are not restricted to offers of proof on cross-examination. I think, generally speaking, you are, assuming—

"Miss Weyand: I do not mean—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.—assuming I am able to confine the direct examination to the offers of proof, which I will attempt to do.

"Now, as to your second point, I don't know your purpose, but I think I permitted some questions of this witness as to supervisory employees, instructors, and so forth, and following that examination on direct, I think you are within the direct examination, so you may proceed.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, we object to this line of questioning as outside the scope of the ruling of the court.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection".

223.

"Q. Did you ever hear that either Sylvia Hall or Fern Sigler left their work as a result of certain demonstrations?

"A. I heard something about it.

"Q. What did you hear?

"Mr. Ingraham: Would you read the question, please?

"Miss Weyand: Will you read the last question, please.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please read the last question?

(Last question was read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Reed: The answer was what?

(Last answer was read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Reed: We object to that as calling for pure hearsay evidence.

associates, will you now give us a secret election? And I challenge the Board to that.

"Miss Weyand: I would like to state the Board's position with reference to a secret election for the record.

"The Board's position has consistently been, and was upheld by the Courts in this regard, that a secret election cannot be fairly conducted if an employer's unfair labor practices have not been corrected or dissipated.

"Mr. Reed: Well, you assume there are unfair labor practices, therefore you assume you can't have an election; therefor you get an election if the Board wants it and not as a matter of right, and the Board's position is, 'We have prejudged you, you are guilty of unfair labor practices, and therefore we won't give you a chance to have an election or give the employees a chance to have an election to determine what their wishes are.'

"That is the fine logic we have in this case, and it runs throughout it."

222.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 4136-37 (and the Board's action in affirming, same) as shown from the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

"Q. Were you given any instructions, oral or written, or any rules of conduct, which stated what your duties as an operator were between January 1936 and July 1937?

"Mr. Ingraham: I would like to ask Miss Weyand under what offers of proof this line of questioning comes.

"Miss Weyand: I do not believe that on cross-examination I am restricted to any offers of proof. I think as I develop my questioning the point at which I am aiming will be clear. I think it is proper cross, under the questions that were allowed over my objections to be put to this witness, and, therefore, even though I objected to the questions as to what the instructors' duties were, I can certainly cross-examine as to that matter.

[fol. 238] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Miss Weyand, I don't believe I could agree with you that you and assigns as error the ruling of the Trial Examiner in refusing to permit petitioner to recall said witness Wave Tobin to the stand for such purpose or for any purpose as shown by the Record at pages 4088-92 (R. VIII. 2560-1-2); and in refusing to permit petitioner to examine the witness Wave Tobin with reference to the matters set forth in section B of petitioner's answer, and with reference to the matters contained in or referred to in petitioner's offer of proof (Board's exhibit 1-SSSSS) as shown by the Record at pages 4090-4092 (R. VIII. 2561-62); and petitioner assigns as error the action of the Board in adopting and affirming all the foregoing rulings and actions.

4056-4060) (R. VIII. 2544-47) to permit the witness Wave Tobin to answer the question asked by petitioner at page 4054 of the record (R. VIII. 2543), to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Miss Tobin, who is the chairlady of the Marguerite Keyes shop at the present time?"

In connection with this assignment of error petitioner calls attention to and makes a part hereof all the quotations from the Record set forth in petitioner's preceding assignment No. 219.

This assignment of error is made and based upon all the reasons and grounds set forth or referred to in said foregoing assignment No. 219, and upon the further ground that said ruling and action have denied to petitioner a fair trial therein and deprived it of due process of law under the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

221.

Petitioner assigns as error the refusal of the Trial Examiner and the Board to grant a secret election among the employees to determine their choice of a bargaining agency as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 4137-38 (R. VIII. 2591, 2592), as will appear from the following excerpts therefrom, to wit:

[fol. 237] "Mr. Reed: I just want to ask—I tried to ask it before Mr. Tyler reached the floor—now, if you will give us a secret election, since you say these people are afraid to testify in the presence of their employers or their [fol. 235] This assignment of error is made for all the reasons and grounds given at pages 4049-4096 and 4315-16 of the record (R. VIII. 2540-2564 and 2639-2641); and for the further reasons that said rulings were and are arbitrary and unnecessary to orderly procedure and constitute an abuse of any discretion vested in the Trial Examiner with reference thereto are contrary to law, and deprived petitioner of a fair trial and of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing in the Transcript of the Record at pp. 4049-4073 inclusive (R. VIII. 2540-2555 incl.), and the statements and comments of the counsel for the Board and NLGWU therein appearing and the refusal of the Trial Examiner to permit counsel for petitioner to continue with the examination of Wave Tobin, the witness then on the stand, and his refusal to permit petitioner to proceed with the offering of its evidence in the order desired by petitioner and the refusal of the Trial Examiner to permit said witness to answer the question appearing at the bottom of page 4048 and top of page 4049 (R. VIII. 2540), as follows:

"Q. Now, Miss Tobin, there has been reference in this case to strikes at 26th and Grand, in the spring of 1937. Were you in charge of the strikers in the Missouri Garment Company plants?"

and in refusing to permit petitioner to proceed to elicit testimony from said witness concerning said matters and other pertinent matters therein," and assigns as error the Trial Examiner's requirement that petitioner submit an offer of proof as to what petitioner would prove by said witness' testimony for each and all the reasons stated by counsel for petitioner at pages 4051-52 and 4056-4060 of the Record (R. VIII. 2541-2542, 2544-2547, incl.), and petitioner further assigns as error the refusal of the trial [fol. 236] examiner (as shown by the Record at pages

"Mr. Reed: I want to call attention to this situation which has arisen:

"We are contending that Wave Tobin continue on the witness stand and that her testimony should be heard before other testimony is called for. That is the situation.

"Now, the Examiner rules that he will not rule at this time and directs us to go forward with other witnesses; he is going to reserve his decision. If the decision is not made at this time, then the effect of it will be that we will go on and hear these other witnesses and we don't have a ruling. I think we are entitled to a ruling now, so that we will know how to proceed.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Senator, I ruled this morning that I was first going to hear the 1,200 witnesses which the court referred to and which offers of proof I rejected, and I have not changed that ruling.

"Mr. Reed. You have not changed that ruling, but we have now filed a paper here and we ask a ruling on it, and you say you will reserve that ruling. Of course, if you make the ruling after the damage, as we think, is done, that will do us no good if you then decide it in our favor.

"Now, I don't think I will be able to change your mind, but I want to make this observation, that in the orderly procedure in courts of justice—and I have been there a good many years—and as said by the Court of Appeals here in its quotation from another eminent authority, it is the right of a litigant, through its counsel, to put its evidence in the order it sees fit, and the only question is whether the evidence is competent. The order of proof rests with the person proffering the proof.

"Now, this proceeding that we are now talking about I have never seen in any court, at any time, where a judge undertook to say in what order you shall put on your testimony.

"We offer it, and if it is incompetent, of course you can rule it out, but you cannot tell us, under any rule of law that I ever heard of, the order in which we shall proceed with our defense in this case." (pp. 4095-96) (R. VIII. 2563, 2564).

"Mr. Ingraham. I want to call the Examiner's attention to the last paragraph in respondent's last answer. It is Board's Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

"Mr. Langsdale. What exhibit is that?

"Mr. Ingraham. Board's exhibit No. 1-LLLL. Page 3441 of the record.

"'Respondent further states'—I am reading from the answer—'that during all of the times mentioned in paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint the International Union, its officers, agents and members were engaged in the said and lawful conspiracy against respondent set forth in section (B) of this answer and the matters set forth in said section (B) of this answer are by reference made a part specifically of respondent's answer to paragraph 11 as though set out in haec verbae.'

"Now, section (B) of respondent's answer was stricken out. Paragraph 11 of the Board's complaint remained in the complaint, and our answer to it remained in our answer; it wasn't stricken out.

"Now, respondent offered to prove those facts which are in paragraph 11 by the following witnesses: Neil Quinlan Reed, Elizabeth Reeves, R. J. Ingraham, John Backofer, Margherite Keyes, Inez Warren, Pauline Shartzer, Mary Spreifera, Nelly Stites, Ruby Rickett, Lyle Jeter, Raymond Smith, Effie Hall, George Counten, Flora Rugen, W. D. Rosenfield, Gordon I. Gordon, Velma Dowdy, Meyer Perlstein, David Dubinsky, Wave Tobin, Sylvia Hull, and Ellen Fry.

[fol. 234] "That offer was rejected.

"We offered to prove the allegations contained in subdivision B of our answer and those are—I will not take the time to read subdivision B.

"Trial Examiner Batten. You mean subdivision B of your answer?

"Mr. Ingraham. Yes. Now, in order to proceed we feel that Wave Tobin's testimony is essential and that under the offers of proof we have a right at this time to examine her." (pp. 4030-31-32) (R. VIII. 2561, 2562).

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten. I think I stated the last day we met, Senator, that I did not intend to require it, as far as Miss Tobin was concerned.

"We are ready to proceed in accordance with my ruling. We will proceed with the employees, in line with the offers of proof which were made and in line with the circuit court's opinion.

"Mr. Ingraham. Respondent excepts to your ruling. We will have to get the employees up here.

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham. I would like to call Wave Tobin to the stand.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that this morning, Mr. Ingraham." (pp. 4087-88-89) (R. VIII. 2560, 2561).

[fol. 233] "Mr. Ingraham. Do I understand the ruling this morning is limiting the testimony to the testimony of Donnelly employees?

"Trial Examiner Batten. I don't think that was the ruling, Mr. Ingraham. You may read the record in the morning. I said I would receive first the testimony of the employees referred to by the circuit court in the offers of proof which I rejected.

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, we have made other offers of proof besides the offers of proof of the employees. There are other offers of proof that were made at the last hearing besides those made on behalf of the employees.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Yes, I think that is right.

"Mr. Ingraham. Now, are we to be limited to the evidence that is covered in the offers of proof of employees?

"Trial Examiner Batten. You are to be limited now to the 1,200 employees referred to by the court—why and how—the offers of proof made on behalf of those 1,200 employees. That is the matter which I will hear first." (pp. 4089-90) (R. VIII. 2561) [fol. 232] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't intend to cover all the matters covered in the prior hearing, Mr. Landsdale. I intend to accept first the testimony of the employees referred to in the Circuit Court's decision in the offers of proof which I rejected. Now, that doesn't mean I am limiting the hearing to that. (p. 4077) (R. VIII. 2355)

* * * * *

• • • • •

"Mr. Reed: I confess I am not sure that I comprehend the ruling. Your Honor states that you will receive testimony of the employees on the matters that were referred to in the offers of proof. Do we understand that is all the testimony you are going to permit?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, I think I stated that is the testimony which I intend to receive first, Senator. In other words, I believe the Circuit Court, in that one matter at least, was specific, and they said I should receive the testimony of the 1200 employees in accordance with the offers of proof. Now, that much of the decision is definite, and I think in line with the Court's decision, that is the testimony which I should receive first, and accordingly I am directing that order of proof." (p. 4078) (R. VIII. 2355)

• • • • •

"Mr. Reed: We are in the middle of the examination of Wave Tobin. We insist respectfully that we are entitled to proceed with that witness, and I call attention to the Examiner's ruling, which, as I understand it, is that be proposes now to regulate the order of proof, and to direct the Respondent how they shall put in their case. That, we think, deprives us of our right under the law, and that is bad practice in any event. (pp. 4078-79) (R. VIII. 2355-56).

• • • • •

"Mr. Reed: • • • • Now, we insist and we propose, on our part—of course, we cannot do it if the Examiner refuses—to go on with the examination of Miss Tobin, and when we ask questions that are outside the issues of this case, the proper objections can be made, but we are not required to tell counsel what we intend to prove by this witness.

ers, so that they were intimidated into riding there in busses or riding there in streetcars, all of that forms a part of this picture.

"The only question, then, is, was the violence here? Not what reasons they had for it. We do not have to go into that. But was the violence here? Was the danger here? Was the threat here? Those things we have the right to go into.

"Now, here is the lady who conducted the strike. We want to ask her a few brief questions about it.

"Now, if Your Honor undertakes to take this case out of the hands of the attorneys and tell us how we shall introduce our evidence and the order of it, all I can say is that we will have to do as we did before, save our exceptions." (pp. 4056-57-58-59) (R. VIII. 2544-2546, incl.).

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: Won't you let us finish with the question that is asked this witness?" (p. 4060), (R. VIII. 2547).

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed. In line with my suggestion when we adjourned I went along the matter of the order of proof in the hearing, and with respect to the procedure which we will follow.

"First, I am going to receive the testimony of the employees referred to in the Circuit Court's decision, and on that basis we are ready to proceed.

"Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, may I ask you what you mean by 'in accordance with the Circuit Court's decision'? In other words, do I understand you to mean that you will receive the testimony of the employees that was offered?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That's right. In accordance with the offers of proof.

"Mr. Langsdale: And that doesn't mean then the same employees can go over the same matters that they did go over at the hearing?

her interest and to show that by her acts. And if we had no other ground than that, we have the right to ask this question and to have it answered now, and not two weeks from now, or some other time when we may reach it.

"I insist we have the right to ask this lady if she was here when these strikes occurred and to ask her if she did not take part in them, and to ask her if she did not have direction of the violence that took place, and to show her photograph here—her picture in the pictures that display the riotous conduct of these strikers. That for the purpose of showing her interest, if nothing else.

"Then, this evidence is competent for another reason. Of course, it cannot be that in a strike of this kind, violence of this kind, where there were hundreds and perhaps thousands of people concerned—we could not be expected to show by every one of the witnesses that we may put on here that they saw the strike. Some of them saw parts of it. But if we offer the person that was conducting the strike, who knows all about it, and prove the fact that the strike took place and the kind of strike it was, that it was given publicity through the papers and the employees hear of it and know it—the air is full of it, the air is full of danger for them, and that is a reason why they would want to organize a union of their own, to be protected against this violence, that is clearly within the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

[fol. 231] "Now, here is what they said:—Mr. Hogsett called attention to it very graphically.

"'At the hearing before the Trial Examiner, the petitioners proffered the evidence of the employees of the Donnelly Company, some 1200 in number, to show how and why they formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the employer either in the formation or administration of the union, to show how and why they organized the union.'

"One of the whys is that this riotous conduct was going on, these brutal abuses were being visited upon girls going to work, that the threats had been made that the same thing would be done to the Donnelly Garment work-

"Mr. Ingraham. No. I understood you to state that you were going to have us make an offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Yes, I want an offer of proof on that, as far as this witness is concerned; not a general offer of proof, Mr. Ingraham.

"Mr. Ingraham. Yes.

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) Miss Tobin, who is the chairlady at the Marguerite Keyes shop at the present time? (p. 4054) (R. VIII. 2542-3).

* * * * *

[fol. 230] "Mr. Ingraham. May the witness answer the question I have just asked, so that we can go ahead and present any argument we have on this legal point?

"Trial Examiner Batten. I prefer that you present your arguments now, Mr. Ingraham. That was my request.

"Mr. Reed. I want to say first, that the order of proof in a case is in the hands of the counsel who proffer the proof. If they do it in an improper way, it is then for a court or an examiner to rule on the evidence as it is offered. But no court has the authority to tell counsel the order in which they shall introduce proof. I don't think I am mistaken about that.

"So, I say we propose to exercise our right to offer our proof in the manner which seems to us is best and proper. If the Examiner sees fit to exclude it, we can only save our exception at that time.

"Now, in regard to this witness, you have stated that you did not propose to make any rule or follow any rule with regard to who brought in a witness—that you might bring in a witness and you might ask them questions like you would on cross-examination—

"Trial Examiner Batten. If they become adverse to you, Senator.

"Mr. Reed. Yes. Now, we have the right to show the interest of this witness. That is what we are trying to show, her employment for a number of years by the prosecuting force in this hearing. We have the right to show

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and entirely outside the issues in this case.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Do you understand it?

"A. I think I do.

"Q. Well, if you do, you may answer it."

225.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as shown in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record on page 4263, to wit:

[fol. 240] "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you get from this article any belief that Mr. Dubinsky was a Communist and a Bolshevist?

"Mr. Reed: Well, we object to that as immaterial and incompetent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Reed: I want to get my objection into the record, that is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I will overrule it, Senator."

226.

"Miss Weyand: I should say that if my cross-examination had brought out a connection of the company with the incident, the Board would be entitled to rely on it in its decision. * * *

"Miss Weyand: My purpose was directed at credibility, but I don't believe that when I direct a question at credibility which is a proper question to direct at credibility I am to be barred from taking the answer and saying I wish to use it for something else if the answer developed into a statement of a connection of the company with the incident."

227.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) appearing in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4314 to 4316 inclusive (R. VIII. 2639-2640), to wit:

[fol. 241] "Q. Do you recall at that time what the International was—what charges they were making about the working conditions at the Donnelly plant?

"A. I think I do.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, is that in the offer of proof, the N. R. A. hearing?

"Mr. Ingraham: No. But the Examiner and the Labor Board laid great stress on the events that occurred prior to the effective date—

"Trial Examiner Batten: I do not intend to go into that on these offers of proof.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I will have to except to Your Honor's ruling.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

"Mr. Ingraham: That is all.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think I stated pretty clearly, Mr. Ingraham, on these employees, I want to confine it first to these offers of proof. That is the thing that the circuit court clearly indicated I should have taken. Now, I am not making a ruling, as I said before, at this time that I will not take anything else, but I am going to take first the things the circuit court clearly indicated I should have received, and that is my reason for it.

"Mr. Ingraham: At this time do you want me to make an offer of proof on these matters that I am going into?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, I don't know that it is necessary to make an offer of proof. If you want to, you can. I haven't excluded it.

"Mr. Ingraham: You have not excluded that testimony?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No.

"Mr. Reed: How, then, are we to try this case if—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, you are going to proceed, I hope, as I indicated yesterday, and I thought everybody understood, and take first the employees, in accordance with the offer of proof, which the court said I should have accepted.

"Now, that is the plan we are going to follow.

[fol. 242] "Mr. Reed: I seem to be unfortunate. Every time I try to make a statement you interrupt me. I would like to make a statement for the record.

"How are we to try this case if the Examiner undertakes to direct us as to what testimony we shall offer first and not tell us what other testimony will be received, but withholds his decision until we have put our witnesses upon the stand and examined them, within the limitations that he has fixed; then, after that is all done, he may open up the case and try many other things.

"Now, I simply protest that that method is unfair and I except to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I understand, Senator, you excepted to it yesterday. You stated, however, that if I intended to pursue that policy, you would comply with it.

"Mr. Reed: We are forced to comply with it. I didn't state I would voluntarily comply with it.

228.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same), appearing at page 4350 of the transcript of the record (R. VIII. 2656), that "whether or not the employer exerted any pressure to exclude these people from the plant I don't think is material under these offers", and in refusing to permit petitioner to adduce such evidence.

229.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4352, 4354, 4355, 4356 (R. VIII. 2657-8-9-2660), to-wit:

"Q. Did Mrs. Hyde say anything to you?
"A. She did.
"Q. What did she say?
"A. She asked me to please go back to my machine.
"Q. And what did you do?
"A. Well, I still wanted to go down and see who the other girl was. I didn't know the other girl. But she asked me repeatedly to go back to my machine and go to work, and I went.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you see, Mr. Lane, what this leads into. You are leading into trying out the whole issue. • • • [fol. 243] "Trial Examiner Batten: The question here is how and why the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized under the offers of proof.

"Mr. Lane: It is more than that. • • •

"Mr. Lane: Now, Your Honor makes repeated reference to the offers of proof and the Board's offers of proof. I find nothing in the opinion which confines the Intervener or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Respondent to specific offers of proof. The opinion says the evidence of the employees was to be taken, whether they were dominated or coerced.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Lane, I am referring to my ruling that we are first going to take the testimony of the employees in line with the offers of proof. Of course, if you concede this is in accordance with the offers of proof, it is not in accordance with my ruling. • • •

"Mr. Reed: The difficulty is we are trying to do the impossible, we are trying to separate evidence which bears upon the whole case and limit it to bear upon one feature of the case, and that feature of the case is an essential part of the case itself; so that our difficulty arises from that attempt to first try one particular question.

"Now, you can't try that question, you can't try the very question here, without introducing evidence as to what took place. This lady saw it, and everything that took place there was dragged into this case by both sides before.

"Now, this witness is asked how she felt, what her state of mind was; she saw this difficulty. What took place at that time would affect her mind, and what took place at that time would do something else; it would be a factor in arriving at any other conclusion whether the company was guilty of unfair labor practice by not going in and protecting these people.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, Senator, that is not because of the order of proof, and it is not because of the issues in the case. The difficulties that we are running into is that we are trying to explore the minds of people.

"Mr. Reed: Yes.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I don't care whether it is a Labor Board hearing or what kind of a lawsuit it is, when you attempt to do as we are doing here, explore peoples' mental reactions and their opinions—

"Mr. Reed: That is shown by what they do, isn't it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: But you get into serious difficulty. I feel that is what the Circuit Court wanted done; within the limits of our ability, I am going to comply with the Circuit Court's decision. I have made my ruling we are going to proceed in that manner. If I am wrong, Senator, we probably will be back here again.

[fol. 244] "Mr. Reed: I think we will.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I hope I live to be here; I have enjoyed it very much thus far, but I made the ruling, and that is the ruling which we are going to follow."

230.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4358 to 4360 inclusive (R. VIII. 2661-2662), to-wit:

"Mr. Lane: Well, the Board has taken the position, apparently—

"Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) The Board hasn't taken any position. The Board has set aside its decision and order, there is no decision and order in existence, so that can't be used as stating what the Board's decision is.

"Mr. Reed: Well, is there a record in existence that is a part of this hearing?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I would assume so, Senator. At least we started with page 3000 and something, so I assume something precedes it.

"Mr. Reed: Well, the record is here, whether the Board did or didn't make a finding—we know it did make a finding. We know this point adverse to us was in the minds of the Court, and this case has been sent back here, and the Board is ordered to set aside its judgment and decision, and we are here now, prepared to try the issues in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is the very point I am glad you mentioned, Senator. I have felt that way for some time, that the position of the Respondent is that on every point I passed, the Board made an adverse finding in its prior decision and order; that means the Respondent can now come in here in a further hearing for a specific hearing, and attempt to disprove all the adverse findings brought.

"Mr. Reed: And that, not because of the adverse finding, but because we are entitled to put in this evidence, and the adverse findings simply go to this fact, that it is apparent that the Board has in its mind the importance of this question, and that their opinion was that we were guilty under this particular phase of the charge. Now, we come back to try it. We have the old record here and we have the right to meet every contention that is made. That contention is made by the Board today, although it set aside its findings, and the record is there, and it is here now, undertaking to say that on that record made, which is now, as I understand, a part of this hearing, certain deductions we have drawn, and it drew them. Now, we come in and want to show the facts in this case; and to shut us off from that—[fol. 245] "Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Of course, Senator, I can't agree with you that you are coming in here to show the facts; you are coming in here to show the facts on the basis of the remand of the Circuit Court.

"Mr. Reed: I understand that, and you and I differ on that radically, on what the remand it, and we object to the ruling that has been made, to the effect that we are confined here to our offers of proof, and then we make the further point that our offers of proof are broad enough to cover every contention that we have thus far made in this case; and that we have the right now, under the offers of proof, to meet every issue in this case; and we object and except to any rulings to the contrary.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think the record is pretty clear, Senator, that you have excepted to all of these rulings."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 4365 (R. VIII. 2663), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Lane) Will you state, Mrs. Saucke, what was said by anybody in the section?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll object to that question and sustain my own objection. If this questioning indicates this witness can't identify what anybody said—I mean the names of anybody—then I would say the proper foundation is laid for your last question.

232.

Petitioner Assigns as error the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4381, 4382, to-wit:

"Q. Who did you deal with in arranging that picnic?

"Mr. Reed: Now, if Your Honor please, isn't this utterly immaterial to this case? I submit that it is. It is a useless consumption of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell us. Who did you deal with?"

[fol. 246]

233.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 4393 (R. VIII. 2670), to-wit:

"Q. Do you remember what the vote was against you?

"A. No.

"Q. How was the vote conducted?

"Mr. Reed: If Your Honor please, isn't this testimony an utter waste of time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't know, Senator.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I am objecting to this line of questioning as incompetent and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I'll overrule the objection. I think it has to do with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Senator, clearly."

234.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4399, 4400, 4405-4406, 4410, 4411-4412, to-wit:

"Q. Did you know whether she would be a good person to represent you in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Reed: Well, I object to that as utterly immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, she can answer.

"Mr. Reed: An opinion of the witness as to whether some other lady, whom she says she hardly knew, would be a good person to represent her or not—

"Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I want to put my objection in. It is immaterial, outside of the issues in this case, and a useless consumption of time.

"A. Well, what little I have seen of her, I imagine she would be very capable.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did you know her well enough to form an opinion?

[fol. 247] "A. I think I did.

"Q. And had you formed an opinion?

"Mr. Reed: I make the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

* * * *

"Q. What discussions did you hear her participate in?

"A. I couldn't say.

"Mr. Reed: May my previous objection stand to any of this line of questioning?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection.

* * * *

"Q. Do you know what her opinion in regard to labor matters is?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as calling for the information of somebody else, incompetent and immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you have already answered it, haven't you?

"A. No, I haven't.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent further objects, that the question is general.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer. * * *

"Q. Did you ever hear him make any statement about labor matters? A. I don't remember.

"Mr. Reed: I wish to call to the attention of the Court that that question is unfair as it simply refers to labor matters. Now, there are a thousand—ten thousand different things that concern labor matters. The question does not mean anything in the form that it is put, and the witness might have to answer on matters entirely outside of this issue on labor matters. I got opinions on labor matters; most everybody has; and how many different opinions, and how many different kinds of questions is all open, it is all embraced in this one question on labor matters.

"I object to it as an improper form of examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will recess until 20 minutes of 4. * * *

"Q. Did you know his character sufficiently to know whether he would make a good representative for the employees?

[fol. 248] "Mr. Reed: Now, I object to that as utterly incompetent and immaterial, did she know this man's character sufficiently to know whether he would make a good representative for the employees. How can that throw any light on this case? How can she be required to pass an opinion upon the qualifications of some man who is not even here in court?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may tell us whether you knew him well enough to have him represent you."

235.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) And did you participate in the nomination of Mildred Mattox? A. Yes, I did.

"Mr. Lane: If the Examiner please, the Intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union objects to that question; whether this witness, Mrs. Saucke, participated in the nomination of Mildred Mattox in April, 1938, as a member of a nominating committee, whether this witness acted wisely or unwisely in so participating, or whether this witness was casually or intimately acquainted with Mildred Mattox doesn't throw any light whatever on the issues of this proceeding, it is entirely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't even approach the issue we are here to try out, and I object to it for that reason.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled."

236.

Petitioner assigns as error the failure and refusal of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) to rule upon and sustain the objection made at page 4426 of the record (R. VIII. 2676) as shown by the following excerpts therefrom, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: She said she didn't know who Stella Willis was and I just wanted the record to show how completely ignorant she was on what goes on there at the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Mr. Lane: I object to the comment and move that it be stricken."

[fol. 249]

237.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4454, 4455, 4456 (R. VIII. 2689, 2690), to-wit:

"Q. Do you know anything about the way it happened at this election? A. What year?

"Q. 1938, that the two tickets brought in each had Rose Todd for president on each ticket, Jack McConaughey for treasurer on each ticket, and Margaret Green for secretary on each ticket?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as immaterial; whether the witness noticed it or didn't notice it, is purely immaterial in this case.

"Miss Weyand: She was a candidate on one of the tickets for vice president, and I think she would be a good person to explain.

"Mr. Ingraham: I didn't know there was a vice presidential candidate.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you know anything about it?

"A. I had nothing to do in making up those tickets, didn't know who was on those tickets until they were placed on the board in front of me.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) And you didn't later learn how that happened?

"A. I didn't even inquire.

"Q. You don't to this day know how that happened?

"A. You mean how those names——

"Mr. Reed: (Interrupting) She has already said she was not present, that she didn't know how the list were made up. Now she is asked if she didn't know how that happened; I object to it.

"Miss Weyand: She indicated at that time——

"Trial Examiner Batten: The question is whether she ever found out it occurred.

"Mr. Reed: Then it would be hearsay.

"Mr. Langsdale: That is not a question from the testimony in this case.

[fol. 250] "Trial Examiner Batten: Did you ever find out, Mrs. Saucke?

"A. I never tried to find out.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Then, you didn't find out? A. I didn't ask.

"Q. Then, if you didn't ask, you didn't find out, did you? A. No, I guess I didn't.

For the reason that the testimony elicited there and on similar matters shown in the succeeding pages of the record is wholly immaterial and irrelevant to the issues and does not tend to prove any of the charges in the complaint and obscures the real issues and contributed to the erroneous findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner, and because said interposition of the Trial Examiner shows his partisanship and bias against petitioner.

238.

Petitioner assigns as error the constant interposition of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in the conduct of examinations by counsel and his refusal to rule on petitioner's objections and let counsel proceed to try the case in their own way, and his rulings, action and comments as same appear on pages 4483 to 4487 of the transcript of the record, said instance of such interposition by the Trial Examiner being but one of the hundreds throughout the record, all of which petitioner assigns as error.

239.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4511, 4512, to-wit:

[fol. 251] "Q. Now then, would you have done the things you did on April 23, 1937, at Sylvia Hull's machine if you had known she was going there to represent only members of the I. L. G. W. U.?

"Mr. Reed. I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and asking the witness to testify to what she might have done under a state of facts which is not shown to have existed and which the witness did not have in mind, as shown by her own testimony.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"A. I certainly would, because the article also states they were going to call a strike.

"Q. That they were going to get permission—

"A. — to call a strike.

"Q. At any rate, you would have done and said exactly the same things you did say and do on April 23 at her machine or near her machine had you known she was going there to represent only employees of the Donnelly Garment Company that belonged to the I. L. G. W. U.?

"Mr. Reed. I renew my objection last made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled.

"You may answer."

240.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in ruling and requiring that the witness on the stand, Mrs. Warth, give the name of a friend who she stated had had her clothes torn in the I. L. G. W. U. strikes, and in striking out the testimony of said witness with reference thereto because of her refusal to state the name of said friend, which said rulings, comments and actions appear at pages 4565 to 4575 of the record (R.VIII. 2734-2738), and particularly in the following excerpts therefrom at pages 4573, 4574, 4575, (R. VIII. 2737-8), to-wit:

[fol. 252] "Trial Examiner Batten: If it is for the purpose of credibility, I will ask the witness to disclose the name.

"Mr. Reed: Do the counsel on the other side now say that they are going to test this lady's credibility by bringing in the witness, and do they vouch for the fact that that witness will contradict this witness?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is not what I asked them. I asked Miss Weyand if it was a matter of credibility, and she said it was. I asked her, entirely so? And she said yes. Upon her statement, the witness may disclose the name of the person. • • •

"Mr. Reed: Are we, then, to understand that this question is to be asked, although limited to impeachment purposes, and that we can follow and show that this young lady, if she would come in and deny this, the fact back of it, or show, if she didn't deny it, that she spoke the truth?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am making no ruling of any kind, Senator, except to this witness, that she may disclose the name of the person.

"Mr. Reed: That's the trouble.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That isn't the trouble. If you believe you have the right to present such testimony, Senator, you present it, and at the time it is presented I will rule upon it.

"Mr. Reed: I am going to say to the witness that she has the right to withhold this name, if she wants to.

"The Witness: I think I will stand on that right, then.

"Trial Examiner Batten: All right. You may do so, and I shall strike your testimony with respect to this incident which was given on direct examination—

"Mr. Lane: Intervener excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: —in accordance with the Board's rules.

"Mr. Reed: And we also except to the ruling."

241.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to permit petitioner to recall witness Wave Tobin to the stand and to continue its examination of her as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 4692 (R. VIII. 2767), to-wit:

[fol. 253] "Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

"Mr. Ingraham: I would like the record to show that Wave Tobin is present in court and has been present at every session since she was on the stand, and respondent again asks the right to continue its examination of her.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Has Mrs. Reed been in court since we started up again, Mr. Ingraham?

"Mr. Ingraham: No, she has not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I can verify the fact for you that, as far as I recall, Miss Tobin has been here every day.

"We will proceed.

"Mr. Ingraham: And my request to be permitted to continue my examination of her will be denied?

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed in line with the ruling which I have previously made, Mr. Ingraham."

242.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) limiting the petitioner's examination of its witnesses strictly to the Examiner's conception of what is covered by the offer of proof and refusing to permit witnesses while on the stand to testify as to other material and pertinent phases of the case as set forth in the following rulings and comments of the Trial Examiner appearing in the transcript of the Record at pages 4755-56 (R. VIII. 2802-2803), to-wit:

"Mr. Reed: Will you pardon me at that point?

"We are now running into the vice, I think, of—I don't say that disrespectfully of the ruling. You say at the present time we are going to hear only from the witnesses who were named and that you are going to confine the issues to the one question of offers of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

"Mr. Reed: But hereafter you will leave it open.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am not ruling upon that matter.

[fol. 254] "Mr. Reed: So, when we undertake to present our case we are handicapped by a ruling which limits our right to put in evidence on only one phase of the case, when the same witness that we have here could testify as to the other phases, if you hereafter admit them.

"Now, we ought to know what is coming into this case, Mr. Examiner. We ought to know now.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Senator, I would like to know, myself. If I knew, I could make a ruling, but I don't know, so I can't rule.

"Mr. Reed: So we all proceed in the dark.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We certainly do.

"Mr. Reed: Very well, then, I object to that procedure.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Except in accordance with the ruling I have made that we are first going to take the testimony which I rejected in the offers of proof. That is the order of proof and we are going to follow that."

243.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think we are ready to proceed, and I think the offers of proof contemplate the period in or about March 18, 1937, and as to any strikes or matters of that kind which occurred during that period, and I think it is reasonable to go back to—I think the offers contemplated at least a period, I would say from November on, and any things prior to that I will now rule aren't covered by the offers of proof, and therefore shouldn't be presented at this time, in line with my ruling directing the order of proof."

for the reasons among others that said ruling was and is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and demonstrates the Trial Examiner's bias against petitioner and denies to [fol. 255] petitioner a fair trial and the opportunity to meet evidence admitted on behalf of the Board and ILGWU and constitutes the taking of petitioner's liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

244.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4795-96-97-98 (R. VIII. 2823, 2824, 2825), to-wit:

"Miss Weyand: I am going to hand the witness Board's exhibit No. 2 and ask her to direct her attention to the second page thereof, which appears in the Circuit Court of Appeals record at page 4362, and ask her to read an article there appearing, entitled 'Nine Hundred Joined Loyalty League.' The article runs over to page 4363 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record.

"Mr. Reed: What is that?

"Miss Weyand. The article appears in the N. D. A. A. (being Nelly Don Athletic Association) News for February 1935.

"Mr. Ingraham: We object to the witness being examined about what appeared in the Nelly Don Athletic Association News. There is no showing that the company had anything to do with the publication or is in any way responsible for anything that appeared in it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there isn't any question pending yet, Mr. Ingraham.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, wasn't it your ruling this morning that you were going to confine the examination at this point to matters occurring within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I say, there isn't any question pending yet to rule upon.

"Mr. Lane: She is directing attention to what occurred in 1935.

"Mr. Reed: I think if the Examiner will search his recollection, he will remember he refused to let Mr. Lane show the witness an article which lay outside of these limits, or examine about it.

(Thereupon the above-specified article was read by the witness.)

* * * * *

[fol. 256] "Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did you read that article when it appeared?

"Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as immaterial to any issue in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

"Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

"A. I don't remember whether I read that or not.

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Have you ever read this article before?

"A. I don't believe that I read it.

"Q. Did you attend the meeting here described as a meeting at which 900 persons were present and cards were passed out for membership in the Loyalty League?

"Mr. Ingraham: Now, I object to that question. It is outside the scope of the offers of proof, and the witness has stated that she did not read the article.

"Mr. Reed: Outside of the scope of the ruling this morning made.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Did you state, Miss Barnes, that you did not read this article?

"A. I don't remember reading it in that pamphlet, no.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, the question now is did she attend the meeting of 900 people, is that right?

"Miss Weyand: That is correct.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

"Mr. Lane: I would like to have a continuing objection to showing the witness any article excluded by your ruling this morning. This witness was questioned about something that happened in 1935 and 1936, and the Board has gone back to 1935, and I want to object.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You may have a continuing objection.

"Mr. Ingraham: The respondent would like to have the same continuing objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same continuing objection."

for reasons among others that said testimony and the testimony adduced thereafter and appearing on pages 4798 to 4805 of the record (R. VIII. 2825-2830, incl.), relating to the organization of the Loyalty League and similar matters is wholly immaterial and irrelevant to any [fol. 257] issue herein and contrary to the Trial Examiner's ruling that evidence of events occurring prior to six months before March, 1937, would not be received, and because said rulings are arbitrary, unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and demonstrate the biased and unfair attitude of the Trial Examiner toward petitioner and his nonjudicial attitude toward the evidence, by reason of all of which petitioner has been denied a fair trial and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law.

245.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 4829-30-31-32 and 33 (R. VIII. 2838-2839), to wit:

"Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they?
"A. No.

"Mr. Reed: Wait a minute. I think counsel ought not to try to mislead the witness. If he puts in part of these minutes, he ought to put in the qualifying phrase that it was explained that the by-laws could be changed at any time. Isn't that right in the minutes before you?

"Mr. Langsdale: No. Here is what Mr. Tyler said about it, 'I suggest that if the by-laws are satisfactory someone move they be adopted'.

"Mr. Reed: Is that all that was said?

"Mr. Langsdale: And then the motion was made by Ellen Nokes that 'we accept the by-laws as they were read; seconded by Virginia White, unanimous acceptance.'

"Mr. Reed: Give me the minutes.

"Mr. Langsdale: Senator, I am examining this witness. Wait until I get through.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed. There is no question pending.

"Mr. Lane: I submit that with respect to the minutes, he read only a portion of them.

[fol. 258] "Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, he hasn't read all the minutes; but I say, Mr. Lane, there is no question pending.

"Mr. Lane: Well, his statement is incomplete and misleading.

"Mr. Langsdale: Are you trying to suggest to the witness part of her answer?

"Mr. Lane: No, I am not, but I am objecting to the misleading nature of your examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: If there is any misleading here, I think I would intercede. I am convinced he was not misleading anybody. Will you proceed, Mr. Langsdale?

"Mr. Ingraham: We would like, before you proceed, to make an objection to the question, and move that the question and answer be stricken out.

"Mr. Reed: Well, I move to strike out the question as misleading and improper for the reason that there is no connection with the other matter called attention to, which counsel did not refer to, although he apparently was reading from the records. This was said, 'I suggest to adopt, then, the bylaws, and then leisurely amend them, when the majority of you wish them changed. They are drawn as follows:' so that there was in this meeting a statement made that if they adopted them, then they could change them afterwards.

"Now, I think Mr. Langsdale, perhaps inadvertently, omitted to call attention to that fact.

"Mr. Langsdale: I didn't do it inadvertently. I don't have to read everything that happened at that meeting.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question and answer, please; there is a motion to strike.

"(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter as follows:

"'Q. No one discussed those by-laws, did they?

"'A. No.')

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't see anything improper with that.

"A. Mr. Examiner, I think before that I was asked if these bylaws were accepted, and I said they were accepted subject to change.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Well, then, you weren't misled by any questions Mr. Langsdale asked you, were you?

"A. No, but he didn't read all of it.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if you weren't, the motion is denied. Let's proceed."

[fol. 259] 246.

Petitioner assigns as error the interposition of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) in the examination of witnesses throughout the hearing and as illustrated by the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at page 4917 (R. VIII. 2862-2863), to wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) I will ask you to state whether or not after Mr. Baty took over the plant there was any change, to your knowledge, of the authority of instructors, passing on hiring or laying off or disciplining employees.

"A. I don't know as the instructors ever had that authority to hire and fire employees.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) You mean by that, not knowing whether they ever had it, you couldn't say whether there was any change? Is that what you mean?

"A. Oh, yes, there was a change—

"Q. No. My question to you is, Not knowing whether the instructors ever had the right to hire and discharge, you couldn't say whether there was any change?

"A. I know they never had the right to hire and discharge.

"Q. Well, then, can you say whether there was any change when Mr. Baty went in there?

"A. Yes.

"Q. As to hiring and firing?

"A. Well, as to—I don't know, but—

"Q. My question to you was, as Mr. Ingraham's question was, whether there was any change as to hiring and firing.

"Mr. Langsdale: I think the question was a little more comprehensive than that.

"Trial Examiner Batten. It may have been, but that was the point I was concerned about."

as showing the partisanship of the Trial Examiner against petitioner and his evident desire to elicit testimony favorable to findings and issues which he had already resolved in favor of the Board and against petitioner.

[fol. 260] 247.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 4945-46:

"Trial Examiner Batten: What did you understand it to mean?

"A. My understanding was she was going to represent all of us.

"Q. You mean from reading the article?

"A. From reading the article.

"Mr. Langsdale: We certainly are not bound by understanding of someone who doesn't understand the English language when she reads it. I ask that the answer be stricken out as utterly irrational and having no foundation or basis in the article.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

"Mr. Reed: I am protesting against the insulting remark made to a witness on the stand.

"Mr. Langsdale: I don't consider it insulting but when I get ready to make that kind of remarks I will come around and take some lessons from you.

"Mr. Lane: I move to strike out the remarks of Mr. Langsdale for the reasons they are argumentative and they are not directed to the question I asked. They are not proper remarks to be made by counsel.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you have a question pending?

"Mr. Lane: No, I am asking those remarks be stricken."

248.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 4962-63 (R. VIII. 2887-2888), to wit:

"Q. When was the first Loyalty League meeting, can you recall?

"A. Well, the first Loyalty League meeting I recall was in 1935, I think, when they joined the organization down there to the plant; the Loyalty League is a social affair—we joined our clubs together, each section had a club.

[fol. 261] "Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has a continuing objection to inquiring into matters around 1935 or thereabouts? Your ruling was given when the intervener was going into matters except those within a reasonable time prior to April 27, 1937.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, this question has nothing to do with my ruling, but I'll grant you the continuing objection.

"Mr. Lane: Well, she is inquiring of something that occurred in 1935.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, concerning the Loyalty League, Mr. Lane.

"Mr. Ingraham: It is understood the respondent still maintains its objection to any matters prior to July 15, 1939.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't understand it, unless you make it.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, I made an objection at the first hearing as to all matters that occurred prior to July 15, 1939.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You mean your original objection in the first hearing?

"Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the objection you made at that time, I assume, continues through the entire hearing.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, that will be my understanding of it."

for the reasons, among others, that said rulings are contrary to the Trial Examiner's ruling refusing to permit petitioner to adduce evidence of matters occurring prior to six months before March, 1937, and for the further reason that said evidence does not tend to prove any of the charges against petitioner.

249.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) permitting counsel for the Board to interrogate the witness concerning Board's Exhibit 2 and other related matters appearing in the transcript of the Record at page 4983 (R. VIII. 2896) over the objections of petitioner and intervener, for the reason that said examination is contrary to [fol. 262] the ruling of the Trial Examiner refusing to permit petitioner to adduce evidence prior to November, 1936, and for the further reason that said evidence does not tend to prove any of the charges against petitioner.

250.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth on pages 5006-07 of the transcript of the Record, to-wit:

"Q. Well, at that time did you learn that if you had a plant union and got a closed shop, that you could keep the I. L. G. W. U. out by firing everybody that joined it?

"Mr. Reed: That is what you do all the time.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection, Senator?

"Mr. Reed: Yes, I object to the question as improper, not proper cross-examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled.

"A. What was the question?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Lane: Well I object to that for the reason that it is not the situation, and never had been the situation, that everybody that joined the I. L. G. W. U.—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is that an objection?

"Mr. Lane: Yes, that is an objection.

"Trial Examiner Batten: What is the objection?

"Mr. Lane: Because the question states a hypothetical situation.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Did you know or did you learn that at that time, if you should form a plant union, get a closed shop agreement, that everyone would have to belong to that union?"

[fol. 263] 251.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts of the transcript of the record (pages 5010-5011) (R. VIII. 2903), to-wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if the question is asked and answered, then an objection is not proper at this time, is it?

"Mr. Lane: You have been interrogating the witness yourself, so I didn't have an opportunity to make the objection. Now, my objection is, to the question Mr. Langsdale asked, the last portion of it, with respect to keeping—to preventing any employees from joining the I. L. G. W. U.—now, that is not a provision of the Wagner Act, and I submit counsel should not be permitted to ask that question, that if they get a closed shop they have a right to require all the employees to belong to that union, and the Wagner Act doesn't provide that every employee shall stay out of the I. L. G. W. U.

"Mr. Langsdale: Well, I say, Mr. Lane ought to go and read the Wagner Act, and read some of the decisions.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if that is an objection, it is overruled, because the question has been put and the answer is in the record. So, you proceed, Mr. Langsdale."

252.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comment of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5063-64-65, (R. VIII. 2930, 2931), to-wit:

"Q. Did you know that you were being paid far in excess of wages that were being paid in plants that had contracts with the I. L. G. W. U. in Kansas City?

"A. I felt sure I was making far more than I would in some of these other factories.

"Q. Was this article—

"Trial Examiner Batten: How is that material? You say did she know. Well, of course, I have no objection to it, she had answered it. Of course, it doesn't mean that we are going into that whole question of whether, in fact, they were. The only question that will raise is whether or not this witness—what her own information is concerning the statement, whether it is supported by anything. I didn't want you to think that raises the whole issue of the truth.

[fol. 264] "Mr. Ingraham: We still contend that is an issue we are interested to go into and that even under your ruling, that is a factor that these employees have a right to consider.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is what I just said.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am only going into it to the extent I indicated. These witnesses have testified what it was that lead them to form the organization or why they did it. Now, I am permitting it to that extent and that doesn't mean I am excluding the testimony you indicated, Mr. Ingraham, that you still take the position it is an issue. I am not ruling on that matter now, only with respect to this witness' testimony."

253.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth on pages 5154 to 5160 and at pages 5168 to 5169 of the transcript of the Record, (R. VIII. 2973-2977; 2982-2983, incl.), as showing the bias and prejudice of the Trial Examiner towards petitioner and his evident desire to have elicited evidence [unfaborable] to petitioner even though the questions asked were clearly incompetent.

254.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5203, 5204, 5205, to-wit:

"Q. Did you think you could ignore the Act up until the time the Supreme Court declared it constitutional?

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial, entirely outside the issues in this case.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question, please?

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter, as follows:

" 'Did you think you could ignore the Act up until the time the Supreme Court declared it constitutional?')

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

[fol. 265] "Mr. Reed: Now, how does that throw any light on the issues?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question, Mrs. Mudd?

"The Witness: I understand the question, but I don't believe he quoted me right.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of whether he quoted you right or not, if you understand this question, you may answer.

* * * * *

"Mr. Reed: I submit that question is incompetent and immaterial for any purpose, whether she thought she could ignore it or couldn't ignore it. She has simply said she read about the Act in the paper and she read it was before the Supreme Court, and there is no question of whether she wanted to ignore it or didn't want to ignore it; that is not in this case.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you recall the question, Mrs. Mudd?

"The Witness. Yes, but—

255.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) refusing to sustain petitioner's and intervener's objections to questions propounded by the Board's counsel concerning the organization meetings of the Loyalty League and related matters extending back as far as 1935, which examination together with petitioner's and intervener's objections appears at pages 5288 to 5301 of the transcript of the Record (R. IX. 3027-3034, incl.), for the reason that same are contrary to the rulings of the Trial Examiner limiting petitioner in the production of evidence to a time not prior to November, 1936, and because said rulings and action are emphatically unfair and prejudicial to petitioner, and by reason of which petitioner has been denied a fair trial herein.

[fol. 266] 256.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 5343-44 (R. IX. 3043), to wit:

"Q. Did the thought occur to you that getting that Loyalty petition signed and getting the pictures in the paper might be the answer of the company to Perlstein's interview?

"Mr. Reed. Read the question, please.

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Mr. Reed: I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and in no manner binding upon the parties to this case.

"Mr. Stottle: And assuming as evidence something that is not in evidence.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

"The Witness: I was going to say—

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you understand the question that was asked you? Do you remember what it was?

"The Witness: Well, it referred to the pictures going to be in the paper.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question please?

"(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Do you understand the question?

"The Witness: Not clearly, not that part of it, 'answer of the company'. I don't understand just what he means.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Then, restate it, Mr. Langsdale. The witness says she doesn't understand the latter part of it.

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) Was there anything that came to your mind about the company's getting this petition signed and then having pictures in the newspaper as an answer to Perlstein's interview that you read 4 days earlier?

"Mr. Reed. I object to that as incompetent and immaterial and as assuming that the company had this petition signed, when all of the evidence is to the contrary.

"Mr. Langsdale: It isn't assuming at all. I am asking her—

"Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled."

257.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) that so far as the offers of proof are concerned and the employee witnesses are concerned with respect to petitioner, that he had heard sufficient and that anything further would be cumulative and would not enable the Examiner or the Board or the Circuit Court to get any better picture of the situation, and assigns as error the Trial Examiner's ruling and determination that he had heard enough employee witnesses both as to the petitioner and intervener, and in refusing to permit petitioner to call any more employee witnesses or adduce any further testimony under petitioner's offers of proof and assigns as error his ruling and action in refusing to permit intervener to put on any witnesses whatever or adduce any evidence whatever under the offers of proof, for the reasons, among others, that said rulings and action are contrary to the holding of the Circuit Court of Appeals in remanding the case and contrary to the order of the Board herein in ordering a further hearing of this matter; and for the further reason that petitioner was prepared to call and place upon the stand all or substantially all of the witnesses named in the offers of proof referred to, and all of said witnesses would have testified to matters refuting each and all the charges against petitioner and such testimony would have presented to the Trial Examiner, the Board and the Circuit Court of Appeals an overwhelming case [fol. 268] sustaining petitioner's contentions and refuting all of the charges against petitioner, and because said rulings and action of the Trial Examiner deny to petitioner an opportunity to adduce said material, competent and relevant evidence bearing on the issues involved herein, whereby petitioner has been denied a fair trial and has been denied due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings having been made over and against the objections of petitioner.

In connection with this assignment of error, petitioner refers to the following excerpts from the record (pages 5797, 5800), (R. IX. 3253, 3255), and assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth therein for each and all of the reasons hereinabove seated, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Is there anything further?

"Well, if not, I think I shall rule at this time that as far as the offers of proof are concerned, and the employee witnesses are concerned, with respect to the respondent, that I have heard sufficient; that anything further would be cumulative, and any addition wouldn't enable the Examiner or the Board or the Circuit Court to get any better picture of the entire situation, the light of the entire hearing, the entire record and exhibits. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I feel, Mr. Tyler, if you want me to determine the question entirely myself, I take it that is in substance the same position which the respondent takes.

"Then, I will now determine that I have heard enough employee witnesses, both as to the respondent and the intervener.

"So, that disposes of that matter."

Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner set forth above as constituting an abuse of any discretion vested in the Trial Examiner with reference to said matters and as being unfair and prejudicial to the petitioner and intervener by reason of other rulings and action of the Trial Examiner, and by reason of his subsequent rulings permitting the Board [fol. 269] and ILGWU to adduce in rebuttal extensive evidence which was not proper rebuttal but which related to matters which, if pertinent at all, should properly have been adduced in the Board's case in chief; and petitioner further assigns as error all the rulings and actions for all the reasons set forth in its exceptions to said rebuttal vidence.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in striking out all of the testimony of the witness Mrs. Reed pertaining to the period subsequent to July, 1939, for the reasons among others that said testimony is competent, relevant and material to many, if not all, of the issues involved in this case; and for the further reason that said ruling does not designate with any degree of certainty the particular evidence which it was the intention of the trial examiner to strike; and for the further reason that the trial examiner has permitted testimony to be adduced by the Board and ILGWU relating to the same matters to which said stricken testimony relates, and the striking of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial herein and denies to petitioner due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings and action having been taken over and against the objections of petitioner.

In connection with this assignment of error, petitioner refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the [fol. 270] record (pages 5800, 5801) (R. IX. 3255, 3256), for each and all of the reasons hereinabove stated, to wit: and excepts to the rulings and action therein set forth

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Now, there are two or three other matters that I think I should dispose of with respect to Mrs. Reed. I am now striking out all of her testimony which pertains to the period subsequent to July 1939, in accordance with a ruling which I made after Mrs. Reed testified. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: So, any matters after that are stricken".

Petitioner assigns as errors the rulings and action of the trial examiner in rejecting the offer of proof made by petitioner with respect to the testimony of witness Wave Tobin which offer of proof is designated as Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS and the trial examiner's determination that the matters therein are not material to the issues herein, and assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in ruling and determining that the testimony already given in the hearing by said witness Tobin is not material or relevant to the issues herein, and assigns as error the trial examiner's ruling and action in striking out the testimony of said witness Tobin, for the reasons among others that said testimony given by said Tobin and that offered to be proved by her in said offer of proof was and is competent, material and relevant to the issues herein, and for the further reason that said testimony so stricken and said testimony so offered to be proved by said witness relates to matters as to which the trial examiner permitted the Board and the ILGWU to adduce testimony, and the striking out of the testimony so given and the refusal [fol. 271] to receive the testimony so offered is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and deprives petitioner of a fair trial herein and of its liberty and property without due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; all of said rulings and actions of the trial examiner have been taken over and against the objections of petitioner.

In connection with this exception, petitioner refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pages 5802, 5802), (R. IX. 3257), and excepts to the rulings, actions and comments of the trial examiner therein set forth for each and all of the reasons hereinabove stated, to wit:

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think there is one other matter, the matter with respect to Wave Tobin. I believe at the time that matter came up Mr. Ingraham presented an offer of proof and a protest against the ruling of the examiner, which I made on August 19, 1942, which is Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS. Now, as far as the offer of proof is concerned, I have gone over Board's Exhibit 1-SSSSS, and I don't consider that there are any matters in these which are material in the hearing, and therefore I reject the offer of proof; and furthermore— * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: And furthermore, with respect to the testimony which Wave Tobin has thus far given, I have reviewed that, and I do not consider that it is material or relevant to the issues in this case, and accordingly it is stricken.

"Now, with these rulings I think, Mr. Ingraham, we are ready to proceed."

Petitioner further assigns as error said rulings and action of the trial examiner because of his subsequent rulings permitting the Board and ILGWU to adduce in rebuttal evidence relating to matters which said witness would have testified concerning, and permitting evidence in rebuttal which was not proper rebuttal but which related to matters which should properly have been adduced in the Board's case in chief, if pertinent at all.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in refusing to restrict the evidence of the Board and ILGWU after petitioner and intervener rested in the further hearing, to proper rebuttal evidence and in permitting the Board and ILGWU to adduce extensive testimony which, if pertinent at all to the issues, was properly a part of their case in chief, and not proper to be offered in rebuttal.

These rulings arose upon petitioner's objections to the question asked of Board's witness Etta Dorsey at P. 5844 of the record (R. IX. 3276), as follows: "Q. How did you learn of that meeting (referring to the organization meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on April 27, 1937), as not being proper rebuttal testimony, and upon petitioner's motion to strike the answer given and upon petitioner's objection to the succeeding question (at p. 5844-5), (R. IX. 3276): "Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?" as not being proper rebuttal testimony. The next fifty pages of the record (R. IX. 3276-3308, incl.), contain a discussion of this objection, as a result of which the trial examiner permitted the answer given to stand and permitted the Board to continue the examination upon matters covered by the Board's case in chief. To this ruling and action of the trial examiner petitioner assigns error for all the reasons and grounds set forth in the statements and arguments of petitioner's and intervener's counsel appearing at p. 5844 and to p. 5895 inclusive of the record (R. IX. 3276-3309 incl.), and for the same reasons assigns as error all the testimony thereafter adduced by the Board and ILGWU [fol. 273] from said witness Etta Dorsey in pursuance of said ruling and action of the trial examiner.

In connection with this assignment of error and for convenience Petitioner refers to the following excerpts from the transcript of the record (pp. 5844, 5845, 5848, 5857, 5859, 5886 and 5894) (R. IX. 3276, 3279, 3285, 3286, 3303, 3308), setting forth the trial examiner's position and rulings to which rulings and action petitioner excepts for all the reasons aforesaid, which are too voluminous to be stated here, and for the further reasons that said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner in view of the trial examiner's rulings limiting petitioner's and intervener's evidence to the offers of proof and in restricting petitioner to some ten or eleven employee witnesses and in refusing to permit intervener to put on any witnesses, and because in applying said ruling the trial examiner permitted the Board and ILGWU to go far beyond even the limits set by the trial examiner in his said ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and as set forth in said excerpts from the transcript of the record, by reason of all of which petitioner has been denied a fair and impartial trial and due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The excerpts above referred to are as follows:

"Q. How did you learn of that meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that. It is not proper rebuttal.

Miss Weyand: This is a preliminary question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is preliminary, she may answer.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten): Do you want the question read?

[fol. 274] "A. No, that's all right. Well, I don't remember, but it was either by telephone or by Mrs. Wherry telling us; she usually went around and told the instructors.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out; it is not a preliminary question, it is an attempt to prove the Board's case in chief, not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll determine whether it is preliminary. You may proceed.

Mr. Reed: I couldn't hear your closing ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said I will determine whether it is preliminary.

Mr. Reed: This answer, now, is not a preliminary answer.

Q. (By Miss Weyand): Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that question as not proper rebuttal." (R. IX. 3276)

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, all I can say is, Senator, I am going to require that Miss Weyand confine it to rebuttal. I further want to say that this undoubtedly is preliminary in nature. Now, if this lady, who was there at the time, is in position to testify concerning these definite things which these people testified to, I think it is rebuttal.

Now, I have no idea, and will say so now, of permitting Miss Weyand or Mr. Langsdale to go into this entire subject matter in any form or fashion, and it is confined to rebuttal." (p. 5848) (R. IX. 3279).

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, there is possibility of that, Senator, providing I were to permit it. Now, we may differ as to just what is rebuttal. I think clearly Miss Weyand's first statement is entirely out of line, as far as I am concerned. I mean by that that you aren't going to try all the issues of this case over again, but I am still convinced in my own mind that if this witness testifies about these matters, which these four or five or six girls testified about here, that were in her section, and about specific matters in their testimony in the record, I don't see why that isn't rebuttal." (p. 5857). (R. IX. 3285).

* * * * * * *

[fol. 275] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, I think my statement that I have made two or three times, about what is rebuttal, would cover, perhaps, that matter. When a specific witness—you had several specific witnesses say that they worked in section 415 during March and April, that the instructor did not tell them to go to this meeting, nor did she say anything to them." (p. 5859). (R. IX. 3286).

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think that particular matter is in line with the suggestion which I indicated this morning, without having given any thought to the matter. As a matter of fact, I am more certain now, after having given the matter some thought, that my statement this morning concerning it is correct, and I am equally certain that my statement to Miss Weyand this morning about her first proposition is correct. So, as the result of two hours or two and a half hours of giving it some thought and listening to all counsel, I am still of the opinion that my statement on it this morning was substantially correct." (p. 5886). (R. IX. 3303).

* * * * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Weyand, you may proceed, in line with the suggestions which I made this morning, and if you have any other testimony in line with your other suggestion, you make it as an offer." (p. 5894). (R. IX. 3308).

261.

At pages 5895 to 5899 of the Record (R. IX. 3309-3311) petitioner objected to questions as shown by the following excerpts from the record and was allowed a continuing objection to said line of questioning, to-wit:

"Q. (Miss Weyand) Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to for all of the reasons heretofore asserted as not proper rebuttal and particularly unless the question is limited to the particular witnesses heretofore offered by respondent, by name.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may answer the question, and then you may proceed, Miss Weyand, to bring it within the ruling which I made. (p. 5895). (R. 3309).

• • • • • • •

[fol. 276] "Thereupon the last question was reread by the reporter, as follows: 'Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting at which the union was organized?')

A. Yes, I do.
Q. (By Miss Weyand): How did they learn that?
A. I told the girls.

Mr. Hogsett: That is objected to, unless the question is confined to witnesses offered by respondent who were working there in her section. (p. 5896). (R. 3310).

• • • • • • •

"Q. (By Miss Weyand): Was Oma Lee Cooper working in your section at that time?

Mr. Reed: I make the same objection.

• • • • • • •

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, I assume we may have the same arrangement we have pursued here all the time, a continuing objection if you so desire.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, we do.

Trial Examiner Batten: In order that you don't have to object to every question, that will continue through with this witness. Of course, it will be necessary to renew it on the next witness.

Mr. Tyler: The same objection will be allowed for the intervener, as to this witness, I take it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, that is correct. Let me say this, we will get started here pretty soon, I guess. You may have a continuing objection.

Now, that means to either the respondent or the intervener I am granting a continuing objection to Miss Weyand's examining this witness within the bounds of what I indicated that I thought was proper.

Now, if Miss Weyand exceeds the bounds, I of course, would expect counsel to object, not upon the basis of my ruling, but upon the basis of my statement to Miss Weyand that I don't propose to go into all inclusive matters." (pp. 5898-99). (R. 3311).

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in admitting said testimony and in [fol. 277] permitting the Board's counsel to continue said line of questioning, and assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections to each and all of the questions asked by Board's counsel of the witness Etta Dorsey at pages 5895 to 5944 of the transcript for the reasons, among others, that said testimony is not rebuttal and does not come within the trial examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and covers matters which petitioner was not permitted to go into in said further hearing herein, and because the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

262.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner denying and overruling each and all of the special objections made by petitioner and intervener to particular portions of said testimony of Etta Dorsey, which objections and rulings appear on each and all of the following pages of the transcript; to-wit, 5900 to 5904 inclusive, 5907 to 5911 inclusive, 5913, 5914, 5916 to 5922 inclusive, 5924 to 5929 inclusive, 5931 to 5936 inclusive, 5938 to 5941 inclusive and 5943 respectively (R.IX. 3312-3342 incl.), for each and all of the reasons given in said respective objections and for the further reason that said questions related to matters which the trial examiner refused to permit petitioner and intervener to go into in further hearing, and because same does not come within the trial examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and be-[fol. 278] cause by the admission and consideration of said testimony petitioner has been denied a fair trial and due process of law.

263.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pp. 6042-6043 (R.IX. 3397-3398), to-wit:

"Q. Did the mere fact that you said, 'There is to be a meeting of the employees' in your opinion amount to an order to attend it?

A. Well the girls felt like I had the authority—I was given that authority. See?

Mr. Tyler: Now, I object—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. He asked the question, and I suggest that he keeps still until she answers it, and then if he wants to move to strike out any part of it, all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

Read the question and answer, please.

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, finish your answer.

A. (Continuing) The girls felt like I had the authority to tell them what to do, and when I said, 'Do this', they usually did it.

Mr. Tyler: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out, because it doesn't state whether she felt she was giving the order, but only what she assumes the employees understood, which wasn't the question, and is a conclusion of the witness.

Mr. Langsdale: I submit, the answer is a perfect answer to his question. Certainly she has a right to judge from appearances and conduct of these people. And this is a pretty late day for Mr. Tyler to be talking about conclusions of the witness.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects because it is not responsive at all to the question."

[fol. 279] 263-a.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in overruling petitioner's objections to the Board's questions of the witness Lola Skeens as shown in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6096-6098 and 6100 of the transcript (R.IX. 3427-3430), to-wit:

"Q. Do you know of any occasions upon which she went to Mr. Tyler's office or attended to business of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during working hours?

Mr. Hogsett: Objected to as not rebuttal of anything in the respondent's case.

• • • • •

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Reed: Now, that embraces more than whether she went to the office. The question is, whether she knows of any occasion when she went to his office or attended to business of the union on company time. Now, that is not in rebuttal of anything we have put in this case.

• • • • •

Q. Do you know how the girls working in your section learned of the meeting?

A. I told them.

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing objection to this line of questioning?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Hogsett: As not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it is upon the same grounds stated as to the previous witness."

for the reason that said testimony and rulings do not come within examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence and relates to matters which petitioner and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and [fol. 280] denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law. In pursuance of the continuing objection allowed to petitioner by the trial examiner to said line of questions and testimony, respondent further assigns as error the admission of the testimony thereafter adduced by the Board and ILGWU from said witness Lola Skeens in pursuance of said ruling and action of the trial examiner appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6098 to 6114 inclusive (R.IX. 3429-3440, incl.), and at pages 6166 to 6168 inclusive (R.IX. 3468-3469), for the reason that same is not proper rebuttal evidence but if pertinent to the issues at all was a part of the Board's case in chief, and for the further reason that same does not come within the limits set by the trial examiner as to rebuttal evidence and for the further reason that same relates to matters which the trial examiner refused to permit petitioner and intervener to go into in said further hearing herein, and because the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

264.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6172 to 6174 inclusive (R.IX. 3471-3473), to-wit:

"Mr. Hogsett: If the court please, we object to this line of examination on the ground that it isn't rebuttal of anything. In other words, it is just going into the Board's case in chief again.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is, insofar as it attempts to determine what transpired at the meeting.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, that is the line of inquiry I am now objecting to.

[fol. 281] "Trial Examiner Batten: But, of course, part of this testimony as I recall it, was this witness' statement as to why she joined.

Mr. Hogsett: Which is not rebuttal either.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let's take them one at a time. I agree with you that the other matter, I don't believe is, the matter as to what transpired. But I gathered from the questions that it was an attempt of Miss Weyand's to set the time of the occurrence rather than what transpired.

Mr. Hogsett: Then, if that is so, I move to strike all of the testimony of this witness as to what transpired at the meeting of April 27, 1937, because it isn't proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it may stand, because I think that was the purpose of it.

Mr. Hogsett: And I move to strike out what occurred at the latter meeting, for the same reason.

* * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: May respondent have a continuing objection to this testimony, for reasons we have heretofore given?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Of course, I agree that going into what transpired at the meeting is not proper rebuttal, but, as I said before, I don't think that is the purpose of it."

for the reason that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and in pursuance to the continuing objection allowed Petitioner by the trial examiner petitioner assigns as error said rulings and the admission of all the testimony of said witness Geneva Copenhaver adduced by the Board and ILGWU in pursuance of said ruling and action of the trial examiner, appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6169 to 6200 inclusive (R.IX. 3470-3480; R.X. 3481-3487 incl.), and pages 6280 to 6287 inclusive (R.X. 3532-3537), for the reason that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence, and does not come within the limits of the ruling of the trial examiner as to rebuttal evidence and relates to matters which the trial examiner refused to permit petitioner and intervener to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to former rulings of the [fol. 282] trial examiner and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

Petitioners assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6176-77-78 (R.IX. 3474-75-76), for the reasons stated in petitioner's objections therein made, to-wit:

"Miss Weyand. I offer Board's exhibit No. 37 for identification in evidence.

Mr. Reed. We object—

Trial Examiner Batten: What—For the purpose of indicating it recalled to the witness' mind that she attended the meeting?

Miss Weyand: No. I want to offer it for the purpose of showing that every girl that attended that meeting, as far as I can see, is in uniform. I think that is proper evidence for the Board to consider in connection with the testimony—

* * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I am certain everything said officially there is in the record. It doesn't make any difference. I will receive it, and I am receiving it on the same basis I have received other newspaper articles which have been received thus far—I think, about 38 of them.

Mr. Reed: We object as incompetent and immaterial and not proper direct examination, undertaking to introduce into the case as substantive evidence a mere newspaper article, and as not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Langsdale: I understand the article itself is not offered but merely the picture.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I have received it."

265-a.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6178-79 and 6182, (R.IX. 3476, 3479), to-wit:

[fol. 283] Q. Were you working on the same floor with Sylvia Hull the last day Sylvia Hull worked for the company?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you recall what happened that morning?

Mr. Tyler: We object. The Sylvia Hull incident is in no sense proper rebuttal. It was gone into in long detail in the case of the Board in chief.

Mr. Hogsett: Your Honor, I ask you to just stop for a second and think if this is rebuttal—everything is rebuttal that pertains to the case in any way.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, my idea of the Sylvia Hull incident is this:—I tried to, I think, in my talk here a month or so ago, indicate I did not think it was within the offers of proof upon which I was taking testimony, but I don't remember whether Mr. Tyler, or who it was convinced me that I was wrong. I know Mr. Langsdale very strenuously opposed it and said it was a closed book.

Mr. Hogsett: I ask you to draw the line somewhere, if the Examiner please.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I recall, both witnesses presented by the Board so far has been permitted to testify about the matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed, Miss Weyand."

for each and all the reasons therein stated in petitioner's and intervener's objections and for the further reason that said questions relate to matters which the trial examiner refused to permit the petitioner and intervener to go into in said further hearing and because same does not come within the limits of the ruling made by the trial examiner as to rebuttal evidence and because same are contrary to former rulings made by the trial examiner in said further hearing and because same are unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and deprive petitioner of a fair trial and due process of law.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in refusing to permit petitioner to recall Wave Tobin to the stand, as shown by the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 5815 (R. IX. 3265), to wit:

"Mr. Reed: Now, Your Honor said for us to proceed. We would now like to recall Wave Tobin, we haven't finished her examination.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Senator, I disposed of that matter by my ruling on the offer of proof, and so forth."

267.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6189, 6190 (R. X. 3481), to wit:

"Q. Did you consider your instructors as supervisors?
A. Absolutely.

Mr. Ingraham: Now—

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move to strike the answer out as not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the answer may be stricken. While you make your objection—I assume you had one?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. I object to the question on the ground that it is not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Absolutely, I regarded her as being my supervisor.
Q. (By Miss Weyand) Why?

Mr. Ingraham: May I have a continuing objection?

[fol. 285] "Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. Well, I think there is already a continuing objection on this witness.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if not, I want a continuing objection".

And further assigns as error the admission of subsequent testimony of the same nature received in pursuance of this ruling.

268.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6197, 6198 (R. X. 3486), to wit:

"Q. Do instructors eat in the cafeteria with the other girls?

A. They eat—

Mr. Ingraham: (Interrupting) Now, I object to that question for the reason it is immaterial to any issue in this case, and it is not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Hogsett: If I may supplement by this suggestion, that illustrates the thin character of this Board's case, that they would have to rely on the fact that domination could be shown by an instructor eating in the same cafeteria. Now, that is getting down to pretty thin stuff, I submit, and the subject matter is wholly immaterial.

Miss Weyand: I don't offer to prove they eat in the same cafeteria. That isn't the purpose of this question.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, it is in the same field, the same atmosphere.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer the question.

Mr. Lane: The intervener makes the same objection, it is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling."

269.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in sustaining objection to the question asked by counsel for the intervener of the witness Copenhaver at page 6250 of the record (R. X. 3518) as to what was her husband's occupation.

[fol. 286] 270.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to testify as to matters which were not proper rebuttal evidence over the objections of the petitioner and intervener, which objections appear in the transcript of the record at page 6311 (R. X. 3551-3552), as follows, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Had you ever seen Mr. Tyler before the meeting at which the union was formed?

A. No.

"Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, with respect to all of these questions, the intervener objects, with respect to this witness, as not proper rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

And petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in permitting the Board's counsel and counsel for the ILGWU to continue said line of questioning of the witness Bessie Weilert and excepts to each and all the questions asked by Board's counsel and by counsel for the ILGWU of said witness as set forth in the record at pages 6308 to 6355 inclusive, 6358 to 6360 inclusive, 6435 to 6458 inclusive, 6496 to 6514 inclusive, and 6528 (R. X. 3550-3581; 3615-3621; 3631-3636; 3639), in pursuance of said continuing objection, and assigns as error each and all the rulings of the trial examiner permitting said evidence to be adduced, for the reasons among others that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does [fol. 287] not come within the trial examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and for the reason that same relates to matters with petitioner and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing, and is contrary to prior rulings of the trial examiner and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner in refusing to sustain the objections and motions to strike of the respondent and intervener to the testimony given by the witness Bessie Weilert at pages 6315 to 6317 inclusive (R. X. 3554-3556) for the reason that said testimony was not proper rebuttal testimony, related to a time prior to November, 1936 to which the trial examiner limited petitioner in its examinations and related to alleged events occurring prior to the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, and is wholly immaterial, incompetent and irrelevant to the issues herein.

272.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in refusing to sustain petitioner's objections and motion to strike out the answers and testimony of the witness Bessie Weilert given at pages 6327 to 6329 inclusive (R. X. 3561-3563) for the reason that said testimony was not responsive to the questions asked and was not proper rebuttal testimony.

[fol. 288]

273.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner in refusing to strike out the answer of the witness referred to in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 6343 (R. X. 3572), to wit:

"Q. Do you know Mrs. Gray?

A. I do.

"Q. Who is she?

A. She was manager of our outside store.

Mr. Langsdale: I didn't get the answer.

A. She was manager of our outside store, to my knowledge.

Q. (By Miss Weyand) How do you know she is the manager?

A. Well, we always had to see Mrs. Gray if we wanted anything in the store, to see Mrs. Gray, and when it was remnant bundles, she would send i. d. m's, and say it was the remnant bundles.

Mr. Reed: I can't understand the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

A. And [she] signature was on the i. d. m.

Mr. Lane: Now, I move to strike out the answer that Mrs. Gray was manager of the store, for the reason it is a mere conclusion; and the following answer of the witness doesn't state any facts upon which the conclusion can properly be based.

274.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling of the trial examiner at pages 6349, 6350 (R. X. 3574), permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to state that she considered the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union a company dominated union or a company union and to state why she thought [fol. 289] so, as follows: "A. Because it seemed it never done any good when you took grievances up with that committee; I never did get anywhere when I was on the committee, and everything went just as the company seen fit."

275.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner at pages 6444 to 6446 inclusive (R. X. 3620), in permitting the witness Bessie Weilert to answer the question of counsel for the ILGWU, to wit: "Q. (By Mr. Langsdale) So then this part of this document, which you signed, is not true? and the question: "Q.

(By Mr. Langsdale) Or 'That said meeting was convened after the close of working hours at the plant'. That is not true, is it?" and in overruling petitioner's and intervener's objections thereto.

At pages 6497 of the record (R. X. 3632), counsel for the Board asked the following question and the witness Bessie Weilert made the following answer, to wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Have you ever heard any girl, as a result of complaining in a union meeting or to a committee or anywhere, complain that she had been treated unfairly because she had made the complaint?

"A. I don't know that they put it in those words, that it was merely because of the complaint, but I think it was done, plenty of them."

Petitioner and intervener moved to strike out the answer and particularly that part of the answer "but I think it was done, plenty of them" and the trial examiner ruled that it should stand, to which ruling and action petitioner excepts for the reason that said answer is a conclusion, not proper rebuttal and prejudicial to petitioner.

[fol. 290] 277.

At page 6536 of the record (R. X. 3640-41), the following occurred:

"Q. I hand you ILGWU Exhibit No. 10 which appears at pages 5375 and 5961 of the Circuit Court of Appeals record and ask you to state when you first heard of that petition.

A. In the early spring of 1937.

Q. Where were you when you first heard of it?

A. In Mrs. Reed's home.

Q. What was the conversation that took place on that occasion?

A. Well, I had just come home from New York, and—

Mr. Lane: Just a moment, if Your Honor please. The intervener objects to this and all similar questions. It is not proper rebuttal testimony.

Mr. Hogsett: We join in that objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Overruled."

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the foregoing excerpt and his action in permitting the Board's counsel and counsel for the ILGWU to continue said line of questioning of the witness Keyes, and further excepts to each and all the questions of said counsel to said witness, appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6535 to 6552 inclusive (R. X. 3640-3652, incl.), for the reasons that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does not come within the limits of the ruling as to rebuttal evidence made by the trial examiner, and for the reason that same relates to matters which petitioner and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to prior rulings of the trial examiner, and the [fol. 291] admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

278.

At pages 6572-6573 of the record (R. X. 3662) appears the following:

"Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Loyalty League?

Mr. Tyler: Intervener objects, because this is not proper rebuttal.

Mr. Hogsett: We join in that objection, asking that counsel be restricted to rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Hogsett: May we have a continuing objection, as in the case of other witnesses?

Trial Examiner Batten. Yes.

Mr. Tyler: And the intervener also?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes."

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the foregoing excerpts from the record and further excepts to the rulings and action of the trial examiner in permitting Board's counsel and counsel for the ILGWU to continue examination of said witness May Stevens, and to each and all the questions asked by Board's counsel and by counsel of the ILGWU of said witness as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6573 to 6595 inclusive and 6638 to 6647 inclusive (R. X. 3662-3676; 3695-3698), and to each and all the rulings of the trial examiner permitting said evidence to be adduced on behalf of the Board and ILGWU, for the reasons, among others, that said testimony is not proper rebuttal evidence and does not come within the trial examiner's ruling as to rebuttal evidence, and for the reason [fol. 292] that same relates to matters which petitioner and intervener were not permitted to go into in said further hearing and is contrary to prior rulings of the trial examiner, and the admission of same is unfair and prejudicial to respondent and denies to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6581, 6582, 6584 (R. X. 3668, 3669), to wit:

"Q. What made you feel that way?

A. Well, the Fern Sigler incident, just previous to that, and by Mrs. Donnelly saying we would never have to have a union, and I decided that they had changed so [suffden] that it was surely something for the company and I had better join. And when in 1934, when I was in another shop, at Twenty sixth and Main, I met the Donnelly girls they had sent to that plant that were union girls—

Mr. Reed: Oh, wait a minute, now. That certainly is not rebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, let the witness finish, Senator. If there is something you think should be stricken, all right, but don't interrupt the witness.

Read the answer thus far, please.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Finish your answer.

A. (Continuing)—and talked to them most every day about the conditions and why they were sent down there, and they were told that they were not making their guarantee, and they knew it was because they were union girls and that they would eventually be laid off.

Mr. Reed: I move to strike that as incompetent, immaterial, and as not rebuttal, being mere hearsay, and binding on no one. I think the Examiner excluded us from the right to even ask questions about 1934.

[fol. 293] "Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Senator, assuming I did, hasn't this witness a right to say why she felt that way? • • • for the reasons therein stated and because said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and shows the bias and prejudice of the trial examiner against petitioner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand."

280.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner in refusing to permit the witness May Stevens to answer the following question appearing in the record at page 6606 (R. X. 3683), to-wit:

"Q. By the way, what was your husband then, an organizer for the Union?"

and in rejecting the following offers of proof made by petitioner and intervener appearing in the transcript of the record at pages 6608, 6609 (R. X. 3685), to-wit:

"Mr. Hogsett: We offer to prove that the witness on the stand that at the time concerning which she has been testifying, namely, in February, March and April, 1937, and continuously up to the present time, her husband then was and at all such times has been and is now an organizer for a labor union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I'll reject the offer on the basis of what I have just said.

Mr. Hogsett: Yes, Mr. Ingraham says that we desire now to make a similar offer of proof in relation to Geneva Copenhaver. • • •

Mr. Tyler: Intervener asks to be allowed to join in both offers of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: You don't mean Mr. Langsdale's proof.

Mr. Tyler: No, Mrs. Copenhaver and this one.

Trial Examiner Batten: Both of the offers made by Mr. Hogsett? Mr. Tyler wants to join in the two offers of proof made by Mr. Hogsett."

[fol. 294] 281.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner in sustaining objection to the following question asked by petitioner of the witness May Stevens at page 6662, to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Hogsett) Do you remember the taking of an oath in such a way that you would knowingly make a false affidavit" and in rejecting respondent's offer of proof (page 6663) that the witness if permitted to answer said question, would answer same in the affirmative.

282.

Petitioner assigns as error the comment of the trial examiner embraced in the words "without all of the flourishes" contained in the following excerpt from the transcript of the record at page 6667, to-wit:

"Q. The fact is, the Sylvia Hull incident occurred some seven weeks after the March 2 paper was signed by the employees, didn't it?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as argumentative.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, Did the Sylvia Hull incident occur seven weeks after?—without all the flourishes.

Mr. Hogsett: Well, I don't know why there is any flourish."

283.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 6702 (R. X. 3710):

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you may answer this if you want to, Mr. Ingraham, and if you don't want to you don't need to: Am I to assume you are going to have all of the girls in Section 518 here and testify about these specific matters?

[fol. 295] "Mr. Ingraham: I believe we are going to have a large number of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I want to tell you now that you are not, so don't plan on it. I would say, not to exceed three witnesses on those matters, out of that section."

for the reasons, among others, that said limitations upon petitioner to three witnesses out of said Section 518 was unfair and prejudicial to petitioner, for the reason that said testimony related to highly important issues in view of the former findings of the Board and trial examiner and of the contentions of the Board and ILGWU in this hearing, and unless the trial examiner was satisfied that the testimony of said three witnesses established the facts to which they testified, the limitation was unfair and prejudicial to petitioner, and in any event petitioner was entitled to put on additional witnesses for the consideration of the Board and Court and the limitation denied to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law.

284.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6704-5-6 (R. X. 3712, 3713):

"Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) There has been testimony given that the girls returned to work in that section after attending meetings. What are the facts about that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Ingraham, I do not believe that is proper surrebuttal, because there was testimony by some witnesses concerning that and the Board put on some concerning it. Now, I don't believe that is proper questioning at this stage of the proceedings.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) There has been testimony given that if an operator did not intend to come to work she would notify her instructor. What are the facts about that?

[fol. 296] Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Ingraham) There has been testimony given that after Mr. Baty took charge of the factory in 1935, and up until July 15, 1939, instructors had the authority to transfer girls from one section to another. What is the fact about that?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal. Mr. Baty in 1939, ran the whole gamut with reference to that particular issue.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

* * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question to the effect that, Did girls return to work after attending any of the meetings referred to? she would answer in the negative.

Respondent further offers to prove by this witness—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I want to make an objection to that offer, for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Proceed.

Respondent further offers to prove by this witness that if she were permitted to answer the question as to whom the girls would notify if they were not coming to work, she would answer, 'The employment office', and not 'the instructor'.

Mr. Langsdale: That is objected to in the offer for all of the reasons offered to the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Any others?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that's all.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offers are rejected."

for the reasons, among others, that said rulings and action prevented petitioner from adducing proper and highly material evidence in view of the former findings of the trial examiner and Board and the issues as developed in the hearing, and by the denial thereof petitioner has been denied a fair trial and due process of law.

[fol. 297] 285.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6706-7-8-9 (R. X. 3713-14-15), to-wit:

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mrs. Chaney, did you ever know of any instructor directing the girls in her section to go with her, the instructor, to any union meeting?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Did you hear Etta Dorsey give any instructions or information about the holding of union meetings to the girls in her section?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal, and repetition.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Did you ever see any group of girls being herded together to a meeting of the union by any instructor?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal. Respondent has so characterized it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler): You joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of your own free will?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

* * *

"Q. Do you know whether the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company obtained any improved conditions by the contract which the union made with the company in May 1937?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

* * * * *

[fol. 298] "Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove that this witness, if allowed to answer the question as to whether she ever saw any group of girls taken to union meetings by the instructor, would answer that she did not.

Mr. Langsdale: That offer is objected to for the reasons offered against the question.

* * * * *

Mr. Tyler: * * * * And I offer to prove that this witness, if asked the question whether there was any evidence of employees being herded to the union meetings, would answer No.

I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to testify as to whether she knew of benefits received by the employees as a result of the contract of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the company of May 27, 1937, would state that she did not know of definite benefits received by reason of that contract.

Mr. Langsdale: The offers are objected to for the reasons given against the questions.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected.

Mr. Tyler: Of course, it is understood that an exception is allowed, without stating—Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you have an automatic exception."

286.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at page 6716 (R. X. 3715-16), to-wit:

"Q. (By Miss Weyand) Did you ever work, on a transfer slip, in a section other than your regular section —the transfer slip I have reference to—

Mr. Hogsett (Interrupting): Objected to on the same ground, as not proper cross-examination in surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

287.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following [fol. 299] excerpts from the transcript of the Record at pages 6731-2-3 (R. X. 3716-3717), to-wit:

"Mr. Hogsett: On page 6675 of the record yesterday, while Mrs. Stevens was on the stand, I made a verbal offer of proof in respect to the amount of dues of the International—

* * * * *

"I offer to prove by the witness May Stevens that the amount of regular dues of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at the time of her membership was 35c a week, which, for 52 weeks a year would be $18.20 a year, and that in addition to that there were two regular assessments, one of $1 per year as a death benefit assessment, and the second an assessment of $1 a year as a fund in the Work Labor Movement as a whole. That is all.

Mr. Langsdale: The offer is objected to as immaterial, doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case. It is certainly immaterial, unless they prove what they got for the 35c a week, and how little the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union got for their 25c a month.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer, because my recollection is that I rejected your tentative offer."

288.

(a) Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record relating to the testimony of witness Mrs. Reece, to-wit: (pp. 6742-3-4) (R. X. 3720-3721):

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) Mrs. Reece, did you ever hear any instructor direct the girls or the workers in her section to attend union meetings in a group?

A. No, I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on that question with the prior witness. I do not consider it proper.

Mr. Tyler: I expect to ask two more questions on the same line. Shall I make an offer of proof first, or—

Trial Examiner Batten: No. Ask the questions, Mr. Tyler.

Q. Did you ever see any instructor in the Donnelly plant gather the girls in her section together and take them to any union meeting?

[fol. 300] A. No.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: I make the same ruling with respect to that question, Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Langsdale: And I ask that the answer be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will wait until Mr. Tyler makes his offer of proof.

Proceed Mr. Tyler.

Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the custom in the Donnelly factory as to whether the employees went to union meetings with anybody they pleased or not?

Mr. Langsdale: Objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

Trial Examiner Batten: The same ruling I made to the other two questions, Mr. Tyler.

* * * * *

Mr. Tyler: * * * I offer to prove by this witness that if she were allowed to answer the questions which the Examiner has sustained objections to, she would testify that she never heard of any instructor direct the girls in her section to attend any union meeting in a group; that she never saw any instructor gather the girls together and take them to a union meeting; and that the custom at the Donnelly plant was that employees would attend union meetings with whomever they pleased, without obstruction or pressure or limitation.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to the offer for all of the reasons given against the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is rejected."

(b) Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers by the witness Mrs. Hutchinson as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6751-52-53 (R. X. 3725-3726).

(c) Petitioner further assigns as error, the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with refer-
[fol. 301] ence to similar questions and answers in the transcript of the record at pages 6789-90-91 (R. X. 3734-35-36).

(d) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Lora Fries, as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6811-12-13-14 (R. X. 3739-3740).

(e) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Lillie Reynolds, as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6824-25-26 (R. X. 3743-44).

(f) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Alvin Reifel, as set forth in the transcript of the record at page 6941 (R. X. 3773).

(g) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness, Elizabeth Barrett, as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6947-48-49 (R. X. 3774-3775).

(h) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Marjorie Green, as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6962-63-64 (R. X. 3777-3778).

[fol. 302] 289.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6762-63-64-66-67 (R. 3727-28-29-30).

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I intended to state before I put this witness on the stand that I understood you to say that you limited respondent to three witnesses in connection with the matters that Etta Dorsey testified about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, is that the way you understand it?

Mr. Ingraham: I understood you to say that very positively.

Trial Examiner: Well, I think you are correct.

Mr. Langsdale:: Well, I understand the limitation would be with reference to all matters inquired about this morning in connection with Etta Dorsey's testimony.

Trial Examiner Batten: My understanding of what I intended to do was limit you to three witnesses from that section with respect to the matters that you asked the witnesses about. Now, is there any difference between that and your understanding?

Mr. Ingraham: No, that is what I understood you to say. Of course, we will prepare an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you have an offer, you make it right now, Mr. Ingraham.

* * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers to prove by Ruth Strandt, Ida Barton, Leone Sams, Beatrice Face, Goldie Sprague, Nina Gilardi, Grace Pardun, Anne Belan, Lulu Gordon, Ruth Chaney Miller, Ida Mauk, Estel Rothgeb, Ora Dull, Lela Stevens, Hazel Higgins, Violet Hawkins, Anne Elizabeth Stone, and each of them, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were employed during the months of March, April, and May, 1937, by the Donnelly Garment Company, and during said time worked in Section 518; that during all of said time Etta Dorsey was their instructor and they had no other instructor during said time except Etta Dorsey; that Etta Dorsey did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid by the Donnelly Garment Company for the time spent at the meeting of March 18, 1937, where Mrs. Reed spoke; and they were not, in fact, paid for the time spent at said meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not inform them or state to them that they would be paid for the time spent at the meeting of April 27, 1937, and they, in fact, were not paid for the time spent at that meeting; that Etta Dorsey did not state to them that they would be paid for time [fol. 303] spent at union meetings, and they, in fact, were not paid for time spent at any union meetings; that they did not know of any employee being paid for time spent at any said union meetings, or the meeting of March 18, April 27, or any other meeting; that they did not attend any meetings during said time and return to work.

Mr. Langsdale: Union meetings, you mean?

Mr. Ingraham: Well, any of the aforesaid meetings, and return to work; that in the event they did not intend to come to work they would notify the employment office, and would not notify their instructor; that the employment office would transfer operators in their section and it was not done by the instructor.

* * * * *

I want to add to the offer of proof that each of said stated persons will further testify that they never received a pay check with the section number on it that was not the correct section number in which said person worked and that each of said persons' pay checks had on it Section number 518 during the months of March, April and May of 1937.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, my understanding is that the offer of proof is in line with the testimony of the three witnesses, and taking into consideration the objections offered by the various attorneys, representing the parties, and upon that basis I reject the offer."

for the reasons, among others, that said line of testimony was highly important to the issues herein in view of the former findings and conclusions of the trial examiner and Board, and in view of the contentions of the Board and ILGWU in the further hearing, and unless the trial examiner was satisfied that the three witnesses who had already testified to such matters had established same, it was prejudicial and unfair to petitioner to limit such testimony to three witnesses, and in any event petitioner was entitled to put on further witnesses as to said matters for the consideration of the Board and Court, and the limitation made by the trial examiner denied to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 304] 290.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling, action and comment of the trial examiner as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6784-85 (R. X. 3733), to-wit:

"Q. Do you recall ever being paid for any time you spent at any Loyalty League meetings?

A. No.

* * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: —that doesn't change the situation at all, because this morning I had no idea of going into all of these generalities, which I don't think carry a great deal of weight, anyway."

291.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the trial examiner and the action of the Board in affirming same in receiving in evidence over petitioner's objections the testimony and each and every part thereof offered by the Board and ILGWU from the old NRA case #160 and from the Judge Miller case No. 2924, and in overruling petitioner's objections thereto.

292.

Petitioner assigns as error the several findings, conclusions and recommendations of the trial examiner in the Intermediate Report and the Board's affirmance thereof for the reason that same thwart and violate the prime purposes and provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

[fol. 305] 293.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6834-35-36-37-38 (R.X. 3744-3745), to-wit:

"Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, does the same ruling apply to section 413 as to section 518?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Exactly.

"Mr. Ingraham: Then respondent makes an offer of proof that if Marie Richardson, Hazel Hardman, Emilea Raines, Grace Short Kunther, Eva Liberman, Edna Tattershall, Louis Kesinger, Millie Ihle, Katherine Sutulovick, Ruth Putnam, Emma Hansen, Edith Alexander, Lillie Reynolds, Bertha Taylor, Lucille Wilkey, Anna Spahr, Perl Hall, Nellie States, Ruth McBride, Lorene Johnson, Beulah Perkins, Mildred Brooks Ballard, Opal Richardson, Dorothy Dietz Sharp, Gladys Rudd, were permitted to testify, they would testify as follows;

"That they were employed at the Donnelly Garment Company during the months of March, April, and May, 1937; that their instructor was Lola Skeens during said period; that each attended the meeting of March 18, 1937; that Lola Skeens did not notify them or any of them that said meeting was to be held; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section notifying the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens did not inform the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at that meeting; that they were not paid for the time spent at that meeting; that each of said persons attended the meeting of April 27, at which time the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed; that Lola Skeens did not notify any of them of said meeting; that Lola Skeens did not go up the north side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting, and that the thread girl did not go up the south side of the section, telling the girls of the meeting; that Lola Skeens did not tell the girls that they were to be paid for the time spent at said meeting; and that none of the persons named received any pay for the time spent at said meeting; that they attended union meetings, and were never notified by Lola Skeens that said meetings were to be held, and were not informed by Lola Skeens that they would be paid for the time spent at said meetings, or any of them; and they were not, in fact, paid for any time spent at any union meeting; that Lola Skeens did not notify them of any Loyalty League meetings, and they were never paid for any time spent at any Loyalty League meetings; that all the meetings above referred to were held after working hours.

[fol. 306] "Trial Examiner Batten: Now, aren't you including two things there that you haven't asked this witness thus far, Mr. Ingraham.

"Mr. Ingraham: What are those two things?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you just said, 'All the meetings were held after working hours,' and you said they would testify that they were not paid for any Loyalty League meetings. I don't recall that you asked this witness that.

"Mr. Ingraham: I think I did, and I think I asked at least one of these witnesses if meetings were held after working hours.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I thought you were making me an offer now on the basis of those three last witnesses.

"Mr. Ingraham: I am, and I thought I asked that question.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: * * * I will ask you if it is your intent that the offer of proof cover the testimony covered by the three prior witnesses?

"Now, if that is your intention, then I am willing to accept the offer of proof.

"Mr. Ingraham: All right.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I am perfectly willing the offer of proof be just as all-inclusive as the last three witnesses.

* * * * *

"Mr. Ingraham: That Lola Skeens did not turn the power off for the purpose of sending the employees in section 413 to any of the meetings referred to.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the offer of proof will be rejected on the same grounds as previously stated, for the same reasons, and I will allow the same objections, if there were any."

for the reasons, among others, that said line of testimony was highly important to the issues herein in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and Board, and in view of the contentions of the Board and ILGWU in the further hearing and unless the Trial Examiner was satisfied that the three witnesses who had [fol. 307] already testified to such matters had established same, it was prejudicial and unfair to petitioner to limit such testimony to three witnesses, and in any event petitioner was entitled to put on further witnesses as to said matters for the consideration of the Board and Court, and the limitation made by the Trial Examiner denied to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

294.

(a) Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) made with reference to the examination of the witness Fred Brown as set forth in the following excerpts from the transcript of the record at pages 6915, 6916, to-wit:

"Q. Do you know whether the employees obtained any benefits—additional rights under that contract that they didn't have before?

"A. Yes, they did. * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think, Mr. Tyler, I want to open up that matter now, so I will ask you not to. If you have an offer of proof on it that you want to make, all right.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove that this witness, if allowed to answer the question as to whether benefits were derived from the contract in the spring of 1937 and what the benefits were, would —

"Mr. Langsdale: Which contract?

"Mr. Tyler: I think there is only one.

"Mr. Langsdale: Two.

"Mr. Tyler: All right. The contract of May 27, 1937, as supplemented by the wage agreement of June 22, 1937.

"— would testify that he does not remember in detail all of such benefits, but that he is positive that some of the minimum— that the minimum pay before the contract was $15.00 a week and that by reason of the contract the minimum for anyone was raised to $16.50 a week, and that the [fol. 308] payments made to certain individuals, regardless of contract rights, were increased by reason of the contract, and that the time allowed for vacations with pay to certain employees was increased over the custom, as well as being established as a legal right which had not existed before, and that there were other benefits, although he may not recall them in detail.

"Mr. Langsdale: The offer is objected to as not proper surrebuttal.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection. I don't think it is proper."

(b) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) made with reference to similar questions and answer in the examination of witness Jack McConaughey as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6921, 6922.

(c) Petitioner further assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) made with reference to similar questions and answers in the examination of the witness Mabel Riggs as set forth in the transcript of the record at pages 6933, 6934 (R.X. 3770-3771).

295.

"Mr. Langsdale: I do offer to prove by this witness, should he be permitted to testify on this, his answer would be that the union meetings were attended by the employees going to the meeting section by section, for the reason that the elevator service was limited to two elevators, with a capacity of 15 each, and that, therefore, it would be utterly impossible for all of the employees to reach the meeting at the same time.

[fol. 309] "Mr. Hogsett: We had no objection to his inquiring of the witness whether that is so or not—whether that is the witness' testimony or Mr. Langsdale's improvisation.

"Mr. Tyler: I object to the offer of proof because, as a matter of fact, the witness' testimony would not be to that effect. The witness is here, and if anybody wants to settle it, the opportunity is apparent.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think I am going to start out, at this stage of the proceedings, to test out whether the offers of proof that have been offered so far are justified."

296.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth in the following excerpts of the transcript of the record at pages 6967, 6968, 6969, 6970 (R.X. 3779-3780).

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I am still more convinced that any more witnesses along this line—it isn't only cumulative but it is repetitious, especially if they testified in the prior hearing, as was indicated this morning. If you have witnesses you want to present who will testify to specific matters or other matters, you may produce them.

"Mr. Tyler: I have one witness who will testify to an entirely separate state of facts. But I except to Your Honor's ruling, and I would like to make an offer of proof.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may do so.

"Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by the following witnesses: Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton —

"Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I wish the Examiner would permit him to bring Rose Todd here and put her on the stand.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Let's proceed.

"Mr. Tyler: (Continuing) —Hobart Atherton, Walter Higgins, Mary McClellan, and Finland Rife, that if permitted to testify they would testify that they were members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union between April 27, 1937, and July 15, 1939; and that at some part of that time they were members of the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that at no time and on no occasion during that period were they ever paid by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company for attending Donnelly Garment Workers' Union meetings or meetings of the execu- [fol. 311] tive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that they had no knowledge of and never saw any instructor gather the employees in her section together and take them as a group to any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that the employees were free to attend such meetings with whom and in such manner as they chose, without any interference, dictation or pressure from the employer; and that the women employees in the Donnelly plant frequently attended meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union held after working hours while still wearing their work aprons; and that they were never paid for the time spent at any meetings of either the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will reject the offer for the reasons I have previously stated. . .

"Mr. Hogsett: Respondent joins in the offer and respectfully excepts to the ruling of the Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, understand, my rejection of the offer, under those circumstances, would be also applicable to you."

297.

Petitioner assigns as error each and all the rulings, action and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) contained or referred to in the foregoing assignments of error numbered 196 to 296 inclusive, for each and all of the reasons therein set forth or referred to and because same show the bias and non-judicial attitude of the Trial Examiner and his prejudgment of the issues herein against petitioner and because same are unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and deny to petitioner a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In answer to some of the questions objected to, answers favorable to the petitioner were given and petitioner does not assign as error said favorable answers but does assign as error the rulings as showing the bias and non-judicial attitude of the Trial Examiner.

298.

The erroneous rulings, findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner throughout the record and in the Intermediate Report are so numerous as to prevent setting same forth in detail in these assignments of error, but petitioner by the omission to quote or refer to any of the adverse findings or conclusions of the Trial Examiner in his Intermediate Report or the omission to assign as error many of the numerous rulings of the Trial Examiner throughout the hearing, does not mean that petitioner is [fol. 312] admitting the truth or correctness of any of said adverse findings or conclusions or that the correctness of said rulings, and petitioner hereby assigns as error each and all adverse rulings, findings or conclusions of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's adoption and affirmance thereof.)

299.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) rejecting petitioner's offer of proof and protest against the ruling of the Examiner made August 19, 1942, contained in Board's exhibit No. 1-SSSSS, as appears from page 6981 of the transcript of the record herein, for the reasons among others that the testimony therein referred to and offered to be proved was highly important to the issues involved herein in view of the rulings of the Trial Examiner admitting evidence offered by the Board and I.L.G.W.U. relating to the same subject matter as that sought to be proved by said witness Wave Tobin and in view of the former findings and conclusions of the Trial Examiner and the Board and in view of the contentions of the Board and I.L.G.W.U. in the further hearing herein, and said ruling and action in rejecting said offer of proof and in refusing to permit petitioner to examine said Wave Tobin with reference to said matters and with reference to such other pertinent matters as would have been elicited in the course of such examination, and in denying to petitioner the right to place its witnesses on the stand in the order it desired, and denying to petitioner the right to continue and complete the examination of said Wave Tobin before proceeding to the introduction of the evidence of [fol. 313] other witnesses, were highly unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and there was no basis for the exercise of any sound discretion of the Trial Examiner in refusing to receive such testimony and the denial thereof and the rejection of said offer of proof deprived petitioner of a fair trial and due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

300.

Petitioner assigns as error the ruling and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth on page 6981 of the transcript of the record herein denying petitioner's reoffer of certain offers of proof and petitioner's reoffer of Petitioner's Exhibit No. 2 (rejected) and petitioner's reoffer of Intervener's Exhibit No. 20 (rejected) and each of same, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in the foregoing assignment of error No. 299. This refers to all the offers of proof made by petitioner in the former hearing of this matter before the Trial Examiner, including Board's Exhibit No. 1-OOOO and Board's Exhibits Nos. 1-JJJJ, 1-NNNN, 1-QQQQ, 1-XXXX, and intervener's offer of proof Board's Exhibit No. 1-RRRR, and each of same.

301.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) as set forth on page 6982 of the record herein rejecting and denying petitioner's supplemental offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit No. 1-TTTTT, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in petitioner's assignment of error No. 299 herein.

[fol. 314] 302.

303.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings and action of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) set forth on page 6982 of the record herein rejecting and denying petitioner's offer of proof designated as Board's Exhibit No. 1-VVVVV, for each and all the reasons and grounds set forth in petitioner's assignment of error No. 302 herein.

[fol. 315] 304.

305.

306.

307.

[fol. 316] "Trial Examiner Batten: * * * Yesterday there was a witness, Mary Copowycz, on the stand, and during the cross-examination of Mr. Tyler, which begins at page 6879, the question at line 2, the question at line 6, and the answers thereto, the question at line 4, page 6882, and the answer, and the question at line 8, and the answer—those questions and answers are stricken, in accordance with my prior ruling on those other witnesses. Those are the questions which I find are the same as the others, Mr. Tyler. The answers may stand as an offer of proof."

308.

Petitioner assigns as error the findings of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) that check-off cards were distributed by the petitioner to its employees for their signature and the finding of the Trial Examiner that Rose Todd went to the petitioner's plant at St. Joseph, Missouri to organize the employees in that factory, and was absent from her employment about a half of day without salary deduction therefor, and assigns as error the findings of the Trial Examiner that instructors regard themselves as supervisors and that they exercise supervisory and economic control over the operators and are regarded by the operators as supervisory employees, and that they are responsible to Baty for the quantity and quality of work in their respective sections, and that Baty never gave them any instructions or directions or conferred with them about their work, and assigns as error the findings of the Trial Examiner as to what payrolls Rose Todd and other persons were carried on, and the findings of the Trial Examiner to the effect that business of the DGWU was conducted during business hours, as not being supported by the evidence.

[fol. 317]

309.

Petitioner assigns as error the repeated rulings of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) permitting the Board and ILGWU to adduce evidence relating to various subjects and relating to various periods of time; and his ruling refusing to permit petitioner and intervener to introduce countervailing evidence relating to said subjects and relating to said periods of time.

310.

Petitioner assigns as error the several rulings of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) whereby he refused to hear further witnesses on the part of petitioner and intervener as to various issues involved without signifying that the matters contended for by petitioner and testified to by petitioner's and intervener's witnesses had been sufficiently established and/or without signifying as to what if any controverted issues were not sufficiently established by petitioner's or intervener's witnesses.

311.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings of the Trial Examiner (and the board's action in affirming same) in refusing to receive testimony from petitioner or intervener as to matters occurring after July 15, 1939, irrespective of whether such matters had any bearing upon the issues involved herein, and irrespective of whether same tended to disprove the charges against petitioner.

312.

Petitioner assigns as error the rulings of the Trial Examiner (and the Board's action in affirming same) [fol. 318] requiring petitioner to submit offers of proof as to the testimony of its various witnesses including Wave Tobin, instead of permitting petitioner to call said witnesses to the stand and adduce material testimony from them by oral examination, for the reason that it is well known that the testimony of a witness may be more fully and accurately developed by examination on the stand than by statements in an offer of proof, especially when the witness is an adverse witness, as was Wave Tobin, and counsel had not the opportunity of ascertaining fully the extent of her testimony, and for the further reason that said ruling is unfair and prejudicial to petitioner and demonstrates the bias of the Trial Examiner that he did not require the Board to submit offers of proof as to the testimony of Rose Todd and various other witnesses before calling them to the stand.

312-a.

Petitioner assigns as error each and all the rulings, actions and comments of the Trial Examiner (and the action of the Board in affirming and adopting same) set forth or referred to in the foregoing points numbered 34 to 312 inclusive, for each and all the reasons and objections set forth in those points or made by petitioner or intervener at the time of said rulings, and for the further reasons that same were erroneous and prejudicial to petitioner and that by said rulings petitioner was excluded from adducing competent and material evidence which should have been received and considered by the Trial Examiner and Board in arriving at their findings and conclusions, and because by said rulings the Board and I. L. G. W. U. were permitted to adduce a mass of incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence, which should [fol. 319] not have been received or considered by the Trial Examiner or Board but upon which the Trial Examiner and Board based their findings and conclusions and the order herein by reason of all of which petitioner has been denied a fair trial.

The Board erred in its order, in paragraph 1 (b), ordering petitioner to cease and desist "from giving effect to its check-off agreement with" the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and in paragraph 2 (b) ordering petitioner to reimburse all of its employees for all dues and assessments, if any, "which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union", for the reason that petitioner has had no check-off arrangement with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and has not deducted any dues or assessments from its employees' wages "on behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union", but such dues to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as have been deducted from the wages of petitioner's employees have been deducted and paid to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for them individually and at their individual request in writing and the Board's orders in these respects are not supported by the evidence and are contrary to law.

Petitioner further assigns as erroneous the said orders for the reason that the complaint, as amended, did not charge or notify petitioner that the Board sought to impose such action on petitioner and petitioner was not given fair or reasonable notice thereof and therefore was [fol. 320] not given adequate opportunity to introduce evidence upon such issue, and was denied a fair trial upon such issue and such orders should be set aside for said reason as well as becuse they are not supported by the evidence and are not conducive to effectuating the purposes of the National Labor Relations Act, are unreasonable and arbitrary under the facts and circumstances, are contrary to the provisions of the Act and beyond the power of the Board.

313.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to consider, find and report that this proceeding be dismissed, in whole or in part, for each and all of the reasons specified in Paragraphs 1 to 10 inclusive of Part A of petitioner's Answer, Exhibit No. 1-JJJ, and by adoption and reference contained in petitioner's Answer to Amended Complaint, Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

314.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to consider, find and report that this proceeding be dismissed for each and all of the reasons specified in Part B of the Amended Answer, Exhibit No. 1-JJJ, and by adoption and reference contained in Petitioner's Answer to Amended Complaint, Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

315.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to investigate, by secret election or otherwise, the true representatives of petitioner's employees and so report and certify the same in accordance with the petition contained in Part C of the Amended Answer, Exhibit No. 1-JJJ, and by adoption and reference contained in petitioner's Answer to Amend Complaint, Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.

316.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in making the ruling contained in Paragraph 2 of Board's Exhibit No. VYY, overruling petitioner's motion, Exhibit 1-SSS, to dismiss the Complaint as amended.

[fol. 322]

317.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in making the ruling contained in Paragraph 3 of Board's Exhibit

1-YYY, overruling petitioner's motion, Exhibit 1-TTT, to strike from the complaint as amended, Paragraph 5, subparagraph C.

318.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in making the ruling contained in Paragraph 5 of Board's Exhibit 1-YYY, overruling petitioner's motion, Exhibit 1-VVV, to make the complaint as amended more definite and certain in each and all of the respects specified in said ruling.

319.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in making the ruling contained in Paragraph 6 of Board's Exhibit 1-YYY, ordering petitioner to submit a written statement of the evidence it would offer to prove the parts of the Answer set forth in the motion to strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Exhibit 1-QQQ.

320.

The trial examiner and Board erred in making the ruling contained in Paragraph 7 of Board's Exhibit 1-YYY, denying and refusing to consider petitioner's Petition for Investigation and Certification of Representatives pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, part C of petitioner's Answer, Exhibit 1-JJJ.

321.

The trial examiner and Board erred in denying petitioner's motion (Exhibit 1-PPP) to dismiss the amended complaint and in denying the intervener's motion to dismiss (Exhibit 1-LLL).

[fol. 323]

322.

The trial examiner and Board erred in denying petitioner's motion (Exhibit 1-AAAA) to strike portions of Paragraph 11 of the Amended Complaint, which was denied as to all parts except subparagraphs (o) and (p).

323.

The trial examiner and Board erred in denying intervener's applications for an election and continuance. (Tr. Rec. pp. 130, 131, 134) (R. I. 6, 7).

324.

The trial examiner and Board erred in refusing to consider the petitions for investigation and certification (Exhibits 1-NNN and 1-OOO) filed by intervener herein.

325.

The trial examiner and Board erred in its ruling and action contained in paragraph 2 (a) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS receiving in evidence Board's Exhibit 28, for the reason that said exhibit and evidence is irrelevant and immaterial to any issue herein and does not tend to prove any charge in the complaint; for the further reason that said exhibit is incomplete and covers only a period of three months' time and does not include earnings of piece workers, bundle boys, etc.

326.

The trial examiner and Board erred in its ruling and action contained in paragraph 2 (d) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS refusing petitioner's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-XXXX).

[fol. 324]

327.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth in paragraph 2 (e) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS sustaining motion (Exhibit 1-QQQQ) of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to strike certain parts of petitioner's Answer.

328.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth in paragraph 2 (f) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS refusing the petitioner's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-NNNN) as to Part B of the Answer.

329.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action contained in paragraph 2 (g) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS refusing petitioner's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-JJJJ).

330.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth in Paragraph 2 (h) of Board's Exhibit

1-SSSS refusing respondent's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-OOOO).

331.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth in paragraph 2 (i) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS refusing intervener's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-RRRR).

332.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth in paragraph 2 (f) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, denying petitioner's request in Part A of its Answer for dismissal of the Complaint.

[fol. 325]

333.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to accept or consider petitioner's offer of proof (Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQ) as to paragraph 2, Section A, of Petitioner's Answer.

334.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to sustain each and all the defenses and grounds for dismissal of the Complaint set forth in Part A of Petitioner's Answer herein.

335.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to sustain each and all the defenses and grounds for dismissal of the Complaint set forth in Part B of petitioner's Answer herein.

336.

The trial examiner and Board erred in making the statement in paragraph 2 (f) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS that the petitioner stated in the record that no offer of proof would be made on Part A of the Answer, for the reason that said statement overlooks petitioner's offer of proof (Board's Exhibit 1-QQQQ) as to Part A of its Answer.

337.

The trial examiner and Board erred in making the ruling contained in paragraphs 2 (j), 2 (k) and 2 (m) of Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS in so far as the effect or consideration of the evidence contained in petitioner's NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 is limited by the following language in said ruling: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings [fol. 326] heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects".

(a) Petitioner further assigns as error said part of said ruling because the same is so vague and uncertain as not to apprise petitioner as to what parts of the evidence in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 the trial examiner by said ruling considers or excludes or refuses to consider. Petitioner is thereby denied and has been denied a fair and impartial hearing herein and due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) Petitioner further assigns as error said part of said ruling because the same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of Elizabeth Reeves contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 upon any of the issues or "subjects" referred to in said ruling. (Petitioner is unable to make this assignment of error more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling of the trial examiner.)

(c) Petitioner further assigns as error said quoted part of said ruling because the same constitutes a rejection, refusal or failure to consider any part of the testimony of witnesses Bachofer, Reeves, Keyes, Stites, Rosenfield, Gordon, Ruden, Dowdy, Kilby, Sprofera, Ball, Jeters, Rickett, Cauthen, Smith, Redish, Shartzer, Warren, Ingrahain, Hull, Perlstein, Fry, Dubinsky, Tobin, Mrs. Reed, Allison, Atchison, Wales, Owen, Rutherford, Reidel, Lutz, Patton, Neimoyer, Perkins, Richards, Stroup, White, or any of them, contained in said NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 upon any of [fol. 327] the issues or "subjects" referred to in said ruling. (Petitioner is unable to make this assignment of error more specific because of the vagueness and uncertainty of said ruling.)

338.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the action and ruling on October 2, 1939, denying motion of petitioner herein, entitled "Motion to Clarify Rulings of Trial Examiner" filed with the trial examiner on or about September 6, 1939; and also in the denial of each and every the several motions and requests for clarification set forth in said motion.

The trial examiner and the Board also erred in the ruling and action denying a like Motion for Clarification filed by intervener herein.

339.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action on October 2, 1939, denying Motion of petitioner herein, filed with the trial examiner on or about September 12, 1939, for leave to file herein and make a part of the record, a certain petition for investigation and certification of representatives (which petitioner had attempted to file with the National Labor Relations Board), and copy of the letter of the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region to Donnelly Garment Company, dated September 8, 1939, refusing to file and docket said petition.

340.

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the conclusions, recommendations, findings, contained [fol. 328] in the Intermediate Report adverse to petitioner, are based on purported evidence which is incompetent and irrelevant, and such findings, conclusions and recommendations are arbitrary, capricious, oppressive and contrary to the law and the evidence.

341.

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the trial examiner consistently disregarded the obligation to weigh and consider all the evidence, and ignored the legal doctrine that the burden of proof was cast upon the Board to establish the charges as alleged by a fair preponderance of the evidence.

342.

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the findings of fact, adverse to petitioner, and the conclusions and recommendations purported to be based thereon, are based wholly or substantially upon alleged acts occurring prior to July 5, 1935, with the result that petitioner is convicted of violation of the National Labor Relations Act by reason of alleged acts occurring prior to the effective date thereof; and, which, if they occurred, were in all respects lawful and innocent.

343.

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the trial examiner held petitioner to be bound by the alleged acts, omissions and declarations of employees, although no authority was shown for such alleged acts, omissions or declarations and the latter were not shown to be in the course or within the scope of any employment by [fol. 329] respondent and the undisputed evidence negatived such authority and such course and scope.

344.

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the trial examiner held petitioner to be bound by the alleged acts, omissions and declarations of instructors although the undisputed evidence disclosed that instructors had no authority to hire, discipline or discharge, were not supervisory employees, and were not authorized to commit the alleged acts, omissions or declaration and the said alleged acts, omissions or declarations were not shown to be in the course of or within the scope of their employment, nor in any way binding upon petitioner.

345.

The trial examiner and Board erred because the trial examiner and Board have failed to find and conclude that the petitioner has not dominated or interfered with the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and has not contributed support to said Union, and has failed to find and conclude that the petitioner did not discriminate against the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or its members or discourage membership therein, and has failed to find and conclude that petitioner did not interfere with, restrain or coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and has failed to find and conclude that the petitioner did not dominate, control, interfere with, or act through the

The trial examiner and Board erred for the reason that the evidence and offers of proof herein (including the testimony or offered testimony of every member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union) show that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed and joined by one hundred per cent of the working employees of petitioner of their own free will and accord without any influence, domination, coercion or interference by respondent, and that they voluntarily chose said Union and its Executive [fol. 331] Committee to represent them for the purpose of collective bargaining with petitioner and have at all times desired to be so represented, and all the direct evidence was to the effect that none of petitioner's executives or supervisory employees with power to hire, discharge or discipline, attempted to dominate, coerce, restrain or interfere in any way with petitioner's employees in regard to their union membership or affiliations, and the findings and conclusions of the trial examiner that petitioner has violated Sections 8 (1), 8 (2), 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act are made in the face of this contradicted showing, and said findings, conclusions and recommendations of the trial examiner are contrary to the letter and spirit of the National Labor Relations Act in that they deny to petitioner's employees the right to bargain with petitioner through representatives of their own choosing and require the violation by petitioner of the National Labor Relations Act by refusing to bargain with the representatives of a majority of the employees, and said conclusions and recommendations being upheld by the Board, the Board is in the position of violating, and requiring petitioner to violate, both the letter and spirit of the Act.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the findings, conclusions and recommendations, and each of them, because said examiner and/or the National Labor Relations Board did not investigate and certify, although so requested, the exclusive representatives of all the petition-
[fol. 332] er's employees for the purpose of collective bargaining in accordance with Section 9, subsection c of the National Labor Relations Act prior to the institution and/or hearing of the present proceedings.

348.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraph 3 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK) because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence.

349.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of the following allegation in Paragraph 4 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK): "* * * * and its predecessor, Donnelly Loyalty League", is a "labor organization", because said allegation is not proved or supported by the evidence and said allegation does not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

350.

(Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK) because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence.

351.

The trial examiner and the Board erred in failing and [fol. 333] refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraph 5 (c) of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK), because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence, and said allegations do not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and because said allegations relate to or are based upon matters purporting to have existed or occurred prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act, which were then not unlawful and from which no inference of unlawful conduct by petitioner after the enactment of said Act may be drawn.

352.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraphs 5 (d), 6 and 7 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK), because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence, said allegations do not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and because said allegations relate to the closed shop contract which is specifically authorized by the National Labor Relations Act.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraphs 11 (b), 11 (c), 11 (e), 11 (f), 11 (l), 11 (m), 11 (q) and 11 (r) of the amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK) because the allegations therein contained are not proved or supported by the evidence, and said allegations do not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of the last paragraph in Paragraph 11 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK) because said allegations are vague and indefinite and constitute the conclusion of the pleader and are in no way supported by the evidence.

357.

The trial examiner and Board erred in failing and refusing to dismiss and/or recommend dismissal of Paragraph 12 of the Amended Complaint (Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK), because none of the allegations therein contained is proved or supported by the evidence, said alleevidence, said allegations do not charge or tend to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and because said allegations relate to the closed shop contract which is specifically authorized by the National Labor Relations Act.

360.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth on Page 130 of the transcript denying petitioner's and intervener's Motions to Dismiss the Complaint.

361.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth on Pages 130, 131 of the transcript of the record (R. I. 6), denying the application for an election [fol. 336] made by the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and refusing to entertain in this proceeding a petition for an election.

362.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth on Page 194 of the transcript of the record (R. I. 12), denying the motion of the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for a continuance of this proceeding for the purpose of the Board's holding an election to determine the representatives of the majority of the employees of petitioner and until the results of such election are known.

363.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the ruling and action set forth on Page 214 of the transcript of the record (R. I. 13), denying, except as to paragraphs (o) and (p), petitioner's motion (Exhibit 1-ZZZ) to Strike Portions of the Complaint as set forth in said Motion.

364.

The trial examiner and Board erred in the several findings, conclusions and recommendations in the Intermediate Report, for the reason that the evidence is so overwhelmingly contrary to most of said findings and to all of said conclusions, as to show that the trial examiner either did not consider all the evidence or was so biased and prejudiced against petitioner that he intended to and did make his findings, conclusions and recommendations against petitioner notwithstanding that he knew that same were contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence, whereby, in either event, petitioner has been and is denied a fair hearing herein and deprived of its liberty and property without due process of law, in con- [fol. 337] travention of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States.

The Trial Examiner and Board erred in the several findings and conclusions of the trial examiner, for the reason that it is the duty and obligation of the Board to prove its charges by a fair preponderance of the evidence and is the duty of the trial examiner and the board to make findings based on a fair preponderance of the evidence and the trial examiner and the board have violated their duty in this respect and have made essential findings which are not only not supported or proved by a fair preponderance of the evidence but are wholly contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence.

366.

The trial examiner and Board erred in their denial of credibility of petitioner's and intervener's witnesses and in their accepting the slightest testimony unfavorable to petitioner or the slightest inferences therefrom, in disregard of the overwhelming evidence offered by petitioner and intervener to the contrary, and refuting each and all of the charges in the Complaint.

367.

The Board erred in entering the decision and order directing petitioner to cease and desist from dominating and interfering with the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees and from contributing financial or other support to any labor organization of its [fol. 338] employees, for the reason that said order is not based on substantial evidence, valid findings of fact or legal conclusions of law and is wholly contrary thereto; that said order is the result of bias and prejudice and is arbitrary, capricious and unjudicial; that said order is based upon alleged acts which occurred prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act and cannot prove any violation of said Act; that in truth and fact all the credible and competent evidence disclosed that petitioner had never dominated, interfered with or contributed to any labor organization of its employees; and further disclosed that 100% of petitioner's employees, except officers and executives and persons with authority to hire, discipline or discharge, voluntarily formed and maintained the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union without any interference, domination or support of any kind or character on the part of the petitioner or any of its officers or supervisory employees.

The Board erred in entering the decision and order directing petitioner to cease and desist from giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and the amendments, renewals and supplements thereof and from giving effect to its check off agreement with the DGWU for the reason that said order is not supported or justified by any substantial evidence, valid findings of fact, or legal conclusions of law; is unfair and the result of prejudice and bias and arbitrarily deprives petitioner and its employees of valuable property rights in violation of the Fifth Amendment [fol. 339] to the Constitution of the United States; that said order is based upon alleged acts which occurred prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act and can not prove any violation of said Act. It wholly disregards the undisputed evidence that petitioner and the chosen representatives of 100% of its employees, after full negotiation, entered into said contracts and the same contain higher wages and more favorable terms and conditions of employment than are provided for in any contracts between the ILGWU and other similar garment manufacturers; that there is no agreement between petitioner and the DGWU for a check off and that the petitioner pays out of its employees' wages only such amounts as each employee, in writing, authorizes and directs. Said order is void and contrary to the plain terms of Sections 1, 8, 5 and 9 (a) of the National Labor Relations Act.

The Board erred in entering the decision and order directing petitioner to cease and desist from discouraging membership in the ILGWU or discouraging or encouraging membership in any other labor organization of its employees by discriminating in regard to hire, tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment, for the reason that said order is not supported or justified by any substantial evidence or any reasonable inferences therefrom and is not based upon any valid findings of fact or legal conclusions of law or any reasonable inferences therefrom, and is partisan, biased and arbitrary and based on conjecture, inference and surmise and contrary to all the credible and competent evidence, and deprives petitioner [fol. 340] of its liberty and property without due process of the law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

370.

The Board erred in entering the decision and order directing petitioner to cease and desist from controlling or using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain or coerce its employees to self-organization, for the reason that it is unsupported and unjustified by any substantial evidence or reasonable inferences therefrom, valid findings of fact or lawful conclusions of law and is contrary to law and all the credible and competent evidence; that it is arbitrary, capricious and oppressive and the result of bias and prejudice; that it relates to matters which occurred prior to the effective date of the National Labor Relations Act and cannot prove a violation of said Act. It wholly disregards the undisputed evidence that said Donnelly Loyalty League is a voluntary social organization of petitioner's employees and that the petitioner did not control or dominate said organization for any purpose.

371.

The Board erred in the decision and order in ordering petitioner to cease and desist from in any "other" manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights, for the reason that such order is outside the pleadings and the scope thereof, that said order is not based on any valid finding or findings of fact, is not supported by any substantial evidence or reasonable inferences therefrom, is contrary to law, is a [fol. 341] nullity and beyond and in excess of the jurisdiction of the Trial Examiner and of the National Labor Relations Board, is too broad in scope and too vague, uncertain, general and indefinite, and is therefore not susceptible lawfully of judicial enforcement as a final order, since the National Labor Relations Board has no power or authority to issue a general order of the character aforesaid and any order issued must be addressed specifically to the act or acts constituting the alleged coercion, interference or restraint which the Board has lawfully found upon substantial evidence to have been committed with the threat of continuing commission at the present time and thereafter, deprives petitioner of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, constitutes a departure from and is beyond and in excess of the issues made by the pleadings and the evidence, is arbitrary, capricious, oppressive, unjudicial and an abuse of discretion, and for the further reasons set forth in the assignments hereinbefore appearing.

372.

The Board erred in the decision and order in ordering petitioner to withdraw all recognition from and disestablish the DGWU, for the reason that said order is not based on any valid finding or findings of fact, is not supported by substantial competent evidence, is contrary to law, is a nullity and beyond and in excess of the jurisdiction of the Trial Examiner and of the National Labor Relations Board, is too broad in scope and too vague, uncertain, [fol. 342] general and indefinite, and is therefore not susceptible lawfully of judicial enforcement as a final order, since the National Labor Relations Board has power or authority to issue a general order of the character aforesaid and any order issued must be addressed specifically to the act or acts constituting the alleged coercion, interference or restraint which the Board has lawfully found upon substantial evidence to have been committed with the threat of continuing commission at the present time and thereafter, deprives petitioner of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, is arbitrary, capricious, oppressive, unjudicial, and an abuse of discretion, and for the further reasons set forth in the assignments hereinbefore appearing.

373.

The Board erred in the decision and order aforesaid, in ordering petitioner to reimburse all employees who were members of the DGWU for the dues it has collected from their wages on behalf of said Union, for the reason that it is unsupported by any substantial evidence or reasonable inferences therefrom, by valid findings of fact and legal conclusions of law, is arbitrary, capricious and unjudicial, and the result of bias and prejudice and exceeds the jurisdiction of the Board and is not within the scope of the issues and is contrary to law and deprives petitioner of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, is contrary to law and is wholly predicated upon conjecture [fol. 343] and surmise and in absolute disregard of the undisputed evidence.

374.

The Board erred in the decision and order aforesaid in directing petitioner immediately to post notices and maintain those notices for a period of sixty (60) consecutive days, to the effect therein stated, for the reason that said order, and each constituent part thereof, is not based upon any valid findings of fact, is not supported by the evidence, is not supported by the substantial evidence, or the substantial competent evidence, is contrary to law, is a departure from the issues under the pleadings, in excess thereof, and not responsive thereto, is beyond and in excess of the jurisdiction of the trial examiner and of the National Labor Relations Board, purports to require petitioner to confess violations of law which it denies, deprives petitioner of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, is arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion, and for the further reasons set forth in the assignments herein.

375.

The Board erred in the decision and order aforesaid in directing petitioner to notify the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, in writing, within ten (10) days from the date of the order, what steps the petitioner has taken to comply therewith, for the reason that said order is in excess of the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board and is predicated on the false assumption that peti- [fol. 344] tioner has violated the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, is unsupported by any substantial evidence or reasonable inferences therefrom, by valid findings of fact and legal conclusions of law, and for each and all the reasons assigned herein.

376.

The Board erred in ordering petitioner to cease and desist from each and all of the matters and acts set forth under Paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) of its Order for each and all of the reasons set forth under Point 26, supra.

377.

The Board erred in ordering petitioner to take the affirmative action set forth under Paragraph 2 (a), (b), (c) and (d) of its Order for each and all of the reasons set forth under Point 27, supra.

Wherefore, your petitioner respectfully prays that this Court take or resume jurisdiction of this cause; that the National Labor Relations Board be forthwith directed, ordered and required to transmit to this Court the complete certified transcript of the entire proceedings in this cause before said Board; that upon the filing thereof this Court review the evidence, findings of fact, conclusions of law and the decision and order of said Board and enter a judgment or decree vacating and setting aside said decision and order of the said Board; and that your petitioner have such other and further orders, decrees and relief in the premises as shall be proper and just.

Respectfully submitted,

(Endorsed): No. 12,641. Petition of Donnelly Garment Company for Review of Order of National Labor Relations Board. Filed in U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals on June 21, 1943.

[fol. 346] Answer Of The National Labor Relations Board To Petition For Review And Request For Enforcement Of An Order Of The National Labor Relations Board.

In The United States Circuit Court Of Appeals For The Eighth Circuit.

Donnelly Garment Company, Petitioner,
No. 12,641 vs.
National Labor Relations Board, Respondent.

To the Honorable, the Judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit:

Comes now the National Labor Relations Board, hereinafter called the Board, and, pursuant to the National Labor Relations Act (49 Stat. 449, 29 U. S. C., Sec. 151, et seq.), hereinafter called the Act, files this answer to the petition for review filed herein and its request for enforcement of the Board's order:

1. The Board admits the allegations contained in paragraph b, appearing on pages 6-7 of the petition to review.

2. The Board denies each and every allegation of error contained in paragraph d, subparagraphs 1-377, appearing on pages 8-344 of the petition to review.

3. With respect to paragraph a, appearing on pages 1-6 of the petition to review, the Board prays reference to the certified record of the proceedings before the Board, filed in this Court, for a full and exact statement of the pleadings, evidence, rulings of the Trial Examiner, findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order of the Board.

[fol. 347] Wherefore, having answered each and every allegation contained in the petition for review, the Board prays this Honorable Court that said petition be denied.

Further answering, the Board, pursuant to Section 10 (e) and (f) of the Act, respectfully requests this Honorable Court for enforcement of its order issued against petitioner on June 9, 1943, in proceedings designated on the records of the Board as Case No. C-1382, entitled "In the Matter of Donnelly Garment Company and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Donnelly Garment Workers Union, party to a contract."

In support of this request for enforcement of its order, the Board respectfully shows as follows:

(a) Petitioner is a Missouri corporation and is engaged in business in the State of Missouri, within this judicial circuit, where the unfair labor practices occurred. This Court therefore has jurisdiction of the petition for review herein and of this request for enforcement by virtue of Section 10 (e) and (f) of the Act.

(b) Upon proceedings had in said matter before the Board, the Board on June 9, 1943, duly stated its findings of fact and conclusions of law, and issued an order directed to petitioner, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns. So much of the aforesaid order, as relates to this proceeding, provides as follows:

Order.

Upon the entire record in the case, and pursuant to Section 10 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, the National Labor Relations Board hereby orders that the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, Kansas City, Missouri, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Dominating or interfering with the administration of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or with the formation or administration of any other labor organization of its employees, and from contributing financial or other support to Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any other labor organization of its employees:

[fol. 348] (b) Giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification, or supplement thereof, or to any superseding contract or agreement, with Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and from giving effect to its check-off agreement with said organization;

(c) Discouraging membership in International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, or any other labor organization of its employees, or encouraging membership in Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees, by laying off any of its employees, or in any manner discriminating in regard to their hire and tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment;

(d) Dominating, controlling, and using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain, and coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act;

(e) In any other manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

2. Take the following affirmative action which the Board finds will effectuate the policies of the Act:

(a) Withdraw all recognition from Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment, and completely disestablish Donnelly Garment Workers as such representative;

(b) Reimburse all of its employees for all dues and assessments, if any, which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union;

(c) Post immediately in conspicuous places throughout the respondent's Kansas City factory, and maintain for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days, notices to its employees stating: (1) that the respondent will not engage in the conduct from which it is ordered to cease and desist in paragraphs 1 (a) to (e) hereof; (2) that the respondent will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraphs 2 (a) and (b) hereof; and (3) that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that the respondent will not in any manner discriminate against any employee because of membership or activity in said organization;

(d) Notify the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region in writing within ten (10) days from the date of this Order what steps the respondent has taken to comply herewith.

[fol. 349] (c) On June 9, 1943, the Board's decision and order was duly served upon petitioner.

(d) Pursuant to Section 10 (e) and (f) of the Act, the Board is certifying and filing with this Court a transcript of the entire supplemental proceedings before the Board, such supplemental record together with the record heretofore certified to this Court in a case designated on this Court's records as Case No. 475 original, including the pleadings, testimony and evidence, findings of fact, conclusions of law, and order of the Board.

Wherefore, the Board prays this Honorable Court that it cause notice of the filing of this answer and request for enforcement and of the certified supplemental record to be served upon petitioner; and that this Court take jurisdiction of the proceedings and of the questions determined therein, and make and enter upon the pleadings, evidence, and proceedings set forth in the record and the order made thereon, a decree denying the petition to review and enforcing in whole said order as set forth in paragraph (b) above, and requiring petitioner, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns to comply therewith.

Dated at Washington, D. C., this 2nd day of August, 1943.

[fol. 350] District Of Columbia—ss.:

Ernest A. Gross, being first duly sworn, states that he is Associate General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, respondent herein, and that he is authorized to and does make this verification on behalf of said Board; that he has read the foregoing answer and request for enforcement and has knowledge of the contents thereof; and that the statements made therein are true to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief.

(Endorsed): No. 12,641. Answer of the National Labor Relations Board to Petition for Review, etc. Filed in U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals on August 5, 1943.

[fol. 351] Response of Petitioner Donnelly Garment Company to the Board's Application for Enforcement of Order.

In The United States Circuit Court of Appeals In and For the Eighth Circuit.

Donnelly Garment Company, a corporation, Petitioner,
No. 12,641 vs.
National Labor Relations Board, Respondent,
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Intervener-Petitioner.

Comes now the above named petitioner and files this its response to the request of the National Labor Relations Board filed herein for enforcement of its order herein (which request for enforcement is set forth on pages 2 to 4 inclusive of its answer to petitioner's petition for review of the Board's order, and for such response petitioner states:

I.

Petitioner admits that it is a Missouri corporation engaged in business in the State of Missouri within the judicial circuit where the alleged unfair labor practices are alleged to have occurred and that the Board on June 9, 1943, issued the order as set forth on pages 2 and 3 of the Board's answer and that copy of the Board's decision and order was mailed to and received by petitioner; and petitioner denies each and all the other allegations and statements contained in said request for enforcement.

[fol. 352] II.

For further response to said request for enforcement petitioner states that enforcement of said order should not be granted, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

(1) Because the order and decision of the Board and the findings of fact and conclusions of the Board on which said order and decision are based are not supported by the evidence.

(2) Because the findings of fact, conclusions, order and decision of the Board are based on incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial evidence.

(3) Because the Board excluded, ignored and refused to consider competent, material and relevant evidence offered by petitioner and intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

(4) Because the findings of fact, conclusions, order and decision of the Board are, upon the evidence, contrary to law.

(5) Because the findings of fact, conclusions, order and decision of the Board are based on statements and alleged statements and utterances of officers and employees of the petitioner, including statements alleged and found by the Board to have been made by Mrs. Reed at the meeting of employees on March 18, 1937, which statements were not coercive and all of which statements and utterances were within the rights and privileges of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and if the National Labor Relations Act be so construed (as it is by the Board) as to hold that said statements or utterances constitute a violation of the National Labor Relations Act, such holding or construction would and does constitute an infringement upon the right of free speech guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and said Act is unconstitutional and said order and decision of the Board are void, by reason thereof.

[fol. 353] (6) Because the matters and things and each of same which the Board orders petitioner to cease and desist from doing, in paragraph 1 of its order, and the affirmative acts and each of same which the Board orders the petitioner to take in paragraph 2 of its order, are in excess and beyond the power and jurisdiction of the Board.

(7) Because the Board and its Trial Examiner were biased and prejudiced against petitioner and intervener Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and denied to petitioner a fair trial herein and denied to petitioner due process of law in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(8) For and because of each and all the reasons assigned and set forth by petitioner in its petition for review heretofore filed herein, each and all of which reasons and assignments are made a part hereof by reference as fully as though set forth herein in haec verba and are hereby assigned as reasons why the order of the Board herein should not be enforced.

Wherefore petitioner respectfully prays that the Court deny the Board's request of enforcement of its order herein, and grant to petitioner the relief prayed in its petition to review and set aside said order.

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/5/39.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and

Case No. XVII-C-371

It having been charged by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, hereinafter referred to as the I. L. G. W. U., that Donnelly Garment Company, Kansas City, Missouri, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has engaged in and is now engaging in certain unfair labor practices affecting commerce as set forth and defined in the National Labor Relations Act approved July 5, 1935, (49 Stat. 449) the National Labor Relations Board by the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, as agent for the National Labor Relations Board, designated by the National Labor Relations Board Rules and Regulations—Series 1, as amended—Article IV, Section 1, hereby issues its complaint and alleges the following:

1. Respondent is and has been since 1919 a corporation organized under and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri, having its factory and principal place of business at 1820 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and is now and has continuously been engaged in the business of designing, manufacturing, selling and distributing cotton, wool, silk and rayon low and medium-priced garments for women.

[fol. 357] 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, causes and has continuously caused substantially all of the materials used in the manufacture of its garments to be purchased and transported from and through states of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, to the Kansas City, Missouri factory of respondent, and causes and has continuously caused a substantial portion of the garments designed, manufactured, sold, and distributed, to be sold, transported, and distributed from the Kansas City, Missouri factory into and through states of the United States other than the State of Missouri to customers in other states.

3. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of the National Labor Relations Act.

4. Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and its predecessor, Donnelly Loyalty League, are labor organizations within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of said Act.

5. Respondent, while engaged at its Kansas City, Missouri plant, as aforesaid, on or about April 27, 1937, and down to and including the date of the filing of this complaint, has dominated and interfered in the formation and administration of a labor organization among its employees, known as "Donnelly Garment Workers Union," and has given financial aid and other support to said organization, in that respondent, among other things:

(a) Did encourage, allow, and permit supervisory and other employees acting in the interest of respondent to organize, promote, encourage, and coerce membership into the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on respondent's time and on respondent's property and at respondent's pay and at its expense.

[fol. 358] (b). Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, furnish financial and other support to Donnelly Garment Workers Union, in that supervisory and other employees were allowed to solicit membership, hold meetings and engage in concerted activities in behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers Union during working hours and on company property without loss of pay or other penalty and by various other means contributed financial aid and other support to said Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

(c) Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, form the Donnelly Loyalty League on or about February 12, 1935, for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., and said officers and agents of respondent continued to dominate the administration of the Donnelly Loyalty League until on or about April 25, 1937, at which time said Donnelly Loyalty League at a meeting on respondent's property was succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers Union created to be a continuation of the Donnelly Loyalty League and to effect and carry out the policies of its predecessor and to be subservient and amenable to the wishes of respondent.

(d) Did enter into a closed-shop agreement with Donnelly Garment Workers Union on or about May 22, 1937, creating as a condition of employment, membership in said Donnelly Garment Workers Union, for the purpose of assisting said Union, compelling membership therein, depriving its employees of their rights guaranteed under the National Labor Relations Act, and to further manifest its approval of and to lend support to said Union.

6. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, and by other acts, has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of and has

[fol. 359] contributed financial aid and other support to labor organizations and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of said Act.

7. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of said Act and has thereby engaged in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

8. Respondent, by its officers and agents at its Kansas City, Missouri factory, while engaged in the operations described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, did discharge from its employment Sylvia Hull, on or about April 23, 1937, and May Fike on or about April 26, 1937, for the reasons that they had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U. and engaged in concerted activities in its behalf, and thus discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U.

9. Respondent, by its discharge of Sylvia Hull and May Fike, and by its refusal to reinstate said employees for the reasons set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has thereby discriminated and is thereby discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of said employees and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of said Act.

10. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

11. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5) and eight (8), above, by interfering with, coercing, intimidating, and threatening its employees to refrain [fol. 360] from becoming members or continuing membership in I. L. G. W. U., by keeping members and meetings of I. L. G. W. U. under surveillance, by openly manifesting bitter hostilitiy to the I. L. G. W. U., by the issuance of written and oral statements designed and calculated to discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U., by showing preference and favoritism to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and making membership therein a condition of employment, by depriving its employees of the opportunity of joining an organization of their own choosing, by discriminating in the allotment of work of members or sympathizers of the I. L. G. W. U., by questioning employees individually and collectively with regard to their union activity and prejudices, by instigating, allowing or permitting violent demonstrations upon its time and property against certain employees of respondent who were members of the I. L. G. W. U., and by various other similar acts and conduct, has interfered with, restrained and coerced and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join, and assist labor organizations of their own choosing, and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

12. That the aforementioned closed-shop contract is a direct and proximate result of the acts and conduct of respondent set forth in paragraphs five (5) to eleven (11), inclusive, and constitutes, culminates and perpetuates continuing intimidation, interference, restraint and coercion by respondent in violation of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3) of said Act and is, therefore, invalid, void and of no effect.

13. That aforementioned closed-shop contract was entered into with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was not the representative of the respondent's employees within the meaning of Section 8 (3) and Section 9 (a) of the National Labor Relations Act, and at a time when [fol. 361] the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was a labor organization established, maintained, and assisted by actions defined in the National Labor Relations Act as unfair labor practices and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void and of no effect.

14. That by entering into the said closed-shop contract, respondent did interfere with, restrain, and coerce and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said National Labor Relations Act and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void and of no effect.

15. That by entering into the closed-shop contract aforesaid, respondent did discriminate in regard to hire and tenure of employment and terms and conditions of employment and did thereby discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and did thereby encourage membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was established, maintained, and assisted by respondent, and respondent did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act and, therefore, the said closed-shop contract is invalid, void and of no effect.

16. The activities of respondent by the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5) to fifteen (15), inclusive, above, occurring in connection with the operations of the respondent described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, have a close, intimate, and substantial relationship to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several states and tend to lead and have led to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

17. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute unfair [fol. 362] labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3) and Section 2 (6) and (7) of said Act.

Wherefore, the National Labor Relations Board on the twenty-seventh (27th) day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-nine (1939), issues its complaint against the Donnelly Garment Company, respondent herein.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

Date Filed April 6, 1939.

Pursuant to Section 10 (b) of the National Labor Relations Act, the undersigned hereby charges that Donnelly Garment Company, 1820 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8, subsections (1), (2) & (3) of said Act, in that on or about April 27, 1937, it, by its officers, agents and employees, formed among its employees at its Kansas City, Missouri plant a labor organization known as "Donnelly Garment Workers Union," which organization was the successor to and a continuation of the Donnelly Loyalty League, previously dominated and interfered with in its formation and administration by said company, and at all times since on or about April 27, 1937, said company has dominated and interfered with the operation and administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and has contributed financial and other support thereto, and did, on or about May 22, 1937, enter into a closed-shop contract with said Union, making membership therein a condition of employment.

On or about April 23, 1937, it, by its officers, agents and employees, terminated the employment of Sylvia Hull, and on or about April 26, 1937, the employment of May Fike because of their membership and activities in behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, a labor organization, and at all times since such dates, it has refused and does now refuse to employ the above-named employees.

By the acts set forth in the paragraphs above, and by intimidating and threatening its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, by keeping members and meetings of said Union under surveillance, by the president of said company addressing its employees on or about March 18, 1937, and discouraging membership in said Union and encouraging membership in the Donnelly Loyalty League, by instigating, promoting or permitting a violent demonstration against members and sympathizers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to occur on company time and property, by discriminating in the allotment of work to members of said Union, by questioning employees concerning union activities, by entering into a closed-shop contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and making membership therein a condition of employment, and by other acts and conduct, it, by its officers, agents and employees interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of said Act.

The undersigned further charges that said unfair labor practices are unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of said Act.

(Petition of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for Leave to Intervene.)

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

1. Now come Rose Todd, and Jack McConaughey, Marjorie Green, Walter Higgins, Bessie Weilert, Edith Williamson, Freeland Rife, Nina Smith and Mary McClelland, and state that they are respectively the chairman and members of the governing and executive committee of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, a voluntary, unincorporated labor association, composed of all the employees of respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, and its associated company, Donnelly Garment Sales Company, below the grade of officer of the companies, or either of them, superintendents, supervisor or anyone with the right to employ or discharge; that they are the duly constituted representatives of said association; that said association has a membership of more than thirteen hundred persons; that said committee is authorized to intervene in this action; that the matters at issue in this cause are of common and general interest to all members of the association who constitute a class so numerous as to make it impracticable to bring them all before the Board; that said named persons by the authority so given them and in their own behalf and in behalf of all members [fol. 395] of their said association, all hereinafter referred to as Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or as "intervener", file this, their petition for leave to intervene herein, and say:

2. Intervener is a duly organized, existing and functioning labor union.

3. Intervener, through its duly elected and constituted executive committee, has been since April 27, 1937, and now is the sole and exclusive collective bargaining agent for the said employees of respondent and its associated company. On or about May 27, 1937, intervener, through its said executive committee, bargained and concluded with the said respondent company and its associated company a contract covering working conditions, including a closed shop agreement, and on or about June 22, 1937, bargained and concluded with said companies a wage agreement; that said contracts are valid, binding and subsisting agreements and as such are valuable property rights owned and held by intervener and each and all of intervener's members.

4. The intervener is vitally interested in this matter because the charges made and the issues of fact and law raised by the allegations of the complaint challenge the validity of intervener's existence as a labor union, the validity of its contracts hereinabove referred to, and the jurisdiction of this Board is thereby invoked to have intervener's existence as a labor union declared invalid, to have intervener disestablished, and to set aside its contracts. The allegations of the complaint specifically charge, among other things, that respondent has dominated and interfered in the formation and administration of intervener, has given intervener financial aid and other support, has interfered with and coerced intervener's [fol. 396] members so as to destroy their freedom of choice, and has acted, in other ways, contrary to law, so as to destroy intervener's existence as a bona fide labor union under the Wagner Act and to destroy the validity and binding effect of its contracts hereinabove referred to. The issues of fact and law involved in the cause at bar concern intervener in that its members' legal and constitutional guaranties of freedom of choice, liberty of contract and property rights in contract are at stake, and if intervener is denied the right to intervene in this cause and protect its said rights, intervener and its members will have been deprived of their liberty and property without due process of law within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

5. Intervener denies that the allegations referred to are true.

Wherefore, intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, acting for and in behalf of all its members, too numerous to name or to be made parties hereto individually, prays that an appropriate order be made and entered herein permitting it to intervene in this matter, to be represented by counsel, to present evidence and arguments, to examine and cross examine witnesses, and to have full and unrestricted rights to establish, maintain and support its position and defense herein asserted, or as may be asserted in any permitted amendment, to the same extent as if it were named a respondent or full party to this proceeding.

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/5/39.

(Answer of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, to Complaint.)

United States Of America

Before The National Labor Relations Board
Seventeenth Region.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371

Comes now the above named Donnelly Garment Company, respondent, whose postoffice address is 1828 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and files this its answer to the complaint filed herein, reserving, however, all objections and rights to object to the jurisdiction of the Board, and all objections and rights to object to the competency, authority, reasonableness and good faith of the Board in issuing said complaint and all objections and rights to object to the sufficiency of said complaint and to the amended charge upon which the said complaint is based, and to the relevancy or materiality of the allegations contained therein.

Respondent specifically denies each and every allegation in said complaint contained except as specifically and expressly admitted and makes further answer thereto as follows, to-wit:

[fol. 404] A.

Respondent avers and states that the National Labor Relations Board is without jurisdiction to maintain this proceedings and the same must be dismissed for the following reasons:

1. The Labor Board exceeded its jurisdiction in issuing the complaint herein at the request of an organization which does not represent a single employee in respondent's plant, has never raised a question as to representation upon which the Labor Board could hold an election and has been found by a United States Federal Court to be engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to force respondent to compel its employees to join said organization against their wills. The National Labor Relations Act does not vest the Labor Board with authority or power under said circumstances to maintain unfair labor practice proceedings.

2. The Labor Board exceeded its jurisdiction in issuing the complaint herein for the purpose of attempting to abrogate and nullify contracts between respondent and the exclusive representative of one hundred per cent of its employees when said contracts are entirely satisfactory to both parties thereto and have been determined by a United States Federal Court to contain higher wages and more favorable working conditions than are contained in any contracts entered into between the International Union and other garment manufacturers in this part of the country. The National Labor Relations Act does not vest the Labor Board with authority or power to interfere with, abrogate, or nullify, contracts concerning terms and conditions of employment which are satisfactory to every employee in respondent's plant.

[fol. 405] 3. The proceedings herein deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law as guaranteed in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States in that if this proceeding were sustained, respondent would be denied its constitutional right to freely contract with the chosen representatives of all of its employees and to freely determine and agree upon all terms and conditions of employment, including representation, without a judicial hearing.

4. The proceedings herein deprive respondent of its liberty and property as guaranteed in the Fifth and Seventh Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, because if said proceedings were sustained valid contracts between respondent and the chosen representatives of all of its employees would be abrogated and nullified without a judicial hearing, due process of law, and a trial by jury.

5. The proceedings herein providing for the awarding of unearned wages to Sylvia Hull and May Fike, former employees of, respondent, together with their reinstatement, deprive respondent of property without due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and would deprive respondent of its right to trial by jury as guaranteed in the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

6. That the amended charge filed herein by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union does not allege the names of the individuals involved and the times and [fol. 406] places of occurrences said to constitute the purported unfair labor practices, and is vague, indefinite and does not state facts sufficient upon which a formal complaint by the Labor Board could be founded.

7. The National Labor Relations Act does not vest in the Labor Board the authority or power to allege conclusions of the Board purporting to show that respondent has in fact committed acts in violation of the National Labor Relations Act. That the National Labor Relations Board, in its complaint, pre-judges as true the amended charge filed herein in advance of any trial or opportunity to respondent to be duly and properly heard, all in violation of respondent's rights under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

8. That the complaint filed herein is vague, indefinite, insufficient, and alleges conclusions of the Board and not facts as required by the National Labor Relations Act and Rules and Regulations, Series 1 as amended, of the National Labor Relations Act, Article II, Section 4. It does not inform respondent as to the facts involved in the alleged unfair labor practices, the names of the individuals and times and places of occurrences which are intended to be charged against respondent, all in violation of due process of law as provided for by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

reason, this proceeding and the maintenance thereof is void and unconstitutional.

10. If it be construed that the amended charge and complaint filed herein raises a question as to representation within the meaning of Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, the said amended charge and/or the complaint does not allege, nor is it a fact, that the International Union has at any time requested the National Labor Relations Board to investigate any question concerning the representation of the Donnelly Garment Company employees. That the amended charge and the complaint does not allege, nor is it a fact, that the National Labor Relations Board has at any time investigated any question concerning the representation of the Donnelly Garment Company employees. That the said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has repeatedly offered to submit to a secret election under the auspices of the Labor Board in order that a determination could be had of the true choice and desire of each employee at the Donnelly plant. That said offers have been repeatedly refused by the representatives of the Labor Board. That said determination is a condition precedent to a trial on the alleged charges of unfair labor practices set forth in the complaint.

[fol. 409] B.

For further answer, respondent avers and states that the complaint herein must be dismissed for the reason that the National Labor Relations Board, its agents and representatives, have exceeded their authority and have demonstrated their bias and prejudice against respondent, and collusion with the International Union, by the filing of the complaint herein and the maintenance of this proceedings in the face of the following facts of which the Board and its representatives have actual knowledge, to wit:

During all of the times mentioned in the amended charge and the complaint filed herein, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, David Dubinsky, president, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director, Wave Tobin, manager of the Kansas City Joint Board, Jane Palmer, their agents and members, were engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy respondent's business for the sole purpose of forcing respondent in violation of the National Labor Relations Act to compel its employees against their wills to join the International Union and subject themselves to its domination and control. In furtherance of this conspiracy, the said International Union, its officers, agents and members, published or caused to be published false and libelous reports about respondent and the working conditions in its plant, and inaugurated and threatened to inaugurate secondary boycotts against respondent's customers and its merchandise in the various states of the Union, and threatened to cause gangs of lawless persons to assault respondent's employees and perpetrate the same unlawful acts of violence and intimidation, including stripping of women naked in the public streets, assaulting them with knives, razor [fol. 410] blades and other deadly weapons, which they perpetrated or caused to be perpetrated against the employees of other garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Mo., St. Louis, Mo., Memphis, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas. The said International Union announced in the public press that it had set aside a fund of $250,000 to finance its campaign against respondent.

Respondent, on or about March 2, 1937, shortly after the International Union had publicly announced the opening of the drive against respondent and its employees, was notified by all of its employees except three that they refused to acknowledge or accept the International Union as their representative for the purpose of collective bargaining. The International Union, knowing that it did not represent a single employee in respondent's plant, and knowing of the protest by the employees above mentioned, on or about March 9, 1937 sent to respondent a letter containing statements of alleged conditions of employment at respondent's plant which were known by the writers to be false and which were maliciously made. A conference was requested for the purpose of making a closed shop contract with respondent. Respondent determined that in the circumstances it could not legally contract with the International and did not reply to said letter. The International, on or about March 15, 1937, began an attack of fraud and violence upon the Missouri Garment Company, Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company and Gernes Garment Company, all of Kansas City, Mo., for the purpose of compelling those companies to force their employees to join the International. At said time, the International did not represent a single employee of the Gernes Gar-[fol. 411] ment Company, and a very small minority in the two other said companies. Agents of the International Union announced that the acts of violence perpetrated against the employees of said companies would be perpetrated against the employees of respondent company and would be commenced against respondent's employees after the above mentioned companies had capitulated and yielded to the demands of the Union for a closed shop. The International further began the circulation throughout the country of the false and libelous statements contained in the above letter of March 9th.

Respondent was advised, on or about April 23, 1937, that one hundred per cent of its employees had voluntarily formed a union styled "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union" and selected their own representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining, and for the purpose of protecting themselves against the threatened assault of the International. Respondent did not suggest the formation of said Union or in any way interfere with or coerce its employees in the formation of the same and has at no time since interfered with or in any manner contributed, financially or otherwise, to the maintenance of the said union. That thereafter representatives of said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union requested that respondent enter into a collective bargaining agreement covering all terms and conditions of employment. Respondent thereupon sought to obtain a determination by the representatives of the Labor Board as to the right of said Union to be the exclusive bargaining agent of all of said employees, but was advised by the said representatives of the Labor Board that under the rulings of the Labor Board an application by an employer for certification or an [fol. 412] election could not be granted. Thereafter respondent, on or about May 27, 1937, after negotiations, entered into a collective bargaining contract with the representatives of its employees which contract is now in full force and effect and provides for higher wages and more favorable conditions of employment than are contained in any contract which the International Union has entered into with other garment manufacturers in this part of the country. Respondent and one hundred per cent of its employees settled all matters pertaining to the terms and conditions of employment and to employee representation, and there is not now, nor has there been, any dispute over the same.

Respondent on July 5, 1937, instituted in the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri a suit to enjoin the said International Union, David Dubinsky, President, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director, Wave Tobin, manager of the Kansas City Joint Board, Jane Palmer, officers, agents and members of said union from committing the unlawful acts of fraud and violence above described. A restraining order was thereupon issued by United States District Judge Otis enjoining the International, its officers, agents and members, from doing any of the unlawful acts complained of.

The International Union and other defendants in said case requested a three judge court to hear the case. Honorable Alba S. Van Valkenburgh, United States Circuit Judge and Honorable Albert L. Reeves, United States District Judge, were thereupon designated to sit with Honorable Merrill E. Otis, United States District Judge, [fol. 413] in the trial of the case. After an exhaustive hearing of evidence upon respondent's application for temporary injunction, Judge Van Valkenburgh and Judge Reeves in the majority opinion granted the temporary injunction and found the International, its officers and agents, to be guilty of the acts complained of in respondent's petition; copies of said opinions are hereto attached and marked Exhibit "A" and made a part of this Answer as though set out in haec verbae. United States District Judge Otis stated in substance that respondent had made an overwhelming case for an injunction but had not complied with the technical requirements of the Norris-La-Guardia Act which prohibits the issuance of an injunction by a Federal Court unless said requirements have been complied with (21 Fed. Supp. 809). The said findings of fact and conclusions of law made by said three judge court are attached hereto, marked Exhibit "A-1" and made a part of this Answer as though set out in haec verbae. The International and other defendants appealed the judgment of said three judge court to the Supreme Court of the United States, which court held that the said suit was not one which required a three judge court and remanded the case to the United States District Court for a trial before a single judge (304 U. S. 243; 58 S. Ct. Rep. 875).

Thereafter, on or about August 25, 1938, respondent received the following letter from Ernest C. Dunbar, then acting regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, to-wit:

[fol. 414] "National Labor Relations Board

Re: Donnelly Garment Company
Case No. XVII-C-371.

Dear Mrs. Reed:

There was filed with the Seventeenth Regional Office of the National Labor Relations Board on August 9, 1938, against the Donnelly Garment Company, by Jane Walker Palmer, on behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, charges of unfair labor practice within the meaning of Section 8, sub-Sections (1) (2) and (3) of the National Labor Relations Act, in that on or about March 18, 1937, and at various times since that date, said company interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of said Act, and that on or about April 27, 1937, and at all times since said date, said company interfered with and controlled the formation and administration of a labor organization among said company's employees, known as the "Donnelly Garment Workers Union" and further, that said company did on various dates discharge certain of its employees for the reason that they had joined or had assisted a labor organization of their own choosing, and have at all times since said discharges refused to reinstate said employees.

Will you or your representative call at this office, 1016 Scarritt Building, Kansas City, Missouri, in the very near future and at your convenience, for the purpose of discussing informally the charges alleged by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the meeting to be strictly informal and to help us in our investigation of said charges.

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST C. DUNBAR
Acting Regional Director."

Respondent promptly communicated with said Ernest C. Dunbar and requested the names of individuals involved and the times and places of occurrences which were charged to constitute a violation of the National Labor Relations Act. This information was denied respondent. [fol. 415] Respondent repeatedly requested the opportunity to present evidence concerning any charges of unfair labor practice. The said representatives of the Board denied respondent this privilege. They threatened the filing of a complaint and a lengthy trial thereon unless respondent acceded to the demands of the International Union. They asserted that in case of a trial the Labor Board would find against respondent.

Conferences between the Labor Board, respondent, and the representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were later participated in by a representative of the International Union, and all matters alleged to be in controversy were then discussed, and the representative of the International Union in said conference admitted that the employees of the respondent company did not desire to belong to the International Union or be represented by it for the purpose of collective bargaining.

On or about February 4, 1939, at the request of the representatives of the Labor Board, the respondent, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, the International Union, and the acting regional director of the Labor Board, submitted to each other in writing proposals of settlement of all alleged matters in controversy between the parties. The International Union made the following proposal:

"1. The Donnelly Garment Company must consent that a decree be entered in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit disestablishing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as an agency for collective bargaining and the representation of the workers.

"2. Those employees, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who were discharged and discriminated against because of their activities in behalf of that union, must be offered reinstatement with back pay.

[fol. 416] "3. The case of Donnelly Garment Company et al., against International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, et al., No. 2924, now pending in the District Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, must be dismissed at plaintiffs' cost.

The International agrees:

"First: To cease all activities of every kind and character which tend to keep anyone from purchasing any of the products of the Donnelly Garment Company, so long as the Donnelly Garment Company does not recognize any plant union as the bargaining representative of its employees.

"Second: The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union will agree that it will continue the efforts to organize the workers of the Donnelly Garment Company by peaceful and lawful methods."

Said proposal required respondent to violate the plain terms of the National Labor Relations Act and forever to deny their employees the right guaranteed by the law to designate their own representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining.

The proposal of the representative of the Labor Board demonstrates a prejudgment of the issues involved on the ex parte evidence of the International and further demonstrates their efforts to assist and abet the International Union in its conspiracy to force respondent to violate the terms and conditions of the National Labor Relations Act in order to prevent the destruction of its business. A copy of said proposal is attached hereto, marked Exhibit "B" and made a part of this answer as though set out in haec verbae.

Respondent advised that it could not legally and lawfully accept either the proposal of the International or of the Labor Board.

A trial of the above mentioned injunction suit was commenced March 22, 1939 and after an extended hearing of evidence, the District Court granted respondent a permanent injunction against the International Union, its officers, agents and members.

[fol. 417] The Court said of the International Union's aid against respondent: "They were caught doing unlawful things and for that they are being dealt with as law breakers".

The decree of the Court, together with the findings of facts and conclusions of law are attached hereto, marked Exhibit "C" and made a part of this Answer as though set out in haec verbae.

Respondent states that the circumstances surrounding the filing of the complaint herein and the constant attendance of the representatives of the Labor Board at the hearing for permanent injunction in the above mentioned injunction case and their frequent consultations during the examination of respondent's witnesses with representatives of the International Union, further demonstrates that the Labor Board has assisted and is assisting the International Union in its conspiracy against respondent company and is maintaining the proceedings herein in violation of any authority vested in the Labor Board by the National Labor Relations Act. Respondent states that the International Union instituted this proceeding as a part of its unlawful conspiracy above described and in bad faith. That the Labor Board, having knowledge of all of the foregoing facts, must dismiss the proceedings in accordance with the spirit and plain provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, the anti-trust laws of the United States, and the laws of the land.

C.

Respondent herewith petitions for investigation and certification of representatives of its employees, pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act. The [fol. 418] respondent employs approximately 1200 persons who have advised respondent that they have formed and are maintaining a voluntary unincorporated plant union restricted to persons employed in respondent's plant. Respondent has been advised that one hundred per cent of said employees organized and are now members of said plant union, styled "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union". The International Union claims that the said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is not the true representative of a majority of the employees of respondent's plant. Respondent, prior to May 27, 1937, but after the organization of the said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, was furnished evidence of the membership of all of its employees in said union, and the representatives of said union requested that respondent enter into collective bargaining contract with said union, which said contracts, after negotiations, were entered into on May 27 and June 22, 1937. That respondent is and has been at all times willing to deal with the true representatives of a majority of its employees for the purpose of collective bargaining. The respondent further alleges that the question concerning representation is a question affecting commerce within the meaning of the National Labor Relations Act. Therefore, respondent requests that pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, the National Labor Relations Board investigate the true representatives of its employees by election or otherwise, and certify to respondent the name or names of the representatives that have been designated or selected by said employees.

[fol. 419] D.

1. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 1 thereof, respondent admits that it is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri with its factory and principal place of business at 1828 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and is engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling ladies' garments.

2. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 2 thereof, respondent admits that it purchases a substantial portion of its materials used in the manufacture of its garments from states other than the State of Missouri, and sells a substantial portion of its garments in states other than the State of Missouri.

3. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 3 thereof, respondent denies that the International Ladies Garment Workers Union is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of the National Labor Relations Act, and therefore denies the allegations of said paragraph 3 thereof.

4. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 4 thereof, respondent admits that Donnelly Garment Workers Union is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of the National Labor Relations Act. Respondent denies, on information and belief, that the Donnelly Loyalty League referred to in said paragraph numbered 4 is or ever was a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2 (5) of said [fol. 420] Act and further denies that said Donnelly Loyalty League is a predecessor of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Further answering, respondent on information and belief says that said Donnelly Loyalty League is not a labor organization and has never purported to act as a labor organization and has never dealt with respondent as a labor organization, but is a social organization of employees of respondent and is not connected in any way with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as predecessor or otherwise; that respondent did not form, or assist in, or interfere with the formation of, said Donnelly Loyalty League and has not dominated same or maintained same, or assisted in the administration of same, or rendered financial or other support to same; and respondent further says that said Donnelly Loyalty League and its activities and all allegations of the complaint with reference to same are wholly irrelevant and immaterial to any matter within the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board and that all allegations of the complaint with reference thereto should be dismissed.

Respondent further specifically denies that on or about April 27, 1937, and/or at any time since said date down to and including the date of the filing of said complaint, that it has dominated or interfered in the formation and/ [fol. 421] or administration of a labor organization among its employees known as "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union" and/or that it has given financial aid or other support to said organization, in any of the ways, methods or manner alleged or set forth in said paragraph 5, or in any other way, shape or manner whatsoever.

(b) Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 5 (b) thereof, respondent specifically denies that it did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, furnish financial or other support to Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, in that supervisory or other employees were allowed to solicit membership, hold meetings and engage in concerted activities in behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during working hours and on company property without loss of pay or other penalty and by various other means contributed financial aid and other support to said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and denies that it contributed or furnished financial or other support or aid to Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in any way or by any means

[fol. 422] (c) Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 5 (c) thereof, respondent specifically denies that it did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, form the Donnelly Loyalty League on or about February 12, 1935, and denies that it formed said Donnelly Loyalty League for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., and/or that the officers and agents of respondent dominated or continued to dominate the administration of the Donnelly Loyalty League until on or about April 27, 1937, or for any period of time, and further denies that at said time, or at any other time or place, said Donnelly Loyalty League at a meeting on respondent's property was succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and/or that said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was created to be a continuation of the Donnelly Loyalty League and/or to effect and carry out the policies of said Donnelly Loyalty League, and/or to be subservient and to be amenable to the wishes of respondent.

Respondent further says that the allegations in the complaint that respondent through its officers and agents formed the Donnelly Loyalty League on or about February 12, 1935, and dominated and continued to dominate it, are immaterial and irrelevant and state no c. ge against respondent cognizable within the jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board; that the National Labor Relations Act was not approved until July 5, 1935, and any hearing or determination of said allegations or any [fol. 423] of them by the National Labor Relations Board or any rule or order which said Board might or may make against the respondent by reason of, or based upon said allegations or any of the same, would be beyond the jurisdiction of said Board, and contrary to and violative of Section 9 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and any ruling or order which said Board might or may make against respondent by reason of or based upon said allegations or any of same would be and constitute a denial to respondent of due process of law and would deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law, all contrary to and violative of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; and by reason thereof, respondent says that the allegations of said paragraph numbered 5 (c) of the complaint should be dismissed.

(d) Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 5 (d) thereof, respondent admits that on or about May 22, 1937, respondent entered into an agreement with Donnelly Garment Workers' Union providing for rates of pay, hours of work and other conditions of employment, but specifically denies that said agreement was made for the purpose of assisting said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or of compelling membership therein or of depriving respondent's employees of their rights guaranteed under the National Labor Relations Act, or to manifest its approval of or to lend support to said Union.

Further answering, respondent says that the National Labor Relations Act expressly authorizes a "closed shop" [fol. 424] contract, such as that made by respondent with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as representative of all of its employees, and the making of said "closed shop" contract and the provisions thereof constitute no violation of the National Labor Relations Act and constitute no unfair labor practice or any unlawful discrimination. That by reason of the foregoing, the allegations of said paragraph numbered 5 (d) of the complaint should be dismissed.

6. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 6 thereof, respondent specifically denies that by the alleged acts or any of them, alleged or set forth in paragraph 5 of said complaint or referred to in said paragraph 6, and/or by any other acts, it has dominated or interfered with the formation and administration of or has contributed financial aid or other support to labor organizations, and/or that it did thereby or in any manner or way engage in or is thereby or in any manner or way engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the National Labor Relations Act.

7. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 7 thereof, respondent specifically denies that by the alleged acts or any of them alleged or set forth in paragraph 5 of said complaint or referred to in said paragraph 7, or by any other acts, it has interfered with, restrained and/or coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act or that it has thereby or in [fol. 425] any other way or manner engaged in or is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

8. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 8 thereof, respondent specifically denies that, by its officers and agents at its Kansas City, Missouri, factory, while engaged in the alleged operations described in paragraphs 1 and 2 of said complaint, or otherwise, discharged from its employment Sylvia Hull on or about April 23, 1937, and/or May Fike on or about April 26, 1937, for the reasons that they had joined and/or assisted the I. L. G. W. U. and/or engaged in concerted activities in its behalf, and denies that it thus discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U., and denies that it discharged either of said persons for the purpose of discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U., and respondent denies that said Sylvia Hull and May Fike were discharged by respondent from its employ, but states that said Sylvia Hull and May Fike voluntarily left the employment of the respondent and thereupon ceased to be employees of respondent within the meaning of any of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act. That because of each and all of the foregoing matters, the respondent is not now and has not been guilty of any unfair labor practices arising out of the alleged acts set forth in said paragraph 8, or of any discriminatory acts arising out of said alleged matters, and said paragraph 8 and the allegations thereof should be dismissed.

[fol. 426] 9. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 9 thereof, respondent specifically denies that it discharged or refused to reinstate said Sylvia Hull and May Fike, or either of them, for the alleged reasons or any of them set forth in paragraph 8 of the complaint or referred to in said paragraph 9, and denies that it has discriminated or is discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of said Sylvia Hull and May Fike, or either of them, for any of said reasons; and specifically denies that, by reason of any of the matters, things, or reasons, set forth in said paragraph 8 or referred to in said paragraph 9, or by any other means whatsoever, it engaged in or is engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of said Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act, but respondent states that said Sylvia Hull and May Fike voluntarily left the employment of the respondent during respondent's busy season, when respondent was desirous of retaining them in its employ; that their employment by or work for respondent did not cease as a consequence of, or in connection with, any current labor dispute or because of any unfair labor practices on the part of respondent; that Sylvia Hull became employed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as an organizer and May Fike obtained substantially equivalent employment elsewhere; that they did not then and do not now desire reemployment by respondent; that they voluntarily left respondent's employment and that they were not discharged or refused reemployment because of their union activities or as a punishment for, or as discouragement of union activities or union membership, or for any reason denounced by the National Labor Relations Act, but solely for other reasons pertaining to their conduct and qualifications as efficient and reliable operators.

11. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 11 thereof, respondent specifically denies that it has done or is now doing any of the alleged acts or things in said paragraph 11 set forth or referred to,

and specifically denies that by the alleged acts referred to in said paragraph 11 and/or set forth in paragraphs 5 and 8 of the complaint, or any of them, or that by interfering with, coercing, intimidating or threatening its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in the I. L. G. W. U., or by keeping members and meetings of the I. L. G. W. U. under surveillance, or by openly manifesting bitter hostility to the I. L. G. W. U., or by the issuance of written or oral statements designed or calculated to discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U., or by showing preference or favoritism to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or making membership therein a condition of employment, or by depriving its employees of the opportunity of joining an organization of their own choosing, or by discriminating in the allotment of work to members or sympathizers of the I. L. G. W. U., or by questioning employees individually and collectively [fol. 428] with regard to their union activities and prejudices, or by instigating, allowing or permitting violent demonstrations upon its time and property against certain employees of respondent who were members of the I. L. G. W. U., or by various or any other similar or different acts and conduct, it has interfered with, restrained or coerced, or is interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join or assist labor organizations of their own choosing, and/or that it did thereby engage in or is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of said Section 8 (1) of said Act.

12. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 12 thereof, respondent specifically denies that the "closed shop" contract referred to in said paragraph is a direct and proximate result of the alleged acts and conduct of respondent set forth in paragraphs 5 to 11 inclusive of the complaint, and denies that said closed shop contract constitutes, culminates and perpetuates continuing intimidation, interference, restraint and coercion by respondent in violation of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3) of the National Labor Relations Act, and denies that said closed shop contract is invalid, void and of no effect for said reasons or any other reasons; but respondent says that such contract is expressly authorized by the National Labor Relations Act, and that the making thereof constitutes no violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and that the charges contained in paragraph 12 of the complaint should be dismissed.

[fol. 429] Respondent further states that David Dubinsky, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, testified under oath at the hearing for permanent injunction in the case, elsewhere referred to in this answer, that said I. L. G. W. U. was seeking a "closed shop" contract with respondent, under which respondent would be obligated to employ only members of the I. L. G. W. U. That in the contracts made by said International Union with other garment companies in Kansas City, Missouri, said I. L. G. W. U. (which is the same union that filed charges herein against respondent), closed shop provisions were inserted when said union did not represent any of the employees of the one company and did not represent a majority of the employees of such other garment companies, and when a majority of said employees did not desire said I. L. G. W. U. to represent them. That in the face of sworn evidence of Perlstein and other witnesses adduced in the hearing of the above mentioned injunction suit, which was heard by representatives of the Labor Board, said representatives have taken no steps to protect the rights of said employees which under the law it is their duty to protect. That in view of the fact that one hundred per cent of respondent's employees have demanded a closed shop contract with respondent, the Labor Board is not vested with authority to emasculate the National Labor Relations Act by depriving respondent's employees of their right to designate their true representatives or to prohibit respondent from contracting with such representatives including the making of said closed shop agreement.

[fol. 430] 13. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 13 thereof, respondent denies that the closed shop contract therein referred to was entered into with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at a time when that union was not the representatives of respondent's employees within the meaning of Section 8 (3) and Section 9 (a) of the National Labor Relations Act, and/or at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was a labor organization established, maintained and assisted by actions defined in the National Labor Relations Act as unfair labor practices, and denies that said closed shop contract is invalid, void and of no effect for said reasons or any other reasons; but respondent avers that at the time of the making of said closed shop contract, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was the representative of the respondent's employees within the meaning of Section 8 (3) and Section 9 (a) of said Act, and respondent further denies that it established, maintained or assisted said Donnelly Garment Workers' Union in any way or at any time; that the making of said closed shop contract is expressly authorized by the National Labor Relations Act, that respondent violated no provision of said Act in making said contract, and the charges contained in paragraph 13 of the complaint should be dismissed.

14. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 14 thereof, respondent specifically denies that by entering into the closed shop contract re- [fol. 431] ferred to in said paragraph, that it interfered with, restrained and/or coerced, or is interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and denies that it thereby did engage in or is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of the National Labor Relations Act and denies that said closed shop contract is for such reasons or any other reasons invalid, void and of no effect; that such closed shop contract is expressly authorized by the National Labor Relations Act, and the charges contained in said paragraph 14 of the complaint should be dismissed.

15. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 15 thereof, respondent specifically denies that by entering into the closed shop contract referred to in said paragraph, it discriminated in regard to hire or tenure of employment and terms and conditions of employment, and denies that it did thereby discourage membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and denies that it did thereby encourage membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Worker's Union was established, maintained and assisted by respondent or at any other time, and denies that respondent did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act, and denies that the said closed shop contract is for such reasons or for any other reasons, invalid, void [fol. 432] and of no effect, and respondent further denies that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was established, maintained and assisted by respondent at any time; that the making of said closed shop contract violates no provision of the National Labor Relations Act, but is expressly authorized by said Act, and the charges contained in said paragraph 15 of the complaint should be dismissed.

17. Further answering said complaint and particularly paragraph numbered 17 thereof, respondent specifically denies that it has done or permitted any of the alleged acts referred to in paragraph 17 of the complaint and further [fol. 433] denies that said alleged acts constitute unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3), and Section 2 (6) and (7) of said Act, or any of them.

18. Further answering said complaint, respondent says that in and by each and all of its aforesaid denials, whether in the conjunctive or disjunctive form, of acts and matters charged or alleged in the complaint, respondent intends to and does deny each and all of such acts and charges severally and in the disjunctive and also collectively and in the conjunctive.

19. Further answering said complaint, respondent says that it has meticulously attempted to comply with and obey all the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act and denies that it has violated any of the provisions of said Act; that pursuant to the provisions of said Act and upon the demands of the chosen representatives of a majority of its employees, respondent made and entered into collective bargaining contracts with said representatives of a majority of its employees, to-wit: the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, whose membership includes all employees of respondent, except those in executive and supervisory capacities; that by reason thereof and of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, respondent is precluded from bargaining collectively with any other union concerning terms and conditions of employment; that said contracts have been and are being complied with by respondent in every respect. Respondent further says [fol. 434] that it has not interfered with and has no desire to interfere with the free choice by its employees of representatives to bargain collectively for them, and at all times since the passage of the National Labor Relations Act, respondent has been willing to bargain collectively with any union or representatives selected by a majority of its employees, and that it has not discriminated against any employees because of their union or nonunion activities.

20. That by reason of the foregoing matters and things, respondent is not guilty of any of the unfair labor practices or acts charged in the complaint.

Wherefore respondent prays that said complaint be dismissed and that respondent be exonerated of the charges therein contained.

"Kansas City, Missouri

Gentlemen:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your "statement of position" as was agreed at the close of our last conference in connection with the charges now on file in this office against the Donnelly Garment Company filed by International Ladies' Garment Workers Union thru Jane Walker Palmer, attorney.

"In order to dispose of these charges the Board's position, based upon a very complete painstaking investigation, would require the following:

"1. Donnelly Garment Company post notices in conspicuous places throughout its plant and maintain said notices for a period of sixty days, which notices would state "Donnelly Garment Company will cease and desist from interfering with the rights of their employees to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively thru representatives of their own choosing, and

"2. The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union forthwith be disestablished as an agency for the purpose of collective bargaining or in any manner to act as a representative of the employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed under Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act, and

"3. The Donnelly Garment Company offer full and immediate reinstatement without loss of seniority or any other rights and privileges previously enjoyed by them to all of the persons, (a list of whose names has already been furnished to you) who were discharged by reason of their membership in and/or activity in behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers or those whose discharges occurred prior to July 5, 1935, and whose applications for reinstatement to their former positions were refused because of their membership in and/or their activities in behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers and by making whole to said employees for such losses as they may have suffered by reason of their discharges and/or refusals to reinstate."

All of the above terms to be embodied into a decree, the entry of which in the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals to be expressly consented to, which decree provides for the [fol. 475] enforcement in full of each and every provision thereof and further that the parties thereto expressly waive notice to the filing thereof.

"I assume that if the above is inconsistent with any understanding that you already have concerning our negotiations, you will promptly bring them to my attention.

(Application of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for an Election by the Employes and for Continuance.)

Now comes Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an unincorporated labor union, and files its application and request for an election by the employes of the Donnelly Garment Company as to their choice and desire in connection with membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, such an election to be held under the instructions and control of this Board to insure complete secrecy of the ballot of each employe, and the opportunity of each employe and of no one else to cast one ballot, and under such other restrictions and regulations as may to this Board seem just and proper, and as authorized by Section 9 (C) of the National Labor Relations Act.

Since such election would settle and determine many if not all of the questions involved in this pending hearing, intervener asks that further proceedings in such hearing be postponed until such election has been held and the results announced to the parties.

[fol. 493] (Board's Exhibit No. 1-QQQ.)

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/6/39.

(Motion of Intervener, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to strike portions of Answer of Donnelly Garment Company, and granting thereof.)

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union moves to strike from the answer of the Donnelly Garment Company the following language contained in Paragraph 2 of their A subdivision of their answer, which is on Page 2 of said answer, the language to be stricken being the following:

"And have been" referring back to the word contracts, "determined by a United States Federal Court to contain higher wages and more favorable working conditions than are contained in any contracts entered into between the International Union and other garment manufacturers in this part of the country," for the reason that said allegation refers to facts, if they be facts, which are not in any way material to any of the charges contained in the complaint, and for the further reason that this tribunal is not bound by any conclusions that may have been reached by any other tribunal, particularly, by the Federal Court to which they refer.

This union further moves to strike from said answer, commencing with the second paragraph on Page 7 of said answer, the following language:

"During all of the times mentioned in the amended charge and the complaint filed herein, the International [fol. 494] Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, David Dubinsky, president, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director, Wave Tobin, manager of the Kansas City Joint Board, Jane Palmer, their agents and members, were engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy respondent's business for the sole purpose of forcing respondent in violation of the National Labor Relations Act to compel its employees against their wills to join the International Union and subject themselves to its domination and control. In furtherance of this conspiracy, the said International Union, its officers, agents and members, published or caused to be published false and libelous reports about respondent and the working conditions in its plant, and inaugurated and threatened to inaugurate secondary boycotts against respondent's customers and its merchandise in the various states of the union, and threatened to cause gangs of lawful persons to assault respondent's employees and perpetrate the same unlawful acts of violence and intimidation, including stripping of women naked in the public streets, assaulting them with knives, razor blades and other deadly weapons, which they perpetrated or caused to be perpetrated against the employees of other garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Missouri, St. Louis, Missouri, Memphis, Tennessee, and Dallas, Texas. The said International Union announced in the public press that it had set aside a fund of $250,000 to finance its campaign against respondent."

Said union moves to strike that paragraph for the reason that the allegations, facts, allegations purporting to be facts which are in no way material or germane to the issues in the case before this Examiner; that by said allegations the respondent seeks to do the thing that certain persons who criticized the National Labor Relations Act are now attempting to do in Congress by way of amendment, that is, to interpret this Act as though it were one designed to prohibit violence and intimidation from any source. The purpose, of course, of the National Labor [fol. 495] Relations Act is simple, that is, to guarantee the right to bargain collectively to employees and to declare as unfair labor practices certain conduct of employers which impedes that right. Now, this allegation is an effort to try this case as though it were being tried in a court of equity with the rule that "He who comes into court of equity should come with clean hands" or "He who seeks equity should do equity." There is no such interpretation ever been placed upon the National Labor Relations Act and as I say, it is well known, of course, to the Examiner, that there is now an effort on the part of certain people, whom I will describe as enemies of the Act, to amend it so as to permit just such evidence as they attempt to plead here to be offered.

Now, the said union further moves to strike the next paragraph on Page 8, which reads as follows:

"Respondent, on or about March 2, 1937, shortly after the International Union had publicly announced the opening of the drive against respondent and its employees, was notified by all of its employees, except 3, that they refused to acknowledge or accept the International Union as their representative for the purpose of collective bargaining. The International Union, knowing that it did not represent a single employee in respondent's plant, and knowing of the protests by the employees above mentioned, on or about March 9, 1937, sent to respondent a letter containing statements of alleged conditions of employment at respondent's plant which were known by the writers to be false and which were maliciously made. A conference was requested for the purpose of making a closed shop contract with respondent. Respondent determined that in the circumstances it could not legally contract with [fol. 496] the International and did not reply to said letter. The International, on or about March 15, 1937, began an attack of fraud and violence upon the Missouri Garment Company, Gordon Brothers Manufacturing Company, and Gernes Garment Company, all of Kansas City, Missouri, for the purpose of compelling those companies to force their employees to join the International. At said time, the International did not represent a single employee of the Gernes Garment Company, and a very small minority in the 2 other said companies. Agents of the International Union announced that the acts of violence perpetrated against the employees of said companies would not be perpetrated against the employees of respondent company and would be commenced against respondent employees after the above mentioned companies had capitulated and yielded to the demands of the union for a closed shop. The International further began the circulation throughout the country of the false and libelous statements contained in the above letter of March 9."

Said union moves to strike this paragraph for all the reasons stated in its motion to strike the previous paragraph, and for the reason that it seeks to interject into this hearing alleged happenings which are in no way germane or material to any of the issues here, and which of course, would cause the Examiner to go far afield and try a number of other labor controversies that they allege occurred at other plants and in other cities.

Said union further moves to strike from said answer, and from Page 10 thereof, the words commencing in the fifth line of said page, as follows: "And provides for—" referring back to the word contract, "for higher wages and more favorable conditions of employment than are contained in any contract with the International Union as entered into with other garment manufacturers in this part of the country," for the reason that the facts alleged [fol. 497] in that allegation are immaterial to the determination of the issues in this case.

Said union further moves to strike from said answer the following language, commencing on Page 10 of said answer, and commencing with the first full paragraph on said page, as follows:

"Respondent on July 5, 1937, instituted in the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri a suit to enjoin the said International Union, David Dubinsky, president, Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Divisional Director, Wave Tobin, manager of the Kansas City Joint Board, Jane Palmer, officers, agents and members of said union from committing the unlawful acts of fraud and violence above described. A restraining order was thereupon issued by United States District Judge Otis enjoining the International, its officers, agents and members, from doing any of the unlawful acts complained of.

"The International Union and other defendants in said case requested a 3 judge court to hear the case. Honorable Arba S. Van Valkenburgh, United States Circuit Judge and Honorable Albert L. Reeves, United States District Judge, were thereupon designated to sit with Honorable Merrill E. Otis, United States District Judge, in the trial of the case. After an exhaustive hearing of evidence upon respondent's application for temporary injunction, Judge Van Valkenburgh and Judge Reeves in the majority opinion granted a temporary injunction and found the International, its officers and agents, to be guilty of the acts complained of in respondent's petition; copies of said opinions are hereto attached and marked Exhibit "A" and made a part of this answer as though set out in haec verbae. United States District Judge Otis stated in substance that respondent had made an overwhelming case [fol. 498] for an injunction, but has not complied with the technical requirements of the Norris-LaGuardia Act which prohibits the issuance of an injunction by a Federal Court unless said requirements have been complied with (21 Fed. Supp. 809). The said findings of fact and conclusions of law made by said 3-judge Court are attached hereto, marked Exhibit "A-1" and made a part of this answer as though set out in haec verbae. The International and other defendants appealed the judgment of said 3-judge Court to the Supreme Court of the United States, which Court held that the said suit was not one that required a 3-judge Court and remanded the case to the United States District Court for a trial before a single judge (304 U. S. 243: 58 F. Ct. Rep. 875)." For the reason that the matters alleged in said paragraphs are in no way material to the charge before this Examiner and complaint, and this Examiner is in no way bound by the opinions if they be the opinions alleged in this answer of the judges of the other tribunal, and for the reason that it is an effort to try that injunction suit before this Examiner in this hearing.

Said union further moves to strike from said answer the following, commencing with the first full paragraph on page 12.

"Conferences between the Labor Board, respondent and the representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were later participated in by a representative of the International Union, and all matters alleged to be in controversy were then discussed, and the representative of the International Union in said conference admitted that the employees of the respondent company did not desire to belong to the International Union or be represented by it for the purpose of collective bargaining." For the reason that said facts as alleged, if true, are in no way material or germane to this hearing, and in no way binding upon this Examiner.

[fol. 499] Said union further moves to strike from said answer, the language commencing on Page 13, and contained in the last paragraph on said page, as follows:

"A trial of the above mentioned injunction suit was commenced March 2, 1939, and after an extended hearing of evidence, the District Court granted respondent a permanent injunction against the International Union, its officers, agents and members. The Court said of the International Union's raid against respondent: 'They were caught doing unlawful things and for that, they are being dealt with as lawbreakers.'

"The decree of the court, together with the findings of facts and conclusions of law are attached hereto, marked Exhibit "C" and made a part of this answer as though set out in haec verba," for the reason that said paragraphs are an effort, upon the part of the Donnelly Garment Company and its counsel, to retry that injunction suit before this Examiner, and for the further reason that the matters therein alleged are in no way material or germane to the issues here, and the decrees and findings of that court are in no way binding upon this court.

Said union further moves to strike from this answer the following paragraph contained on page 14 of said answer:

"Respondent states that the circumstances surrounding the filing of the complaint herein and the constant attendance of the representatives of the Labor Board at the hearing for permanent injunction in the above-mentioned injunction case and their frequent consultations during the examination of respondent's witnesses with representatives of the International Union, further demonstrates that the Labor Board has assisted and is assisting [fol. 500] the International Union in its conspiracy against respondent company and is maintaining the proceedings herein in violation of any authority vested in the Labor Board by the National Labor Relations Act. Respondent states that the International Union instituted this proceeding as a part of its unlawful conspiracy above described, and in bad faith. That the Labor Board, having knowledge of all of the foregoing facts, must dismiss the proceeding in accordance with the spirit and plain provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, the Anti-Trust Laws of the United States, and the laws of the land"; for the reason that the allegations of said facts and if said facts were true, are in no way binding upon the Examiner in this case, or that they are not material to any of the issues before this Examiner; that what prejudice, if any, some other representative of the Labor Board might have would, of course, not affect the Examiner in this case, or in any way be binding on him, and it is an effort to cast an aspersion upon certain representatives of this Board, which even if the conduct described therein should be true, is in no way material to the issues herein involved.

Said union further moves to strike from page 26 of said answer the following language, commencing at the top of said page:

"Respondent further states that David Dubinsky, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, testified under oath at the hearing for permanent injunction in the case, elsewhere referred to in this answer, that said I. L. G. W. U. was seeking a "closed shop" contract with respondent, under which respondent would be obligated to employ only members of the I. L. G. W. U. That in the contracts made by said International Union with other garment companies in Kansas City, Missouri, [fol. 501] said I. L. G. W. U. (which is the same union that filed charges herein against respondent), closed shop provisions were inserted when said union did not represent any of the employees of the one company and did not represent a majority of the employees of such garment companies, and when a majority of said employees did not desire said I. L. G. W. U. to represent them. That in the face of sworn evidence of Perlstein and other witnesses adduced in the hearing of the above-mentioned injunction suit, which was heard by representatives of the Labor Board, said representatives have taken no steps to protect the rights of said employees which under the law it is their duty to protect", for the reason that the allegations therein contained refer to facts, if they be facts, that are in no way germane and material to the issues here, and for the reason that the National Labor Relations Act does not permit this Examiner to take into consideration any alleged law violation, coercion, intimidation on the part of the complaining union.

CLIF LANGSDALE,
JANE WALKER PALMER.

Motion to strike granted.

plaint, has dominated and interfered in the formation and administration of a labor organization a[illegible]ng its employees, known as "Donnelly Garment Workers Union," and has given financial aid and other support to said organization, in that respondent, among other things:

(a) Did encourage, allow, and permit supervisory and other employees acting in the interest of respondent to organize, promote, and encourage membership into the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union particularly in the months of March, April, and May 1937 and thereafter, on respondent's time and on respondent's property and at respondent's pay and at its expense.

(b) Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, furnish financial and other support to Donnelly Garment Workers Union, in that supervisory and other employees were allowed to solicit membership, hold meetings and engage in concerted activities in behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers Union during working hours and on company property without loss of pay or [fol. 506] other penalty and by various other means contributed financial aid and other support to said Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

(c) Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, form the Donnelly Loyalty League on or about February 12, 1935, for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., and said officers and agents of respondent continued to dominate the administration of the Donnelly Loyalty League until on or about April 27, 1937, at which time said Donnelly Loyalty League at a meeting on respondent's property was succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers Union created to be a continuation of the Donnelly Loyalty League and to effect and carry out the policies of its predecessor and to be subservient and amenable to the wishes of respondent.

(d) Did enter into a closed-shop agreement with Donnelly Garment Workers Union on or about May 22, 1937, creating as a condition of employment, membership in said Donnelly Garment Workers Union, for the purpose of assisting said Union, compelling membership therein, de-prving its employees of their rights guaranteed under the National Labor Relations Act, and to further manifest its approval of and to lend support to said Union.

6. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, and by other acts, has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of and has contributed financial aid and other support to labor organizations and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of said Act.

7. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of said Act and has thereby engaged in and is [fol. 507] thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

8. Respondent, by its officers and agents at its Kansas City, Missouri factory, while engaged in the operations described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, did discharge from its employment Sylvia Hull, on or about April 23, 1937, and May Fike, on or about April 26, 1937, for the reasons that they had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U. and engaged in concerted activities in its behalf, and thus discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U.

9. Respondent, by its discharge of Sylvia Hull and May Fike, and by its refusal to reinstate said employees for the reasons set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has thereby discriminated and is thereby discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of said employees and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of said Act.

10. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the mean[illegible] of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

11. Respondent, since July 5, 1935, by the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5), and eight (8), above, by interfering with, coercing, intimidating, and threatening its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in I. L. G. W. U.; by keeping members and meetings of I. L. G. W. U. under surveillance; by openly manifesting bitter hostility to the I. L. G. W. U.; by acts and conduct of supervisory and other employees; by the issuance of written and oral statements designed and calculated to discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U., including statements made by the president of respondent at a meeting on the property of the company called by officials of respondent on or about March 18, 1937; by inducing and compelling employees to sign a petition declaring their [fol. 508] loyalty to respondent on or about March 2, 1937; by showing preference and favoritism to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union since its inception on or about April 27, 1937; by indicating to employees that respondent favored their affiliation with that organization; by executing a closed-shop contract, making membership therein a condition of employment; by depriving its employees of the opportunity of joining an organization of their own choosing; by discriminating in the allotment of work of members of sympathizers of the I. L. G. W. U., by supervisory and other employees questioning employees individually and collectively with regard to their union activity and prejudices; by instigating, allowing, or permitting violent demonstrations upon its time and property on or about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler and Sylvia Hull, members of the I. L. G. W. U., has interfered with, restrained, and coerced and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join, and assist labor organizations of their own choosing, and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

12. That the aforementioned closed-shop contract is a direct and proximate result of the acts and conduct of respondent set forth in paragraphs five (5) to eleven (11), inclusive, and constitutes, culminates, and perpetuates continuing intimidation, interference, restraint, and coercion by respondent in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of said Act and is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

13. That aforementioned closed-shop contract was entered into with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was not the representative of the respondent's employees within the meaning of Section 8 (3) and Section 9 (a) of the Na-
[fol. 509] tional Labor Relations Act, and at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was a labor organization established, maintained, and assisted by actions defined in the National Labor Relations Act as unfair labor practices and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

14. That, by entering into the said closed-shop contract, respondent did interfere with, restrain, and coerce and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said National Labor Relations Act and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

15. That by entering into the closed-shop contract aforesaid, respondent did discriminate in regard to hire and tenure of employment and terms and conditions of employment and did thereby discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and did thereby encourage membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was established, maintained, and assisted by respondent, and respondent did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act and, therefore, the said closed-shop contract is invalid, void, and of no effect.

16. The activities of respondent by the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5) to fifteen (15), inclusive, above, occurring in connection with the operations of the respondent described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, have a close, intimate, and substantial relationship to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several states and tend to lead and have led to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

[fol. 510] 17. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3) and Section 2 (6) and (7) of said Act.

[fol. 511] (Board's Exhibit 1-TTT.)

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/7/39.

(Motion of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, to strike portions of Amended Complaint.)

Comes now the above named repondent and without admitting the truth of any of the allegations contained in Paragraph 4A and the subparagraphs thereof of the Amended Complaint filed herein on June 7, 1939, and moves the Examiner to strike said paragraph 4A and each and all of the subparagraphs (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) thereof, and paragraph 5, subparagraph C, and each and every allegation therein contained, and to dismiss said Paragraph 4A and subparagraphs and Paragraph 5, subparagraph C, and each and all of the charges contained in said Paragraph 4A and the subparagraphs, and Paragraph 5, subparagraph C thereof, for and upon the following grounds and reasons, to-wit:

1. Because the matters and things charged and alleged in said Paragraphs and in the subparagraphs thereof occurred prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act and each and all of said things alleged to have been done, if same were done, were lawful at the times they are alleged to have been done.

2. Because each and all of said acts and things alleged to have been done by respondent are remote and wholly immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent in this proceeding [fol. 512] charging respondent with unfair labor practices under the National Labor Relations Act because said alleged acts are alleged to have been done prior to the passage of said National Labor Relations Act and approximately five years prior to the filing of the complaint herein.

3. Because any hearing or determination by the Examiner or the National Labor Relations Board of the matters charged in this complaint, based upon the acts alleged in said paragraphs and the subparagraphs thereof, is and would be beyond the jurisdiction of the Examiner and the National Labor Relations Board, and would deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

4. Because the charges and allegations contained in said Paragraphs and the subparagraphs thereof constitute an attempt to make the National Labor Relations Act retroactive and an attempt to make acts unlawful which were lawful at the time same are charged to have been done, and to charge respondent with acts as unlawful which were not unlawful at the time respondent is charged with doing same in violation of Section 9 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, providing that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed by Congress, and if the National Labor Relations Act be so applied as to permit the Labor Board to hear and determine said charges and matters, it is unconstitutional and void, as controvening said Section 9 of Article I and denying respondent due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

5. Because the allegations contained in said paragraphs above referred to are too vague, to apprise respondent [fol. 513] of the acts of unfair labor practice purported to be charged.

Dated the 7th day of June, 1939.

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/12/39.

(Motion of Intervener to strike portions of Amended Complaint.)

Now comes the intervener and moves to strike all of paragraph Four A, including all the sub-paragraphs thereof of the amended complaint filed herein on June 7, 1939, for the reason that all of the matters and things therein charged and alleged are charged to have occurred at a time too remote to be material to any of the issues involved in the present hearing.

[fol. 517] (Board's Exhibit No. 1-XXX.)

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/6/39.

(Motion of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for Continuance.)

Now comes the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, named in the complaint herein as party to the contract, and moves that the hearing in the above entitled action be continued for the following reasons:

(1) The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has filed motion with the National Labor Relations Board asking that a fair and secret election of the employes be had under the direction of said Board for the purpose of determining the genuine and free will choice of the employes of a labor organization and of a collective bargaining agency for such employes. Such election would determine many if not all of the points of controversy involved in this hearing, and such hearing should not be held until after such election if at all.

(2) The charge filed in this matter does not comply with the regulations of the National Labor Relations Board and especially with Article 2, Section 4 (c) requiring a clear and concise statement of the facts construing the alleged unfair labor practice affecting commerce, particularly stating the names of the individuals involved and the time and place of occurrence, and the complaint based [fol. 518] thereon is insufficient as based on such charge and insufficient in not informing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union of the charges against it, if any, and of the ultimate facts of evidence which it may be called upon to meet, and which it is entitled to meet before its rights as an organization and in and to its contract with its employers can be validly passed upon.

Wherefore Donnelly Garment Workers' Union moves that the hearing be continued until such election has been held and until the charge and complaint are amended and cured of the defects herein specified.

Cas No. XVII-C-371.—Date 6/12/39.

(Motion of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, to strike portions of Amended Complaint.)

Comes now the respondent Donnelly Garment Company and moves the Examiner to strike the following portions of paragraph 11 of the Amended Complaint for each and all of the reasons hereinafter set forth, to wit:

1. That subparagraph (c) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the reason that it does not set forth the nature of the statements alleged to have been made, or show that said statements have any bearing upon the charge, or constitute any violation of the National Labor Relations Act, and are vague and indefinite.

2. That subparagraph (d) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the same reasons.

3. That paragraph (e) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the same reasons.

4. That subparagraph (f) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the same reasons.

[fol. 535] 5. That subparagraph (g) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the same reasons.

6. That subparagraph (h) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the reason that it fails to state the names of any persons connected with respondent who it is alleged caused or permitted the alleged rumors to be circulated.

7. That subparagraph (k) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the reason that it does not specify the dates of the meetings which are alleged to have been kept under surveillance and the names of the officers or employees of respondent who, it is alleged, did such acts, or set forth the names of the members of the I. L. G. W. U. who were kept under surveillance; and for the further reason that the allegations of said paragraph constitute no charge violating the National Labor Relations Act.

8. That subparagraphs (o) and (p) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the reason that said subparagraphs do not state or constitute any charge or acts violating the National Labor Relations Act; and for the further reason that it does not appear therein that any of the persons named therein were employees of respondent; and because said subparagraphs do not state any facts showing that the persons therein named were entitled to be recalled or to have work assigned to them; and for the further reason that said subparagraph (p) is an attempt to replead the matters and charges contained in paragraph 4A of the Amended Complaint which was stricken out of the complaint by order of the Examiner.

[fol. 536] 9. That subparagraph (s) of said paragraph 11 should be stricken for the reason that it is so vague, indefinite and uncertain as not to charge any violation of the National Labor Relations Act and not sufficient to apprize the respondent of what it is charged with.

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Dated 6/12/39.

(Answer of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, to Amended Complaint.)

United States Of America

Before The National Labor Relations Board
Seventeenth Region

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company,
and
International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

Now comes Donnelly Garment Company, respondent in the above entitled matter and for answer to the amended complaint states:

1. Respondent reiterates and adopts all the allegations contained in its orginal answer herein, reserving, however, all objections and rights to object to the jurisdiction of the Labor Board and all objections and rights to object to the competency, authority and good faith of the Board in issuing the amended complaint herein and all objections and rights to object to the sufficiency of said amended complaint and to the amended charge upon which said amended complaint is based and to the competency, relevancy and materiality of the allegations contained in said amended complaint.

2. Respondent states that the allegations contained in Paragraph 11 are vague, indefinite and uncertain in that they do not state the facts charging unfair labor practices under Section 8 (1) of the National Labor Relations Act and do not sufficiently advise respondent of the acts charged [fol. 539] to require an answer, and respondent makes the following answer for the reason that under the rules of the National Labor Relations Board unless matters are specifically denied the Board considers the same admitted.

3. Further answering said Amended Complaint and particularly Paragraph 11, respondent denies each and all the allegations therein contained and specifically denies that since July 5, 1935, it has interfered with, restrained, coerced, intimidated and threatened its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in the ILGWU and/or has encouraged, promoted, solicited and compelled membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by

(a) the acts set forth in Paragraphs 5 and 8 of the Amended Complaint filed herein;

(b) discharging Fern Sigler from its employ on or about April 23, 1937;

(c) statements of Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde to Sylvia Hull on or about April 23, 1937;

(d) statements of Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde to May Fike on or about April 23 and April 26, 1937;

(e) statements of Mrs. James A. Reed on or about March 18, 1937, at the plant of respondent;

(f) statements of Dewey Atchison regarding the union affiliation of Fern Sigler on or about April 27, 1937;

(g) public statements of James A. Reed on or about October, 1936 regarding members of the ILGWU and its officers;

(h) causing or permitting rumors to be circulated at its plant in the spring of 1937 that respondent's employees would be subjected to violence, intimidation or assault at [fol. 540] the hands of the ILGWU or its members or agents.

Respondent asserts that the International Union, its officers, agents and members, as a part of their unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy respondent's business publicly announced that they would use against respondent and its employees the same unlawful acts of force and violence, including the assaulting of women workers with fists and deadly weapons, as they used against other garment manufacturers and their employees in Kansas City, Missouri during the spring of 1937; that the said International Union, its officers, agents and members, caused said threats to be communicated to the employees of respondent for the very purpose of accomplishing the conspiracy and, but for the issuance of injunctive processes by the Federal Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri (referred to in Exhibits A, A1 and C), the said threatened acts would have been perpetrated against respondent and its employees as a means to compel respondent to violate the rights guaranteed to its employees under the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

(i) Causing, allowing or permitting, in the spring of 1937, a loud speaker system in its cafeterias to be used as a medium for spreading propaganda designed to induce membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and instill fear, hatred and contempt in the minds of the employees for the ILGWU.

(j) Chartering busses to transport employees to and from their work beginning on or about March 18, 1937 and issuing employment cards or passes to employees in order to create fear, hatred and contempt in the minds of its employees with reference to the ILGWU.

[fol. 541] Respondent asserts that it did charter busses to transport employees for the purpose of attempting to protect said employees against the threatened violence of the International Union, its officers, agents and members, as described in Section "B" of this Answer, and Section "D", subsection 11, subparagraph (h). The International Union, its officers, agents and members, at the said time mentioned was engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy respondent's business in violation of the Anti-Trust laws of the United States. Respondent instituted an injunction suit on July 5, 1937, to enjoin the International Union, its officers, agents and members from engaging in the unlawful acts described in Section B of this Answer. That the Federal Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri has twice found and determined that the International Union, its officers, agents and members, were engaging in the said unlawful conspiracy as aforesaid (Exhibits A, A1 and B), and that respondent has not violated any provisions of the National Labor Relations Act but complied therewith in all respects.

(k) Keeping members and all meetings of the ILGWU in Kansas City, Missouri, since July 5, 1935, under surveillance.

(l) Inducing and compelling employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to respondent and permitting and causing said petition to be circulated in its plant during working hours on or about March 2, 1937.

Respondent asserts that said petition was circulated by the voluntary action of the employees and without knowledge on the part of respondent on account of the public [fol. 542] announcements of the ILGWU and its officers in the metropolitan press that they were about to institute their campaign to force the unionization of respondent's plant, said announcements being in furtherance of the said conspiracy set forth in Section B of this Answer.

(m) Inducing, allowing, or permitting all instructors or supervisors or confidential employees to become members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and to be active in its affairs and administration.

(n) Discriminating through instructors in the allotment of work to ILGWU members, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, in April, 1937.

(q) Instigating, causing, allowing and permitting its employees to engage in a violent demonstration on its time and property on or about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler, Sylvia Hull and May Fike.

(r) Granting a contract on or about May 22, 1937, to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union making membership therein a condition of employment.

(s) Various other similar acts and conduct.

Respondent denies by all or any of the acts set forth in Paragraph 11 it has interfered with, restrained and coerced and is interfering with, restraining and coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join and assist labor organizations and to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said National Labor Relations Act.

Respondent further states that during all of the times mentioned in Paragraph 11 the International Union, its officers, agents and members were engaged in the said unlawful conspiracy against respondent set forth in Section B of this Answer, and the said matters set forth in said Section B of this Answer are by reference made a part specifically of respondent's Answer to Paragraph 11 as though set out in haec verbae.

Respondent is not answering subparagraphs (o) and (p) of Paragraph 11 for the reason that the Examiner has reserved his rulings to strike said paragraphs from the Amended Complaint.

Amended Complaint.

Before the National Labor Relations Board

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

It having been charged by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, hereinafter referred to as the I. L. G. W. U., that Donnelly Garment Company, Kansas City, Missouri, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has engaged in and is now engaging in certain unfair labor practices affecting commerce as set forth and defined in the National Labor Relations Act approved July 5, 1935, (49 Stat. 449) the National Labor Relations Board by the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, as agent for the National Labor Relations Board, designated by the National Labor Relations Board Rules and Regulations—Series 1, as amended—Article IV, Section 1, hereby issues its amended complaint and alleges the following:

1. Respondent is and has been since 1919 a corporation organized under and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Missouri, having its factory and principal place of business at 1820 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and is now and has continuously been engaged in the business of designing, manufacturing, selling and distributing cotton, wool, silk, and rayon low and medium-priced garments for women.

[fol. 558] 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, causes and has continuously caused substantially all of the materials used in the manufacture of its garments to be purchased and transported from and through states of the United States, other than the State of Missouri, to the Kansas City, Missouri factory of respondent, and causes and has continuously caused a substantial portion of the garments designed, manufactured, sold, and distributed, to be sold, transported, and distributed from the Kansas City, Missouri factory into and through states of the United States other than the State of Missouri to customers in other states.

3. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2(5) of the National Labor Relations Act.

4. Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and its predecessor, Donnelly Loyalty League, are labor organizations within the meaning of Section 2(5) of said Act.

5. Respondent, while engaged at its Kansas City, Missouri plant, as aforesaid, on or about April 27, 1937, and down to and including the date of the filing of this amended complaint, has dominated and interfered in the formation and administration of a labor organization among its employees, known as "Donnelly Garment Workers Union," and has given financial aid and other support to said organization, in that respondent, among other things:

(a) Did encourage, allow, and permit supervisory and other employees acting in the interest of respondent to organize, promote, and encourage membership into the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union particularly in the months of March, April, and May 1937 and thereafter, on respondent's time and on respondent's property and at respondent's pay and at its expense.

[fol. 559] (b) Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, furnish financial and other support to Donnelly Garment Workers Union, in that supervisory and other employees were allowed to solicit membership, hold meetings and engage in concerted activities in behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers Union during working hours and on company property without loss of pay or other penalty and by various other means contributed financial aid and other support to said Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

(c) Did, through its officers and agents acting in the interest of respondent, form the Donnelly Loyalty League on or about February 12, 1935, for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., and said officers and agents of respondent continued to dominate the administration of the Donnelly Loyalty League until on or about April 27, 1937, at which time said Donnelly Loyalty League at a meeting on respondent's property was succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers Union created to be a continuation of the Donnelly Loyalty League and to effect and carry out the policies of its predecessor and to be subservient and amenable to the wishes of respondent.

(d) Did enter into a closed-shop agreement with Donnelly Garment Workers Union on or about May 22, 1937, creating as a condition of employment, membership in said Donnelly Garment Workers Union, for the purpose of assisting said Union, compelling membership therein, depriving its employees of their rights guaranteed under the National Labor Relations Act, and to further manifest its approval of and to lend support to said Union.

6. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, and by other acts, has dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of and has [fol. 560] contributed financial aid and other support to labor organizations and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8(2) of said Act.

7. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph five (5), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of said Act and has thereby engaged in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

8. Respondent, by its officers and agents at its Kansas City, Missouri factory, while engaged in the operations described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, did discharge from its employment Sylvia Hull, on or about April 23, 1937, and May Fike, on or about April 26, 1937, for the reasons that they had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U. and engaged in concerted activities in its behalf, and thus discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U.

9. Respondent, by its discharge of Sylvia Hull and May Fike, and by its refusal to reinstate said employees for the reasons set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has thereby discriminated and is thereby discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of said employees and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8(3) of said Act.

10. Respondent, by the acts set forth in paragraph eight (8), above, has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

11. Respondent, since July 5, 1935, has interfered with, restrained, coerced, intimidated, and threatened its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing [fol. 561] membership in the I. L. G. W. U.; and has encouraged, promoted, solicited, and compelled membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union by:

(a) the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5) and eight (8), above,

(b) discharging Fern Sigler from its employ on or about April 23, 1937,

(c) statements of Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, supervisory employees of respondent, to Sylvia Hull, an employee, on or about April 23, 1937,

(d) statements of Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde to May Fike, an employee, on or about April 23 and April 26, 1937,

(e) statements of Mrs. James A. Reed, president of respondent, on or about March 18, 1937, to a meeting of employees at the plant of respondent,

(f) statements of Dewey Atchinson, a supervisory employee, regarding the union affiliation of Fern Sigler on or about April 27, 1937,

(g) public statements of James A. Reed on or about October 1936 regarding members of the I. L. G. W. U. and its officials,

(g-1) statement of Alex Green in March 1937 to Mrs. Elsa Graham Greenhaw regarding the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union,

(i) causing, allowing or permitting in the spring of 1937 a loud speaker system in its cafeteria to be used as a medium for spreading propaganda designed to induce membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and instill fear, hatred, and contempt in the minds of the employees for the I. L. G. W. U.,

(k) keeping members and all meetings of the I. L. G. W. U. in Kansas City, Missouri since July 5, 1935, under surveillance,

[fol. 562] (l) inducing and compelling employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to respondent and permitting and causing said petition to be circulated in its plant during working hours on or about March 2, 1937,

(m) inducing, allowing, or permitting all instructors and other supervisory and confidential employees to become members of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and to be active in its affairs and administration,

(n) discriminating through their instructors in the allotment of work to I. L. G. W. U. members, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, in April 1937,

(o) refusing to recall or assign work when requested to Glynn Brooks in January 1938, a member of the I. L. G. W. U.,

(p) refusing to recall or assign work when requested to Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks and Mamie Tubbesing, all members of the I. L. G. W. U., on or about July 23, 1935,

(q) instigating, causing, allowing, and permitting its employees to engage in a violent demonstration on its time and property on or about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, members of the I. L. G. W. U.,

(r) granting a contract on or about May 22, 1937, to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, making membership therein a condition of employment, and

(s) various other similar acts and conduct.

By all the acts above, respondent has interfered with, restrained, and coerced and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join, and assist labor organizations and to bargain collectively through representatives of their own [fol. 563] choosing, and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said Act.

12. That the aforementioned closed-shop contract is a direct and proximate result of the acts and conduct of respondent set forth in paragraphs five (5) to eleven (11), inclusive, and constitutes, culminates, and perpetuates continuing intimidation, interference, restraint, and coercion by respondent in violation of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) of said Act and is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

13. That the aforementioned closed-shop contract was entered into with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was not the representative of the respondent's employees within the meaning of Section 8 (3) and Section 9 (a) of the National Labor Relations Act, and at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was a labor organization established, maintained, and assisted by actions defined in the National Labor Relations Act as unfair labor practices and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

14. That, by entering into the said closed-shop contract, respondent did interfere with, restrain, and coerce and is interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the National Labor Relations Act and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said National Labor Relations Act and that said closed-shop contract is, therefore, invalid, void, and of no effect.

15. That by entering into the closed-shop contract aforesaid, respondent did discriminate in regard to hire and tenure of employment and terms and conditions of [fol. 564] employment and did thereby discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and did thereby encourage membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at a time when the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was established, maintained, and assisted by respondent, and respondent did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the National Labor Relations Act and, therefore, the said closed-shop contract is invalid, void, and of no effect.

16. The activities of respondent by the acts set forth in paragraphs five (5) to fifteen (15), inclusive, above, occurring in connection with the operations of the respondent described in paragraphs one (1) and two (2), above, have a close, intimate, and substantial relationship to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several states and tend to lead and have led to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

17. The aforesaid acts of respondent constitute unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3) and Section 2 (6) and (7) of said Act.

Wherefore, the National Labor Relations Board issues its amended complaint against the Donnelly Garment Company, respondent herein.

[fol. 565] (Board's Exhibit No. 1-LLLL.)

Case No. XVII-C-371.—Date 7/13/39.

(Answer of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, to Amended Complaint.)

United States of America

Before the National Labor Relations Board,
Seventeenth Region.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

Now comes Donnelly Garment Company, respondent in the above entitled matter and for answer to the amended complaint filed herein on July 12, 1939, marked Board's Exhibit 1-KKKK, states:

1. Respondent reiterates and adopts all the allegations contained in its original answer herein, reserving, however, all objections and rights to object to the jurisdiction of the Labor Board and all objections and rights to object to the competency, authority and good faith of the Board in issuing the amended complaint herein and all objections and rights to object to the sufficiency of said amended complaint and to the amended charge upon which said amended complaint is based and to the competency, relevancy and materiality of the allegations contained in said amended complaint and without waiving any of its motions to dismiss or strike.

2. Respondent states that the allegations contained in Paragraph 11 are vague, indefinite and uncertain in that they do not state the facts charging unfair labor practices under Section 8 (1) of the National Labor Relations Act [fol. 566] and do not sufficiently advise respondent of the acts charged to require an answer, and respondent makes the following answer for the reason that under the rules of the National Labor Relations Board unless matters are specifically denied the Board considers the same admitted.

3. Further answering said Amended Complaint and particularly Paragraph 11, respondent denies each and all the allegations therein contained and specifically denies that since July 5, 1935, it has interfered with, restrained, coerced, intimidated or threatened its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in the

ILGWU and/or has encouraged, promoted, solicited and compelled membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by

(a) the acts set forth in Paragraphs 5 and 8 of the said Amended Complaint filed herein;

(b) discharging Fern Sigler from its employ on or about April 23, 1937;

(c) statements of Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde to Sylvia Hull on or about April 23, 1937;

(d) statements of Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde to May Fike on or about April 23 and April 26, 1937;

(e) statements of Mrs. James A. Reed on or about March 18, 1937, at the plant of respondent;

(f) statements of Dewey Atchison regarding the union affiliation of Fern Sigler on or about April 27, 1937; respondent denies that said Dewey Atchison was on or about April 27, 1937, a supervisory employee.

[fol. 567] (g) public statements of James A. Reed on or about October, 1936 regarding members of the ILGWU and its officials;

(g-1) alleged statement of Alex Green in March, 1937, to Mrs. Elsa Graham Greenhaw regarding the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Further answering said Amended Complaint and particularly Paragraph 11 (g-1), respondent states that said alleged statement of Alex Green in March, 1937, to Mrs. Elsa Graham Greenhaw regarding the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was as follows, to wit: (page 1624-25, testimony of Elsa Graham Greenhaw)

"Q. Did you have occasion to talk with Mr. Green some time in March or April, 1937?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you remember any particular conversation that you had with him?

A. We had a short discussion of the strike that was being held at Gordon's at that time.

Q. What, if anything, was said by Mr. Green at that time with regard to the strike at Gordon's?

A. Well, I merely said something about the strike. He said he would advise me not to go near there because it was dangerous, that the Union people had weapons of various kinds on them and were injuring anyone who came near, and the whole thing was being run by communists."

Respondent, for further answer to said alleged charge, states that same shows on its face that it does not prove or tend to prove any issue in this case or any charge in the Complaint against respondent.

Respondent further states that Meyer Perlstein, Southwest Regional Director of the ILGWU was in charge of [fol. 568] the strikes at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri strikes referred to; that Meyer Perlstein caused members of his Union to take possession of the entrances to the building in which said plants are located and engage in a sitdown strike, thereby preventing ingress and egress to the plants of said companies; that said Meyer Perlstein caused acts of violence on the part of the members of his Union to be engaged in against any employees of said companies who sought to go to work, including the tearing of their clothes, cutting them with knives and razor blades, striking them with other weapons; that said Meyer Perlstein has caused similar acts of violence to be engaged in by his agents in the cities of Memphis, Tennessee, and Dallas, Texas, and that in said cities he has publicly stated that strikes can only be won with violence and other remarks calculated to encourage revolution in the country; that all of said activities and remarks are un-American and intended to incite class hatred and destroy property rights contrary to American principle of government and in accordance with the doctrines of communism; that said activities above referred to by Meyer Perlstein were ratified and approved by the General Executive Board of the ILGWU and its president David Dubinsky.

(i) causing, allowing or permitting, in the spring of 1937, a loud speaker system in its cafeteria to be used as a medium for spreading propaganda designed to induce membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and instill fear, hatred and contempt in the minds of the employees for the ILGWU.

(k) keeping members and all meetings of the ILGWU in Kansas City, Missouri, since July 5, 1935, under surveillance.

[fol. 569] (l) Inducing and compelling employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to respondent and permitting and causing said petition to be circulated in its plant during working hours on or about March 2, 1937.

Respondent asserts that said petition was circulated by the voluntary action of the employees and without knowledge on the part of respondent on account of the public announcements of the ILGWU and its officers in the metropolitan press that they were about to institute their campaign to force the unionization of respondent's plant, said announcements being in furtherance of the said conspiracy set forth in Section B of this Answer.

(m) Inducing, allowing, or permitting all instructors or supervisors or confidential employees to become members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and to be active in its affairs and administration.

Respondent denies that instructors employed by it are supervisory or confidential employees.

(n) Discriminating through instructors in the allotment of work to ILGWU members, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, in April, 1937.

(o) Refusing to recall or assign work when requested to Glynn Brocks in January, 1938, a member of the I. L. G. W. U.

Further answering said subparagraph (o), respondent states that Glynn Brooks was not an employe of respondent on July 5, 1935, or at any time since the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act and that respondent was not in January, 1938, or at any other time since the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, under any obligation to recall or assign work to said Glynn Brooks.

[fol. 570] (p) Refusing to recall or assign work when requested to Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks and Mamie Tubbesing, members of the I. L. G. W. U., on or about July 23, 1935.

Further answering said subparagraph 11 (p), respondent states that neither of said Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks, Mamie Tubbesing was an employe of respondent on July 5, 1935, or at any time since the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act and that respondent was not on July 23, 1935, or at any other time since the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act, under any obligation to recall or assign work to said Ellen Fry, Glynn Brooks, Mamie Tubbesing, or either of them.

(q) Instigating, causing, allowing and permitting its employees to engage in a violent demonstration on its time and property on or about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler, Sylvia Hull and May Fike.

(r) Granting a contract on or about May 22, 1937, to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union making membership therein a condition of employment.

(s) Various other similar acts and conduct.

Respondent specifically denies paragraph (s) for the reason that under the rules of the Labor Board respondent will be in a position of having admitted allegations unless they are specifically denied. However, respondent asserts that the Labor Board has no jurisdiction to hear or determine any matters construed to be charged in paragraph (s) for the reason that the same are not specifically set forth and would deprive respondent of its liberty and property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

[fol. 571] Respondent denies by all or any of the acts set forth in Paragraph 11 it has interfered with, restrained and coerced and is interfering with, restraining and coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to form, join and assist labor organizations and to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and did thereby engage in and is thereby engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of said National Labor Relations Act.

Respondent further states that during all of the times mentioned in Paragraph 11 the International Union, its officers, agents and members were engaged in the said unlawful conspiracy against respondent set forth in Section

B of this Answer, and the said matters set forth in said Section B of this Answer are by reference made a part specifically of respondent's Answer to Paragraph 11 as though set out in haec verbae.

Wherefore respondent prays that said Amended Complaint be dismissed and that respondent be exonerated of the charges therein contained.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

(Pencil signature J. C. B.)

Comes now the above named respondent Donnelly Garment Company and moves the Trial Examiner in the above entitled proceeding to clarify his rulings in said proceeding, hereinafter referred to, for the reason that such rulings are vague and indefinite and do not specify the portions of the evidence or of the offers of proof which are excluded or refused by the ruling and because the rulings in such form do not apprize the respondent of what evidence is received and what evidence or offers of proof are rejected. Said rulings in such form are unfair and prejudicial to respondent and deny respondent due process of law. The rulings referred to are the following:

Rulings in Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS.

1. In subparagraph (g) of Exhibit 1-SSSS, the Examiner's ruling refuses respondent's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-JJJJ) "insofar as the offer contemplates matters barred by the ruling" of the Examiner.

Respondent asks that this ruling be clarified so as to [fol. 578] show what parts of the offer of proof are refused and what parts are accepted.

2. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (h) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

3. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (i) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

4. In subparagraph (j) the Examiner's ruling overrules the objections of the Board to NRA-JMC Exhibit 3, but the ruling further specifies: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects."

Respondent asks that this ruling be clarified so as to show what parts of the evidence contained in NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 are rejected and also so as to show upon what subjects any of said testimony is rejected.

5. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (k) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

6. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the rulings contained in subparagraph (l) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

7. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (m) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

Other Similar Rulings.

8. On pages 1861-62 of the transcript, the Examiner overruled the objections of respondent to NRA-JMC Exhibits 1-A to 1-BBBB but stated that "the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore [fol. 579] made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections (subjects)".

Respondent makes the same motion and request as to this ruling of the Trial Examiner.

9. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the similar ruling made by the Examiner at page 1864 of the transcript with reference to NRA-JMC Exhibits 5-A to 5-GG.

10. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the similar ruling made by the Trial Examiner on page

1865 of the transcript as to NRA-JMC Exhibits 9-A to 9-CC.

11. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to the similar ruling of the Trial Examiner on page 1866 of the transcript as to NRA-JMC Exhibits 13-A to 13-R.

12. Respondent makes the same motion and request as to all other similar rulings of the Trial Examiner contained in the record.

[fol. 580] (Motion of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to Clarify Rulings of Trial Examiner.)

Case No. XVII-C-371.

Comes now the Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and joins in the motion of Respondent to clarify rulings of the trial examiner. Intervener moves the trial examiner to clarify rulings hereinafter referred to for the reason that such rulings are vague and indefinite and do not specify the portions of the evidence or of the offers of proof which are excluded or refused by the ruling, and because the rulings in such form do not apprise the intervener what evidence is received and what evidence or offers of proof are rejected. Said rulings in such form make it uncertain and impossible to determine the subjects and the evidence considered by the trial examiner in reaching his decision, and are unfair and prejudicial to intervener, and deny intervener due process of law. The rulings referred to are the following:

Rulings in Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS.

1. In Subparagraph (g) of Exhibit 1-SSSS, the Examiner's ruling refuses respondent's offer of proof (Exhibit 1-JJJJ) "insofar as the offer contemplates matters barred [fol. 581] by the ruling" of the Examiner.

Intervener asks that this ruling be clarified so as to show what parts of the offer of proof are refused and what parts are accepted.

2. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (h) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

3. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (i) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

4. In subparagraph (j) the Examiner's ruling overrules the objections of the Board to NRA-JMC Exhibit 3, but the ruling further specifies: "Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects".

Intervener asks that this ruling be clarified so as to show what parts of the evidence contained in NRA-JMC Exhibit 3 are rejected and also so as to show upon what subjects any of said testimony is rejected.

5. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (k) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

6. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the rulings contained in subparagraph (l) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

7. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the ruling contained in subparagraph (m) of Exhibit 1-SSSS.

Other Similar Rulings.

8. On page 1861-62 of the transcript, the Examiner overruled the objections of intervener to NRA-JMC Exhibits 1-A to 1-BBBB but stated that "the acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse the rulings heretofore made with reference to the introduction of evidence upon certain objections (subjects)".

[fol. 582] Intervener makes the same motion and request as to this ruling of the Trial Examiner.

9. Intervener makes the same motion and request as to the similar ruling made by the Examiner at page 1864 of the transcript with reference to NRA-JMC Exhibits 5-A to 5-GG.

Now comes respondent Donnelly Garment Company and states:

That part C of its Answer filed in the above matter contained a petition for an investigation and certification of representatives pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act. Thereafter, on or about September 6, 1939, respondent filed with the National Labor Relations Board a petition for investigation and certification of representatives pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act. "We are returning herewith the original and three copies of a petition which you forwarded to this office under date of September 6, 1939, for the reason that this petition is deficient in form and does not meet the requirements of the Rules and Regulations of the Board. (Application of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, for Designation of another Trial Examiner in the place and stead of James C. Batten.)

Comes now the above named respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, and respectfully requests the National Labor Relations Board to designate another Trial Examiner to hold the hearing in the above entitled case in the place and stead of James C. Batten, for the reasons, among others, that said James C. Batten is biased and prejudiced against respondent and has prejudged the issues in this case and the evidence to be adduced at the pending hearing, and respondent cannot have a fair trial before him as Trial Examiner. An affidavit in support of this Application is attached hereto, made a part hereof, and filed herewith.

[fol. 592] Affidavit Of Prejudice.

State of Missouri,
County of Jackson—ss.:

Now comes R. J. Ingraham and being duly sworn on his oath, states that he is secretary of the Donnelly Garment Company, respondent herein, and makes this affidavit upon its behalf.

Affiant further states that he verily believes that James C. Batten, Trial Examiner in this case, is biased and prejudiced against this respondent so that respondent cannot have a fair trial or a fair hearing of the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals has ordered to be taken for the following reasons:

1. Said Trial Examiner has prejudged the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals has ordered to be taken and cannot give respondent a fair and impartial trial.

2. Said trial examiner has repeatedly declared that the evidence which he is directed to weigh in this hearing is worthless and not worthy of consideration as shown by the following excerpts from the record in the case:

[fol. 593] (Respondent's Exception No. 207, pp. 131, 132, Rec. pp. 557, 558, 559. Witness Rose Todd).

(On examination by Mr. Stottle re provisions of DGWU contract with respondent.)

"Q. Did you discuss any one of the points that you recall?

"A. I surely did. I think I probably discussed—I think I probably should say, then, that I particularly discussed with her these piecework guarantees. Now, there were operators there, and they may have said something too. No doubt they did.

"Q. Now, Miss Todd, 'may'—of course, 'may' anything. I don't want what may have happened or what might have happened. If you don't know anything about this meeting, just tell me you don't remember anything about it, and we will let it go.

"A. I just told you, Mr. Batten, that I could never forget that meeting the longest day I live.

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I want to except to your remarks. This witness hasn't said she knows nothing about this meeting. She said they discussed every single point.

* * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I think that a person who attended one of these bargaining meetings, if that is all she can tell about it, I think she has a very, very faint recollection of what happened, not sufficient to accept in any way, in any form, as evidence of anything.

"Mr. Ingraham: I except to Your Honor's remarks.

"Trial Examiner Batten: You may except, but I am saying that I don't think it amounts to anything.

* * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my only position about this witness is this: that either she has an extremely poor memonry or else she doesn't want to remember some of these things. Now, you may take exceptions to that, because that is clearly, Mr. Tyler, my impression thus far of this witness' testimony, and I think, as the Examiner in this hearing, I have a perfect right to express such an opinion, and instead of expressing it in my report, I express it now so you may take the necessary exceptions to it.

"Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to the remark.

"Mr. Tyler: The intervener excepts.

"Mr. Ingraham: As highly prejudicial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is incorrect, I think it is, Mr. Ingraham."

[fol. 594] (Respondent's Exception No. 220, pp. 144, 145, 146, Rec. pp. 857, 858, 864, 865, 866.)

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Miss Todd, do you know what the minimum wage provision is in the Gernes, Gordon, and other contracts * in this city with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

* * * *

(Objections by Board and I. L. G. W. U.)

"Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness in regard to the terms and conditions of the contract which she negotiated with the company, and his questions were directed at showing that the contract was not a good contract for the employees. Now, I think we have a right to come in and show that it is a far better contract for the employees than any contract that the International has entered into with any other garment company in this part of the country. It is competent for that purpose.

* * * *

"The point has been raised that Miss Todd and other members of the Committee didn't really negotiate.

* * * *

"The company enters into a written contract, and in doing that, because it doesn't get into a fight with the employees, and because it doesn't haggle, and because they do arrive at a fair kind of a contract and the employees have better wages than are contained in any of these other contracts, I think that is very conclusive evidence that this union is properly representing the employees.

• • • •

"Mr. Lane: It has been asserted here by Mr. Langsdale from time to time that he expects to offer evidence to establish that the intervener union is merely a sham union, that it is not in fact and under the law a representative of the employees. Now, in that connection the intervener asserts that the establishment of the results that were obtained in the contract which was entered into is an important point to be considered in determining the bona fideness of the intervener union, and in connection with determining the results that were obtained by that contract the prices and the minimum wages guaranteed by other garment concerns, the same industry, in the same community, is a point to be taken into consideration, so that a comparison of those figures will at least tend to show one of the results obtained by this contract.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it would be well now to settle this question so that everyone will know, as I have done once or twice already, what my position is.

"I want you to be prepared for it, although the evidence is not submitted. I can tell you now, Mr. Lane, I do not propose to go into that matter. The only reason I tell you that is this, that you may be making your preparation and preparing an offer of proof. I want to advise the attorneys now that I am not going to try this case by comparison with other plants in this town or in other towns. It is not material to the issues in this case."

"Q. Miss Todd, there has been some question raised here as to whether there was real bargaining between your union and the company with regard to your union contracts. I will ask you to state if there were any provisions in the contracts that were favorable to the company, did you feel that they were more than offset by the provisions which you obtained favorable to the union?

"A. Yes, we felt like that is a good contract. We have certain things that we had to give—

"Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I object to this part of the answer as voluntary and not responsive. Her answer to the question was 'Yes'.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection."

[fol. 596] (Respondent's Exception No. 224, pp. 148, 149, Rec. pp. 908, 909.)

(Witness Rose Todd.)

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler): Had you or had you not seen notices in the papers of physical violence at the Gernes plant?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in this case, as to what occurred at the Gernes plant.

"Mr. Tyler: I submit what is endeavored to be shown here is whether these people of their own volition desired to form their own labor union, and in so doing they are entitled to give reasons for taking that action. If the actions are probable they are persuasive; if they are not probable they are not persuasive. But they are entitled to give such reasons as they say they had to stay out of the International and join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and if they did understand violence was being exerted by the International, that might well be a reason — whether it was true or not, if they so understood, that might well be a reason for their choice, and they are entitled to show good faith for their choice by citing their reasons.

"Mr. Langsdale: That speech might be proper at some other stage of the proceedings.

"Trial Examiner Batten: We will forget about speeches. I will sustain the objection. As I said yesterday, I am not going into all of these rumors. If you have any evidence of anyone who was threatened personally, they may come up and testify to it personally and I will receive that testimony, but I am not in this hearing going into all of the rumors that fly around during an organizational campaign of unions.

"Mr. Tyler: It is not the truth of the violence I am establishing. It is merely the reason these people had for staying out of the International and forming their own union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material for the purpose for which you have offered it."

[fol. 597] (Respondent's Exception No. 225, pp. 149, 150, Rec. pp. 910, 911, 913.)

(On cross examination of witness Rose Todd by Mr. Tyler.)

"Q. Did you see any of the banners or signs the pickets carried?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Do you remember what they said on them?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Tyler. I do not intend to receive any of that, either, unless it is something which was unlawful or illegal. If these pickets picketed this plant in the way in which they are permitted to under the law and there was nothing unlawful about it which amounted to actual coercion, I do not intend to go into all of those matters.

"Mr. Tyler: I expect to show, if the Court please, that these signs contained untruthful statements, and that that had some effect on the choice these people made.

* * * *

"Mr. Tyler: I submit to your Honor that in showing what their real choice of labor unions was they have a right to refer to any conduct, lawful or unlawful, of the International to show why they didn't want to join it. That is the vital crux. If the International had a habit of wearing red neckties and they didn't like red neckties and they didn't want to join the union for that reason, I submit they have a right to give their reasons for preferring their own union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As I say, I do not propose to go into it with this witness, and if that is your theory on this particular matter you may submit it as an offer of proof."

[fol. 598] (Respondent's Exception No. 226, p. 151, Rec. pp. 913, 914, 916.)

(On cross examination of witness Rose Todd by Mr. Tyler.)

"Mr. Tyler: I wish to make an offer of proof.

"Intervener offers to prove by this witness that for months before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the employees had seen numerous accounts of violence by the International against employees of other garment plants in Kansas City and had, many of them, seen such violence with their own eyes, and had, many of them if not all, heard reports of such violence, that they were in a state of almost hysteria from constantly overheard statements that the same tactics were to be applied to the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company, and that this was a reason which affected them in their choice as to forming their own union or joining the International or staying out of all unions.

"Mr. Leary: I object to the offer of proof, Mr. Examiner.

"Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is denied."

[fol. 599] (Respondent's Exception No. 254, pp. 172, 173, Rec. pp. 1416, 1417, 1418, 1419, 1420, 1422, 1424, 1425).

(On cross examination of witness May Fike by Mr. Lane.)

"Q. And wasn't it common talk around the Donnelly plant that there was a great deal of commotion out there around those Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants?

"Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial; wouldn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and opens up a new avenue for testimony. I think the Examiner has ruled that line out up to now.

"Mr. Lane: The purpose of my making this offer, or asking this question and similar questions, is to refute the charge that has been made here by counsel for the International and Board that this union we represent is a sham union, and my purpose is to show that atmosphere that surrounded the employees at that time, and their reaction and attitude, as having some bearing upon why they took the action they did take on the part of the union.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I will make the same ruling that I did once before. That is this: if there were any actual threats or actual violence at this plant, that in any way can be chargeable to the respondent, I certainly want to receive it.

"Now I am not going into this organizational campaign that took in the city of Kansas City. Now, I am not going all over that again, and if you want to, you may make as complete an offer of proof on that, and, after all, that may be probably the best way to present that whole problem of this campaign that was going on by the Union here in Kansas City, but I can say now that I am not going to receive it in this hearing.

"Trial Examiner Batten: As I remember it. Well, now, I am going to take that position very definitely with respect to the intervener on this entire campaign that went on here in Kansas City, and I think we can just as well determine now that you shall prepare a complete offer of proof on it, because I don't intend to receive it.

"Mr. Tyler: May I understand the Examiner's ruling? Do I understand that you decline to permit us to show that the employees of the plant, as one of their reasons for choosing their own union, were affected by both fear of the campaign carried on by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at nearby shops, threats that it should be able to be applied to the Donnelly employees, and dislike of those methods, you decline to let us show those things as establishing one of the reasons why these employees decided to, of their own free will, form their own union? Is that correct?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, not quite that broad. I said that if any threats were made against these Donnelly employees, or a violence there, I even question how material that may be, but I will receive that, but on the other, on your whole idea there that that was one of the reasons for the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and a valid reason, I want an offer of proof submitted on it."

[fol. 600] (Respondent's Exception No. 270, pp. 194, 195, Rec. pp. 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655, 1656.)

(On Examination of witness Elsie Graham Greenhaw by Mr. Langsdale)

"Q. (By Mr. Langsdale): Mrs. Greenhaw, I show you a document which has been marked I.L.G.W.U. exhibit No. 11-A to No. 11-MM, inclusive, and call your attention to the first page and ask you if you ever saw that document before.

"A. Yes, I have seen it.

"Q. That is a document that purports to have been signed on the 8th day of July, 1937.

I call your attention to that page of the document which has been marked I.L.G.W.U. exhibit No. 11-H and ask you if you find a photostat of your signature on there.

"A. Yes, I do.

* * * * *

"Q. This document reads —

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Now, are you going to offer it?

"Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I am. Is there any objection?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. I may have. Is that an affidavit signed by all of the Donnelly Garment Company employees that they want the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"Mr. Langsdale: You can read it better than I can tell you. (Handing I.L.G.W.U. exhibit No. 11-A to 11-MM, inclusive, to Trial Examiner Batten.)

"Trial Examiner Batten: I certainly will not receive it.

"Mr. Langsdale: On what ground do you object to it?

"Trial Examiner Batten: I won't receive it, at least if it is offered for any purpose to show that these people have selected this union, that it is their free selection, or anything of that kind. I positively won't receive it for that purpose.

* * * * *

"Trial Examiner Batten: I won't receive it for that purpose, because I am not going to have 1,200 employees come up here and tell me the circumstances under which they signed this petition; and it wouldn't mean anything if they did.

* * * * *

[fol. 601] "Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Well, Mr. Langsdale, my position on this situation is just this — and I have had it come up in about six cases where I have been presented either with a petition or with membership cards of a large number of employees in a plant, stating that they joined of their own free will, and so forth. Now, I don't consider that testimony, if it were given, of any value when they are put up here on the stand and testify under oath, with the respondent, and in some cases, the foreman and the superintendent present. It might result in coercion, and it might not.

* * * * *

"Now, I am making that as a very definite statement now, so that all of you, if you have an offer to make on this particular matter, may prepare your offer and I will receive it at any time before the close of the hearing, but I want it thoroughly understood that I am not going into this matter.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, do I understand that you are not going to allow witnesses to take the stand and testify that they were not dominated and that they did form this union of their own free will?

"Trial Examiner Batten: That is exactly what I mean.

[fol. 602] (Respondent's Exception No. 273, p. 199, Rec. pp. 1673, 1674.)

(On cross examination of Elsie Graham Greenhaw by Mr. Ingraham.)

"Q. Do you recall at that time the International was conducting a strike at the Gernes, Gordon, and Missouri Garment Companies?

"Trial Examiner Batten: Now, is this just for the purpose of establishing a time?

"Mr. Ingraham: I think, in view of this witness' testimony as to what was said by Mrs. Reed at this March 18th meeting, that we have the right to show what was going on.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't propose to go into it, Mr. Ingraham. I have said before that on that matter, in the first place, supposing that Mrs. Reed did say that, supposing that Mrs. Reed got up and said other things about it, I still can't see, as I asked you this morning, why you should be permitted to show it, whether it is true or untrue. The thing is, did Mrs. Reed get up in this meeting and make certain statements. Are the statements she made—are they of such a nature that they intimidate, coerce or restrain the employee. It isn't a question of whether they are true or not. They may be true and they may still have the same effect. I still can't see by your explanation this morning how it can be material. The only thing is what did Mrs. Reed say at this meeting.

"Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, it is our theory that we are entitled to show what the situation was, and the purpose, or one of the purposes of the March 18th meeting, and that Mrs. Reed did make a speech, and the reason she had for making the speech."

[fol. 603] (Respondent's Exception No. 327, pp. 251, 252, Rec. pp. 2610, 2611, 2612. Witness Nellie Stites.)

(On examination by Mr. Stottle.)

"Q. Does that union, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and its bargaining committee represent your free choice in that matter?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we are charged with preventing the employees from exercising their free will in the choice of bargaining representatives. That is one of these three complaints or charges in the complaint, and we submit that one of the best ways of finding out whether a person did anything of their own free will is to ask that person whether they did, and it is our purpose to ask this witness, and as many other witnesses—

"Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, I don't think that is any indication, to put these witnesses up on the stand in a hearing of this kind, in a "C" case, in front of all the other employees and representatives of the company, and ask them, 'is this your free choice?'. I mean it may possibly have some remote bearing, but I don't think it has sufficient that we should spend the time necessary to listen to 1300 employees get on the witness stand and testify to that point.

"Now, if that is your idea, you may make an offer of testimony with respect to these 1305 employees, or whatever it is, but certainly, we are not going to determine that in this hearing on that basis, at least.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, don't you think we should have the testimony of this witness with the persons that you have referred to excluded from the court room?

"Trial Examiner Batten: No, I don't think it is of any value in the issues in this case, to parade these people on the stand. Now, if that is your idea, you may make as complete an offer as you care to with respect to that matter."

[fol. 604] (Respondent's Exception No. 328, p. 253, Rec. pp. 2612, 2613.)

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Mrs. Stites, had you heard of the strikes and disturbances down at the Gordon and Gernes plants at about that time in March and April, 1937?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that for the reason that it is immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Sustained.

"Mr. Stottle: Well, Mr. Examiner, we want to go into that matter to show that it did affect the employees and that that was one of the reasons why they formed this union, as tending to show that it was not due to the domination of the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I think, Mr. Stottle, that I don't need to make any statement with respect to that ruling, because I have indicated on several occasions in this hearing just what my position is about that matter. You may make such offer as in your opinion is necessary to protect the interests of your client."

"Q. (By Mr. Stottle) Well, Mrs. Stites, I will ask you whether at the time of the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, on April 27th, or prior thereto, there was any coercion, intimidation, pressure or suggestion of any kind, directly or indirectly, brought to bear upon you by the management of the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company through any of its officers, executives, or anyone representing the management, to cause or influence you, or which did cause or influence you to join or support the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. None.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now just a moment. The answer may be stricken."

[fol. 606] (Respondent's Exception No. 338, p. 261, Rec. p. 2712.)

(On cross examination of witness Clarice Martin by Mr. Patten)

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten, on this question, which has come up frequently, I think about the first week, in fact, Mr. Tyler brought it up; this question of the mental attitude of these people, due to the organizational campaign of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and all that goes along with it. I think I should tell you now that if there is any further testimony of that kind, you can put it in in an offer of proof, because I don't think it is material to the issues here, and I think I told Mr. Tyler one day when he spoke about it, said that he felt that it was a motive or would be one motive, that would explain the organization of the independent union, and I think at that time I disagreed with Mr. Tyler. So if you have any further evidence in that line, you will submit it in an offer of proof, and if you care to, of course, you may submit another witness and ask those questions, to make your record. If you don't care to do that, you may submit it without offering another witness".

[fol. 607] (Respondent's Exception No. 345, p. 267, Rec. p. 2838. Witness Jack McConaughey.)

(On examination by Mr. Tyler)

"Q. Were you familiar with the principal subjects of discussion among the employees of the two companies during the months of March and April, 1937?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What were the principal subjects of discussion?

"A. Strikes at the Gernes plant, and what we might be able to do to protect ourselves from the apparent danger that was due us in a short while.

"Q. Did you hear of any threats that the same proceedings would be taken as to employees of the Donnelly companies as were being taken against employees at the Gernes, Gordon and Missouri plants?

"Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained."

[fol. 608] (Respondent's Exception No. 346, pp. 267, 268, 269, Rec. pp. 2838, 2839, 2840, 2841, 2843. Witness Jack McConaughey.)

"Q. (By Mr. Tyler) What was the attitude of mind of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company during March, 1937, in regard to the possible action of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against them.

"A. Everyone felt that—I talked to numbers of them on my job in the service department at that time—I talked to hundreds of people every day, and they were all expressing concern over the happenings that were taking place all over town, and many of them told me of having heard directly from people they knew there, or else overheard people who were in the line of strikers, that we were going to be the next on the list, which naturally caused an agitated state of mind throughout the plant and no one could pursue his job with a great deal of peace of mind, because he didn't know at what time he was going to be kept from coming into the building himself.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I think I have indicated previously on this matter of violence and this situation in Kansas City that I didn't think it was material, and therefore asked the respondent to make an offer of proof.

"And I think yesterday I indicated on this attitude of mind of the employees as a result of this situation, that I didn't consider it material.

"I think I have stated before, I don't think it is material to the issue as to whether or not the respondent formed this union, dominates it, or sponsors it. Therefore, I would ask that you prepare an offer of proof on that question.

• • •

"Mr. Langsdale: I move to strike the answer of the witness to the last question.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

• • •

"Mr. Stottle: Respondent does except to the striking of this answer."

[fol. 609] (Respondent's Exception No. 350, pp. 273, 274, Rec. pp. 2939, 2940, 2941, 2942, 2943. Witness Mrs. Weigand.)

(On examination by Mr. Tyler.)

"Q. Did you ever hear Velma Dowdy testify in that case?

"A. Yes, I did.

"Q. Did her testimony have any effect upon your choice as to what union you wanted to belong to?

(Objection by I. L. G. W. U.)

"Mr. Tyler: I submit, the reason for the employees choosing this union is the most vital kind of evidence as to whether the company does dominate it or not.

"Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material to the issues in this case. I think this lady has a personal right to join any union she wants to join, and if she prefers the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union she doesn't have to give the Labor Board or anybody else any reason for joining it. She doesn't have to show the Labor Board she has a reason. She may join it because the first name of it starts with a D and the last word in the name starts with a U.

"Mr. Tyler: I agree, she doesn't have to give the Labor Board any reason, but I submit she has a right to give a reason in sustaining that it was her own free choice . . .

"Trial Examiner Batten: We are not interested in the reason for joining."

[fol. 610] (Respondent's Exception No. 351, pp. 275, 276, 277; Rec. pp. 2993, 2994, 2995, 2996, 2997. Witness Lyle Jeter.)

(On examination by Mr. Patten).

"A. One morning I was standing up there and Miss Tobin went back and forth across the street—I was standing in front of the plants—and an elderly lady started in the building and five or six ladies jumped on her and beat her up—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Tell me how you were threatened.

"Mr. Langsdale: I move that that part, the last part of his answer be stricken.

"Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken. Tell me how you were threatened.

"A. I have to tell you a little bit about this first part, if I may.

"Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Did somebody threaten you personally?

"A. Threatened the Donnelly Garment Company.

"Q. Tell me what they said, and who it was.

"A. As this old lady got up and started in the building somebody said, 'Isn't that awful, the way they are treating her?' And Miss Tobin said, 'That's just a sample of what we are going to do down at Donnelly's.'

"Q. (By Mr. Patten) Did you report that at the plant?

"A. I talked it over with the employees.

• • • •

"Trial Examiner Batten: The point you have finished covering. I don't think that is material to this case.

"Mr. Patten: I understood you had said if we had cases involving actual threats to persons employed by the Donnelly Garment Company we could put that in.

"Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if you have any actual threats of violence committed as to any employee of the Donnelly Garment Company, that should be in here. I don't think this sort of testimony has anything to do with it.

• • • •

"Mr. Patten: It shows the circumstances leading up to the formation of this union. If we can show the circumstances, that the union was inspired by the employees and did not rise out of the action of the company—In so far as we show these circumstances which motivated them we negative the contention of the Board and the International.

"Trial Examiner Batten: That might be possible, remotely. It may be stricken. I am not going to receive that type of testimony on that question."

[fol. 611] (Record pp. 2922, 2923, 2924, 2925. Examination of witness Marjorie Green by Mr. Tyler).

"Q. Do you personally prefer the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as your bargaining representative to any other union you know about?

"A. Yes, sir, I certainly do.

"Q. What are your reasons for preferring the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

"A. Well, in the first place—

"Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting). Mr. Tyler, I don't think it is material what her reasons are. She has a perfect right, as an employee of this company, to select any union she wants.

"Mr. Tyler. I submit, one of the questions involved here is whether she does prefer it or whether the company is so dominating her that she has to belong to it.

"Trial Examiner Batten. You mean by that, you contemplate calling all of the employees to testify to this question?

"Mr. Tyler. I contemplate calling a large number.

"Trial Examiner Batten. I can tell you now, I do not intend to listen to them.

• • • • • • •

"Mr. Tyler. Are we not, also, endeavoring to determine whether the employer is now dominating it or dominating these employees?

"Trial Examiner Batten. Yes, but you couldn't determine it by having these girls get up on the stand and testify here, in front of the management. The place to determine that is by a secret election, where they can vote and no one knows how they vote. If you have a large number of witnesses to offer on that, you may make an offer of proof, because I don't intend to sit here and let you call all of these girls up here to testify whether they want this union to represent them.

• • • • • • •

"Mr. Shepard. I would like to have the record show, in view of your remarks with regard to a representative of the management being present, when this witness gave her answer in response to Mr. Tyler's question in regard to domination no member or representative of the company was present.

"Trial Examiner Batten. I agree with you. Mr. Baty is not in the room, but I see him out in the hall. And of course the company's attorneys are here.

"Mr. Shepard. We are here of necessity, of course.

"Trial Examiner Batten. Yes, I assume you have to be here."

[fol. 612] 3. Said trial examiner by repeated adverse comments and criticisms openly made during the trial against respondents' and interveners' witnesses, demonstrated his prejudice and bias against respondent.

4. Said trial examiner, by adverse rulings made during the trial against respondent, and in the Intermediate Report of the Trial Examiner, demonstrated his prejudice and bias against respondent.

5. Said trial examiner conferred with a person or persons who were not present at the hearing heretofore held, and as a result of suggestions made to him prepared his Intermediate Report and by said acts demonstrates his disqualification to act as Trial Examiner.

Further affiant sayeth naught.

Case No. C-1382.—Date 8/3/42.

(Application of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, for Continuance of Hearing.)

Comes now the respondent Donnelly Garment Company and respectfully moves the National Labor Relations Board to grant a continuance of the further trial of this proceeding until a date not earlier than December 23, 1942, for the following reasons, to-wit:

On the 23d day of April, 1942, at the special instance and request of the War Department, respondent entered into a written contract with the Quartermaster Corps of the War Department of the United States, wherein respondent agreed to manufacture and deliver to the War Department, on or before December 23, 1942, 1,000,000 pairs of cotton shorts (drawers) to be used for equipment of the armed forces of the United States now stationed in Africa, Australia and at other war fronts. Respondent since the date of said contract has purchased large amounts [fol. 615] of material (having procured priority rating for the same) for the performance of said contract; and has been, and is now, actively and intensively engaged in the performance of said contract. Respondent has manufactured and delivered approximately 121,690 pairs of the 1,000,000 pairs of shorts contracted for, leaving a balance of approximately 878,310 pairs to be manufactured and delivered on or before December 23, 1942. This will require a production of an average of approximately 38,187 pairs per week during the remainder of the contract period.

In addition to the aforesaid contract with the War Department, respondent has accepted numerous orders from numerous defense plants for the manufacture of women's work garments of a particular type, especially designed for women engaged in hazardous work in the handling of powder and high explosives. These garments, at the request of representatives of the War Production Board, have been specially designed by respondent in cooperation with safety engineers of said defense plants. Respondent is now actively and intensively engaged in filling these war orders, and will be so engaged for the next ninety days.

Previous to the present war respondent was engaged exclusively in the manufacture of ladies' garments. In order to enable respondent to perform its aforesaid contract with the War Department and to fill the aforesaid orders from defense plants, respondent has been and is now actively and intensively engaged in a conversion of its plant facilities and methods of operation in order efficiently and expeditiously to manufacture the products called for in said war contract and orders. The change-over of its said plant facilities and methods of work is a highly technical matter requiring the combined skill, knowledge and experience of all of its management and its [fol. 616] mechanical and technical staff, as well as the full cooperation of all of its employees. The aforesaid conversion of its plant facilities and methods of work is still in progress and will necessarily continue for at least the next ninety days.

In the existing circumstances the fulfillment of said contract with the War Department and the filling of said orders from defense plants will require respondent to operate its plant at full capacity. Any interference with plant operations through absence of many employees from their work would seriously affect and impair the ability of respondent to comply with its obligations under said contract with the War Department and said accepted orders from defense plants.

The Circuit Court of Appeals in this proceeding (123 F.2d 215, 221-225) has held that respondent is entitled to call as witnesses at the further trial of this proceeding many hundreds of its present employees, who were in its employ in the spring of 1937, to show by said witnesses how and why the employees formed the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to show that no influence was brought to bear upon them by the respondent either in the formation or administration of the union, to show what the president of the respondent company had said to the employees at the mass meeting in the spring of 1937, to show that the employees' freedom to organize and to choose their own representatives for the purposes of collective bargaining had not been interfered with by respondent, and to show that the employees' union, both in its formation and administration, was exclusively controlled and supported by the employees. Necessarily the introduction of this proof would require several weeks' time, and would require the attendance before the Trial Examiner of a great many of respondent's said employees each day during said trial. Necessarily respondent's attorneys would require the as- [fol. 617] sistance at the trial of certain of respondent's executives and others having to do with the management of its plant operations. If respondent should offer said witnesses to make said proof, the necessary result would be seriously to interfere with and impede respondent's plant operation and its prompt performance of the aforesaid contract with the War Department and the prompt filling of said orders from defense plants.

Preparation by this nation for war, including equipment by the War Department of this nation's armed forces, is of supreme national importance; and time is of the essence. Prompt performance of contracts (such as respondent's aforesaid contract with the War Department) and prompt filling of orders from defense plants, for the supply of clothing and other equipment to the armed forces and to those engaged in war work, is an essential part of this nation's preparation for war; and it is in the national interest that nothing shall be permitted to interfere with prompt performance of such contracts.

Postponement of the further trial of this proceeding until after respondent has completed performance of said contracts and the filling of said orders will enable respondent to perform said contract and fill said orders on time. Such postponement will cause no injury to the rights of any party. In this connection respondent respectfully calls attention of the Board to the fact that the alleged facts set up in the complaint herein are alleged to have occurred in the spring of 1937; yet the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, though having immediate knowledge of said alleged facts, filed no charges against respondent with the Board until August 9, 1938; that the Board, though immediately possessed of full knowledge of said alleged facts, filed no complaint against respondent until April 6, 1939; that although the Circuit Court of Appeals' decision herein became final on January 6, 1942, the Board [fol. 618] delayed compliance with the decision until April 21, 1942. These aforesaid delays by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and by the Board tend strongly to show that neither has heretofore considered that there was any great need for haste in the disposition of this proceeding. Nothing has since occurred to create any need for haste in the disposition of this proceeding.

The trial of this proceeding should be continued as herein prayed for the further reason that if a continuance is denied and the trial proceeds, respondent will be denied the opportunity of a fair and adequate trial for the reason that in its desire and determination to serve the nation in the present emergency, by promptly supplying said goods for the armed forces and defense workers in accordance with its aforesaid contract and orders, respondent will be unable properly and fully to present the evidence which it is entitled to present herein, because of its inability to spare employees from their work to testify as witnesses herein.

For these reasons respondent respectfully appeals to this Honorable Board, in the exercise of its discretion, to order the further trial of this proceeding postponed until a date not earlier than December 23, 1942.

Case No. C-1382. — Date 8/3/42.

(Order denying Applications of Respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, for Designation of another Trial Examiner and for a Continuance.)

United States of America

Before The National Labor Relations Board

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. C-1382.

On November 6, 1941, the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit remanded the instant case to the National Labor Relations Board, herein called the Board, for further proceedings. [1] On April 20, 1942, the Board issued its Order Vacating Decision and Order, Reopening Record, Referring Proceeding to the Regional Director, and Directing Further Hearing. Thereafter, on June 6, 1942, the Board by the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region (Kansas City, Missouri), caused notices of further hearing to be served upon Donnelly Garment Company, herein called the respondent, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, herein called I.L.G.W.U., and Donnelly Garment Workers Union, herein called D.G.W.U.

[1] Donnelly Garment Company vs. National Labor Relations Board, 123 F.(2d) 215 (C.C.A. 8).

The further hearing commenced on July 6, 1942, before James C. Batten, the Trial Examiner duly designated by the Chief Trial Examiner. All parties were represented by counsel.

No testimony was taken in the reopened hearing. On July 8, 1942, the respondent filed with the Trial Examiner its Affidavit of Prejudice, for the purpose of obtaining the designation of another Trial Examiner. The D.G.W.U. concurred in the application. The Trial Examiner referred the matter to the Board.

On July 17, 1942, the respondent filed with the Board an application for continuance of the further hearing. On July 21, 1942, a hearing for the purpose of oral argument on the affidavit of prejudice and the application for continuance was held before the Board in Washington, D. C. Counsel for the respondent, for the I.L.G.W.U., and for the D.G.W.U. participated in the argument. Prior to the argument counsel for the Board submitted a letter in opposition to the respondent's affidavit of prejudice. At the argument counsel for the I.L.G.W.U. filed an answer to the respondent's application for continuance. After the argument counsel for the respondent and counsel for the D.G.W.U. submitted letters in support of the application for continuance. The Board has carefully considered, in the light of the oral argument and of the related documents filed, [fol. 621] the afore-mentioned application for designation of another Trial Examiner and motion for continuance, and has concluded that both requests should be denied.

The respondent's affidavit of prejudice alleges that Trial Examiner Batten, who presided at the original hearing in this matter, is prejudiced against the respondent so that it cannot have a fair hearing on the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals found had been erroneously excluded by him. [2] It advances the following reasons for this contention:

1. The Trial Examiner has prejudged the evidence ordered to be taken.

2. The Trial Examiner has repeatedly declared that the evidence which he is directed to weigh in this proceeding is worthless and not worthy of consideration.

3. The Trial Examiner, by repeated adverse comments and criticisms openly made during the trial against respondent's and intervener's witnesses, demonstrated his prejudice and bias against respondent.

4. The Trial Examiner, by adverse rulings made during the trial and in his Intermediate Report, demonstrated his bias and prejudice against respondent.

5. The Trial Examiner "conferred with a person or persons who were not present at the hearing heretofore held, and as a result of suggestions made to him prepared his Intermediate Report and by said acts demonstrates his disqualification to act as Trial Examiner."

The specific items of proof advanced by the respondent in its affidavit consist of excerpts from the record of the prior hearing. All these excerpts, with the exception of two in which Trial Examiner Batten commented on the character of a witness' testimony, described instances in which Trial Examiner Batten, for the most part upon repeated offers by the respondent and the D.G.W.U., excluded evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals later held these parties should have been allowed to introduce. It may be noted that similar evidence offered by the I.L.G.W.U. had likewise been excluded by the Trial Examiner. Each of the particulars relied on in the affidavit of prejudice was brought by the respondent to the attention of the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Court decided that the Trial Examiner and the Board had been free of any bias or prejudice. [3] Having carefully examined the matters now adduced by the respondent, we can see no reason for disagreeing with the finding of the Circuit Court of Appeals or for doubting that the evidence ordered by that Court to be admitted will be fairly and judiciously received and considered. Indeed, to disqualify the Trial Examiner for his previous error would be equivalent to barring a trial judge who had been overruled on a question of evidence by an appellate court, from presiding over the further hearing; such is not the customary practice. [4]

[2] The evidence in question was principally that of employees of the Donnelly Company concerning the reasons why and the circumstances under which they became and remained members of the D.G.W.U. Donnelly Garment Company vs. National Labor Relations Board, 123 F.(2d) 215 (C.C.A. 8).

We have considered all the reasons advanced by the respondent in its affidavit and we find no merit in them.

Furthermore, it has been the Board's fixed policy to conduct hearings at such times and in such manner as to effect a minimum of interference with war production. We believe that the Trial Examiner is in the best position to make provision regarding the availability of particular witnesses and we hereby instruct him that, in so doing, he give every consideration to the desirability of causing as little hindrance as possible to the respondent's production.

Case No. C-1382.

Exceptions of Respondent Donnelly Garment Company to the Denial of Its Application for the Designation of Another Trial Examiner and to the Denial of Its Application For a Continuance.

I.

Comes now the above named respondent, Donnelly Garment Company and excepts to the order (Board's Exhibit 1-), rulings and action of the National Labor Relations Board on July 28, 1942 (and of the Trial Examiner in pursuance of said order) denying Respondent's application for the designation of another Trial Examiner herein, for each and all of the following reasons, to wit:

1. Because said order, rulings and action are erroneous under the law and the facts.

2. Because said order, rulings and action deprive and will deprive Respondent of a fair trial herein, for all the reasons set forth in Respondent's application for the designation of another Trial Examiner and in the Affidavit of Prejudice attached thereto and made a part thereof.

[fol. 624] 3. Because the Trial Examiner acts in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity and it appears from said Application and Affidavit and from the record herein that the Trial Examiner, James C. Batten, has formed and expressed a fixed and unqualified opinion that the kind of testimony which the Court has held should be received in this further hearing, is worthless and of no probative value upon the issues involved in this proceeding, and because thereof said James C. Batten is unable to fairly weigh or appraise the evidence to be adduced in this hearing or to make an intermediate report or recommendations to the Board fairly and judicially weighing and appraising said evidence or fairly and judicially applying said evidence to the issues involved herein, and Respondent will be deprived of the fair, unbiased, judicial report and recommendation of the Trial Examiner contemplated by the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act; that as a consequence thereof Respondent by said order, rulings and action of the Board and the Trial Examiner, is and will be deprived of a fair trial and hearing herein and of its liberty and property without due process of law, in contravention of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and in violation of the porvisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

4. Because the said order, rulings and action of the Board and Trial Examiner are based upon a misconception of the holding of the Circuit Court of Appeals referred to in said order, and upon a misapplication by the Board of the Court's holding to the Respondent's Application for the designation of another Trial Examiner, in that the Court was not (as the Board assumes) dealing with the specific question presented by said Application, to wit, [fol. 625] whether the bias and prejudgment by the Trial Examiner of and toward the particular type of evidence to be adduced at the further hearing, is such that he cannot judicially and fairly appraise and act upon same as contemplated by the National Labor Relations Act and by the law of the land.

5. Because the only cure for the type of bias and prejudgment shown to exist in the mind of the Trial Examiner, James C. Batten, of and toward the type of evidence to be adduced in this further hearing, is a hearing before another Trial Examiner, of which the Board has many.

6. Because said order, rulings and action of the Board and Trial Examiner, if and in so far as same may be a matter resting in the sound discretion of the Board, constitute an abuse of such discretion under the circumstances here existing.

II.

Application for Continuance.

7. Respondent excepts to the order, rulings and action of the National Labor Relations Board on July 8, 1942 (and of the Trial Examiner in pursuance of said order) denying Respondent's application for a continuance of this hearing for the reason that under the facts shown such action constitutes an abuse of the sound discretion of the Board and Trial Examiner, and denies respondent a fair and adequate opportunity to present its case.

Case No. C-1382—Date 8/4/42.

(Exceptions of Intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, to order denying Designation of another Trial Examiner and for a Continuance.)

The intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, excepts to the order made by National Labor Relations Board on July 28, 1942 (Board's Exhibit 1-GGGGG) denying the application made by respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, and joined in by this intervener, for the designation of another trial examiner and application for continuance, and excepts to the rulings and actions of the trial examiner pursuant to such order for the following reasons:

1. Because upon the facts said order, rulings and action are contrary to law.

2. By said order intervener is denied due process of law contrary to the provisions of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States in that intervener is denied a full and fair hearing before a fair and impartial tribunal because the trial examiner, James C. Batten, has formed a fixed conclusion in his mind that the evidence which the Circuit Court of Appeals ordered received in this case has no probative value and should be given no weight or consideration.

[fol. 628] 3. Because the Board bases its order upon the erroneous assumption that the Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that trial examiner Batten was not shown to be biased or prejudiced whereas the Circuit Court of Appeals did not have presented to it and did not consider or rule upon the question of whether in receiving this evidence and making his findings and conclusions thereon and in making an intermediate report thereon said James C. Batten could act fairly and impartially and without a fixed opinion that such evidence was entitled to little or no weight or value.

4. Because said order in denying the continuance was, under the circumstances shown, an abuse of discretion upon the part of the Board.

1. In this statement of rulings, the Donnelly Garment Company is referred to as the respondent; the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the Intervener; the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as the Union.

2. On June 7, 1939, after the filing of an amended complaint, the respondent at the hearing moved (Board's Exhibit No. 1-SSS) to dismiss the complaint as amended. The motion is hereby denied.

3. On June 7, 1939, the respondent filed at the hearing a motion (Board's Exhibit No. 1-TTT) to strike from the complaint as amended paragraph 4 A and all of the subparagraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) thereof and paragraph 5, subparagraph (c). The motion is granted as to paragraph 4 A. and the subparagraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e). The motion is denied as to paragraph 5, subparagraph (c).

4. On June 7, 1939, at the hearing, the Intervener orally moved (to be submitted in writing and marked Board's Exhibit No. 1-UUU) to strike paragraph 4 A from the [fol. 630] complaint as amended. The motion is hereby granted.

[fol. 632] 6. On June 5, 1939, Union's counsel orally moved (to be submitted in writing and marked Board's Exhibit No. 1-QQQ) to strike certain parts of the respondent's answer. Ruling is reserved on the motion. However, respondent is requested to submit a written statement of the evidence it would offer to prove the parts of the answer set forth in the motion to strike. Such written offer may be submitted at any time during the course of the hearing. After an examination of the offer of proof, the undersigned will rule on the Union's motion to strike.

See Rulings of Trial Examiner, Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, J. C. Batten, Trial Examiner.

7. The answer of the respondent (Board's Exhibit No. 1-JJJ), parts A and B, allege certain reasons for the dismissal of the complaint. The respondent is requested to submit a written statement of the evidence it would offer to prove the allegations set forth in parts A and B.

See Rulings of Trial Examiner, Board's Exhibit 1-SSSS, J. C. Batten, Trial Examiner.

Such written offer may be submitted any time during the course of the hearing. After an examination of the offers of proof, the undersigned will make such ruling as is appropriate to the disposition of requests for dismissal. Part C of respondent's answer purports to be a petition for investigation and certification of representatives, pursuant to Section 9 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act. Such petition cannot be received or considered in this proceeding.

Rulings Of The Trial Examiner

Case No. XVII-C-371

1. In this statement of rulings, the Donnelly Garment Company is referred to as the respondent; Donnelly Garment Workers' Union as the intervener; and the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union as the Union.

2. On July 15, 1939, the hearing in the above entitled matter closed for the taking of oral testimony. In the record of June 15 (pages 3098 to 3116), certain exhibit numbers were reserved for the submission of offers of proof, testimony to be offered from the National Recovery Administration case and Judge Miller Federal Injunction case, and other matters. All matters having been submitted and made a part of the record, the undersigned makes the following rulings thereon:

(a) Board Exhibit 28, by stipulation a true and accurate reflection of the facts and figures of all of the respondent's time-workers' pay-roll records to whom it purports to refer for the period April 15, 1937 to July 15, 1937, will be received in evidence. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is respondent's objection to Board Exhibit 28).

(b) Board Exhibit 1-tttt is a motion to amend the amended complaint. The motion is denied. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is the respondent's objection to the motion [fol. 635] to amend the amended complaint). Board Exhibit 30-a, a motion to amend the offer of proof, providing the motion to amend the amended complaint is granted (Board Exhibit 30) by inserting a paragraph, is denied. (Board Exhibit 1-uuuu is the respondent's objection to the motion to amend the offer of proof.)

(c) Stipulation of the parties making no objection to Board's motion to conform the amended complaint to the proof. Motion is granted. The stipulation is hereby made a part of the record and designated as Board Exhibit 1-vvvv.

(d) Stipulation of the parties providing for the filing of an offer of proof by respondent. The stipulation is hereby received and made a part of the record and designated as Board Exhibit 1-wwww. The offer of proof attached to the stipulation is hereby made a part of the record and designated as Board Exhibit 1-xxxx. The offer is refused.

(e) Rulings of the Trial Examiner, Board Exhibit 1-yyy, paragraph 6, reserved ruling on the Union's motion (Board Exhibit 1-qqq) to strike certain parts of respondent's answer and requested respondent to file offer of proof with respect to the motion to strike. The motion to strike is granted.

(f) Rulings of the Trial Examiner, Board Exhibit 1-yyy, paragraph 7, requested the respondent to submit offers of proof on Parts A and B of respondent's answer (Board Exhibit 1-jjj). The respondent stated in the record that no offer of proof would be made on Part A of the answer. The request for dismissal of complaint in Part A of the answer is denied. The offer of proof submitted by the respondent on Part B of the answer is refused. (Board Exhibit 1-nnnn.)

(g) Respondent's offer of proof, Board Exhibit 1-jjjj, was submitted because of a definite ruling of the Trial Examiner as to the admissibility of certain evidence, and in so far as the offer contemplates matters barred by the ruling, it is refused.

(h) Respondent's offer of proof, Board Exhibit 1-oooo, was submitted because of a definite ruling by the Trial Examiner as to the admissibility of certain evidence, and [fol. 636] in so far as the offer contemplates matters barred by the ruling, it is refused.

(i) Intervener's offer of proof, Board Exhibit 1-rrrr, was submitted because of definite rulings by the Trial Examiner as to the admissibility of certain evidence, and in so far as the offer contemplates matters barred by the ruling, it is refused.

(j) Board's objections to NRA-JMC Exhibit 3, are endorsed on the exhibit. The objections are overruled. Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.

(k) Board's objections to NRA-JMC Exhibit 8, are endorsed on the exhibit. The objections are overruled. Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.

(l) Respondent's objections, Board Exhibit 1-uuuu, Part 4, to Board's and Union's NRA-JMC Exhibit 17, is overruled. Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.

(m) Respondent's offer of evidence (NRA-JMC Board Exhibit 17) from the record in the Judge Miller Federal Injunction proceeding is received without objection. Acceptance of the testimony is not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects.

3. Board Exhibit 1-ssss was reserved for the "Rulings of the Trial Examiner" and Board Exhibit 1-ssss is hereby made a part of the record.

4. You are further advised that the hearing in this matter is closed.

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers Union, Party to the Contract.

Case No. XVII-C-371.

Upon charges dated August 9, 1938, and amended charges, duly filed by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, herein called the Union, and acting pursuant to proper authority, the National Labor Relations Board, herein called the Board, by Paul F. Broderick, is Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, issued its complaint dated April 27, 1939, against the Donnelly Garment Company, herein called the respondent. The complaint and notice of hearing thereon were duly served upon the respondent, the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, herein called the Independent, and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The complaint as amended, alleged that respondent had engaged in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3), and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the National Labor Relations Act, herein called the Act.

Concerning the unfair labor practices, the complaint as amended, alleged in substance that the respondent (a) on [fol. 638] or about February 12, 1935, formed the Donnelly Loyalty League for the purpose of preventing the organization of its employees by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; (b) that on April 27, 1937, the Donnelly Loyalty League was succeeded by the Donnelly Garment Workers Union; (c) on or about April 27, 1937 and thereafter, the respondent has dominated, supported and interfered with the labor organization known as the Donnelly Garment Workers Union; (d) during March, April and May 1937, encouraged and permitted supervisory and other employees, acting in the interest of the respondent, to solicit members, hold meetings, and engage in concerted activities in behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on company property without loss of pay; (e) entered into a closed-shop agreement with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, creating as a condition of employment membership in that union, thereby depriving its employees of their rights under the Act; (f) on or about April 23, 1937, respondent discharged and thereafter refused to reinstate Sylvia Hull, and on or about April 26, 1937, respondent discharged and thereafter refused to reemploy May Fike, employees of the respondent, for the reason that they had joined and assisted the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; and (g) by the above, and by statements of its officers and supervisory employees, has urged, persuaded and warned its employees to refrain from becoming members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union; by keeping members and meetings of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union under surveillance; and by instigating and permitting respondent's employees to engage in a violent demonstration on its time and property on or about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, has interfered with, restrained and coerced its employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

Prior to the hearing, the Donnelly Garment Workers Union filed with the Acting Regional Director a petition for leave to intervene. The Acting Regional Director granted the petition in so far as the intervenor's interest may appear.

The undersigned, as duly designated Trial Examiner of the Board, conducted a hearing from June 5 to July 15, 1939, at Kansas City, Missouri, at which place all parties were afforded an opportunity to participate in the hearing, to call, examine and cross-examine witnesses and introduce other evidence.

During the course of the hearing, the respondent and the intervenor made several motions to dismiss the amended complaint. Decision on the motions having been reserved, the motions are hereby denied. The respondent, at the close of the Board's case, the respondent's case, and again at the close of the hearing, moved to dismiss certain paragraphs of the amended complaint. The motions are granted as to paragraph 11, subparagraphs d, g, g-1, i, k, n, o, and p of the amended complaint (Board Exhibit 1-kk-ll). The motions in all other respects are denied.

[fol. 640] At the conclusion of the hearing, the parties were afforded a reasonable opportunity to argue orally before the undersigned. The parties were further advised that they might file briefs with the undersigned. The parties did not care to avail themselves of the opportunity to argue orally before the undersigned, and at the request of the undersigned, memorandum briefs were filed by the respondent, the intervenor and the Union, and have been considered in connection with this report.

Upon the record thus made and from his observation of the witnesses, the undersigned makes, in addition to the above, the following specific findings of fact:

Findings of Fact.

I. Business of the Respondent.

1. The Donnelly Garment Company, a Missouri corporation with its office and factory (respondent at times operates a small factory in St. Joseph, Missouri) located in Kansas City, Missouri, is engaged in the designing, manufacturing, selling and distribution of ladies garments, chiefly of cotton, wool, acetate, rayon and linen, under the trade name of "Nelly Don." In the years 1937 and 1938, the respondent's sales grossed over $4,000,000 per year, 96 per cent of which sales was to customers in States other than the State of Missouri. The respondent has purchased over 99 percent of its raw materials—cotton, wool, acetate, rayon and linen—in States other than the State of Missouri.

2. The respondent's departments, with those in general charge, are as follows: production, Lee Baty; merchandising, retail store and receiving, Elizabeth Reeves; office manager, J. B. Bachofer; and employment, Ella Hyde. The respondent's officers are: president and treasurer, Mrs. James A. Reed; vice president, Alex. C. Green; and secretary, R. J. Ingraham.

[fol. 641] 3. The Donnelly Sales Company, a Missouri corporation, organized in 1935, is exclusively engaged in the business of selling and distributing ladies garments manufactured by the respondent. The officers of the sales company are: president, Alex. C. Green; vice president and treasurer, Lee Baty; and secretary, R. J. Ingraham.

II. The Labor Organizations Involved.

4. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is an unaffiliated labor organization and admitting to membership the plant employees of the respondent. The Donnelly Garment Workers Union is an unaffiliated labor organization and admitting to membership all the employees of the respondent.

III. The Unfair Labor Practices.

A. Events prior to April 27, 1937.

5. Prior to the summer of 1934, no effort was made to unionize the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. At this time the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union established an office in Kansas City, Missouri, and announced in the papers that an attempt would be made to organize the garment workers. During the summer and fall of 1934, at least a dozen of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company joined the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. The Union, in the early part of its campaign, held an open meeting at the Eagles Hall, and Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, production manager, Rose Todd and other supervisory employees of the respondent, attended.

6. On December 6, 1934, the Union filed a charge against the Donnelly Garment Company under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, complaining that eight girls had been laid off by the company because of their joining the Union. A hearing on these charges was held in Kansas City, Missouri, beginning in April 1935. The taking of testimony was completed and before a decision was made by the N. R. A., the Supreme Court declared the N. R. A. unconstitutional.

off or discharged by the Donnelly Garment Company, Glynn Brooks' employment being terminated on July 12, 1934. The 12 girls whose employment was terminated, had in most instances been working in the main plant of the Donnelly Garment Company. On or about the time these girls joined the Union, they were all transferred to a temporary building which was used by the Donnelly Garment Company during the busy season. When the busy season was over and the use of the temporary building was discontinued, the girls, most of whom had several years service with the respondent, were laid off, and girls employed in the main plant with less service were retained. While no strict seniority system was followed in the plant, it was the customary practice to provide regular employment for the older and more experienced operators.

8. The organization campaign of the Union is directly related to a meeting which was held at the home of Martha Gray on February 5, 1935. At this meeting attended by 46 persons, the Donnelly Loyalty League was organized. There is a conflict as to whether the steps taken to form the League occurred at the home of Mrs. Gray or at a mass meeting of the employees shortly thereafter. That meeting was reported in the Nelly Don Athletic Association News bulletin of February 13, 1935. The News stated that "900 join Loyalty League." Herbert Mutchler was asked to act as temporary chairman. It was announced that the formation of the League "was to refute untrue statements and propaganda circulated by the Union." At [fol. 643] the meeting Mutchler read an editorial from a February 16 issue of a magazine, which editorial is entitled "Protection in the Right not to Strike." The editorial defends the right of employees not to strike and critically speaks of labor agitators and pickets. The cards signed by the employees read as follows:

I, the undersigned, hereby pledge myself to become a member of the Nell Donnelly Loyalty League and to take part in the activities of said League to the best of my ability.

I have signed this pledge of my own free will and without coercion or intimidation of any kind.

The League's activities, outside of occasional social affairs, in most instances are coincidental with the efforts of the Union to organize the respondent's employees.

9. The Donnelly Loyalty League held its meetings on company property. All of the executives and supervisory employees of the respondent were members except Mrs. James A. Reed, president of the company, and Mr. Baty, the general superintendent. The members of the Donnelly Loyalty League paid no dues, no constitution or by-laws were adopted, so that the organization remained in a rather nebulous form to be called into use when the occasion required.

10. Herbert Mutchler, a supervisory employee, was president of the Donnelly Loyalty League for 2 years, and was succeeded by Rose Todd, also a supervisory employee of the respondent. Bertha Estes, who was secretary of the Donnelly Loyalty League in 1938, received no records of any kind from the former secretary and Miss Estes kept no records of any kind. The Donnelly Loyalty League, according to respondent's witnesses, was purely a social organization for the purpose of holding dances and social affairs.

11. Unquestionably, the League did hold dances and social affairs, but its primary function was to combat union [fol. 644] propaganda and this is clearly shown by its activities and the support which the respondent gave to the organization. For instance, while the League officers denied that they, as representatives of the League, prepared a Loyalty petition, it is clear that it was part of the Loyalty League's plan.

12. On March 2, 1937, a petition was circulated by several employees through the plant during working hours. In many instances the petition, after being brought to the sections, was passed from person to person for signature, while the machines were in operation. The Loyalty petition read as follows:

We, the undersigned, as member of the Donnelly Garment Company, wish to make it known that we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with this organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed.

This petition was signed by all of the employees except Elsie Graham Greenhaw, a stenographer who worked in the main office. Mrs. Greenhaw was requested by Pauline Shartzer to sign the petition during working hours. Mrs. Greehaw refused to sign because of the statement "refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization," and stated to Miss Shartzer that as an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company she had a right to believe in a union or not as she pleased. Two other employees who refused to sign the petition at first, Sylvia Hull being one of those, were later permitted to sign the petition and thereafter their names were removed from the petition.

13. When the Loyalty petition was circulated through the plant, there was some doubt in the minds of those who circulated the petition whether the instructors who had charge of the sewing sections employing about 40 operators, should sign the petition. When Inez Warren, Pauline Shartzer and Mary Sprofera, the committee who circulated the Loyalty petition, presented the petition to Mrs. [fol. 645] Reed at her home in Kansas City, Mrs. Reed apparently noticed that the instructors had not signed the petition and she suggested to the girls that she would like to have the signatures of all the employees to put in the cornerstone of her new building. The committee then went back and secured the signatures of the instructors. At the time that the Loyalty petition was presented to Mrs. Reed at her home, a newspaper photographer was there and took a picture, which would indicate that Mrs. Reed or the committee had made the prior arrangements for the necessary publicity. Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent, testified that he was present at Mrs. Reed's home when the petition was presented; he insisted that he was in Mrs. Reed's living room discussing business matters when the petition was presented, while the weight of the testimony discloses that Mrs. Reed was out in her garden when they presented the petition. This is typical of the large number of inconsistencies in the testimony of the respondent's witnesses with respect to many events that occurred during 1935, 1936 and 1937.

14. The Donnelly Loyalty League, on March 18, 1937, held a meeting in the plant of the respondent which meeting, according to Rose Todd, then president of the League, was entirely a spontaneous meeting. Rose Todd testified that the meeting of March 18 was not a meeting of the Loyalty League but merely a meeting of the employees. However, the meeting was called by the officers of the Loyalty League; a representative of the Loyalty League, Rose Todd, was chairman of the meeting; and the meeting was called by notices sent to all of the various departments through the regular messenger service of the respondent, which notices when they reached the sections, were passed out by the instructors.

16. Mrs. Reed then made a short extemporaneous talk. There is much testimony in the record to indicate that Mrs. Reed's talk was directly connected with the Union's letter which was read. Mrs. Reed made it very clear to the employees that she was opposed to outside unions and the union referred to was the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Mrs. Reed referred to the Loyalty petition in which all of the employees had advised Mrs. Reed that they refused to recognize any union labor organization. It is further clear from Mrs. Reed's talk, particularly when she referred to the fact that she would not permit any union to force her employees to join a labor organization; that the employees, as far as the management was concerned, should not consider an outside union. Mrs. Hyde testified: "She (Mrs. Reed) said International, Dubinsky or any other 'buttinsky' would not intimidate her into making her compel or force her employees to join any labor organization which they did not choose." As will later appear in Section B of this report, the meeting of March 18 unquestionably laid the groundwork for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on April 27, 1937.

17. Elsie Graham Greenhaw testified that Mrs. Reed spoke at the meeting of March 18 and stated that she would close her factory before she would permit it to be union- [fol. 647] ized. The undersigned accepts this testimony of Mrs. Greenhaw as correct for the reason that Mrs. Greenhaw, of all of the witnesses who testified at the hearing, was a disinterested party. Mrs. Greenhaw was not a member of any organization while employed at the Donnelly plant. Her testimony was given in a straightforward and unhesitating manner. She has always been employed in very responsible positions and left the respondent's employment with a good record. A further reason for the acceptance of her version is that the testimony of the respondent's witnesses with respect to the calling of the meeting and the circumstances surrounding it, varied substantially.

18. On February 26, 1937, there appeared in the Kansas City Times, an article which stated that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was going to intensify its organizational activities, with particular reference to the Donnelly Garment Company. On that day and within a few days subsequently, Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent, increased the salaries of a large number of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. This is further evidence of the fact that meetings of the Donnelly Loyalty League and action of the respondent was always timed with some activity of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

19. There was a great deal of testimony concerning a meeting during the latter part of March or the first part of April 1937, at which meeting Rose Todd, who was then president of the Donnelly Loyalty League, advised the employees that she, Sallie Ormsby and Hobart Atherton, had employed a firm of attorneys in Kansas City to see what could be done in securing an injunction to protect the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. Rose Todd testified that at this meeting a plan was proposed to collect from every employee 50 cents as she and the balance of the committee had promised the attorneys a retainer fee of $500. There was a substantial amount of conflicting testimony concerning this meeting. No one [fol. 648] except Mr. Smith, a machinist employed by the respondent, was able to definitely place the date of the meeting, he placing the date as March 30, 1937. Mr. Smith's testimony with respect to the date of the meeting or any of the transactions of the meeting cannot be accepted. His recollection of what transpired at the meeting was very hazy as was the testimony of all of the respondent's witnesses.

20. The undersigned is of the opinion that no such meeting was ever held and that the date of the latter part of March or the first part of April was used in order that it might be contended that the $500 paid the attorneys—which was paid by check of the Donnelly Loyalty League—was for services rendered the employees and not to be connected with the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. This position is untenable as the actual records disclosed that there was no such meeting; that the 50 cents collection was made subsequent to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union; and that the Donnelly Loyalty League paid the retainer of $500 to the attorneys for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

21. Rose Todd, in her testimony, did not disclose that she, on March 30, 1937, went to the First National Bank of Kansas City, Missouri, and borrowed $1000, signing the note "Nell Donnelly Loyalty League," and that the $500 paid to the attorneys was paid out of this account. The latest definite date on which any of the witnesses place the meeting in the latter part of March, is March 30, the day Todd made the loan, and if it had been planned to collect the funds on that date, a loan would have been unnecessary, or if so Todd would have reported the loan. Rose Todd did not advise the employees at any of the meetings of this loan or of the payment of the retainer fee from the proceeds of the loan.

22. The testimony is clear that the employment of the attorneys and the raising of the funds was for the purpose of organizing the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. The [fol. 649] Donnelly Garment Workers Union and its formation and organization is inseparably tied up with the Donnelly Loyalty League. Rose Todd, who was president of the Donnelly Loyalty League during the early part of 1937, was the organizer of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and did not resign as such until at least 30 days after the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was organized.

23. An incident occurred in the plant on April 23, 1937 which again demonstrated the activity of the Donnelly Loyalty League and the respondent's opposition to the organization of a union in its plant. Again the respondent attributes the incident to an article which appeared in a Kansas City paper. Sylvia Hull, an employee of the respondent and a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was selected to attend a union convention in Atlantic City as reported in the paper. On the morning of April 23, 1937, and after the girls were seated at their machines a number of employees appeared and singing Donnelly Loyalty League songs, congregated around her machine. The employees left, and shortly thereafter another group of employees from several floors in the plant approached her and requested that she return the Donnelly Loyalty League pin which she refused to do unless they paid her 35 cents for the pin. Shortly thereafter, the girls returned, gave Hull 35 cents; and the pin was returned. At the request of Mrs. Hyde, Hull went to Hyde's office, followed by a number of the girls, in spite of the fact they had been ordered to return to work. Hyde's account of this affair is as follows:

So I went upstairs and I found a group of girls working in the section, same section as this Sylvia Hull, grouped around her machine, and they were singing songs, and I suggested that since knowing about the notice that was in the paper the night before, that Sylvia Hull come down to the desk with me so that we could get these girls back to work and their remarks at the time were that they would not go back to work unless she left the building . . . . asked girls to go back and girls instead followed us down and when I asked them again to go to work, said they would when Hull went home, and then Hull said "I will go home. I didn't know the girls felt this way about it, or I wouldn't have done it."

Hyde stated that the refusal of the group to go back to their jobs was a refusal to work. None of the girls was ever disciplined in any way.

[fol. 650] 24. Later in the morning of April 23, 1937, there was another demonstration at which time Mr. Baty, the plant manager, and Rose Todd, president of the Donnelly Loyalty League, requested that Fern Sigler accompany them to the office. When Fern Sigler arrived at the office she was interviewed by Ella Mae Hyde, the employment manager, Mr. Baty, the production manager, and Rose Todd, president of the Loyalty League. There was a stenographer present who prepared a transcript of what was said at this conference. Rose Todd at this conference asked Fern Sigler how long she had belonged to the Union and wanted Miss Sigler to tell her "why you feel the way you do." Fern Sigler replied "that every employee has a right to join any organization they choose." Mrs. Hyde then stated: "It is perfectly all right, we have no objections." Fern Sigler replied: "An employer should be able to control their girls." Mr. Baty asked Fern Sigler "how did they find out you belonged to the union." Fern Sigler replied: "I wore my pin." Mrs. Hyde then asked: "Did you wear your Loyalty League pin?" Fern Sigler replied: "I haven't worn my Loyalty League pin for 2 weeks, I didn't wear either of them." Rose Todd advised Miss Sigler "time alters circumstances, personal opinions are incensed and it is a little difficult to keep that many people from expressing their opinions." Mr. Baty then suggested to Fern Sigler that she go home for a few days until things quiet down. Fern Sigler then said:

"It would be the same thing when I come back." Mrs. Hyde stated: "These girls won't stay at their machines as long as you are in that section." Rose Todd then asked: "What do you think you have gained that we haven't by joining the union." Further Miss Todd stated: "As president of the Loyalty League, I am not going to sell you on the idea that we are right but the majority will certainly rule in a case like this." Mr. Baty then said: "You will have to go temporarily, it is not a matter of choice. We don't wish to have a disturbance here. People from every floor in the factory were down at your machine a while ago." Fern Sigler then asked whether she would [fol. 651] be paid for the time off. Mr. Baty then replied: "Why do you think we should pay you while you are off? You joined this organization and these girls are much opposed to it. It is no fault of the company that they won't work around you." Fern Sigler replied: "Employers is supposed to be able to keep the employees at work." Mr. Baty replied: "We don't go into the Wagner Act. We are just running our business here and not a law office." Rose Todd then stated: "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule as always." Mr. Baty then closed the conference by stating: "I am going to ask you to go home temporarily and Mrs. Hyde will call you back when I think it is safe for you to come back."

25. During the Hull demonstrations Mrs. Allison the instructor in charge of the section and her assistant, Rose Hendricks, were present. With knowledge that girls were present from other sections and floors, no effort was made by these supervisory employees to control the girls. Pearl Collins, Fern Sigler's instructor was present at the time of the Sigler disturbance. Collins testified: "Well, I merely asked the girls to leave and go back to work" and when asked if the girls left, "Well, not immediately, but then they soon left." Mr. Baty when he appeared at Sigler's section saw the girls grouped around Sigler and did not at that time or later reprimand any of the employees taking part in the demonstration.

26. Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, testified that Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler did not violate any rules of the company and that the girls who congregated around the machines of the girls were not disciplined in any way.[1]

27. The organization of the Donnelly Loyalty League and the support and encouragement which it received from the respondent and its agents, and more particularly the [fol. 652] fact that the Donnelly Loyalty League was only active on those occasions when it was necessary to call to the attention of the employees some activity of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, while it does not indicate that the Donnelly Loyalty League was a labor organization, it most assuredly laid the proper foundation for the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on April 27, 1937.

28. The undersigned finds that the respondent by all of the activities as set forth herein, organized and dominated the Donnelly Loyalty League as a medium to discourage membership in I. L. G. W. U. and further finds that such activities have interfered with, coerced and restrained its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed them in Section 7 of the Act.

B. The Donnelly Garment Workers Union:

(1) The formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

29. The meeting of April 27, 1937 was the organizational meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Cameron Herold, an employee of the respondent and a graduate of junior college, was unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League meeting of March 18, and the organizational meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union held on April 27, 1937.

Q. Do you remember any meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union?

A. I do.

Q. Describe that meeting. How many meetings were there during this period that you can recall?

A. The first meeting was about the middle of March.

[1]The events following the Hull incident will be fully covered under Section C — Discharges.

30. Mrs. Lynn Davis stated that there was a meeting called or "there was employees went to see a lawyer and to see what we could do about forming a union of our own." This statement of Mrs. Davis indicates that the employees in the plant were unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment [fol. 653] Workers Union. Rose Todd and several others of those who were active in the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, attempted to show that the employment of the attorneys in the first instance was for the purpose of securing an injunction and not with relation to the organization of the Union. The testimony of Mrs. Davis would indicate that the employees were not of this opinion.

31. The Supreme Court of the United States, on April 12, 1937, in several decisions, upheld the constitutionality of the National Labor Relations Act. Hobart Atherton stated that the idea of an independent union originated between April 12 and 20, and further, that on April 26, 1937, he met with Rose Todd at her apartment and discussed the advisability of organizing an independent union on the following day. There must have been some discussion of the situation in the Donnelly plant, at least on April 13, 1937 when Rose Todd interviewed Mr. Tyler, the attorney who was later employed to organize the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Rose Todd testified that the interview was with regard to an injunction, but the testimony is clear that Tyler was employed for the purpose of organizing an independent union.

32. Rose Todd's testimony as to why the meeting of April 27, 1937 was called, is decidedly different and in conflict with testimony of Hobart Atherton. Rose Todd's testimony indicates the meeting just happened.

33. Rose Todd was president of the Donnelly Loyalty League during 1937 and did not resign as president until about a month after the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on April 27, 1937, so that she, as a supervisory employee,[2] continued as the directing influence in the latter organization.

[2]Todd's relationship to respondent is fully set forth in Part III, Section B-2.

[fol. 654] 34. The April 27 meeting was called immediately after work on the second floor of a building which was occupied by the Donnelly Garment Company and in the meeting room which had been formerly used by the Donnelly Loyalty League. It is true that the Donnelly Garment Company at the time did not have the second floor leased, but the employees in the plant were notified by the interdepartmental phone system of the respondent that there was to be a meeting. Many of the employees went to the meeting in their uniforms, and as Claris Martin testified, "the meeting was held immediately after working hours and I went in my uniform." Pearl Collins, an instructor, stated a message came that Rose Todd was calling a meeting of employees. Rose Todd stated, "In using our house telephone system in that manner, we have what we call floor girls or thread girls in each department. It is absolutely her duty to answer the phone and convey any message that might be given. That was what was done. The telephone operator called and said there would be a meeting on the second floor after work for the employees."

36. Nellie Stites came to the meeting in her uniform as well as a large number of the others. Nellie Stites was unable to distinguish between the meetings of the Donnelly [fol. 655] Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and after the organization of the union she did not know the representative of the union for her department. The employees were definitely unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Mrs. Lynn Davis testified that she paid dues to the Loyalty League. This is another indication of the inability of the employees to differentiate between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. As further evidence of this fact, the chairs which were rented from the Kansas City Chair Company for the meeting of April 27, 1937 were ordered by the Donnelly Loyalty League evidenced by a notation on the margin of the books of the Kansas City Chair Company, so it is not surprising that the employees were unable to distinguish between these two organizations.

37. The organizational meeting lasted about 1 hour and during this time the employees, according to the minutes of the meeting, voted to form an independent union; Rose Todd and M.. Tyler addressed the meeting; adopted by-laws and the name Donnelly Garment Workers Union; appointed a nominating committee for representatives; elected 9 representatives; passed out cards for the signatures of the employees; and collected about 1300 signed cards.

38. Rose Todd, in her opening statements, stated that it was a gratifying sight to see so many present and that as chairman of the committee of employees, she called the meeting to discuss a matter of vital importance and clearly indicated in her talk, as recorded in the minutes of the meeting held April 27, 1937, that she had consulted with Mr. Tyler who acted as attorney for the employees, and "more and more these past few weeks it has seemed to me that we are approaching the time when it will be necessary to form an organization that will give us the protection that we need." She further explained that the Loyalty League, being a purely social organization, will not take care of the situation, "that another organization is necessary to give us representation to definitely confer with the [fol. 656] proper representatives of our company at times when we feel that is necessary." She further stated: "our new organization will be called the Donnelly Garment Workers Union." Miss Todd then introduced Mr. Tyler who stated: "Some weeks ago several employees came to my office and employed Mr. Gossett and myself as legal advisers of the employees so that I am in fact at this moment acting as an attorney for you or for many of you even though you have never seen me before. First I want to say that I represent no labor union and in connection I represent no employer. You may believe in unions or you may disbelieve in unions and still agree with the advice I am now about to offer you. The reason for this advice I am going to give you is that we believe it is to your own best interest to organize your own individual unaffiliated plant union of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and proceed with such a union." Mr. Tyler went on to explain that one of the reasons for the organization was the fact that the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union sent a representative to the national convention to represent the Donnelly employees and "in order to stop this and to make it clear that you are speaking for yourselves through your own representatives whom you choose we think your own union is desirable." Mr. Tyler further stated: "I do not think that this action can or will be considered as any act of unfriendliness to your employer. I believe they recognize your right to take this step and that isn't an unfriendly act to them. In fact, it is much better for them and yourselves for you to have your own union with your own representatives rather than having a group trying to represent outsiders from New York." Rose Todd then said: "Well, we are together as an entire group of employees. Let's form this organization," and a motion was then made that they form an independent unaffiliated plant union.

39. A motion was then made that a nominating committee be appointed to select a general chairman and group chairman. This motion was passed, the nominating com- [fol. 657] mittee retired, and in 15 minutes reported back to the chairman the nomination of nine persons who were voted upon en masse and all elected. Those elected were general chairman Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton, representative of the workers in general, and of the 9, 2 were operators to represent 800 employees of the respondent of the total of 1200. The bylaws were read by Mr. Tyler who had prepared the bylaws without consultation with Rose Todd and Hobart Atherton who were the organizers of the Union. Atherton testified that he had never seen the bylaws in their entirety before the meeting. Rose Todd testified that Mr. Tyler wrote up the bylaws and that she made no suggestions with respect to the bylaws. The membership is strictly limited to the Donnelly Garment Company employees. The respondent suggested at a later date, during the negotiations for an agreement, that before any employee is eligible for election as a representative or chairman, he must have been employed for 1 year by the Donnelly Garment Company; this provision was then inserted. According to Mr. Tyler, this was to prevent any outsider who may become employed in the Donnelly Garment Company from being elected to an office in the Union and operating as a disruptive force in the organization.

40. As further proof of the fact that the employees were not only unable to distinguish between the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, they were not familiar with the bylaws or the method of electing officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. The officers are elected by the nine representatives, but Mrs. Lynn Davis testified that the officers were elected at the meeting of April 27, 1937.

41. The Donnelly Loyalty League, after the organizational meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on April 27, 1937, did not discontinue its operations. A meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was held on May 25, 1937, and according to the minutes of the meeting, Rose Todd read an article which appeared in the Kansas City paper that the International Ladies' Gar- [fol. 658] ment Workers Union had opened up headquarters to organize the Donnelly Garment Company. She announced at the meeting that the working agreement had been sent to Mrs. Reed and that they expected the agreement to be in Mrs. Reed's hands shortly. Rose Todd further announced a dance at the Play-Mor Friday night, June 11, and Hobart Atherton announced the arrangements for the dance and the importance of attending, and according to the minutes the meeting then adjourned.

42. Marjorie Green prepared the minutes of this meeting. There was a great deal of conflicting testimony with respect to the meeting of May 25, 1937. Mrs. Elsie Greenhaw testified that she attended the meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union on May 25, 1937 in accordance with a request from Marjorie Green. Mrs. Greenhaw prepared minutes of this meeting and a copy of the minutes clearly disclosed that the meeting started out as a Donnelly Garment Workers Union meeting and during the latter part of the meeting was conducted as a Donnelly Loyalty League meeting. Elsie Greenhaw's minutes of this meeting are accepted as correct and her testimony with respect to this meeting is accepted. Her testimony was convincing and straightforward, and although many attempts were made by the respondent and the intervenor to discredit her testimony, it stands as a logical and plausible account of the events of the meeting of May 25, 1937. There are many details in the testimony of the respondent's and intervenor's witnesses in their effort to explain the Greenhaw minutes which are not consistent with the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, or with the chronology of events which preceded and followed the meeting of May 25, 1937.

43. The minutes of the meeting of May 25, 1937 are accepted as written by Mrs. Greenhaw, for at least on one occasion Marjorie Green who was secretary of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, testified that she did not take the minutes of the meeting of April 27—other witnesses of the respondent testified that she did—but Miss Green did say that she changed the minutes of the meeting of April 27 as written by a person she could not recall and retyped the minutes.

Union. Reference has been made heretofore to certain supervisory employees and the responsibility of the respondent's executives for the formation of both organizations. The relationship between the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, as fully set forth herein, can result in only one conclusion, that is, that the respondent organized, formed, sponsored, dominated and supports the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and the undersigned so finds.

(2) Relationship between the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and the respondent.

45. There is an unbroken relationship between the respondent and the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union from the time of the organization of the Donnelly Loyalty League on February 5, 1935.

46. Martha Gray, at whose home the Donnelly Loyalty League was started, is in charge of the respondent's so-called "outlet store." Rose Todd testified: "I assume you would say that she is in charge. The only charge I guess there could be is over the remnants or things of that type sent down there for them to sell. There are about six women down there that do that selling. I don't imagine the direct responsibility of that store is with Mrs. Gray. I think it would originate in the department where the material is purchased." Rose Todd further testified that she had read announcements of sales in the outlet store [fol. 660] coming out under Mrs. Gray's name. Mrs. Gray has been in charge of the retail store for 7 years and while she and the respondent deny that she is in a supervisory capacity, the facts clearly show that she is a supervisor.

47. The Donnelly Loyalty League admitted to membership all of the respondent's employees. Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, Mrs. Reeves, formerly plant superintendent, and now in charge of miscellaneous departments, were members, and all the plant employees were familiar with the fact that such executives and supervisory officers were members.

48. Rose Todd first met Mrs. Reed when Mrs. Reed was a patient in one of the hospitals in Kansas City, Rose Todd being her nurse. Todd had been employed by the Donnelly Garment Company for 13 years, having left the Donnelly Garment Company January 1, 1931 and returning August 1, 1933. Rose Todd was an operator for several months and then helped on the floor as a thread girl. Todd at times has acted as an instructor. Todd testified that the company does not use the term "supervisor" but that they do have an individual that they call an instructor in charge of approximately 40 operators who compose the sewing sections, and a second girl that might perhaps be called an assistant instructor. Since Rose Todd's reemployment on August 1, 1933, she has helped in various sections covering the entire plant. During this time Rose Todd had not been assigned to any particular department, being directly responsible to Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent. She has had a desk located on the seventh floor and her explanation is that she just happens to be there or wherever there is an empty desk.

49. Miss Todd talks to all the instructors and thread girls each day and it is her responsibility, as she states, to act as a sort of supply girl and go through the plant and check the work to see that every section has supplies. The instructors and thread girls do call her at times to furnish supplies when they run short.

[fol. 661] 50. Mr. Baty described Rose Todd's work: "She checks with the sections all over the plant looking for merchandise that is delayed—dresses and bundles—checks to see what they need in the way of thread, lace, buttons, or any other notions . . . For a period in 1938 she worked on some special work with Mr. Atchison" (who resigned as a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union because of being a supervisory employee). Mr. Baty further stated that Rose Todd received the same vacations as given the instructors, that is 3 weeks instead of 2 as given to the operators. Rose Todd was supposed to take her vacation in August 1937 but Baty stated that "he couldn't let Todd go in August as she was indispensable." Everett Sweeney, chairman of the board of the First National Bank of Kansas City, Missouri, has known Rose Todd for 10 or 12 years, having met her at his office.

Sweeney stated "she was a kind of all-around man for the company," and had come in on matters for the company for several years.

51. Mr. Baty and the other witnesses for the respondent deny that Rose Todd is in a supervisory position; there is little doubt but that she succeeded to at least a part of the duties of Mrs. Wherry, a former assistant plant superintendent, or as Mr. Baty stated, a general instructor. Mr. Baty testified that Rose Todd's job in the factory is a sort of go-between in the sections. In other words, instructors contact her and she notifies him instead of the instructors going direct to Mr. Baty, so that she, Rose Todd, is unquestionably one step above the instructors in their relationship to Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent.

52. This dual relationship of Rose Todd as a supervisory employee and as president of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, undoubtedly accounts for the fact that she has a desk on the seventh floor where she keeps the Donnelly Garment Workers Union records. Rose Todd as a representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, transacted union business at her desk during working hours and the employees knew this because of Rose Todd's announcement to them that they could come to her desk and sign membership cards in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and this was particularly true for several days after April 27, 1937.

[fol. 662]. 53. Rose Todd's position with the respondent enabled her to use the inter-office mail service and the inter-office memorandum forms in notifying the employees of any matters in connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and as has been previously stated, gave her the use of the interdepartmental phone system of the respondent.

54. Hobart Atherton stated that he, with Rose Todd were responsible for the meeting of April 27, the employment of the attorneys, and for the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, while he and the respondent deny the fact that he is a supervisory employee. Hobart Atherton performs the duties of a supervisor in the mechanical department and was first employed by the respondent in November 1933 in the maintenance department. According to his testimony he works on all floors and while he was indefinite about the fact that he received all the phone calls for repairs, there is no question but that that is his function. Atherton transmits the instructions to the employees in the mechanical department and on occasion shows them how to do the work. In addition to Atherton, the department has one electrician, one carpenter, one painter and three laborers. Atherton assigns the work and checks it when completed, and keeps a record of it in a notebook. Atherton denied that he had charge of the mechanical department. The impossibility of the respondent's plant operating with no supervisors is fully discussed below. However, Atherton's explanation of his duties and functions in the department creates an impossible situation. Someone must assume the responsibility for the assignment of work to the three different types of mechanical people employed, and certainly with the three laborers who are employed, it cannot be assumed that they or the mechanics decide what is to be done and go about their business. There is no testimony to indicate that Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent, in any way directs the work of these employees.

[fol. 663] 55. Mrs. Nichols who is in charge of the price-setting section, is supervisory employee although a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. Ted Scoles is a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and is in charge of the cutting section. All of the salesmen are members of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

56. Miss Pauline Hartman, who is treasurer of the Donnelly Loyalty League, is employed in the office and works on the time pay rolls. It is questionable whether Miss Hartman is in a supervisory capacity, but she is employed in a confidential position as she has access to the safe and vaults of the respondent where at times she keeps the funds of the Donnelly Loyalty League. There was some testimony to indicate that she has one or two persons under her supervision, and due to her seniority she does take a certain amount of responsibility for the work in her section. She is employed in a very confidential relationship with the respondent in the main office.

57. Jack McConaughey, the present treasurer of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, is employed in the respondent's main office on the tenth floor. Mr. McConaughey has been employed by the respondent for 9 years. At present Mr. McConaughey is employed on a salary basis and has the responsibility of the pay rolls, social security records, and so forth. Prior to his present position he was in charge of the service section or mechanical section.

58. Marvin Price is a supervisory employee being employed as the custodian of the plant. Mr. Milton Slotkin, manager of the Kansas City Chair Company, testified that he always consulted with Mr. Price concerning the rental of chairs and had received orders for the rental of chairs to be used by the company on several occasions. When Rose Todd as president of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union in April 1938 reported the number of meetings that had been held in the plant in order that the rental due could be determined, submitted the report to Marvin Price.

[fol. 664] 59. The Donnelly Garment Company employs 40 to 45 so-called instructors. These instructors are supervisory employees and have charge of the different sewing sections composed of 1 thread girl or assistant instructor, and about 40 machine operators. All of them are eligible for membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and as far as the record discloses, all are members. These instructors have not been particularly active in the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. It is unnecessary that they should be because when the operators know that the instructors are members and attended the meetings regularly, it is sufficient indication to the girls working under their supervision that it is advisable for them to also belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union.

60. Mrs. Reeves, formerly plant manager, testified that "competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them and constantly supervise the same." As hereinbefore referred to, the instructors were left off the Loyalty petition until their signatures were requested by Mrs. Reed. In a meeting of the group, chairman, as shown by the minutes of June 15, 1937, Hobart Atherton stated: "I think department heads, instructors and so forth, should have all the privileges of membership except that they shall not be allowed the right to vote." This would indicate that even in the minds of the officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, there was some doubt about the advisability of permitting the instructors full membership in the Union and the curtailment of their membership rights can only be based upon the fact that they, the instructors, were in a somewhat different position than the ordinary plant employees. May Fike testified "that instructors give orders to the girls and tell them what to do" and that the instructors have a table in the section to themselves; further, that when the work is incorrectly done, the instructor tells the girls how it should be done; further, that the instructors have the responsibility to turn the power off and on in the various sections.

[fol. 665] 61. The instructors' supervisory authority is further shown by the fact that when the work is slack the instructors decide who shall take a day off and in what order the operators will take off their time. The instructors, according to the testimony of the respondent's and intervener's witnesses, are in fact supervisors in every sense of the word. Marjorie Green, secretary of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, testified that on one occasion a complaint had been made to the Union because an instructor was unreasonable. Mable Riggs testified to the same effect. Rose Todd testified that grievances were taken up with Mr. Baty and the instructor and adjusted. This would clearly indicate that the instructor is a supervisory employee to be considered in the discussion and settlement of grievances with the operators. Instructors are paid twice a month and their names are carried on the time workers pay roll, while the operators are paid on a piece rate basis weekly.

62. Pearl Collins, an instructor, testified: "I work up and down the whole section and distribute work. I try to keep the girls busy." "I distribute work up and down the section. I try to keep the girls busy but I am not in charge of anything. I am just here." Pearl Atchison, an employee of the respondent who worked as an operator for 8 years, stated that she had been promoted to an instructor and that she was promoted she supposed because she was capable. Effie Wiegand, an operator, testified that Mr. Baty had never spoken to her about employment and had never given her any instructions or directions.

63. The respondent has a section that employees 25 or 30 examiners and inspectors whose duty it is to inspect the finished garments when they come from the different sewing sections. The examiners or inspectors are not supervisory employees in the same sense that the instructors are, but they do, although the respondent in general denies the fact, report at least to the instructors by referring back defective garments on the work of the various operators. Mr. Baty testified that the examiners had reported to him concerning the work of May Fike, but it was impossible for him to recall the examiner who reported the fact.

[fol. 666] 64. The evidence is undisputed that prior to June 1935, Mrs. Reeves who was then the production manager, considered the instructors as supervisory employees with a very definite responsibility. She testified:

After we decide that we have to lay off a certain group or a number of people we go over our records with the instructor and she makes the recommendation because she is in close touch with the operator and knows the type of work the operator does and whether she is efficient, obedient, cooperative and reliable . . .

65. In June 1935, Mr. Baty became production manager and according to his testimony, changes were made in the functions of instructors. Baty testified:

I changed the work of the instructors, I would say, to a very great extent. Prior to the time I took them, they were considered more or less supervisors, and entered into the discussions and recommendations as to the ability of different operators and made different recommendations as to which operators would be recalled after they were laid off, and after I took over the plant, I put instructors strictly on the basis of an instructor, and they were there to assist the operator in the performance of their work, and nothing else. They had no supervision over the girls, and it was none of their concern as to how the girls performed. They were to give them the work, take it away from them when it was finished, show them how to do it, if they didn't know how, and that was the extent that they were held liable for the girls in the section.

Under the changes made by Baty, he testified the instructors had no authority to hire, discharge, discipline or supervise operators; Baty retained all such authority over all employees in his department. On June 2, 1939, the number of employees included in Baty's department were as follows: 642 operators, 72 miscellaneous piece workers, 77 ironers, 11 folders, 41 examiners, 44 in the cutting department, 15 dividers, 44 instructors and distributors, 14 mechanics and helpers, 11 bundle boys, 52 clerical workers, 60 miscellaneous time workers, 20 porters and maids. These employees are located on 10 floors of the building occupied by the respondent's plant. Baty testified:

[fol. 667] Q. Mr. Baty, supposing when you start up tomorrow morning, if you were there, that say there are ten of these sections and a couple of girls didn't show up, how do you find that out?

A. We have a hospital department and the nurse maintains an attendance record. She calls each section in the morning and asks the floor girl or the instructor, whoever answers the phone, for her attendance, who is absent, and any cards that are not stamped in at the time clock, at the time for that group to report to work, are picked up and taken to the nurse's office. In a very few minutes after time to start to work, within fifteen minutes, it is known how many are absent.

Q. Who notified you? A. They don't notify me.

Q. How do you know? A. I go around and look.

Q. You mean, you check every section the first thing in the morning?

A. I go over the plant the first thing in the morning.

Q. How many sections do you have?

A. Well, there is sixteen, eighteen.

Q. Who do you inquire of in each section? How do you find out there is somebody missing?

A. All you do is look at the vacant chairs. You don't inquire of anybody.

Q. Do you know, then, who is gone?

A. I don't know the exact persons in all cases. I know that there are so many operators out of this section and so many out of the other one, and so on.

Baty further testified:

Q. You are the only one there, either book or pamphlet or human being or any other way that knows what these many hundreds of operators are doing?

A. No. Many other people there know what they are doing.

Q. Well, but it isn't anyone else's duty to know what they are doing except yours, is it?

A. Not necessarily.

. . . . . .

[fol. 668] A. The instructors are paid to know what they are doing.

. . . . . .

Q. What do they do with the knowledge they gain about what the operators are doing?

A. They continue to use it to provide them with similar work.

. . . . . .

Q. When you ask them if a girl is inefficient and ought to be let out, they tell you, don't they?

A. I don't ask them anything of that kind.

. . . . . .

Q. That is what we have been talking about, Mr. Witness. I asked you if any of the instructors ever say to you, either upon your request or otherwise, that such-and-such an operator is inefficient and cannot longer be continued in the employment?

A. They have no such duty to perform. It is not up to them to say whether they are efficient.

Q. Do you ever ask one of them that?

A. No.

Q. You just know all that yourself?

A. I can tell from their payroll record, and my own observation of the operator, and I talk to the operators myself.

. . . . . .

Q. Now, can you give me any good reason why you wouldn't permit an operator—I mean an instructor—to discipline the operator?

A. I can give you a very fine reason, and the reason.

Q. All right, let's hear it.

A. Because the instructors are not capable of disciplining operators.

Q. I see. You have instructors that have been there for 15, 16 years, haven't you? A. We have.

Q. And you never ran a machine in your life, did you?

A. I did.

Q. Where?

A. A few minutes down at the plant.

* * * * * *

[fol. 669] Q. Now, let's say that some operator is staying away from her machine, staying in the toilet a little too often, too much. How do you find that out? Do you get that on these inspection tours you make of the factory, or does some one tell you about it?

A. The operator would tell me herself.

Q. Oh, I see? A. Yes.

Q. So, if some operator is sneaking off to the toilet and taking the time of the company, why, she will come and tell you about it; is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wouldn't think of asking the instructor?

A. It wouldn't be necessary.

Q. The 600 or more operators, you wouldn't ask the instructor whether this little girl is behaving or not?

A. I would not.

66. Mrs. Reeves, formerly in charge of production, and now familiar with the respondent's operations, testified as follows:

Q. Now, you made an affidavit in the three-judge hearing, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. And that affidavit, according to the record, was made and sworn to on the 30th day of October, 1937. If that is the record, that is correct, I assume. You remember that that three-judge hearing was going on in October, 1937? A. Well, if that is the date there.

Q. In that affidavit you stated (reading) "Competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them, and constantly supervise the same."

A. All right.

Q. Well, you said that, didn't you, swore to it?

A. If it is said there, yes, and it is true.

Q. They constantly supervised them, at least, by October 31, 1937? A. That is right.

[fol. 670] 67. Reeves further testified: "The authority that an instructor has from the company is to keep the operators in plenty of work and to follow the outline that is sent down to her from the office, as far as planning, and if it is impossible for her to do that, for some reason, she consults with Mr. Baty and he attends to all of the affairs as to personnel, transferring operators, and hiring and firing, and Mrs. Hyde assists him, under his instructions."

68. The change in June 1935 was hardly in accordance with Mrs. Reed's testimony of May 25, 1935 when she stated: "Now, in our plant I think that we have more supervision and more executives than—I know. I have more than are usual in a plant of this kind . . . Yes, our supervisors. Now in my plant I have 40 operators, 40 machines under one supervisor with an assistant one in charge."

69. May Fike, a witness for the Board, testified that when Mr. Baty took charge in June 1935, that thereafter there was no change in the conduct of the instructors or their relationship to the operators. As far as the record discloses, the operators were never advised in June 1935 that there had been a change in the method of supervision, and consequently, the operators knew nothing of the taking away from the instructors any authority which they had previously had. Whether the instructors continued in the same manner as far as the operators were concerned, they looked upon the instructors in the same way that they had during the regime of Mrs. Reeves as plant manager, so that the effect of the instructors in joining the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union would remain the same.

70. The relationship of the respondent to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union is not only clearly shown by these outstanding facts, but it is further proven by a number of rather, in themselves, small incidents.

71. Rose Todd testified that notices of meetings were made by memos to all departments sent through the respondent's messenger service and by placement on bulletin boards. She further testified that she just ad- [fol. 671] dressed the memos to each department and that they must have been passed through the instructors' hands to the various employees in the sections. On a few occasions, mail received for the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was received in the company mail and received by the mail clerk and stamped with the receiving stamp of the respondent. The Kansas City Chair Company, in keeping its account of chairs rented to the Donnelly plant, was unable to distinguish between the rentals made to the company, the Donnelly Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers Union. The accounts were all kept under one ledger name—Donnelly Garment Company, until January 1939 when separate accounts were opened.

72. The Donnelly Garment Workers Union had no office or meeting place except in the respondent's plant. The Independent used the respondent's equipment and supplies, such as typewriters, desks, ditto machine, files, safe and bulletin boards.

73. Again, the inseparability of the respondent from the Donnelly Garment Workers Union was conclusive to its employees. This inseparability is clearly set forth in the actions of the supervisory employees referred to herein; the leadership of these supervisory employees in the Donnelly Loyalty League, as well as the Donnelly Garment Workers Union; the use of the respondent's building, equipment and supplies, and the undersigned so finds. The Donnelly Garment Workers Union could perhaps successfully function as a company-dominated organization without a closed-shop contract. Although Mrs. Rece stated to the employees at the meeting of March 18, 1937 that she would not permit anyone to force her employees to join a union, when the agreement of May 27, 1937 was entered into, there was embodied therein a closed-shop provision which met with the instant approval of Mrs. Reed and Rose Todd.

(3) Donnelly Garment Workers Union contracts with the respondent.

74. While Rose Todd's testimony concerning the meeting with Mrs. Reed on April 28, 1937 is indefinite and contradictory, the statements of Mrs. Reed were such that Todd was assured of recognition for the Donnelly Gar- [fol. 672] ment Workers Union. Miss Todd advised Mrs. Reed that the Independent was the representative of her employees and that they desired an agreement with the company. Mrs. Reed advised that an agreement, when properly prepared, would be considered. The evidence with regard to recognition, and particularly whether or not a check was made of the cards, is rather indefinite and conflicting. One witness for the respondent testified that no such check and count was made, while another testified and also Mr. Baty, the plant superintendent, that the cards were carefully checked. Certainly, if Mrs. Reed recognized the Independent on April 28, there could have been no careful check made of 1300 signatures and cards, and Mr. Baty's statement is entitled to no weight.

75. On May 27, 1937, Mrs. Reed was presented with a contract by the officers and representatives of the Independent. There were several other officials of the company present at this meeting on the morning of May 27. Paragraph 9 of the agreement reads as follows:

Closed Shop. The employer agrees that on and after June 5, 1937, no one of its employees shall be retained in its employ who is not a member of this union.

It is well to recall that on March 18, 1937, at a meeting of the Donnelly Loyalty League, Mrs. Reed, president of the respondent, spoke to the employee stating that no one could force her to force her employees to join a union. On April 23, 1937, Rose Todd stated to Fern Sigler: "We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule as always." However, by May 11, 1937, at a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, Rose Todd advised the members that "anybody coming to work for us will join the union immediately. If there is any doubt in their minds about whether or not they want to join our union, then there is some doubt in their minds as to whether or not they want to work here."

76. At a meeting on May 6, 1937, of the officers and representatives of the Independent, Mrs. Reed was in attendance. It was at this meeting that Rose Todd advised Mrs. Reed: "We are working on a working [fol. 673] agreement to submit to you for your consideration concerning hours, wages and working conditions (whichoup to now had been very satisfactory). There is one thing we want to ask you to consider when we submit this plan to you—and that is, we would like to have a closed shop. (Mrs. Reed: 'I understand that is very essential to industrial peace.')" Reed's and Todd's sudden reversal — in their viewpoint on the closed shop — can only be explained by the conclusion that having organized and dominated the Independent the respondent intended to insure its future control of this organization. With a closed shop agreement and the requirement in the Independent bylaws that its members could not join any other labor organization, the purpose of the Independent—"the protection of employees and members of this union from coercion, intimidation, violence or threats of violence in order to force them to join unions organized and dominated by outsiders not employees in this plant . . ."—as expressed in its bylaws would be an accomplished fact, that is the exclusion of all outside unions.

77. On the morning of May 27, according to the minutes of the meeting between the officers and representatives of the Independent, and Mrs. Reed and her assistant, Mrs. Reed said: "I would like to have a little time to look over this agreement. However, I think it is very much in line —there will possibly be one or two little changes." Mrs. Reed further said: "I think the only changes it will be necessary to make will just be legal phraseology. The spirit of this agreement is satisfactory." Rose Todd also stated that the contract was acceptable to the respondent as submitted except for certain minor changes which she was unable to point out.

78. The morning meeting adjourned at approximately 11 a. m., and in the afternoon at about 2:30 or 3:00 o'clock, after Mr. Ingraham, the company attorney, Mrs. Reed and other officials of the company, had considered the agreement, the contract was accepted practically as presented. Mr. Tyler, the attorney for the Independent, explained the contract in this manner to the officers and representatives [fol. 674] of the Independent: "There is no very important change between this document and the one we prepared ourselves a little while ago . . . In this agreement we find it necessary in defining employees not to include executives . . . Also we have added to this agreement that to become a member of this committee you must be employed here for at least one year. This is to eliminate the possibility of someone getting on this committee who is not a true representative of the employees and who may be working here merely to act as a traitor to the company."

79. Mr. Baty's testimony with respect to the agreement under discussion at the meeting of May 27, 1937, is in conflict with the weight of the testimony and should be given no weight. In fact, his entire testimony is at variance with the facts as established by the record, almost to the point of being entirely incredible.

80. On June 22, 1937, the Independent entered into a supplemental agreement with the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company. The supplemental agreement covered primarily wages and hours, and classification of the operators and other employees involving a minimum wage. There was a great deal of testimony with respect to the provisions of the supplemental agreement as to whether it was beneficial to the employees and whether they had gained anything by the execution of the supplemental agreement. It is not necessary to discuss in this report any of the matters embodied in the supplemental agreement as the original contract of May 27, 1937 established as a requirement of employment that the employees of the respondent join the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, thus requiring them to join an organization which was and is sponsored, dominated and supported by the respondent.

81. A contract entered into under these conditions is void and no force or effect, and the undersigned so finds.

82. In the fall of 1937 the respondent and Rose Todd—without any authority from the members or group chairmen — agreed upon a method for the collection of member-[fol. 675] ship dues by means of a check-off. The membership dues of 25 cents per month were paid directly to the Independent during the months of May, June and July 1937. On November 3, 1937, the respondent by its check paid into the organization $735.75. This amount represented the dues deducted from employees' checks for the months of August, September and October. Since this time the respondent has monthly paid to the Donnelly Garment Workers Union the dues deducted. Rose Todd, the Independent's president, and Jack McConaughey, its treasurer, were unable to satisfactorily explain any plan that would enable the Independent to check the amount received. The respondent, in forwarding the check does not provide the organization with the names of those employees for which the deductions were made. The Independent does not have a record of the dues paid by its members and issues no receipts for dues. The employees' checks indicate deductions made for dues, Social Security tax, etc.

C. Termination of employment of Sylvia Hull and May Fike.

83. Sylvia Hull, an operator, was employed by the Donnelly Garment Company for 8 years with one interruption of work of 7 months in 1933. She was employed originally in the spring of 1929 and her employment was terminated April 23, 1937, at which time she was a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. The details of the incidents which occurred on April 23, 1937 when Hull left the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company, has been fully covered in Section 3-A herein.

84. On April 22, 1937, a notice appeared in one of the Kansas City papers that Sylvia Hull had been selected to represent the Donnelly Garment Company employees at the International Convention of the Union in Atlantic City, and the next morning when Sylvia Hull appeared for work she was advised by a girl whose name she could not recall, not to change her clothes and to go to work. As [fol. 676] related in the section hereinbefore referred to, just after the power was turned on, a group of girls came over to her machine and started talking about the Union. Mrs. Allison and Rose Hendricks, instructor and assistant instructor in charge of the section, were present during the entire time of the demonstration.

85. When Sylvia Hull left the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company on April [27], 1937, she left with Mrs. Hyde the telephone number of a neighbor. The testimony is uncontradicted that on April 24, 1937, Mrs. Hyde called the number that was left by Hull and was unable to reach Hull, and further, that on at least one or two other occasions, an effort was made by Mrs. Hyde to reach Hull. No effort was made by the employment department of the respondent to reach Hull by mail or by telegram.

86. The testimony is uncontradicted that Sylvia Hull, after she left the plant on April 23, never thereafter called the plant or applied for reinstatement. Hull testified in the Judge Miller injunction case that she desired to return to her former job at the Donnelly Garment Company under certain conditions. She stated that she would return under union conditions, however, qualifying this statement stating: "I don't know their conditions now."

87. The undersigned finds that Sylvia Hull was not discharged because of her membership or activities in behalf of the Union, but that she was excluded by the respondent from the [the] plant for that reason.

88. This exclusion of Hull from the plant is an unfair labor practice and the normal procedure would be to recommend her reinstatement. In this instance because of events occurring subsequently to April 23, 1937, such a recommendation is unwarranted. When Hull left the plant on April 23, 1937, she gave to Mrs. Hyde the telephone number of a neighbor. On April 24 and on at least one other occasion, the testimony is undisputed that Hyde called the number and although talking to someone was unable to contact Hull. In the Judge Miller Injunction proceedings heard in Kansas City, Missouri in the spring of 1939, Hull testified she wanted her job back, but would not return except under union conditions.

[fol. 677] 89. May Fike was employed by the Donnelly Garment Company some time in 1927 and was, except for a 2 years' period in 1931-1932, employed continuously until May 1937, when she left at her request on a vacation. May Fike joined the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union on March 15, 1937. During April 23, 1937, when Fern Sigler was excluded from the plant, it was unknown to the supervisory employees of the respondent that she, May Fike, was a sister to Fern Sigler. May Fike worked in a section on the same floor and after the demonstration against Fern Sigler, Pearl Atchison, her instructor, spoke to her and advised Fike that she would have to go home because the work in that section was slack. The testimony as to the occurrences on the following day is somewhat conflicting, but the fact is that Fike returned to work and worked during that week. At the end of the week, May Fike, who desired to go on vacation with her husband, requested Ella Mae Hyde, the employment manager, that she be given the privilege of taking her vacation at a time other than the period set for all of the girls in the section, it having been the customary practice of the respondent to grant vacations to all the girls operating in the section at the same time. The evidence is clear that May Fike was advised by Mrs. Hyde that if she did take her vacation, that her return to work would depend upon whether there was any work to be done. From this point on the testimony of other witnesses is at variance. It is not necessary in determining the issue with respect to May Fike to consider any of this conflicting testimony.

90. After May Fike returned from her vacation, she, on several occasions, got in touch with Mrs. Hyde and on each occasion was advised to call again and that if there was work available she would be requested to report.

91. The undersigned finds that May Fike was not discharged for union or concerted activities or her membership in the Union, and further recommends that the complaint as to May Fike be dismissed.

IV. The Effect of the Unfair Labor Practices Upon Commerce.

92. The undersigned finds that the activities of the [fol. 678] respondent in interstate commerce, as set forth in Section III herein, occurring in connection with the operations of the respondent described in Section I herein, have a close, intimate and substantial relation to trade, traffic and commerce among the several States, and tend to lead to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

Conclusions and Recommendations.

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact, the undersigned hereby determines and concludes that:

1. By dominating and interfering with the formation and administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and by contributing support to it, the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices, within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the Act.

2. By discriminating in regard to the tenure of employment of Sylvia Hull and thereby discouraging membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices, within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

3. By interfering with, restraining and coercing its employees in their exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act, the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (1) of the Act.

4. The aforesaid unfair labor practices are unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act.

Wherefore, the undersigned recommends that the respondent, and its officers, agents, successors and assigns:

1. Cease and desist from in any manner:

(a) Dominating or interfering with the formation or administration of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or of any other labor organization of its employees, and contributing support thereto or to any other labor organization;

(b) Discouraging membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, or any other labor [fol. 679] organization of its employees, by discriminating in regard to their hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of their employment;

(c) Recognizing the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with it with respect to grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment and conditions of employment;

(e) Giving effect to its contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or to any modification, continuation, supplement, extension or renewal thereof;

(f) Giving effect to any agreement for the deduction or collection of dues from the wages of its employees on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

(g) Interfering with, restraining or coercing its employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

2. In order to effectuate the policies of the Act, respondent takes the following affirmative action:

(a) Withdraw all recognition from the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as representative of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment or conditions of work, and completely disestablish all relations with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as such representative;

(b) Notify all its employees by individual letters sent through the United States mails; that they are free to join or assist any labor organization for the purpose of collective bargaining with the respondent;

(c) Immediately post notices in conspicuous places throughout all the respondent's departments and sections, [fol. 680] stating (1) that the respondent will cease and desist in the manner aforesaid; (2) that the respondent's employees are free to join or assist any labor organization for the purpose of collective bargaining; (3) that the respondent has withdrawn all recognition from the Donnelly Garment Workers Union and has disestablished all relations including contractual, with said Donnelly Garment Workers Union (4) that the respondent's contract of May 27, 1937, with the Donnelly Garment Workers Union, or any modification, continuation, supplement, extension, or renewal thereof is void and of no effect; and (5) that such notices will remain posted for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days from the date of posting; and

(d) File with the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region within twenty (20) days from the service of this Intermediate Report, a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which the respondent has complied with the foregoing requirements.

It is further recommended that unless within twenty (20) days from the service of this Intermediate Report the respondent notify said Regional Director in writing that it will comply with the foregoing recommendations, the matter be referred forthwith to the National Labor Relations Board, and that said Board issue an order requiring the respondent to take the action aforesaid.

Request for permission to file briefs with or present oral argument before the National Labor Relations Board upon issues raised by any exceptions to this report or on other issues upon which it is desired to file a brief or present oral argument, must be made to the Board, Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C., within twenty (20) days after the date of the order transferring the case to the board, as provided in Article II, Section 32 of the Rules and Regulations, Series 2, effective July 14, 1939.

Dated: Oct. 7, 1939.

Decision and Order.

Statement of the Case.

Upon charges dated August 9, 1938, and amended charges dated April 6, 1939, duly filed by International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, herein called the I. L. G. W. U., the National Labor Relations Board, herein called the Board, through its Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region (Kansas City, Missouri), issued its complaint, dated April 27, 1939, against Donnelly Garment Company, of Kansas City, Missouri, herein called the respondent, alleging that the respondent had engaged in and was engaging in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2), and (3), and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the National Labor Relations Act, 49 Stat. 449, herein called the Act.

With respect to the unfair labor practices the complaint, as amended,[1] alleged in substance (1) that the respondent on or about April 27, 1937, and thereafter, dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of a labor organization among its employees, known as "Donnelly Garment Workers Union," herein called the D. G. W. U., and has given financial and other support to the said organization, inter alia, (a) by encouraging and permitting its supervisory and other employees to promote the organization of and membership in the D. G. W. U. on the respondent's time, property, and at its expense, (b) by forming, on or about February 12, 1935, through its officers and agents, the Donnelly Loyalty League, herein called the League, and continuing to dominate said League until on or about April 27, 1937, for the purpose of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., and (c) by entering into a closed-shop agreement for the purpose of assisting the D. G. W. U. and of depriving its employees of their rights guaranteed under the Act; (2) that the respondent discouraged membership in the I. L. G. W. U. by discharging 2 employees, Sylvia Hull and May Fike, in April 1937, be [fol. 683] cause said employees had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U.; (3) that the respondent by various acts[2] has coerced and restrained its employees from becoming members or continuing membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and has encouraged and compelled membership in the D.

[1]The allegations are summarized from the complaint as amended at the close of the evidence put in by the Board at the hearing. By stipulation, dated July 22, 1939, the amended complaint was further amended to conform it to the proof.

[2]The principal acts enumerated in the amended complaint are: (a) by discharging Fern Sigler in April 1937, (b) by statements of the respondent's president and of certain supervisory employees in March and April 1937, (c) by public statements against the I. L. G. W. U. made by James A. Reed, (d) by permitting a loud-speaker system in its cafeteria to be used as a medium of propaganda in favor of the D. G. W. U. and in opposition to the I. L. G. W. U., (e) by keeping members and meetings of the I. L. G. W. U. under surveillance, (f) by circulating and inducing its employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to the respondent, (g) by permitting certain supervisory and confidential employees to become members and active in the affairs of the D.G.W.U., (h) by discriminating in the allotment of work and by refusing to recall to work certain named employees who were allegedly members of the I. L. G. W. U., (i) by instigating and permitting its employees to engage in a demonstration on April 23, 1937, against certain members of the I. L. G. W. U., and (j) by granting a contract to the D. G. W. U. making membership therein a condition of employment.

G. W. U. It is further alleged that the respondent by entering into a closed-shop contract with the D. G. W. U. has violated Sections 8 (3) and 8 (1) of the Act and that the aforesaid closed-shop contract between the respondent and the D. G. W. U. is void and of no effect.

Upon motions of the respondent and the D. G. W. U. the Trial Examiner dismissed the allegations in the amended complaint relating to certain of the acts of interference, restraint and coercion,[3] but overruled all motions of the respondent and the D. G. W. U. to dismiss the complaint or amended complaint in its entirety.[4] These rulings are hereby affirmed.

The complaint and notices of hearing thereon were duly served upon the respondent, upon the I. L. G. W. U., and upon the D. G. W. U., party to the contract. On May 2, 1939, the Donnelly Garment Workers Union filed its petition to intervene, which was granted, by order of the Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region, in so far as its interests might appear.

Hearings were held before James C. Batten, the Trial Examiner duly designated by the Board, from June 5 to July 15, 1939, inclusive, at Kansas City, Missouri. At the hearing the Board, the respondent, the D. G. W. U. and the I. L. G. W. U. were represented by counsel. Full opportunity to be heard, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to produce evidence bearing upon the issues was afforded to all parties.

[fol. 684] The respondent and the D. G. W. U. filed motions to make the charge and the complaint more definite and certain. The Trial Examiner granted in part the motions referring to the complaint, and ordered counsel for

[3] The portions of the amended complaint dismissed were subparagraphs d, g, g(1), i, k, n, o, and p, of paragraph 11, relating to: (1) public statements of James A. Reed, (2) statements of Alex Green and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, supervisory officials of the respondent, concerning the I.L.G.W.U., (3) use of a loud-speaker system in the respondent's cafeteria to influence its employees regarding their union affiliations, (4) surveillance, (5) discrimination in the allotment of work to employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U., and (6) the refusal of the respondent to recall or assign work to certain named employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U.

[4] These motions were made at various times during the course of the hearing. The Trial Examiner reserved decision and announced the rulings, as stated, in his Intermediate Report.

the Board to make the complaint more definite and certain in specified respects. Counsel for the Board, in compliance with the Trial Examiner's ruling, thereafter moved to strike certain portions of the complaint and to amend it, which motion was granted. At the close of the presentation of evidence by the Board in support of the complaint, said complaint was again amended on motion of counsel for the Board, and service of said amended complaint was acknowledged by the parties. Various other motions by the respondent and the D. G. W. U. to make the complaint more definite and certain were denied and the respondent's contention that portions of the amended complaint were so vague, indefinite, and uncertain that they do not sufficiently apprise the respondent of the acts charged was overruled by the Trial Examiner. These rulings of the Trial Examiner are hereby affirmed.

On June 1, 1939, the respondent filed its answer which was divided into four parts. In Part A the respondent contended that upon ten stated grounds[5] the Board is without jurisdiction to maintain the proceedings. In Part B of its answer the respondent avers that the complaint must be dismissed "for the reason that the Board, its agents and representatives, have exceeded their authority

[5]The stated grounds were: (1) the Board is without jurisdiction to issue a complaint "at the request of an organization which does not represent a single employee in the respondent's plant," * * * and (which) has been found by a United States Federal Court to be engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to force respondent to compel its employees to join said organization against their wills"; (2) the Board has no authority to issue a complaint "for the purpose of attempting to abrogate and nullify contracts between the respondent and the exclusive representative of 100 per cent of its employees when said contracts are entirely satisfactory to both parties thereto and have been determined by a United States Federal Court to contain higher wages and more favorable working conditions than are contained in any contracts entered into between the International Union (I. L. G. W. U.), and other garment manufacturers in this part of the country"; (3) this proceeding deprives the respondent, without a judicial hearing, of its right freely to contract as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; (4) if this proceeding were sustained valid contracts between the respondent and the chosen representatives of its employees would be abrogated without a judicial hearing, due process of law, and a trial by jury, in violation of the Fifth and Seventh Amendments to the Constitution; (5) this proceeding deprives the respondent of its property without due process of law and of its right to trial by jury by providing for the awarding of unearned wages to former employees and for their reinstatement; (6) the amended charge of the I. L. G. W. U. is vague, indefinite and does not state facts sufficient to support a formal complaint; (7) the Board, without authority, by the issuance of its complaint, has prejudged as true the allegations in the amended charge of the I. L. G. W. U.; (8) the complaint is vague, indefinite, insufficient and alleges conclusions instead of facts, [fol. 685] and have demonstrated their bias and prejudice against the respondent, and collusion with the International Union (I. L. G. W. U.) by filing of the complaint herein and by the maintenance of this proceeding in the face of [certain enumerated] facts of which the Board and its representatives have actual knowledge." [6] Part C of the respondent's answer is a petition for investigation and certification of representatives of its employees. The answer, in Part D, admits certain allegations in the complaint concerning the corporate structure and the nature of the business of the respondent, but denies specifically each and every allegation that it has engaged in or is engaging in unfair labor practices.

all in violation of due process of law; (9) the maintenance of this proceeding violates the Fifth Amendment and Article III, Sections 1 and 2 of the Constitution of the United States by permitting the Board to act as investigator, complainant, prosecutor, trier of the facts and judge of the controversy and by denying the respondent a judicial review of the evidence in accordance with the rules of law and evidence; (10) the Board has not conducted an election among the respondent's employees to determine their choice of representatives, which is a condition precedent to a proceeding based on charges of unfair labor practices.

[6] The answer of the respondent alleges as facts of which the Board has knowledge: (1) that the I. L. G. W. U. has engaged in an unlawful conspiracy to injure and destroy the respondent's business by publishing false and libelous reports about the respondent and the working conditions in its plant, by inaugurating and threatening to inaugurate secondary boycotts against the respondent's customers and merchandise, by threatening assaults on the respondent's employees similar to those perpetrated against employees of garment manufacturers in Kansas City, Missouri, St. Louis, Missouri, Dallas, Texas, and Memphis, Tennessee; (2) that the I. L. G. W. U., knowing that the employees had refused to be represented by the I. L. G. W. U., publicly announced a drive against the respondent and its employees, requested by letter containing false statements a conference with the respondent for the purpose of making a closed-shop contract, and began attacks of fraud and violence against three other garment manufacturing companies in Kansas City, Missouri, at the same time announcing that similar acts of violence would be perpetrated against the respondent's employees; (3) that the respondent after receiving a request to enter into a collective bargaining agreement with the D. G. W. U., a voluntary organization of its employees, sought to obtain a determination by the Board of the right of the D. G. W. U. to be the exclusive bargaining agent of its employees, but was advised by representatives of the Board that an application by an employer for certification of representatives could not be granted under the rules of the Board, and thereafter entered into a collective bargaining agreement with the D. G. W. U.; (4) that sometime after July 5, 1937, the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, three judges sitting, temporarily enjoined the I. L. G. W. U. from committing unlawful acts of fraud and violence against the respondent and its employees which decision was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States and by that Court remanded to be heard before a single judge in the District Court; (5) that the Board's Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region (Ernest C. Dunbar) on August 25, 1938, notified the respondent by letter that charges of unfair labor practices had been filed

At the hearing the respondent filed a motion requesting that the complaint be dismissed for the reasons stated in [fol. 686] Parts A and B of its answer.[7] At the same time, the I. L. G. W. U. moved to strike certain portions of the respondent's answer, viz., from Part A of the respondent's answer the allegation that a United States District Court had determined that the contracts beween the respondent and the D. G. W. U. contain higher wages and more favorable working conditions than contracts between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment manufacturers in the area; from Part B of the answer the allegations that the I. L. G. W. U. was engaging in an unlawful conspiracy against the respondent, that it had engaged in violence against employees of other garment manufacturers and had announced that similar acts would be perpetrated against employees of the respondent, that the respondent's contract provided for higher wages and more favorable working conditions than contracts obtained by the efforts of the I. L. G. W. U.; the allegations referring to the find-against the respondent by the I. L. G. W. U. and requested a conference on said charges, and thereafter the respondent requested the said Regional Director for the facts alleged in the charges and for an opportunity to present evidence thereon, but this privilege was denied by the representatives of the Board who threatened to file a complaint and conduct a long hearing unless the respondent acceded to the demands of the I. L. G. W. U. and further asserted that if a hearing were held the Board would find against the respondent; (6) that on or about February 4, 1939, at the request of representatives of the Board, written proposals upon which settlement of the charges might be reached were submitted to each other by the respondent, the D. G. W. U. and the I. L. G. W. U., and that the proposal of the I. L. G. W. U. included an offer to drop all boycott activities against the respondent "so long as the respondent does not recognize any plant union as the bargaining representative of its employees," acceptance of which proposal by the respondent would have compelled it to violate the terms of the National Labor Relations Act; (7) that the hearing on the remanded injunction suit was begun in the United States District Court on March 22, 1939, at the close of which a permanent injunction against the I. L. G. W. U. was granted pursuant to the respondent's petition, and that representatives of the Board were in constant attendance at the said hearing and consulted frequently with representatives of the I. L. G. W. U. during the examination of the respondent's witnesses, thus demonstrating that the Board assisted and is assisting the I. L. G. W. U. in its conspiracy against the respondent and is maintaining the proceedings herein in violation of any authority vested in the Board by the Act.

[7] Part B of the respondent's answer includes the findings of fact and conclusions of law of the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri in an injunction suit brought by the respondent against the I. L. G. W. U. (See infra, note 10.) In its brief and at the oral argument the respondent sets forth as a reason for dismissal of this proceeding the fact that the above-named District Court had found that the respondent's employees acting unanimously had voluntarily formed the D. G. W. U. and at all times freely administered and maintained ings and decrees of the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, the averment that the I. L. G. W. U. admitted that the respondent's employees did not desire to be represented by the I. L. G. W. U., the allegations regarding the assistance of the Board's representatives in the alleged conspiracy of the I. L. G. W. U. against the respondent; from Part D the averments that the I. L. G. W. U. sought closed-shop agreements even when it represented only a few or none of the employees of the company with whom it sought such agreements. The reasons stated as grounds for striking these portions of the answer are that they are immaterial to the issues before the Board; that the Board is not bound by the findings of other judicial tribunals, that the "clean hands" doctrine of equity does not apply to proceedings before the Board, that these portions of the answer constitute an attempt by the respondent to try [fol. 687] before the Board the Federal District Court injunction suit between the respondent and the I. L. G. W. U., and that under the Act the Board is not empowered to take cognizance of alleged law violation, coercion, or intimidation on the part of the complaining union.

The Trial Examiner took these motions under advisement and requested the respondent to submit a written statement of the evidence it would offer to prove the averments set forth in Parts A and B of the answer and any other parts of the answer referred to in the motion to strike. The respondent submitted no statement of evidence in support of Part A of its answer except as to the

it. This finding of fact is not binding upon the Board and does not preclude an independent finding by the Board on this issue. Section 10 (a) of the Act provides:

> The Board is empowered . . . to prevent any person from engaging in any unfair labor practice (listed in section 8) affecting commerce. This power shall be exclusive, and shall not be affected by any other means of adjustment or prevention that has been or may be established by agreement, code, law, or otherwise. paragraph relating to the wages and working conditions provided for in contracts entered into between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment manufacturers. On Part B of the answer the respondent submitted certain parts of the transcripts of testimony taken in an N. R. A. hearing, in which it was also the respondent and the I. L. G. W. U. the charging union, and in the United States District Court injunction suit between the respondent and the I. L. G. W. U. The Trial Examiner refused the proffered evidence, granted the motion of the I. L. G. W. U. to strike, denied the request of the respondent for dismissal of the complaint based on Part A of the answer, and refused to receive the respondent's petition for investigation and certification of representatives as set forth in Part C of its answer. The Board has reviewed these rulings of the Trial Examiner and they are hereby affirmed.

Prior to the commencement of the hearing, the D. G. W. U. filed a motion requesting that the Board conduct an election among the respondent's employees to determine whether they desired to be represented by the D. G. W. U. or by the I. L. G. W. U., and that the hearing be postponed until the outcome of such election had been announced. Thereafter, on May 17 and June 3, 1939, the D. G. W. U. filed a petition and amended petition, respectively for investigation and certification of representatives. The Trial Examiner denied the motion and petitions, which rulings are hereby affirmed. The D. G. W. U. also filed an answer denying all the allegations relating to the unfair labor practices of the respondent, but admitting the existence of a closed-shop agreement between the respondent and the D. G. W. U.

At the hearing the Trial Examiner excluded certain evidence offered by the respondent and the D. G. W. U., in some instances on the ground that it was irrelevant or immaterial and in others that it was cumulative. He permitted the parties to submit written offers of this proof. These rejected offers of proof have been considered by the Board and for reasons hereinafter stated the rulings of the Trial Examiner rejecting said offers are hereby affirmed. By [fol. 688] stipulation the parties placed in evidence, subject to the privilege of making objections thereto on the grounds of relevance, materiality, hearsay character, or occurrence prior to the passage of the Act, certain portions of the record in a proceeding conducted in 1935 under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act[8] in which the respondent was similarly charged by the I. L. G. W. U. with interference with the rights of its employees to organize,[9] and of the record in the injunction suit brought by the respondent against the I. L. G. W. U., heard in the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri before the United States District Judge Andrew Miller.[10] The Trial Examiner permitted these partial transcripts of testimony to be introduced in the record,[11] and overruled all objections directed to the relevancy, materiality, and competency of certain questions and answers contained therein. He ruled, however, that the admission of such evidence was "not intended to enlarge the issues as defined by the pleadings or to reverse rulings heretofore made with respect to the introduction of evidence upon certain subjects." After the close of the hearing the respondent and the D. G. W. U. filed motions requesting the Trial Examiner to clarify his ruling, alleging that it was unfair, prejudicial, and denied them due process of law. The Trial Examiner denied these motions. We have examined the evidence contained in these partial transcripts in the light of the Trial Examiner's other rulings on the admission and exclusion of evidence[12] and find no prejudicial error in his denial of these motions. His denial of said motions is hereby affirmed.

[11] Except as to the offer of the respondent to prove Part B of its answer, which we have already found above to be irrelevant to the issues drawn by the present complaint.

[12] It is manifest that the Trial Examiner's ruling excludes any evidence in these partial transcripts relating, inter alia, (1) to contracts between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment manufacturers, (2) to the claim of the respondent that it pays higher wages and maintains better working conditions than do other garment manufacturers, (3) to strikes and violence allegedly fomented by the I. L. G. W. U. at other garment factories, (4) to the al-

The respondent also filed with the Trial Examiner after the close of the hearing a motion for leave to file and make part of the record a copy of its petition for investigation and certification of the representatives of its employees, which had previously been filed with the Board's Acting Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region and rejected [fol. 689] by him. The motion was denied by the Trial Examiner and his ruling is hereby affirmed.

During the course of the hearing, the Trial Examiner made numerous rulings on motions and on objections to the admission of evidence. The Board has reviewed the rulings of the Trial Examiner and finds that no prejudicial errors were committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed.

At the conclusion of the hearing the parties were afforded an opportunity to argue orally before the Trial Examiner and were advised that they might file briefs with him. The parties did not avail themselves of the opportunity to argue orally before the Examiner, but filed memorandum briefs.

On October 11, 1939, the Trial Examiner filed his Intermediate Report, finding that the respondent had engaged in and was engaging in unfair labor practices affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 8 (1), (2) and (3)[13] and Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act. He further found that May Fike had not been discriminatorily discharged. He recommended inter alia, that the respondent cease and desist from the unfair labor practices which it was found to have engaged in, withdraw all recognition and completely disestablish the Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of its employees for the purposes of collective bargaining, cease and desist from giving effect to its contracts and check-off agreement with said Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and that the allegations of the complaint as to May Fike be dismissed.

leged conspiracy of the I. L. G. W. U. against the respondent, (5) to testimony of the respondent's employees that they were not interfered with, restrained, or coerced by the respondent in their choice of the D. G. W. U. or their rejection of the I. L. G. W. U., and that the D. G. W. U. was formed by the employees because of the strikes and violence occurring at other garment factories which the I. L. G. W. U. was attempting to organize.

[13] He found that the discharge of Sylvia Hull was discriminatory within the meaning of the Act but did not recommend reinstatement or back pay for her for reasons discussed in Section D, infra.

On October 12, 1939, the case was transferred from the Regional Office of the Seventeenth Region to the Board in Washington, D. C., and continued before the Board, pursuant to Article II, Section 32, of National Labor Relations Board Rules and Regulations—Series 2.

At the request of the parties the time allowed for filing exceptions to the Intermediate Report and to all parts of the record was extended by the Board from November 1 to December 1, 1939, and on that date exceptions were filed by the respondent, the D. G. W. U., and the I. L. G. W. U. Briefs were thereafter filed by the same parties, which have been given due consideration by the Board.

On January 9, 1940, a hearing for the purpose of oral argument was conducted before the Board in Washington, D. C., at which the respondent, the D. G. W. U., and the I. L. G. W. U. appeared.

The Board has considered the exceptions to the Intermediate Report and to all parts of the record and, save [fol. 690] as consistent with the findings, conclusions, and order set forth below, finds them to be without merit.

Upon the entire record in the case, the Board makes the following:

Findings of Fact.

I. The Business of the Respondent.[14]

The Donnelly Garment Company is a Missouri corporation with its principal office and factory located at Kansas City, Missouri. It is engaged in the business of designing, manufacturing, selling, and distributing ladies' garments, under the trade name of "Nelly Don." The respondent, in the course of its business, purchases over 99 per cent of its raw materials—consisting chiefly of cotton, wool acetate, rayon, and linen—in States other than the State of Missouri. In the years 1937 and 1938, the respondent's sales amounted to more than $4,000,000 per year. Ninety-six per cent of the garments designed, manufactured, and sold were caused by the respondent to be transported and distributed to customers in States other than the State of Missouri.

[14]The findings in this section are based in part on a stipulation of facts signed by all parties.

Officers of the rspondent company are: Nell Donnelly (Mrs. James A.) Reed, president and treasurer; Alex C. Green, vice president; R. J. Ingraham, secretary. The principal departments of the respondent and the persons in charge of them are: production, Lee Baty; merchandising, retail store, and receiving, Elizabeth Reeves; office manager, J. B. Bachofer; employment manager, Ella Mae Hyde.[15]

During the peak production periods of the year, the respondent employs more than 1200 persons.

The parties stipulated and agreed that the operations of the respondent have a close, intimate, and substantial relationship to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several States and that the respondent is engaged in commerce within the meaning of Section 2 (6) and (7) of the Act.

II. The Organizations Involved.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is an unaffiliated labor organization maintaining organizational offices in many States. It admits to membership the plant employees of the respondent.

Donnelly Garment Workers Union is an unaffiliated labor organization. According to its bylaws, it admits to membership all employees of the respondent.

[fol. 691] III. The Unfair Labor Practices.

A. Events prior to the effective date of the Act

The I. L. G. W. U. made its initial efforts to organize employees of the respondent in 1934 when it established a regional office in Kansas City, Missouri. On March 15, 1934, an open meeting of the I. L. G. W. U. was held in Musicians' Hall in Kansas City to which all employees of the respondent were invited. Few of the operators (i. e., production employees paid at piece-work rates) attended, but a number of the respondent's officials, supervisors, and instructors were present. Soon after, several of the respondent's employees, including Glynn Brooks Yarnell,[16] who had been an operator in the respondent's plant since December 1924, made application for membership in the I. L. G. W. U. In June 1934 Mrs. Yarnell held a dinner at her home attended by 12 or 13 of her fellow employees. At this meeting the girls discussed the advisability of joining the I. L. G. W. U. and of forming a local branch. Glynn Brooks Yarnell was discharged in July 1934. Within a few months all except one of the girls who had attended the dinner were either laid off or discharged by the respondent.[17]

On December 6, 1934, the I. L. G. W. U. filed a charge against the respondent under Section 7 (a) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, alleging that eight operators had been laid off because they had joined the I. L. G. W. U. Before proceedings were completed and a decision issued, the National Industrial Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The record[18] establishes that the respondent, through its supervisory employees, openly and actively resisted the initial organizational activities of the I. L. G. W. U. In 1934 Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, who was then production manager, had expressed the opposition of the respondent to the I. L. G. W. U. She made a practice of questioning employees concerning their relations with the I. L. G. W. U. She criticized several operators for joining or applying for membership in the I. L. G. W. U. She told various employees that they had been "listening too much to somebody outside," that "Donnelly's don't belong to the union (I. L. G. W. U.) and they never will," that she had thought they "had [16]The complaint, exhibits, and transcript designate this employee as Glynn Brooks. At the close of the hearing the entire record was amended to designate her Glynn Brooks Yarnell.

[17]We make no findings with respect to the reasons for these discharges which occurred prior to the effective date of the Act and which are not in issue herein.

[18]Evidence of the activities of the respondent in 1934 is contained in the partial transcript of testimony from the N. R. A. hearing conducted early in 1935, which transcript was introduced in this proceeding pursuant to a stipulation of the parties.

better sense" than to join the I. L. G. W. U., and that they [fol. 692] had been misled is doing so.[19] There is abundant testimony, also, that the respondent's instructors, who were in charge of the operators and at that time admittedly had authority to recommend lay-offs and dismissals, warned the operators to "let the International (I. L. G. W. U.) alone" if they expected to keep their jobs. In a conversation with an employee during 1934, Mrs. Allison, an instructor, labeled I. L. G. W. U. leaders "dirty foreigners,"[20] and Grace Gnotta,[21] also an instructor, referred to those who had joined that organization as the "scum" of the respondent's employees.

The dominant and often reiterated note in the respondent's anti-union campaign during this period was a plea to the employees to be loyal to Mrs. Nell Donnelly Reed, president of the respondent. For example, the record reveals that Mrs. Allison, one of the instructors, forbade a discussion of unionism in the plant, and added: "You should have more respect for your employer than to talk unionism in here." Mrs. Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store,[22] talked to Virginia Stroup, an operator in one of the sewing sections who had joined the I. L. G. W. U., and reminded her that the firm had been good to her by continuing to employ her during the "hard months" and that in return Mrs. Stroup owed it to the Company to be fairer than to join the I. L. G. W. U. Mrs. Gray also said that she "would hate to think that old David Dubinsky would come in here and tell Mrs. Donnelly (Reed) what to do." The testimony of May Fike is undenied that in February 1935 or thereabouts,

[19]Mrs. Reeves denied saying that they had been misled, but did not deny the other quoted remarks attributed to her. She admitted having talked to these employees about their relationship to the I. L. G. W. U. and, in many instances was unable to remember whether she had made the statements that other witnesses testified to. We are convinced from the record that Mrs. Reeves engaged in the activities herein described and made the remarks we have quoted.

[20]Mrs. Allison denied ever having discussed the I. L. G. W. U. with Lillian Wales, the operator who testified concerning this remark. However, the record contains so many instances of anti-union statements attributed by other employees to Mrs. Allison that we are unable to accept her general denial in this instance, and accept as true the statement of Lillian Wales.

[21]In parts of the record this employee is referred to as Grace Gonotte.

[22]See infra.

while the I. L. G. W. U. drive was being pressed, employees in groups of 10 were sent by their instructors to Mrs. Reeves' office, where Mrs. Reeves talked to them about loyalty to the respondent. Also during this period employees were told that Mrs. Reed had built up the business of the respondent in order to keep them supplied with work and that an outside labor organization should not be allowed to come in to run it.

On or about December 12, 1934, Mrs. Reeves sent for Virginia Stroup, one of the respondent's employees who had obtained a charter for a local branch of the I. L. G. W. U. Mrs. Stroup told Mrs. Reeves that she was the shop chairman for the I. L. G. W. U. and that it was her duty to determine why employees who were members of [fol. 693] the I. L. G. W. U. were laid off. Mrs. Reeves stated that she did not intend to give Mrs. Stroup any information and immediately instructed Mrs. Hyde, the respondent's employment manager who was present at the interview, not to release any such information, for "that is none of Virginia's business." A short time later, when Mrs. Stroup attempted to negotiate with the respondent in regard to a grievance of Pauline Lutz, an employee who was a member of the I. L. G. W. U., the respondent unequivocally refused to deal with Mrs. Stroup. At the conference, Mrs. Reeves criticized Mrs. Stroup's production work, told her that she was wasting too much time away from her machine talking to other employees, and threatened her with dismissal unless she increased her piece-work production to a point where it met the minimum wage rate set by the N. R. A. code in effect at that time. The respondent stood firm on its position not to deal with the I. L. G. W. U. and Mrs. Stroup was entirely unsuccessful in adjusting the grievance of Pauline Lutz or of any other of the respondent's employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U.[23] A few weeks later, the Kansas City office of the I. L. G. W. U. attempted to open negotiations with the respondent. On January 25, 1935, Meyer Perlstein, regional director of the I. L. G. W. U., and Virginia Stroup joined in addressing a letter to the respondent, stating that the I. L. G. W. U. had granted a charter to a group of the respondent's workers who had applied therefor. The letter asserted that these employees, since joining the I. L. G. W. U., had suffered discrimination and had been threatened with discharge unless they should abandon their union affiliation. In conclusion, the respondent was requested to grant the I. L. G. W. U. an opportunity to present the views of labor and to adjust peaceably employer-employee differences. The record does not indicate whether or not the respondent made any reply to this letter.

Within a week or two after the receipt of the I. L. G. W. U.'s letter, the respondent, acting through certain of its supervisory employees, commenced the formation of an organization among its employees to be known as the "Nelly Don Loyalty League." Mrs. Martha Gray, in charge of the respondent's outlet store,[24] and Mrs. Strickland, an employee in the pattern-making department,[25] took the lead in forming the League. On February 5, 1935, plans were laid at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Gray, which was attended by approximately 46 employees representing the various divisions of the respondent's factory. Memberships for the League were solicited in the plant during working hours by circulation among [fol. 694] the employees of membership pledge cards[26] and a statement which declared that the employees recognized the generous treatment received from Mrs. Reed, the respondent's president, and would resist the efforts of outside labor organizations to negotiate with the respondent on their behalf.[27]

[24]See infra.

[25]The record does not disclose the details of Mrs. Strickland's employment except that she received a salary of $80.00 per week, which was a salary higher than that received by any other employee in the pattern department.

[26]The pledge cards are as follows:

> I, the undersigned, hereby pledge myself to become a member of the Nelly Don Loyalty League to take part in the activities and to support said league to the best of my ability.
> I have signed this pledge of my own free will without coersion [sic] or intimidation of any kind.

[27]The full statement follows:

> The employees of the Donnelly Garment Company hereby associate themselves under the name of the "Nelly Don Loyalty League."

In contrast to the hostility with which it met the advent of the I. L. G. W. U. in the plant; the respondent not only interposed no obstacles to the organization of the Loyalty League, but also by affirmative assistance facilitated its progress. In some sections of the plant the instructors in charge of the sections assisted with the circulation of these documents and told the employees to sign them. In other areas of the factory Mrs. Gray, accompanied by Mrs. Strickland, distributed the League membership cards. Virginia Stroup, who at that time was president of the local branch of the I. L. G. W. U.,[28] was told by Mrs. Strickland, in the presence of Mrs. Gray whom we find hereinafter to be a supervisory employee of the respondent, that the cards should be signed by the employees in order to protect their jobs, because Mrs. Reed would close the plant before she would allow it to become a union shop. At the same time, Mrs. Stroup was refused a membership card because she belonged to "another organization."

Virtually all the respondent's supervisors, except Mrs. James A. Reed, president and principal owner, Lee Baty, production superintendent,[29] and perhaps Mrs. Anna

We protest against and will resist all attempts of outside interference with the business of said company, or with our relations to the company as employees.

We recognize the fact that for many years this company has paid wages far in advance of the wages paid in similar factories. That our working conditions are good; that we have had practically continuous employment throughout the year which is almost unknown in this line of industry; that we have had generous and fair treatment from Nelly Don (Mrs. Reed), President of the company, and we repose our confidence in her rather than in professional agitators who are sent here to create discontent among the employees of the company.

This document was received as an exhibit by the Trial Examiner subject to further identification, after the witness, Rose Todd, stated when asked if it was sent out with the formation of the Loyalty League: "Yes, something similar to that, as near as I can tell it would be a copy." Subsequently, May Fike identified the document as the statement which was circulated among the operators at the time of the formation of the League. The record does not indicate that the document was thereafter unqualifiedly received in evidence by the Trial Examiner. In view of the testimony of these two witnesses, we hereby rule that the document was properly identified and it is hereby received in evidence.

[28] This was the local chartered by the International to admit employees of the respondent to the membership.

[29] At the time the League was organized in February, 1935, Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves was production manager. Mr. Baty did not succeed her until June 1935. Mrs. Reeves was a member of the League.

[fol. 695] Wherry, factory manager, were members of the League. Mrs. Reeves, production manager at that time, Dewey Atchison, her assistant, and Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, employment manager, were among the supervisory officials who testified that they were members of the League. The membership included all instructors and other department heads in the plant. Its first two presidents were supervisory employees of the respondent. Herbert Mutchler,[30] who was no longer in the employ of the respondent at the time of the hearing in this proceeding, was the first president of the League and continued in office until early in 1937. He was succeeded by Rose Todd, who held office until after she was elected General Chairman of the D. G. W. U. in April 1937.[31]

The League has no constitution or bylaws and no regular meeting dates; nor do its members pay dues. Since its inception it has sponsored a number of social activities, such as picnics and dances, but as will subsequently appear its principal energies have been devoted to obstructing and interfering with the efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize the respondent's employees.

The events recited above convince us that prior to the effective date of the Act the respondent's supervisors expressed to employees the uncompromising hostility of the respondent toward all labor unions and particularly toward the I. L. G. W. U. Employees were made fully aware of their employer's attitude and those who applied for membership or joined the I. L. G. W. U. did so secretly. During this period it was made plain to the employees by their supervisors that loyalty to the respondent meant renunciation of unionism. In February 1935, when the I. L. G. W. U. requested a conference on behalf of those employees who had joined that organization, the respondent's agents immediately organized the Loyalty League for the purpose of preventing other employees from affili-

[30] The Trial Examiner found Herbert Mutchler was a supervisory employee. The record shows that Mutchler formerly held the position occupied by Rose Todd at the time of the hearing in this proceeding. Since we find in Section C 1, infra, that Rose Todd is a supervisory employee, we herewith make the same finding as to Mutchler.

[31] The formation of the D. G. W. U. is discussed in detail in Section C, infra.

ating with the I. L. G. W. U. The membership and influence of management representatives in the Loyalty League enabled the respondent to foster and organize employee resistance to outside unions.

The respondent contends that Mrs. Martha Gray, who "instigated" the League and at whose home the organizers met, is not a supervisory employee in charge of the outlet store, but is no more than the senior clerk in point of service, and that therefore the responsibility for her acts cannot be attributed to the respondent. We cannot agree with this contention. In the first place, we believe that the evidence establishes that Mrs. Gray is the manager of the store. The store, which is located in the same building with the respondent's factory, is oper- [fol. 696] ated to dispose of remnants, discontinued lines of merchandise and the like. It employs approximately 6 saleswomen. Rose Todd, who had been an employee of the respondent for a number of years, and whom we find infra to be a supervisory employee, stated when asked about Mrs. Gray's relation to the outlet store: "I assume you would say that she is in charge." Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, who at the time of the hearing was in charge of the respondent's merchandising department, testified that Mrs. Gray generally reported to her. Since Mrs. Reeves does not personally operate the outlet store, it is reasonable to believe that the duty was left to Mrs. Gray and that it was matters pertaining to the management of the store which she reported to Mrs. Reeves. That the employees regarded Mrs. Gray as in charge of the outlet store is evidenced by the publication of the following announcement in the N. D. A. A. News, a news sheet published by an athletic association composed of employees:

Mrs. Gray Announces
Spring and Wool Remnants
Closeouts

Also Virginia Stroup, one of the respondent's operators at the time the League was organized, considered Mrs. Gray an "executive" of the respondent. Mrs. Gray testified, but did not describe the nature of her duties. While it is true that she does not have authority to hire or discharge the other clerks in the store, we are convinced from the evidence that Mrs. Gray directs the work of these salespeople and is responsible for the store. On the basis the above-stated facts we find that Mrs. Gray is the manager of the respondent's outlet store, and as such is a supervisory employee for whose statements and acts relating to labor policies the respondent is responsible. Moreover, the respondent is responsible for the acts of Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Strickland, and others who assisted them in bringing the Loyalty League into existence, inasmuch as the respondent's officials ratified and adopted their acts by joining and participating in the League and by permitting those individuals and instructors who were supervisory employees to circulate pledge cards and canvass for membership on company time and property, as we have hereinabove found. Membership of such officials as the employment manager, the production and merchandise manager, assistant manager, instructors, and other supervisors with authority to discipline and to recommend discharges and lay-offs, coupled with their patent support, must inevitably have convinced the rank and file of the respondent's employees that here was an organization approved by the respondent to which they must give their support, and that they must correspondingly refrain from joining or assisting the I. L. G. W. U. which the League so consistently opposed.

[fol. 697] The respondent contends that since the above-related activities took place prior to July 5, 1935, the effective date of the Act, they are entirely irrelevant to the issues in this proceeding and that all evidence thereof should have been excluded. This contention fails to recognize that the Loyalty League continued in existence after the effective date of the Act, and was a useful instrument in the formation of the D. G. W. U., hereinafter discussed. Furthermore, evidence of an employer's attitude and conduct with respect to labor unions for a reasonable period before the effective date of the Act has often been admitted in evidence for the purpose of evaluating the significance of events occurring after such date.[32]

Having been inspired by the respondent and fully supported by its officials from its inception, we conclude and find that the League was dominated and controlled by the respondent and that prior to the effective date of the Act the respondent used it to prevent its employees from joining the I. L. G. W. U. or any other outside labor organization.[33]

B. Interference, restraint, and coercion prior to April 27, 1937.

After the National Industrial Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional [34] in 1935, and the complaint issued against the respondent under Section 7 (a) of that Act was dismissed, the I. L. G. W. U. continued to some degree its efforts to enroll the respondent's employees as members but it was not until early in 1937 that an intensive campaign was renewed. On February 26, 1937, there appeared in the Kansas City Star, a daily newspaper published in Kansas City, Missouri, an article stating that the I. L. G. W. U. had announced a campaign to organize the respondent's employees and had appropriated a large sum of money to be spent in a drive for recognition of the I. L. G. W. U. as the collective bargaining agent in the respondent's plant.[35]

[fol. 698] A few days thereafter, on March 2, 1937, three members of the League [36] circulated among the factory and office employees of the respondent a loyalty pledge, which [33] See infra for further findings concerning the League after the effective date of the Act. As to the events described in Section A, above, we make no findings of unfair labor practices, since they occurred prior to the effective date of the Act.

[34] See A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, declaring unconstitutional 48 Stat. 195, et seq.

[35] Meyer Perlstein, regional director of the I. L. G. W. U., was quoted in the article as saying: "We are going to send a letter to the Donnelly Garment Company within a week suggesting a conference to establish collective bargaining on the question of wages and working hours. If the firm refuses, we'll go to the consuming public of the country and advise buyers of the wages and hours prevailing there now. . . . Within a year we'll have it. [the respondent's plant] completely organized. As soon as we have enough members, we'll call a strike. This will be in addition to carrying our side to the consumers."

[36] Mary Sprofera and Inez Warren, shipping clerks, and Pauline Schartzer, an office employee.

declared that the signers refused to "acknowledge any union labor organization."[37]

The pledge was circulated in the plant during working hours and in some, if not all, of the production sections it was passed from person to person for signature, at the instance of the instructors, while the machines were in operation. It was signed by some 1125 employees—practically all of the respondent's factory and office employees except the instructors who were not asked to sign it in the first instance.[38] When the pledge was presented to Mrs. Reed at her house on the afternoon of March 2, she expressed her pleasure at receiving such a statement, and requested that the signatures of the instructors be added. This was done on March 5. Thus, the respondent not only ratified that action but by express request had it circulated among other employees.

The respondent contends that it cannot be held liable for commission of an unfair labor practice in connection with the circulation of the pledge since the three employees who initiated the pledge had no supervisory authority and circulated it without instructions or suggestions of the management. We reject this contention and find that the respondent by permitting three employees openly to circulate the loyalty pledge in the plant during working hours with the assistance of instructors, and by requesting that additional signatures be secured, gave approval and lent assistance and encouragement to the solicitation of its employees to pledge themselves not to join the I. L. G. W. U., and thereby interfered with, restrained and coerced them in the free choice of a collective bargaining agent.[39]

[37] The text of the pledge: "We, the undersigners [sic], as members of the Donnelly Garment Co. wish to make it known that we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with this organization, and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed." The girls who circulated the pledge stated that they devised the pledge in answer to the announcement of the I. L. G. W. U.

[38] The record does not explain the original omission of the instructors as signatories to the petition.

[39] It may be noted that the circulation of this loyalty pledge, coincidental with the renewed organizational activities of the I. L. G. W. U. among the respondent's employees, bears striking similarity to the circulation of the Loyalty League membership cards and anti-union statements by the respondent 2 years earlier, soon after the I. L. G. W. U. had initiated its campaign among the employees. In each instance, the pleas to the employees to be loyal to the respondent and to resist outside interference, appeared at crucial junctures in the campaign of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize the respondent's employees.

On March 6, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post carried an article stating that David Dubinsky, president of the I. L. G. W. U., at a meeting of 700 union members in Kansas City, had officially launched a movement to organize employees of the respondent company. This announcement [fol. 699] was followed by a letter to the respondent from Wave Tobin, manager of the Kansas City Joint Board of the I. L. G. W. U., under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a bargaining conference between the I. L. G. W. U. and representatives of the respondent.[40]

Concurrently with the renewed organizational campaign of the I. L. G. W. U. the League was aroused to new activity.[40a] A meeting of all the respondent's employees took place on the afternoon of March 18, 1937, in the building housing the respondent's plant.[41] The employees were notified orally during the working day by their instructors or other supervisory employees of the respondent that the meeting was to take place. The record affirmatively shows that among the supervisory employees who attended was Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, the respondent's employment manager, and the instructors. It is not denied by the respondent, and we find, that this meeting was generally attended by supervisory employees.

[40]In the meantime, the record indicates that the respondent's employees had become alarmed by hearing reports that at other garment factories in the Kansas City area, where the I. L. G. W. U. was conducting organizational campaigns, clashes had occurred involving picketers, non-striking workers, and local police. The Trial Examiner excluded evidence of these incidents, occurring elsewhere than at the respondent's plant and not involving the respondent's employees, and we have affirmed his ruling. During the course of the hearing the Trial Examiner stated that he would permit testimony of threats of violence made directly to employees of the respondent by representatives of the I. L. G. W. U. Some of the respondent's employees discussed the reports and expressed fear that an organizational campaign at the respondent's plant might precipitate similar strikes and violence.

[40a]During the 2 years which intervened between the formation of the League and the date of this renewed activity, there is no evidence that its character had been altered in any way. Its original purpose was never disavowed and officials and supervisors of the respondent continued to hold membership therein.

[41]The meeting was held on the second floor of the building in which the respondent's plant was located. However, the respondent on March 18, 1937, did not have the second floor under lease.

Rose Todd, president of the League, called the meeting and presided. Chairs for the meeting were rented from the Kansas City Chair Rental Company in the name of the League. A committee appointed at this meeting to act on behalf of the employees thereafter employed attorneys whose retainer fee was paid by a check of the Loyalty League. From these facts we conclude, despite the denial of Rose Todd,[42] that the gathering was a meeting of the respondent dominated Loyalty League.

Rose Todd made certain opening remarks,[43] after which Mrs. Reed was requested to come in and address the employees. Mrs. Reed brought with her the letter which the respondent had received from the I. L. G. W. U. under date of March 9, 1937, requesting a conference, which letter was read to the employees. Mrs. Reed thereupon [fol. 700] made an extemporaneous talk. She expressed her pleasure at receiving the loyalty pledge which had been presented to her on March 2, told the employees that the respondent corporation was an institution to be proud of, that it had taken care of its employees by keeping the plant in operation during the depression, and that she intended to continue to run the business. Then she spoke of threats of violence that the I. L. G. W. U. was alleged to have made against the employees of the company, and promised protection against such violence. Finally, she directed her remarks to the question of unionization of the plant. What she said at this point is a matter of dispute. The Board's witnesses testified that Mrs. Reed stated that she would close her factory before she would permit it to be unionized and that she would not allow "Dubinsky or any other 'ski' to tell her how to run her business." According to the respondent's version,[44] Mrs. Reed stated ". . . neither Dubinsky or any other buttinsky is going to intimidate me or the company into forcing you to join the [42] At the hearing Rose Todd testified that the meeting was a "spontaneous" gathering of the employees to discuss what means might be adopted to protect the respondent's employees against anticipated violence in connection with the I. L. G. W. U.'s projected organizational campaign.

[43] She was unable to recall what she said at that time.

[44] The respondent placed in evidence a purported transcript of Mrs. Reed's talk. The circumstances surrounding the production in this proceeding of a transcript of Mrs. Reed's remarks are somewhat peculiar. Mrs. Frances International Union (I. L. G. W. U.) against your will." The respondent's version is corroborated by Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde, employment manager, by Rose Todd, who also denied that Mrs. Reed said there would be no union in her plant, and by several other witnesses. The respondent also offered to put on the stand about 1,000 of its employees who would testify that Mrs. Reed's version of what she said was correct and would deny that she said she would not permit the I. L. G. W. U. to come into her plant. The D. G. W. U. likewise offered to call as witnesses a large number of employees who would deny that Mrs. Reed said at the March 18 meeting that she would not permit members of the I. L. G. W. U. to work in the Donnelly plant. These offers were rejected by the Trial Examiner at the hearing because the testimony was cumulative in character. We have affirmed these rulings.

Strine, Mrs. Reed's secretary, testified that she made the transcript on the instruction of Mrs. Reed. The tenor of Mrs. Reed's remarks at the March 18 meeting was the subject of testimony in the injunction suit brought by the respondent against the I. L. G. W. U. in the United States District Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri. In that suit, Mrs. Reed filed an affidavit stating the substance of what she claims to have said at the March 18 meeting, and her secretary, Frances Strine, made three affidavits concerning Mrs. Reed's appearance at the meeting. Yet in none of the affidavits is any mention made of the taking of a transcript of the speech. Mrs. Reed herself testified in rebuttal in the District Court suit and did not tell of it. Frances Strine stated she had not seen the copy placed in evidence between the day it was transcribed and the day she identified it at the hearing. At the oral argument before the Board in Washington the respondent stated in explanation of its failure to produce the transcript of Mrs. Reed's speech in the injunction suit before Judge Miller that Mrs. Reed's testimony in rebuttal on this matter was met by objections which were sustained by the trial judge and that the evidence offered by the I. L. G. W. U. was so weak and discredited that it was unnecessary to answer it in detail by introducing the transcript.

employees. Through the presence of supervisors and the sponsorship of the League, which had for its purpose the exclusion of outside union organizations from the plant, the employees must inevitably have been aware of the anti-union character of the meeting, and could not have been free to express their independent views. It may be true, as the respondent contends, that many of them feared the alleged threats of the I. L. G. W. U., but instead of permitting the employees to decide for themselves what attitude they would adopt with regard to the I. L. G. W. U., the respondent seized upon such fears as may have existed to build up and strengthen a militant employee opposition toward that labor organization. Mrs. Reed painted the I. L. G. W. U. as the common enemy of both the respondent and its employees, and promised the employees the respondent's protection and assistance against that organization. Mrs. Reed disparagingly labeled David Dubinsky, president of the I. L. G. W. U., a "buttinsky," who was seeking to force the respondent's employees to join that union. She promised that no employee would be compelled to join any union against his will.[40] While Mrs. Reed sought to appear as the disinterested defender of the respondent's employees in the exercise of their right to join or not to join a labor organization, against the background of the respondent's widely publicized hostility to the I. L. G. W. U. and the past repeated reminders to employees that loyalty to the respondent demanded repudiation of outside union organizations, we think that Mrs. Reed's remarks made it plain that the respondent's attitude toward unionization had not changed and that membership of any of the employees in the I. L. G. W. U. would not be tolerated.

We find that by its sponsorship and domination of the March 18 meeting and by Mrs. Reed's talk at said meeting, the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

Before the meeting closed a committee composed of Rose Todd, Hobart Atherton, and Sally Ormsby was appointed [40] This statement should be contrasted with Mrs. Reed's approval of the closed-shop agreement with the D. G. W. U. less than 2 months later. See infra, Section C 2.

and authorized to take steps necessary to provide protec-[fol. 702] tion for the employees. On March 27, 1937, this committee called on the law firm of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich and Tyler of Kansas City, Missouri, where they conferred with Frank Tyler, a member of the firm. They stated that they represented the respondent's employees and desired to know what legal steps they might take to protect themselves from the alleged threats of the I. L. G. W. U. Mr. Tyler tentatively suggested the possibility of an injunction and promised to investigate the matter if a retainer fee of $500 were paid.

On March 30, 1937, Rose Todd went to the First National Bank of Kansas City, Missouri, and there consulted with Edward F. Swinney, Chairman of the Board of the Bank, who agreed to lend her $1,000 on the note of the Loyalty League, without any other security. The note bears the signature "The Nelly Don Loyalty League, Rose Todd—President." Swinney testified that no one other than Rose Todd communicated with him in any way concerning the loan and no one guaranteed its repayment "except Miss Todd said she would see it was repaid." Swinney further testified that he had known Rose Todd for 10 or 12 years, that he had first met her at his office in the bank as "a kind of 'all-around man' for the company." The First National Bank carries the account or accounts of the respondent corporation, and personal accounts of Mrs Nell Donnelly Reed, and of her husband, James A. Reed. At the time of the hearing the Loyalty League note had been repaid from monies collected through assessment of members of the League.

Out of the $1,000 loan Attorney Tyler received a check for $500, dated April 1, 1937, and bearing the signature "The Nelly Don Loyalty League, Rose Todd, Pauline Hartman."

Attorney Tyler investigated the use of an injunction as a means of obtaining protection for the respondent's employees and on April 13, 1937, the day following the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States upholding the constitutionality of the Wagner Act,[46] he reported to [46] N. L. R. B. v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, 301 U.S. 1, and other cases decided by the Supreme Court of the United States on the same day.

the committee adversely on the use of an injunction proceeding and recommended the organization of a plant union as the most effective means of "securing protection."

In the meantime, on April 22, 1937, the Kansas City Journal-Post, a daily newspaper, carried an announcement by the I. L. G. W. U. that Sylvia Hull, one of the respondent's operators, had been named as a delegate to the biennial convention of the I. L. G. W. U. Sylvia Hull appeared for work as usual at the respondent's plant on the morning of April 23. A few minutes after 8 o'clock while she was working at her machine on the eighth floor of the plant two groups of employees—each consisting of [fol. 703] 15 or 20 persons—successively gathered at Sylvia Hull's machine. They demanded to know what authority she had to represent them at the I. L. G. W. U. convention. Some of the girls stood on top of nearby tables. They sang Loyalty League songs, told her they would not allow her to belong to a union, demanded that she surrender her League pin, threatened to tear her clothes off and to throw her out of the window. Mrs. Allison, the instructor in charge of Sylvia's section, was present throughout the demonstrations and did not order the girls back to work or take any action of the kind; Mrs. Bogart, in charge of the dividing department, was present and pointed Sylvia out to some of the demonstrators. Mrs. Hyde, the respondent's employment manager, appeared at the scene of the demonstration and told the demonstrators to return to work. The girls refused, saying they would not work while Sylvia was there. Mrs. Hyde thereupon took Sylvia down to her office on the seventh floor. They were followed by a number of the demonstrators, shouting that they would not return to work until they heard Sylvia say she would go home. Sylvia then said: "I will go home. I didn't know the girls felt this way about it or I wouldn't have done it." According to Sylvia's testimony, which is undenied, Mrs. Hyde told her she would have to go home. Sylvia replied that she did not want to quit, but would go home for the day. Mrs. Hyde took her employee identification pass and Sylvia left a telephone number through which she might be reached.[47]

[47] The alleged discriminatory discharge of Sylvia Hull is discussed in Subsection D, infra.

Later, during the same morning on which the above-described incidents occurred, Fern Sigler, an operator who had displayed on that day for the first time her I. L. G. W. U. membership pin, was subjected to three similar demonstrations. These three demonstrations took place at intervals between 8 and 10:30 o'clock. The second and third groups of demonstrators numbered as many as 40 or 50 employees from various floors of the plant. They surrounded Mrs. Sigler's machine, sang songs, derided her, took her League pin from her, and shouted: "Get up and go home; we don't want you in here." The demonstrations subsided when Lee Baty, plant superintendent and production manager, accompanied by Rose Todd, ordered Fern from her machine to a nearby office. As Fern left the floor the girls shouted: "We are not going to work as long as she remains here." After a conference participated in by Baty, Mrs. Hyde, Rose Todd, and Fern Sigler, Mrs. Sigler was sent home. Baty promised to talk to the girls and "quiet them down," and to call her back when the unrest had subsided. Despite his promise, Baty admitted at the hearing that he did nothing to allay antagonism toward the I. L. G. W. U. in the plant.

[fol. 704] Without deciding whether the respondent was responsible for originating and inciting these anti-I. L. G. W. U. demonstrations, we are convinced that the respondent condoned, approved, and encouraged them. In the first place, the respondent made no sincere efforts to check the demonstrators. During the demonstrations instructors and some other supervisory officials stood by and made no effort to take steps which might have been effective in terminating the demonstrations. Even Lee Baty and Mrs. Hyde watched the demonstrations for a short time without seriously attempting to stop the participants. In the second place, the method which the respondent finally adopted to end the demonstrations revealed its attitude of approval. Instead of disciplining the demonstrators who had disrupted the normal operation of the factory for 2 hours or more, the respondent capitulated at once to their demands and laid off the two members of the I. L. G. W. U., who had admittedly violated no rule of the respondent and were attempting to do their work. Lee

Baty, the respondent's production manager, claimed that there was no other way of restoring order in the plant. Even if it was necessary to remove these two employees from the floor at the time of the demonstrations, the respondent could then have made it clear to the demonstrators and their sympathizers that no further demonstrations against these two employees would be tolerated and that any efforts to stage them would result in severe personal discipline. Furthermore, the respondent's officials did not discipline or reprimand in any way those employees who participated in the incidents. Finally, we think the approval and encouragement of the respondent is shown by the fact that despite Baty's promise to Fern Sigler that he would "quiet the girls down," he admitted at the hearing that he did nothing after the demonstrations to protect these two or any other employees who were members of the I. L. G. W. U. from the recurrence of such demonstrations and the accompanying threats of violence, or otherwise to make it possible for these two employees to return to their work in the plant unmolested.

We find that the respondent approved of and encouraged the demonstrations and took advantage of them to reveal once more to its employees its hostility to the I. L. G. W. U. and its support of anti-I. L. G. W. U. activities. We further find that by such action the respondent interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed by Section 7 of the Act.[48]

We further find that by using the company-dominated Loyalty League, as hereinabove described, for the purpose [fol. 705] of impeding and preventing the organization of its employees by the I. L. G. W. U., the respondent has interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

C. Domination and interference with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contribution of support.

On April 27, 1937, a meeting of employees took place immediately after working hours on the second floor of the building in which the respondent's plant was located.[49] The record establishes that it lasted approximately an hour. Rose Todd opened the meeting and stated that its purpose was to organize a union which would be called the "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union." Miss Todd pointed out that the League was no longer adequate to withstand the pressure of outside labor organizations and that a plant union had become necessary. She thereupon introduced Attorney Tyler who advised the assembled employees to form an independent, unaffiliated labor organization. After his talk it was unanimously decided by a viva voce vote of the approximately 1,300 assembled employees to form such a union. A nominating committee of five was then appointed by Rose Todd to select a General Chairman and eight Group Chairmen to serve as representatives and officers of the new organization. While the committee retired to select its nominees, charter membership cards, previously prepared, were distributed for signature. Thereafter, Attorney Tyler read the bylaws which the committee had requested him to draft.[50] They were immediately adopted without alteration. The nominating committee returned to the meeting and presented the names of the nominees for offices in the organization, who were unanimously elected, with Rose Todd as General Chairman. The 1,300 membership cards previously distributed were collected and the meeting declared adjourned.

[49] At the time of this meeting, the respondent did not have under lease the second floor of the building in which its plant was located, but leased only floors three to ten.

[50] The bylaws reveal that the purpose of the D. G. W. U. was in part the same as that of the Loyalty League, which, in the words of Rose Todd, had become inadequate to give the employees the "protection" they needed.

Article 2 of the bylaws provides inter alia: "The purpose of this organization (D. G. W. U.) shall be . . . the protection of employees and members of this Union from coercion, intimidation, violence or threats of violence in order to force them to join unions organized and dominated by outsiders not employees in this plant."

The Loyalty League played a leading role in the formation of the D. G. W. U. Rose Todd testified that she, Hobart Atherton, and Sally Ormsby were instrumental in calling the meeting of April 27 after "a general request from a great many employees that we try to do something for our own protection." The persons named constitute the committee appointed at the Loyalty League meeting of [fol. 706] March 18 to determine what could be done by way of protection against the I. L. G. W. U. The ledger sheets of the Kansas City Chair Rental Company show that chairs were rented by the Nelly Don Loyalty League for use on that date,[51] and the canceled checks of the Loyalty League show that the League drew a check in favor of the Chair Rental Company on May 4, 1937, in payment therefor. The respondent's telephone operator called on the interdepartmental telephone system each department of the plant and gave notice that Rose Todd was calling a meeting of employees on the second floor after work. Instructors and other supervisory employees assisted in notifying the employees and sending them to the meeting.[52] Rose Todd presided at the meeting, but denied that she was acting in her capacity as president of the Loyalty League.

On the basis of the evidence above recited, we find that the meeting of April 27 was sponsored and financed by the Loyalty League, through its president, Rose Todd, and the committee appointed by it at the meeting of the League on March 18.

The assistance rendered by the Loyalty League in the formation of the D. G. W. U. was not limited to sponsoring and financing the organizational meeting of April 27. We have already pointed out that the committee appointed at the League meeting on March 18, 1937, engaged Attorney Tyler, that Rose Todd borrowed $1,000 in the name of the League and out of that loan paid $500 to Tyler as a retaining fee. Members of the League were subsequently [51] The ledger sheet gives as the date of the rental April 28, 1937, but the manager of the K. C. Chair Rental Company testified that entries are made in the ledger the day on which the chairs are returned rather than on the day they are delivered.

[52] See infra, note 55.

assessed 50 cents each in order to retire that obligation.[63] Although it is contended that the $500 retainer fee was in payment only for advice concerning a projected injunction suit against the I. L. G. W. U. for the protection of the respondent's employees, we are convinced that the fee covered Tyler's services in connection with the organization of the D. G. W. U. Prior to the organization of the D. G. W. U. the proposed injunction suit was rejected as a method of protection and instead Tyler advised the League committee to form an unaffiliated union. He attended the April 27 meeting and read the bylaws which he had previously drafted on instruction of the League committee. Thereafter, in May and June 1937, he drafted proposals for a closed-shop contract and wage agreement [fol. 707] with the respondent. Tyler received no fees from the D. G. W. U. until November 23, 1937, which was 7 months after its formation and at a time when the D. G. W. U. had undertaken other legal action involving court litigation. The minutes of the Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. for June 15, 1937, record that Rose Todd stated in explanation of the fee: " . . . we paid Mr. Tyler $500 retainer's fee. He helped us write up our bylaws and working agreement and will advise us and help us when we need it." From these facts we find that the League financed the employment of Attorney Tyler, paid him a retainer fee of $500, and that the said fee covered the cost of his services in connection with the formation of the D. G. W. U. and the drafting of its bylaws.

The day after the organizational meeting Rose Todd took the membership cards to Mrs. Reed, president of the respondent, and told her that the D. G. W. U. represented a majority of the employees. Mrs. Reed assured her at once that the respondent would consider the proposals of the D. G. W. U. On May 6, 1937, the Group Chairmen representing the D. G. W. U. met with Mrs. Reed and discussed certain matters concerning the terms of an agreement, covering all the respondent's employees. From these facts it seems clear, and we find, that recognition as the exclusive bargaining agent of the employees was accorded the D. G. W. U. almost as soon as it was organized, although no statement of recognition in writing appears until the contract between the respondent and the D. G. W. U. was signed on May 27, 1937, as hereinafter discussed.

[63] At the hearing there was a controversy as to the date of the League meeting at which the assessment was decided upon. The respondent contended it occurred between March 27 and April 5, 1937, before the organization of the D. G. W. U. was conceived. Mrs. Elsa Graham Greenhow testified that she took minutes of such a meeting and that it occurred on May 25, 1937, immediately after a meeting of the D. G. W. U. It is unnecessary to resolve this conflicting testimony inasmuch as we find that the League paid the $500 retainer fee to Attorney Tyler, and that said fee covered the cost of his services in connection with the formation of the D. G. W. U.

After the conference between Mrs. Reed and Rose Todd on April 28, at which Mrs. Reed agreed to consider the proposals of the D. G. W. U., Attorney Tyler commenced to draft an agreement for the D. G. W. U. to present to the respondent. The proposed draft of the agreement, containing a closed-shop provision, was approved by the Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. on the morning of May 27 and presented at once to Mrs. Reed. Attorney Tyler read it to her and other representatives of the respondent and urged that it be given prompt attention. Mrs. Reed replied: "I would like to have a little time to look over this agreement. However, I think it is very much in line—there will possibly be one or two little changes." Later, she added: "I think the only changes it will be necessary to make will just be legal phraseology— the spirit of this agreement is satisfactory." The minutes kept by the secretary of the Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. do not indicate that there was any discussion of the provisions, although several of the respondent's witnesses declared extended discussion took place. At the close of the conference it was agreed that Mrs. Reed and other representatives of the respondent would meet with Rose [fol. 708] Todd and Mr. Tyler, attorney for the D. G. W. U., at 3 o'clock that afternoon, and that Mr. Tyler could then report the outcome to the committee of Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. at 3:30 o'clock. When the D. G. W. U. committee met in the afternoon, as agreed, its minutes disclosed that Mr. Tyler reported that the respondent had proposed three or four modifications, acceptance of which he recommended to the committee. The only important change in the substance of the agreement was the addition of Section 4:

The employer recognizes the election of a committee of the union to represent it, provided members of such committee shall have been continuously employed by the employer for the period of at least a year immediately preceding election to such committee . . . ."[54]

Attorney Tyler explained to the committee that the purpose of such a provision was "to eliminate the possibility of someone getting on this committee who is not a true representative of the employees and who may be working here merely to act as a traitor to the company." The agreement as modified was then adopted by the committee representing the D. G. W. U. and signed by the parties.

Subsequently, on June 22, 1937, a supplemental agreement was entered into between the D. G. W. U. and the respondent. This agreement dealt with minimum wages for piece-work operators and other employees which had not been included in the earlier agreement. For the purpose of determining wage rates operators paid on a piece-work basis were classified in four groups. This classification was prepared for the D. G. W. U. by Lee Baty, production manager of the plant, and accepted by the committee representing the D. G. W. U. without change. The terms of the supplemental agreement were never submitted to the D. G. W. U. membership for approval. The D. G. W. U. demanded a minimum weekly wage of $16.50 for the respondent's lowest paid piece-work operators. Rose Todd explained that the I. L. G. W. U. had announced that it was seeking a $16.00 weekly minimum in the garment industry and she therefore thought it a good idea to improve a little on that minimum to defeat efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize the respondent's employees. The respondent acceded to this demand. By its terms the original agreement of May 27, 1937, was to remain in effect for a period of 2 years, while the expiration date of the supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, was set for July 1, 1938, with a provision for automatic extension from year to year unless either party gave written notice to the other of a desire to terminate it. On June 2, 1939, the original [fol. 709] agreement of May 27, 1937, was extended for a 6-year period without essential modification. So far as the record indicates the supplemental wage agreement has continued in effect without change.

[54] Italics added.

In August or September 1937 the respondent agreed, at the request of the D. G. W. U., to a check-off of the monthly dues of 25 cents. Each employee signed a card prepared and distributed by the respondent, agreeing to permit his dues to be checked off at the end of each month. Pursuant to the agreement the respondent submits to the D. G. W. U. each month a memorandum showing the number of employees on the pay roll during the month and a check covering their dues. The D. G. W. U. issues no receipts, keeps no record of individual dues payments, and has no means of knowing what individuals paid dues in past months. Nor were the general chairman and the treasurer of the D. G. W. U. able to state at the hearing what proportion of each month an employee must work to entitle the D. G. W. U. to collect his dues from the respondent.

Soon after the D. G. W. U. was organized the Group Chairmen who composed its executive committee appointed a committee to represent the D. G. W. U. in adjusting piece-work rates with the respondent. Some 600 to 800 of the respondent's 1,300 employees were paid on a piece-work basis and the work of this committee was described as one of the most important functions of the D. G. W. U. The committee appointed consisted of Mrs. Lula Nichols, Josephine Spalito, and Rose Todd. Mrs. Nichols and Miss Spalito are employed by the respondent for the purpose of setting piece-work prices. The record shows that Mrs. Nichols has final authority in setting the rates on behalf of the respondent. The procedure of setting piece-work prices in the first instance and of adjusting subsequent complaints of operators that the price set is too low, is described in the following testimony of Mrs. Reeves:

A. After a garment is designed, that particular garment is analyzed very thoroughly by Mrs. Nichols, who was a former piece-work operator; Joseph Spalito, a former piece-work operator; Rose Todd, a former piece-work operator. Prices are then discussed with the operator, and also the instructor . . .

Q. If there is any employee who thinks the price is too low, what redress does she have?

A. She discusses it with the people who set prices—Miss Todd, Mrs. Nichols, or her instructor . . .]

Q. Who has complete charge of the making of piece rates after the report is made by this committee?

A. Mrs. Nichols. (Ibid)

Thus, it becomes clear that the same persons who set the rates on behalf of the respondent in the first instance are [fol. 710] also representatives of the D. G. W. U. for the purpose of protesting, and negotiating with regard to those rates.

In connection with the formation and subsequent administration of the D. G. W. U., property of the respondent has been freely utilized. Membership cards were mimeographed after working hours by employees in the respondent's Circular Department on a machine owned by the respondent. Copies of bylaws of the D. G. W. U. were produced on a ditto machine belonging to the respondent. The D. G. W. U. owns no typewriter and the secretary of the D. G. W. U. has often used a typewriter owned by the respondent for typing the minutes of meetings of the D. G. W. U. and of the Group Chairmen. The respondent's bulletin boards have been freely used for the posting of announcements, notices of D. G. W. U meetings and for a display of pins from which the D. G. W. U. pin was chosen. Rose Todd keeps the membership cards of the D. G. W. U. in a file of the respondent which is located near her desk in the plant.

Meetings of the D. G. W. U. are announced by sending a so-called I. D. M. to each department of the plant through the respondent's regular messenger service. An I. D. M. is the respondent's term for interdepartmental memoranda. Memoranda concerning the D. G. W. U. business pass through the same channels as those of the respondent. The thread girls in the various sewing sections, who are assistant instructors, receive the D. G. W. U. notices and take responsibility for their circulation to the operators in their respective sections.[55] Mail addressed to the D. G. W. U. is also delivered to D. G. W. U. representatives by the respondent's employees.

The D. G. W. U. has never maintained an office outside the respondent's plant, and since its inception has conducted all of its business in the building occupied by the respondent. At a meeting of the D. G. W. U. on May 11, 1937, Rose Todd stated:

> There are probably a number of you that have not had occasion recently to be on the ninth floor, but on the right-hand side of the door you will find a desk where our work will be conducted.

At this desk, which was assigned by the respondent to Rose Todd in connection with her work as supervisory employee, is conducted the day-to-day business of the D. G. W. U. Membership cards not collected at the organiza- [fol. 711] tional meeting on April 27 were subsequently signed and left at the desk by employees. Cards authorizing the check-off were signed by the members of the D. G. W. U. at Rose Todd's desk. The respondent made a practice of sending communications relating to the D. G. W. U. to Miss Todd's desk for her attention. The Group Chairmen, who composed the executive committee of the D. G. W. U., met for several months in the office of Beulah Spilsbury, a supervisory employee, and later in the respondent's first-floor auditorium. No rental was ever paid for the use of this property.

Regular monthly meetings of the D. G. W. U. were held on the second and later on the first floor of the building occupied by the respondent, which building was owned by the Corrigan Estate. At the time of the organization of the D. G. W. U. neither of these floors was under lease to the respondent, but on May 10, 1937, the respondent signed a lease for all ten floors of the building and has since continued to lease and occupy all of these floors. Prior to May 10, the D. G. W. U. obtained the permission of the representative of the Corrigan Estate to use the second floor as a meeting place, and paid no rent therefor. After May 10, the D. G. W. U. continued to meet there until the respondent remodeled a portion of the first floor to serve as an auditorium, which then became the meeting place. Although the witnesses, Rose Todd and Lee Baty, stated that a monthly rental was agreed upon in May 1937, we think the record is clear that the question of paying rent for this space was not considered for some months after the respondent had become the lessee of the space, and that the respondent never broached the matter to the D. G. W. U. The minutes of the Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. show that on November 13, 1937, the D. G. W. U. raised the question of rental payments and that the respondent subsequently agreed to charge $3 per meeting, to be paid at the end of the D. G. W. U.'s fiscal year.

Rose Todd was a full-time employee of the respondent. At the same time, as General Chairman of the D. G. W. U., she carried on the business of that organization representing 1,300 or more employees. Soon after the formation of the D. G. W. U. at the respondent's Kansas City plant, Rose Todd went out to the respondent's temporary auxiliary plant at St. Joseph, Missouri to organize the employees there. She was absent from her employment about one-half day without any salary reduction. At a meeting of the D. G. W. U. on May 11, 1937, she made the following statement:

> I do want to say this, that any of you, at any time, that want to talk to me, remember I can always be reached at noon or any time necessary.[56]

[fol. 712] Miss Todd's testimony indicates that grievances are reported to her during the working day, often dealt with at once, and their disposition reported to the aggrieved employee soon thereafter. Miss Todd checks on behalf of the D. G. W. U. all of the piece-work prices fixed by the respondent and all written instructions issued by the respondent to its operators. The respondent also submits to her each week, often during working hours, the pay-roll cards of its 600 to 800 piece-work operators which she examines for the purpose of determining whether each operator has received the minimum wage guaranteed by the respondent's agreement with the D. G. W. U.

According to its bylaws, membership in the D. G. W. U. is open to all employees of the respondent, although the record indicates that the respondent's officials who have final authority to hire and discharge are not members. The membership roll of the D. G. W. U. includes the instructors, and inspectors or examiners who pass upon the quality of the operators' work and return unsatisfactory products to the operators. Among other members of the organization [57] are Ella Mae Hyde, employment manager, Lena Tyhurst, described by Baty as assistant factory manager or general inspector, Mrs. Nichols, in charge of setting piece-work rates, Marvin Price, adviser on mechanical matters and in charge of maintenance of the factory building and equipment, Ted Scoles, who distributes and directs the work in the cutting department, Mrs. Bogart, who delegates the work and instructs the employees in the dividing department, and Mrs. Martha Gray, who is in charge of the respondent's outlet store.[58] At a meeting of the Group Chairmen of the D. G. W. U. on June 15, 1937, it was proposed to restrict the privileges of department heads and instructors who held memberships in the organization by denying them the right to vote, but the record does not indicate that any such action was taken at that time or subsequently.

[57] Evidence of the membership of Mrs. Hyde and certain other supervisory employees is found in the respondent's rejected offer of proof that these named employees would testify that they had joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and have since continued to belong to the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and accord uninfluenced by the respondent. Even though the offered testimony was rejected, such an offer remains in the record as an admission of the respondent that the named persons are members of the D. G. W. U. C., No. 7258, decided November 20, 1939.

1. Conclusions as to the D. G. W. U.

a. Supervisory employees

(1) Instructors

In the incidents described in the preceding section certain employees designated by the respondent as in- [fol. 713] structors have figured prominently. The respondent contends that they are not supervisory employees because no authority to hire, discharge, or discipline has been vested in them since July 1935.

The respondent's plant is in part composed of sewing sections. In each of these sections there are approximately 40 operators, each of whom operates a sewing machine. Assigned to each of these sections is an instructor and an assistant called a thread girl or floor girl. Among the duties of the instructor and thread girl in each section is the distribution of materials and supplies with which the operators work. The instructors also distribute directions as to how the work is to be done and teach the operators how to execute each step of the process. This much is undisputed. It is also admitted by the respondent that prior to the advent of Lee Baty as production manager and plant superintendent the instructors had had a part in determining lay-offs and discharges in their respective sections and also had disciplinary authority. Baty testified that after he became production manager of the plant on June 25, 1935, he took from the instructors and from all other supervisory employees the authority to hire, discharge, and discipline and vested all such authority in himself, so that he has been since that time the sole supervisory employee in the plant, and personally observes the conduct, character of work, efficiency, and general attitude of all employees.

The respondent has in its employ between 1100 and 1300 persons. On June 2, 1939, there were employed in the production and maintenance divisions, of which Baty is superintendent, 642 operators, 72 miscellaneous piece workers, 77 ironers, 11 folders, 41 examiners, 44 cutting-department employees, 15 dividers, 44 instructors and distributors, 14 mechanics and helpers, 11 bundle boys, 52 clerical workers, 60 miscellaneous timekeepers, 20 porters and maids, working on 10 floors of the plant. In view of the number of employees and the size of the plant, we find Baty's testimony in regard to the elimination of supervisors to be incredible. The record convinces us that after June 25, 1935, the instructors continued to be supervisors in charge of the operators who worked in the various sewing sections of the factory. The operators were never notified of the change in the authority of instructors. Nor was there any apparent change in the conduct of instructors after the advent of Baty in June 1935. None of the operators testified that Baty personally gave them any instructions or directions, or conferred with them about their work. The instructors continued to transmit directions to the operators, distributed the work and "kept the girls busy." The instructors are responsible to Baty and apparently report directly to him. Furthermore, Mrs. Reeves, who had preceded Baty as production manager and was afterward placed in charge of the respondent's merchandising department, stated in an affidavit [fol. 714] dated October 30, 1937, that "competent instructors teach the operators the particular operations to be performed by them, and constantly supervise the same." When work is slack in a section the instructor of the section determines the order in which operators shall take a day or half day off. Although Baty denied the instructors are charged with the duty of reporting on the efficiency of the operators who work in their respective sections, he admitted that he has asked the instructors on occasions and has received their opinions. The above-stated facts make it clear that prior to June 25, 1935, the instructors were supervisory employees authorized to discipline their subordinates and to participate in the determination of lay-offs and discharges, and that since that time the respondent has continued to hold them out to the operators as supervisory employees and has given no notice of any kind to the operators that the instructors had any less authority than formerly. On the basis of all the evidence, we find that the instructors are supervisory employees representing the management of the respondent in its relation to the operators who work in the various sections.

(2) Rose Todd

Among the employees of the respondent who were active in the affairs of the Loyalty League and in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U., Rose Todd has been outstanding. She was president of the League during the time that it played so effective a part in resisting the organizational campaign of the I. L. G. W. U. She was the dominating figure at the crucial meetings of the League on March 18 and April 27, 1937. Rose Todd's status in the plant and her relation to the management of the respondent is a subject of dispute. She has been in the employ of the respondent for approximately 13 years. She had variously served as a machine operator, thread girl, and on occasion as an instructor; she also had been engaged in setting piece-work rates for the respondent and had assisted Dewey Atchison, a supervisory employee in the manufacturing division, in making special studies of production methods. She left her employment with the respondent in 1931 and for about a year worked for the Gernes Garment Company where she first either assisted the production manager or in fact had charge of the plant and later acted as a traveling sales representative. When she returned to the employ of the respondent in 1933, she testified that she was told she would have to take whatever work there was. She worked for a time in the model department where model dresses are made up before general production in the models is begun. Sometime prior to 1937 she was given a desk in the plant—first on the ninth floor and later on the seventh floor—and assigned to her present duty which is the responsibility for keeping the [fol. 715] various sewing sections supplied with the necessary materials for maintaining operations. She moves about throughout the various sections of the plant each day, consulting with instructors and thread girls. When they report that requisitioned supplies have not been received, Miss Todd locates them and sends them to their proper destination. She is under the direct supervision of Lee Raty, the respondent's production manager. She receives a salary of $130 per month from the respondent; the D. G. W. U. pays her $65 per month for the work she does as General Chairman of that organization.

The Trial Examiner found that Miss Todd is a supervisory employee of the respondent. We agree with the Trial Examiner that Rose Todd is employed by the respondent in a supervisory capacity,[59] and so find.

Moreover, we are of the opinion that Rose Todd occupied a close and confidential relation to the management of the respondent which was made known to the employees by the respondent's conduct. Her close relation to the management is illustrated by the fact that on April 23, 1937, when the demonstrations in the plant occurred, the disturbance was reported to Rose Todd. When Baty ordered Fern Sigler from the floor to the office, he was accompanied by Rose Todd. At the conference which followed, Rose Todd dominated the scene and took the lead in questioning Fern Sigler about her union affiliation, although both Baty and Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, were present. A reading of the transcript of that conference shows that Rose Todd opened the conference and talked to Fern Sigler of the respondent's policy of operating an open shop as if she represented the respondent. For example: ". . . we have had union people work here for years . . .We don't care. We have hired union people . . . I talked to some of the girls yesterday afternoon and tried to get them to see that it is all right if you want to work and belong to the union. However, they feel so keenly about it, we don't think we can do anything about it . . .We are going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way." Miss Todd also said: "My advice to you is, that if you feel that strongly about the union and have enough people to back you up, be in a union shop. I wouldn't anymore think I could join a union than the man in the moon. I'd expect to be put out on the street and left there." Baty and Mrs. Hyde acquiesced in all that Miss Todd said and talked in the same vein. Thus, in this manner as well as in other ways hereinafter discussed, she was held out by the management of the respondent as an employee having authority to advise other employees with respect to joining or not joining labor organizations.

[fol. 716] Another fact pointing to the conclusion that Miss Todd represents the management is her statement during the conference above referred to: "We went downstairs and sent those girls back to work and they went back to work," and her testimony at the hearing that on the morning of the Sigler-Hull demonstrations she told employees, here and there in the plant, to return to their work. That the employees regarded her as a supervisor and agent of the respondent is evidenced by their obedience to her orders. Furthermore, her position in the plant was such that the respondent's telephone operators accepted and carried out her instructions when she requested an operator to notify each department that she wanted a meeting of employees.

The respondent likewise knew that Miss Todd made use of its facilities in carrying on the business of the D. G. W. U., part of which was its campaign against the I. L. G. W. U.,[60] for the respondent regularly sent to Miss Todd's desk in the plant information designed for the use of the D. G. W. U. and in other ways pointed out above, assisted her in administering the affairs of the D. G. W. U. Moreover, so far as the record indicates, the respondent did nothing to discourage any of these activities on company property and time.

We find that Rose Todd occupied a close and confidential, as well as supervisory, position with the respondent and further find that in her activities in the Loyalty League and the D. G. W. U. she was acting for, on behalf of, and with the knowledge and consent of the respondent.[61]

---

[60] That the D. G. W. U. was active in resisting the I. L. G. W. U. is evidenced by the repeated requests of Miss Todd at D. G. W. U. meetings that the members report to her when they had been solicited by I. L. G. W. U. representatives and what these representatives had said.

> The statute, we think purposely, does not define the particular methods or agents by which the employer may intermeddle unlawfully

[fol. 717] (3) Hobart Atherton

Hobart Atherton has been employed in the maintenance department of the respondent since November 1933. In addition to Atherton, the department employs one electrician, one carpenter, one painter, and three laborers. Atherton transmits instructions to the other employees in the department, receives requests for repairs, refers them to the proper employee, and keeps a record of the jobs assigned and those completed. He also assists with repair work wherever needed. Atherton and the respondent deny that he is a supervisory employee in charge of the maintenance department. To accept their testimony would leave this department without supervision and would mean that each of the employees in the department decides for himself what repair jobs he will undertake. There is no evidence that Baty, the plant superintendent, in any way directs these employees in their work.

We find that Hobart Atherton is a supervisory employee of the respondent in charge of the maintenance department of the plant.

(4) Ella Mae Hyde

The respondent does not contest the Trial Examiner's finding that Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde is the employment manager for the respondent. However, there is testimony that she does not have final authority to hire and discharge employees. Such authority is unnecessary to establish that

---

So to confine representation of him would open easy escape from the Act's provisions. Nothing in it requires that such representation be limited to officials having any particular kind or degree of authority such as "hiring and firing," "disciplinary power," or even "supervisory capacity." These evidences of authority make more plain the connection of the actor with the employer, but their absence does not preclude the existence of such a connection. What is required is that substantial evidence show that the actor, whatever his official position, is acting in fact on behalf of the employer, not for himself or others only, and that, by whatever method or means, the employer brings pressure to bear upon his employees which deprives them of free and independent choice.

Cf. Cupples Co., Manufacturers v. N. L. R. B., 106 F.(2d) 100 (C.C.A. 8th), mod. and aff'g Matter of Cupples Co. and Matckworkers Federal Labor Union, 10 N. L. R. B. 168, where the Court refused to hold the respondent liable for the acts of an employee inasmuch as the respondent had not held out the said employee as a person having authority to advise others with respect to joining or not joining labor organizations, had not directed the acts to be done, and the acts had not been done with the respondent's knowledge or consent.

Mrs. Hyde is a supervisory employee authorized to represent the management with regard to its employment policies. Mrs. Hyde interviews all applicants, and makes recommendations when other department heads notify her of vacancies in personnel. She has apparent authority to lay off employees as evidenced by the fact that she sent Sylvia Hull home on the morning of April 23, 1937, after the anti-union demonstrations previously discussed.

We find that Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde is a supervisory employee of the respondent in charge of its employment department and has authority to represent the management with respect to the respondent's employment policies.

(5) Certain other supervisory employees

We have found that certain other employees, occupying responsible positions, were members of the D. G. W. U. These persons are Mrs. Lena Tyhurst, assistant factory manager or general inspector, Marvin Price, in charge of maintenance of the building and equipment and adviser to Superintendent Baty on mechanical matters, Ted Scoles, distributor and director of work in the cutting department, and Mrs. Bogart, who delegates the work and instructs the [fol. 718] employees in the dividing department. Some of these employees had had authority to hire, discharge, and discipline employees before the appointment of Baty as plant superintendent and production manager. They are all directly responsible to Baty and transmit his instructions to other employees in their respective departments. There is no showing that other employees in these departments were aware of any curtailment of the authority of these department heads after Baty took charge.

We find that the above-named persons are supervisory employees and as such were representatives of the management.

b. Conclusions as to the respondent's formation and domination of the D. G. W. U.

We have found that prior to the effective date of the Act the respondent adopted a policy of opposition and hostility to unions generally and to the I. L. G. W. U. specifically. In furtherance of this policy the management made it plain to the employees that loyalty to the respondent was synonymous with the rejection of outside union affiliation. We have further found that the respondent inspired and dominated the Loyalty League which had for its primary purpose the frustration of the efforts of the I. L. G. W. U. to organize the employees of the respondent. When in April 1937 the I. L. G. W. U. commenced to prepare for another organizational campaign among the respondent's employees, the respondent through the medium of the dominated Loyalty League and through its supervisory employees formed the D. G. W. U. to prevent such outside organization. The League hired the attorney who planned the D. G. W. U. and wrote its bylaws. It was the League which borrowed $1,000 at the First National Bank on the security of its members, who included prominent supervisory officials of the respondent, and later raised, by assessment of its members, $500 to pay his retainer fee, part of which retainer was for the attorney's services in organizing the D. G. W. U. The meeting of April 27, 1937, at which the D. G. W. U. was formed, was sponsored and financed by the League and was announced through the use of the respondent's facilities and attended by many of its supervisory staff. Rose Todd, president of the League, directed almost single-handed the course of that meeting. The rank and file of the respondent's employees had heard nothing of the formation of a labor union prior to the meeting, but under the stimulus and pressure thus provided by the respondent, they emerged from that gathering with a labor organization of 1,300 members.

Like the League, membership in the D. G. W. U. includes a large number of the respondent's supervisory [fol. 719] employees whose presence inevitably prevents the organization from being free of the respondent's domination. Through Rose Todd who has been General Chairman of the organization since its formation and whom we have found to be an agent of the management, the respondent has retained complete control of the policies of the D. G. W. U.

The record is replete with evidence of the respondent's assistance in the administration of the D. G. W. U. The organization has no office or headquarters of any kind apart from the respondent's plant. The respondent's facilities have been freely used in carrying on the business of the D. G. W. U. The respondent denies knowledge of the use of its various facilities, but so persistent and frequent has been the practice of employment of the respondent's messenger, mail, and telephone service, bulletin board and filing cabinets, of conducting union business at Rose Todd's desk, and of holding meetings of the Group Chairmen in a supervisor's office, that we find it impossible to believe that the respondent was without knowledge of these activities. The fact that the respondent permitted meetings of the D. G. W. U. to take place on the first and second floor of the plant for many months without any question of charging rent therefor is also indicative of the respondent's encouragement of the organization.

Rose Todd is allowed to take whatever time during working hours is necessary for handling union business without any deductions from her salary, as illustrated, inter alia, by her trip to the respondent's St. Joseph plant to organize the D. G. W. U. there. Although some of this business has been carried on before and after working hours, it is clear from the record that she makes a practice of taking up union business at any time during the day. Sometimes the respondent has made available for examination during working hours the pay-roll cards, which Miss Todd checks each week on behalf of the D. G. W. U. Grievances are reported to Miss Todd and considered by her within a few minutes or an hour. These facts demonstrate that the respondent has permitted and encouraged Rose Todd to make use of company time for conducting the business of the D. G. W. U. and has thereby lent assistance to the D. G. W. U.

That the respondent lent encouragement and assistance to the D. G. W. U. becomes even more clear when its cooperative attitude toward the D. G. W. U. is compared with that expressed to the shop chairman of the I. L. G. W. U., Virginia Stroup, some 2 years earlier. In contrast to the hostility with which the respondent met the I. L. G. W. U. and its chairman, the D. G. W. U. was recognized by the respondent as a bargaining agent the day after its organization and Rose Todd, president of the League and General Chairman of the D. G. W. U., was accorded almost complete freedom to rove through the plant, engaging alternately in performing duties in connection with the production process, and in handling matters relating first to [fol. 720] the Loyalty League and then to the D. G. W. U. without interference or objection from the respondent. This contrasting conduct necessarily conveyed to the employees the respondent's approval of the League and the D. G. W. U.

The completeness of the respondent's domination is demonstrated by the personnel of the D. G. W. U. committee for the adjustment of piece-work rates. Two of the three members of the committee are persons employed by the respondent to set piece-work rates in the first instance, and one of these two, Mrs. Nichols, is the respondent's final authority on what the rates shall be. The result is that the respondent sits on both sides of the bargaining table and the aggrieved operators are left without any of the means of independent collective bargaining with regard to piece-work rates ordinarily afforded by a labor organization.[62]

Negotiations between the respondent and the D. G. W. U. with regard to the terms of the articles of agreement signed on May 27, 1937, were completed in a few hours and the agreement signed on the same day it was submitted to the respondent. Despite Mrs. Reed's determined opposition to a closed-shop contract with the I. L. G. W. U., voiced only 2 months earlier,[63] she made no protest when the D. G. W. U. made the same proposal. She stated, "I understand that [i. e. closed shop] is very essential to industrial peace." The closed shop was granted and membership in the labor organization of the respondent's choice became obligatory upon its employees. The contract also included a provision that the bargaining committee of the D. G. W. U. must be composed of employees with at least 1 year of prior employment in the respondent's plant. It was put in at the request of the respondent and without protest from the committee representing the D. G. W. U. In effect it deprives the respondent's employees of their right to representatives of their own choosing. We do not mean to say that employees may not voluntarily limit their right in this way, but we think the fact that a clause so favorable to the employer was inserted without protest from the representatives of the employees is indicative of the respondent's domination. Although the quick negotiation of the contract with the D. G. W. U., the closed-shop clause insuring the stability and continuity of that organization, and the inclusion of a limitation as to persons who shall constitute the D. G. W. U. bargaining committee, standing alone, do not conclusively prove that the respondent dominated the D. G. W. U., where, as here, the record establishes other acts of direct intervention and assistance [fol. 721] by the respondent and where officers and membership of the employee organization include many of the respondent's supervisory employees, we are convinced that these were further acts of domination of and interference with the D. G. W. U. and contributions of support thereto.[64]

The respondent and the D. G. W. U. contend that its employees formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will in order to resist unionization by the I. L. G. W. U. and were not coerced or interfered with in their choice of the D. G. W. U. or in their rejection of the I. L. G. W. U. In support of this contention they sought to introduce the testimony of the members of the D. G. W. U. that they were not dominated by the respondent but formed, joined, and supported the organization of their own free will. They also offered evidence to show that the employees knew of the violence accompanying the I. L. G. W. U. organizational campaigns at other garment factories and of threats by I. L. G. W. U. representatives that the same tactics would be used at the respondent's plant and formed the D. G. W. U. for that reason. The Trial Examiner refused these offers of proof, ruling that such testimony was irrelevant and immaterial to the issues. We have affirmed the rulings of the Trial Examiner on those offers of proof because, giving full credit to such testimony and assuming that the employees had other motives for rejecting the I. L. G. W. U. and joining the D. G. W. U. as an instrument for opposing the I. L. G. W. U., the fact remains that the record shows the respondent to have committed acts of domination, interference, and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which makes that organization company dominated and not the free agent of its members.[65] Section 8 (2) proscribes such conduct on the part of employers, regardless of the ostensible willingness of employees to accede to it.

It is contended by the respondent that the Trial Examiner was in error in excluding testimony and exhibits concerning the provisions of various contracts existing between the I. L. G. W. U. and other garment companies offered to show that the bargaining negotiations between the D. G. W. U. and the respondent were genuine and the D. G. W. U. a bona fide union. Inasmuch as the issue before us is not whether the contracts were advantageous or beneficial to the employees, but whether the respondent dom- [fol. 722] inated or interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U., we believe the proffered evidence was correctly excluded.

Upon all the evidence we find that the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contributed support thereto; and that the respondent thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

2. Conclusions with respect to the contracts

We have found that the respondent dominated and interfered with the formation and the administration of the D. G. W. U. within the meaning of Section 8 (2) of the Act. The D. G. W. U., therefore, is not and never has been the lawful representative of the respondent's employees for the purposes of collective bargaining with regard to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment. Under these circumstances, the closed-shop contract, the supplemental wage agreement, and the check-off agreement, and any extensions, renewals, modifications, or supplements thereof, and any superseding contracts or agreements, between the respondent and the D. G. W. U. are void and of no effect.[66]

Moreover, the closed-shop agreement was an integral part of the respondent's plan to discourage and prevent membership of its employees in the I. L. G. W. U. The agreement required all employees of the respondent to join the D. G. W. U., and the bylaws of the D. G. W. U. prohibited its members from holding membership in any other labor organization. By making and publicizing among its employees a contract which compelled membership in the D. G. W. U. and in effect prohibited membership in the I. L. G. W. U. as a condition of employment, the respondent not only precluded its employees from making their own choice of a collective bargaining representative, but also, by adoption of such an employment policy, discriminated with regard to hire, tenure, terms, and conditions of employment.[67] The closed-shop proviso of Section 8 (3) of the Act does not protect such discrimination when committed pursuant to a contract with a labor organization found to have been company dominated.

We find that the respondent by entering into and publicizing the closed-shop contract with the D. G. W. U. discriminated in regard to the hire, tenure, terms, and conditions of employment of its employees, thereby discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U.; and that the [fol. 723] respondent thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

D. The alleged discharges

The amended complaint alleges that the respondent discharged from its employment Sylvia Hull on or about April 23, 1937, and May Fike, on or about April 26, 1937, and thereafter refused to reinstate them, because they had joined and assisted the I. L. G. W. U.

Sylvia Hull became a member of the I. L. G. W. U. on March 23, 1937, and on April 22, 1937, it was publicly announced by the I. L. G. W. U. office in Kansas City that she would represent the respondent's employees at the biennial convention of that organization in May 1937.

We have previously described the anti-union demonstration by employees against Sylvia Hull on the morning of April 23, 1937, which we have found was condoned and encouraged by the respondent. During the demonstration Mrs. Hyde, the respondent's employment manager, removed Sylvia from her machine and told her that she would have to go home. Sylvia replied that she did not want to quit but would go home for the day. Mrs. Hyde took her employee identification card which was necessary for admission to the plant and when Sylvia asked how she would get back into the plant Mrs. Hyde told her that she would come down to the door and admit her. At the same time Mrs. Hyde took the telephone number of a neighbor through whom Sylvia stated she could be reached and agreed to call her, and also asked Sylvia to get in touch with the respondent if she did not receive a call, inasmuch as the telephone number Sylvia left was that of a neighbor. Sylvia thereupon left the plant. Mrs. Hyde testified that she attempted to reach Sylvia by telephone the next morning, April 24, and on another occasion within a month thereafter, on the instruction of Mr. Baty, the respondent's production manager.[68] Sylvia never received notification to return to work and never applied to the respondent for reinstatement. She did not testify in this proceeding.

The respondent contends that Sylvia voluntarily left the employ of the respondent. This contention is based on Sylvia's statement, made when a number of the anti-union demonstrators demanded that Sylvia go home, that she would go home, and on the fact that she did not thereafter seek to return. However, when Mrs. Hyde subsequently told her she would have to leave the plant, Sylvia refused to quit her employment but agreed to go home for the day. [fol. 724] We think that the facts plainly show that Sylvia did not voluntarily give up her position with the respondent, and only acquiesced in a 1-day lay-off under pressure from the respondent. Furthermore, the fact that Mrs. Hyde agreed to call her indicates that the respondent did not consider Sylvia's statement a resignation of her employment.

[68] Mrs. Hyde testified that the purpose of these calls was to inform Mrs. Hull that "Mr. Baty would like to talk with her again."

We find that Sylvia Hull did not voluntarily leave the employment of the respondent, but that she was temporarily laid off by the respondent because of her membership in and activity on behalf of the I. L. G. W. U.[69] We therefore find that the respondent discriminated in regard to her tenure of employment,[70] thereby discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U., and interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act. We further find that under all the circumstances the respondent's effort to communicate with her after her lay-off was equivalent to an offer of reinstatement [71] and that the respondent did not, discriminatorily refuse to reinstate her within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

May Fike was first employed by the respondent in 1926 or 1927 and with the exception of approximately 2 years

B. 1, 36, where the Board held a "furlough" because of union activities was a violation of Section 8 (3) of the Act.

[70] The respondent does not contend that it was compelled to lay off Mrs. Hull because of the demands of its other employees. Even assuming that such action was taken for that reason, the existence of such coercive pressure affords no defense to a violation of the Act. See National Labor Relations Board v. Star Publishing Co., 97 F.(2d) 465, 470, enf'g Matter of Star Publishing Co. and Seattle Newspapers Guild, Local No. 82, 4 N. L. R. B. 498.

[71] While Mrs. Hyde did not state that the respondent sought to offer Mrs. Hull reinstatement, from all the circumstances we infer that that was the respondent's purpose. The Trial Examiner in effect so found and did not recommend either reinstatement or back pay for Mrs. Hull.

in 1931-32 was continuously in the employ of the respondent until May 1, 1937. She joined the I. L. G. W. U. on March 15, 1937. She is a sister of Fern Sigler, a member of the I. L. G. W. U., against whom three anti-union demonstrations were staged by the respondent's employees on the morning of April 23, 1937, as a result of which Mrs. Sigler was forced to leave the plant. Mrs. Fike, who was employed in a sewing machine section adjacent to that in which these demonstrations occurred, testified that a number of the operators in her section talked to her in the presence of her instructor, Pearl Atchison, about the fact that Mrs. Fike's sister was a member of the I. L. G. W. U. She further testified that Mrs. Atchison questioned her on the morning of the demonstration about her knowledge of Fern Sigler's membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and about her own membership in that union. Mrs. Fike stated that she first denied and then admitted that she was a member of the I. L. G. W. U. She also testified that her instructor [fol. 725] told her that she would lose her job because of the demonstration against her sister, Fern Sigler. Mrs. Atchison denied that the conversation concerned Fern Sigler and the demonstration against her or that she asked Mrs. Fike whether she was a member of the I. L. G. W. U. However, Mrs. Atchison does not deny that she talked to Mrs. Fike that day, nor does she deny that she discovered Mrs. Fike was a member of the I. L. G. W. U. In view of the widespread commotion caused by the demonstration against Fern Sigler in the adjacent section and the fact that it was generally known that Mrs. Sigler and Mrs. Fike were sisters, we are persuaded that Mrs. Fike's version of the conversation is substantially correct. Accordingly, we find that Mrs. Atchison knew that Mrs. Fike was a sister of Fern Sigler and that both were members of the I. L. G. W. U.,[72] and warned her that she was in danger of losing her job because of these facts. Since Mrs. Atchison is a supervisory employee, and in her capacity as instructor represented the management, the respondent is responsible for her statements and conduct.[73]

The demonstrations and statements made by Mrs. Atchison to Mrs. Fike hereinabove described occurred on Friday, April 23. On Monday, April 26, when Mrs. Fike reported for work, Pearl Atchison told her that she would have to go home because work in that section was slack. It was customary, when work was slack, for girls in the section to take a half day or a day off in turn. However, Mrs. Fike had already taken her turn. When she protested at being laid off out of turn, Mrs. Atchison replied, " . . . that is orders from the office." Mrs. Fike thereupon went to Mrs. Hyde, the employment manager, and asked her if she had been singled out for a lay-off because of the demonstration against her sister. Mrs. Hyde denied this[74] and told her to telephone the plant about work the following day. Mrs. Fike did so, and was directed to return. She worked from the afternoon of April 27 through April 30. Although Mrs. Fike was returned to work after losing only 1 day's employment we are convinced and find that her lay-off out of turn was because of her connection with the I. L. G. W. U.[75]

On April 28 or 29, May Fike requested Mrs. Hyde to permit her to take her vacation the first 2 weeks in May. According to Mrs. Fike, Mrs. Hyde told her she might go, [fol. 726] but that if she did so, she would have to take whatever work there was when she returned, since the volume of production at the plant would be reduced by that time. Mrs. Fike testified that with this understanding she went on her vacation.

[74] The respondent did not offer any explanation for Mrs. Fike's lay-off out of turn either at the time of the latter's protest or at the hearing.

[75] The complaint does not allege that the 1-day lay-off of Mrs. Fike was a discrimination with regard to hire and tenure of her employment, and our finding in respect thereto is stated here only in support of our ultimate conclusion that Mrs. Fike was discriminatorily refused reinstatement and in effect discharged at a later date.

Mrs. Fike's vacation period expired on Monday, May 17. Prior to that date, on May 12, she came down to the plant, and while there inquired of Mrs. Hyde whether there would be work on the following Monday. Mrs. Hyde told her that she did not know and instructed her to call in on Friday, May 14. Mrs. Fike called, and Mrs. Hyde told her that she did not know whether there would be work, but to inquire again on Monday morning, May 17. On Monday, Mrs. Fike was told that there was no work, but to call up later. Thereafter, over a period of several weeks, Mrs. Fike telephoned to Mrs. Hyde a number of times. Each time she was told that there was no work. On the last occasion Mrs. Hyde told Mrs. Fike that she would call her when the respondent needed her. Mrs. Fike has never been called by the respondent during the 2 years intervening between the termination of her employment and the date of the hearing in this proceeding.

The respondent defends the termination of Mrs. Fike's employment on the ground that she left voluntarily on April 30, 1937, after being told that if she took her vacation at that time she could consider herself discharged. Mr. Baty and Mrs. Hyde both stated that Mrs. Fike was so informed. However, we do not think this testimony is consistent with Mrs. Hyde's subsequent conduct. When Mrs. Fike inquired of her about work on May 12, Mrs. Hyde did not mention any discharge and told her to call in again. On later occasions, during the several succeeding weeks, when Mrs. Fike telephoned, Mrs. Hyde told her that there was no work but to call again, and finally told her that the respondent would notify her when she was needed. This conduct on the part of Mrs. Hyde indicates to us that Mrs. Fike was not told, as claimed by the respondent, that if she insisted upon taking her vacation she could consider herself discharged; rather, it supports Mrs. Fike's testimony that she was told she would have to take whatever work there was when she returned. We therefore find that May Fike did not voluntarily leave the employ of the respondent on April 30, 1937, but went on vacation at that time with the understanding that she would be taken back when work was available.

It is also contended by the respondent that May Fike was refused reinstatement on May 17 and thereafter because there was no work for her. But the respondent's own employment records and testimony show that this is not true. Prior to the time May Fike took her vacation she was engaged in sewing underseam bindings. In her [fol. 727] section there were some 14 or 15 operators who devoted all of their time to underseam binding. The employment cards of these 14 operators show that during the week of May 17, which ended on May 21, every one of them worked more than 40 hours—the customary workweek. Nearly all of the 14 worked 53 hours that week. During the week ending May 28, 11 of the 14 worked overtime and only 2 put in less than 40 hours. Yet, during these 2 weeks, Mrs. Fike was told on several occasions that there was no work. Furthermore, the respondent's production manager, Lee Baty, testified that from April 1, 1937, to June 15 or 20, the respondent was unable to meet its production dead lines. Baty also admitted that there was work at the time Mrs. Fike desired to return, but he asserted that there was not enough to justify bringing back operators who had been laid off. Mrs. Hyde testified that the month of May was one of the biggest production months, that on May 12, 1937, the plant was operating at capacity and continued to operate at capacity until the latter part of June. Moreover, even though the slack season was approaching when Mrs. Fike completed her vacation, this is no defense to the respondent's refusal to give her work sometime later when production again increased. Although Mrs. Hyde last said that she would call Mrs. Fike when the respondent needed her, neither Mrs. Hyde nor any other of the respondent's supervisors has done so in the 2 years since May 1937. From these facts we find that May Fike was not denied reinstatement by the respondent because there was no work for her.

Finally, the respondent takes the position that Mrs. Fike has never been reinstated because she was an inefficient operator. Lee Baty testified that he recalled that over a 3-year period a great deal of her work had been returned to her by the respondent's inspectors for repairing and resewing. No records were available to show the amount of repair work, nor did any of the inspectors testify concerning Mrs. Fike's work. On the other hand, Mrs. Fike had been employed by the respondent for more than 10 years. It does not seem reasonable to suppose that the respondent would have continued to employ her for so long a period if her work was unsatisfactory. Nor is there evidence that any of the respondent's supervisory officials ever discussed with Mrs. Fike the character of her work.

On the basis of all the evidence we find that May Fike was denied reinstatement and in effect discharged by the respondent after her vacation because of her membership in and activities on behalf of the I. L. G. W. U. We therefore find that the respondent discriminated in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Fike, thereby [fol. 728] discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U.,[76] and interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

Since the termination of her employment at the respondent's factory, Mrs. Fike has worked intermittently at two other garment factories, and had employment at the time she testified in this proceeding.

IV. THE EFFECT OF THE UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES

We find that the activities of the respondent set forth in Section III above, occurring in connection with its operations described in Section I above, have a close, intimate, and substantial relation to trade, traffic, and commerce among the several States, and tend to lead to labor disputes burdening and obstructing commerce and the free flow of commerce.

V. THE REMEDY

We have found that the respondent has engaged in and is engaging in unfair labor practices by dominating and interfering with the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and by contributing support to it; by interfering with, restraining, and coercing its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act; and by discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of its employees and the terms and conditions of their employment, thereby discouraging membership in the I. L. G. W. U. and encouraging membership in the D. G. W. U. We shall order the respondent to cease and desist from these unfair labor practices. To effectuate the policies of the Act we shall order the respondent to withdraw recognition from the D. G. W. U. and to disestablish it completely as the representative of any of the respondent's employees for the purpose of collective bargaining. Since we have found that the D. G. W. U. is dominated and assisted by the respondent and that the closed-shop contract granted to the D. G. W. U. by the respondent was an integral part of the respondent's campaign to encourage membership in the D. G. W. U. and to discourage membership in the I. L. G. W. U., we shall order the respondent to cease and desist from giving effect to the contract of May 27, 1937, to the supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, to all extensions, renewals, modifications, and supplements thereof, and to any superseding contracts which may now be in operation. However, nothing in this Decision and Order shall be taken to [fol. 729] require the respondent to vary or abandon the substantive features embodied in the contracts, relating to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment.[77] We shall also order the respondent to cease and desist from giving effect to the check-off agreement with the D. G. W. U. and to reimburse its employees for all amounts deducted from wages as dues for the D. G. W. U.[78]

We have found that the respondent discriminated in regard to the tenure of employment of Sylvia Hull on April 23, 1937, because of her membership in and activities on behalf of the I. L. G. W. U. Upon all the evidence we have also found that Sylvia Hull never communicated with the respondent after she left the plant on April 23 and that the respondent made bona fide but unsuccessful efforts to communicate with her to offer her reinstatement. We have found that under all the circumstances the respondent's action was equivalent to an offer of reinstatement which Mrs. Hull, by her failure to communicate with the respondent after instructions to do so, refused to accept. We shall therefore withhold our customary order of reinstatement and we shall not require the respondent to make Mrs. Hull whole for any loss of pay incurred because of the discrimination against her on April 23, 1937.

We have found that the respondent discriminatorily discharged May Fike by refusing to permit her to resume her work at the termination of her vacation on May 17, 1937, because of her membership in and activities on behalf of the I. L. G. W. U. We shall, therefore, order the respondent to offer to May Fike full and immediate reinstatement to her former or substantially equivalent position. We shall also order the respondent to make whole May Fike for any loss of pay she may have suffered by reason of the discriminatory failure to reinstate her, by payment to her of a sum equal to the amount which she normally would have earned as wages from May 17, 1937, the date of that discrimination,[79] to the date of the respondent's offer of reinstatement, less net earnings[80] during said period, excluding from the computation of her back pay, the period from the [79]We have chosen May 17, 1937, since that is the date on which Mrs. Fike's vacation period terminated and she normally would have returned to work. It is true that the record does not affirmatively establish that there was work for her on that day, but in view of the testimony that the respondent's plant was operating at capacity from May 12, 1937, to the latter part of June 1937, we find that the respondent could have given Mrs. Fike employment on May 17, 1937, and that her award of back pay should be computed from that date.

[80]By "net earnings" is meant earnings less expenses, such as for transportation, room, and board, incurred by an employee in connection with obtaining work and working elsewhere than for the respondent, which would not have been incurred but for his unlawful discharge and the consequent necessity of his seeking employment elsewhere. See Matter of Crossett Lumber Company and United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Lumber and Sawmill Workers, Local 2590, 8 N. L. R. B. 440. Monies received for work performed upon Federal, State, county, municipal, or other work-relief projects are not considered as earnings, but, as provided below in the order, shall be deducted from the sum due the employee, and the amount thereof shall be paid over to the appropriate fiscal agency of the Federal, State, county, municipal, or other government or governments which supplied the funds for said work-relief projects.

date of service of the Intermediate Report to the date of [fol. 730] the Order herein, since the Trial Examiner found she was not discriminatorily discharged and recommended dismissal of the complaint with respect to her. [51]

Upon the basis of the foregoing findings of fact and upon the entire record in the case, the Board makes the following:

(e) Post immediately and keep posted for at least sixty (60) consecutive days from the date of posting, in conspicuous places throughout the plant, notices stating that the respondent will cease and desist in the manner set forth in paragraphs 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e), and will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraphs 2 (a), (b), (c), and (d) of this Order; and further stating that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that the respondent will not discriminate against any employee because of membership in or activity on behalf of that organization;

[fol. 732] (Decision and Order of National Labor Relations Board, June 9, 1943.)

United States of America

Before the National Labor Relations Board

In the Matter of

Donnelly Garment Company
and International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union
and
Donnelly Garment Workers Union, party to a contract.

Case No. C-1382.

On November 27, 1942, the Trial Examiner issued his Intermediate Report in the above-entitled proceeding, finding that the respondent had engaged in and was engaging in certain unfair labor practices and recommending that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the copy of the Intermediate Report attached hereto.

During the hearing, the Trial Examiner ruled upon various motions and upon objections to the admission of evidence. The Board has reviewed the rulings of the Trial Examiner and finds that no prejudicial errors were committed. The rulings are hereby affirmed.

Pursuant to notice, a hearing for the purpose of oral argument was held before the Board on March 16, 1943, at Washington, D. C. The respondent, the I. L. G. W. U., and the D. G. W. U. were represented by counsel and presented argument. The Board has considered the Intermediate Report, the exceptions and briefs, and the entire record in the case, and hereby adopts the findings, conclusions, and recommendations made by the Trial Examiner, with the exceptions and qualifications noted below:

A. The remand; the evidence adduced pursuant thereto.

In remanding the case to the Board for further hearing, the Circuit Court directed that the respondent and the D. G. W. U. be permitted to adduce the previously proffered testimony of respondent's employees to show, in substance, that they formed and joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will and that they were not influenced, interfered with, or coerced by the respondent in choosing that organization as their bargaining representative. In compliance with the Court's mandate and pursuant to the respective offers of proof submitted by the respondent and [fol. 733] the D. G. W. U. at the original hearing, the Board permitted the introduction of such testimony.[1] We have carefully considered all such evidence adduced by the respondent and the D. G. W. U. We find, however, that the testimony in question does not overcome more positive evidence in the record that the respondent committed acts of interference and assistance in the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. which subjected that organization to the respondent's domination and which removed from the employees' selection of the D. G. W. U. the complete freedom of choice which the Act contemplates. Since we find the testimony here adduced totally unpersuasive that the employees voluntarily designated the D. G. W. U., we are moreover impelled to adhere to the opinion, derived from our experience in administration of the Act, that conclusionary evidence of this nature is immaterial to issues such as those presented in this case.[2] A consideration of all the evidence convinces us, and we find, that the respondent dominated and interfered with

---

[1]At the original hearing, the Trial Examiner, although denying the broad offers of proof submitted by the respondent and the D. G. W. U., nevertheless permitted 9 witnesses to testify that they joined the D. G. W. U. of their own free will. Twelve witnesses, whose testimony before Judge Miller in the injunction proceeding was admitted as part of the record, likewise testified that they voluntarily joined the D. G. W. U. At the further hearing, the respondent was permitted to introduce 11 witnesses who gave similar testimony in accordance with the respondent's offer of proof. Five of these witnesses, had also signed the D. G. W. U.'s offers of proof, and all of the 11 were examined by the D. G. W. U. pursuant to its offers.

the formation and administration of the D. G. W. U. and contributed support thereto; and that the respondent thereby interfered with, restrained, and coerced its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

B. Membership and participation in the D. G. W. U. by alleged supervisory employees.

The Trial Examiner found that Harry Grogan, listed on the pay roll under the heading, "Instructors and Floor Ladies," and Hilda Richmond and Veda Hoyland, listed under the payroll heading, "Buying Records," were supervisory employees whose participation in D. G. W. U. affairs was attributable to the respondent. It appears that Grogan was inadvertently listed on the payroll as an instructor. [fol. 734] There is no other evidence that he was employed in a supervisory capacity. While Richmond and Hoyland appear under the heading of "Buying Records," which covers the executive force and other salaried workers of the respondent, we are of the opinion that this fact, in the absence of other evidence, is insufficient to warrant a finding that they enjoyed a supervisory status. Accordingly, we find that the activities of these three employees in connection with the D. G. W. U. are not attributable to the respondent.

Order.

Upon the entire record in the case, and pursuant to Section 10 (c) of the National Labor Relations Act, the National Labor Relations Board hereby orders that the respondent, Donnelly Garment Company, Kansas City, Missouri, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Dominating or interfering with the administration of Donnelly Garment Workers Union, or with the formation or administration of any other labor organization of its employees, and from contributing financial or other support to Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees;

(b) Giving effect to its contract of May 27, 1937, and supplemental wage agreement of June 22, 1937, or to any extension, renewal, modification, or supplement thereof, or to any superseding contract or agreement, with Donnelly Garment Workers Union, and from giving effect to its check-off agreement with said organization;

(c) Discouraging membership in International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, or any other labor organization of its employees, or encouraging membership in Donnelly Garment Workers Union or any other labor organization of its employees, by laying off any of its employees, or in any manner discriminating in regard to their hire and tenure of employment, or any term or condition of employment;

(d) Dominating, controlling, and using the Donnelly Loyalty League to interfere with, restrain, and coerce its employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

(e) In any other manner interfering with, restraining, or coercing its employees in the exercise of the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, or to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, as guaranteed in Section 7 of the Act.

2. Take the following affirmative action which the Board finds will effectuate the policies of the Act.

(a) Withdraw all recognition from Donnelly Garment Workers Union as the representative of any of its employees for the purpose of dealing with the respondent concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or other conditions of employment, and completely disestablish Donnelly Garment Workers as such representative;

(b) Reimburse all of its employees for all dues and assessments, if any, which it has deducted from their wages on behalf of Donnelly Garment Workers Union;

(c) Post immediately in conspicuous places throughout the respondent's Kansas City factory, and maintain for a period of at least sixty (60) consecutive days, notices [fol. 735] to its employees stating: (1) that the respondent will not engage in the conduct from which it is ordered to cease and desist in paragraphs 1 (a) to (e) hereof; (2) that the respondent will take the affirmative action set forth in paragraphs 2 (a) and (b) hereof; and (3) that the respondent's employees are free to become or remain members of International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and that the respondent will not in any manner discriminate against any employee because of membership or activity in said organization.

(d) Notify the Regional Director for the Seventeenth Region in writing within ten (10) days from the date of this Order what steps the respondent has taken to comply herewith.

And It Is Further Ordered that the complaint, insofar as it alleges that the respondent, by discriminating in regard to the hire and tenure of employment of May Pike, has engaged in unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 8 (3) of the Act, be, and it hereby is, dismissed.

[fol. 3] Proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: I want to make a short statement.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 5] The Trial Examiner will allow an automatic exception to all adverse rulings during the course of the [fol. 6] hearing, and upon appropriate order an objection and exception will be permitted to stand to an entire line of questioning.

* * * * * *

Now, I want to say at this point that when I complete this statement I am going to request the Board's attorney to file the pleadings thus far in the case, asking that they will be marked Board's Exhibits 1-A, B, C, and so forth, whether they are respondent's pleadings or intervener's pleadings, in order that we have something before us to start with.

* * * * * *

[fol. 49] Trial Examiner Batten: You are allowed an automatic exception to all adverse rulings. You don't have to ask for them, and you will all receive them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 66] Mr. Leary: Well, I am willing, Mr. Examiner, to amend paragraph 11 to read as follows:

"Respondent, since on or about July 5, 1935, and thereafter, by the acts set forth", and so forth.

Mr. Langsdale: Why would you limit it to July 5, 1935?

Mr. Leary: I would want it understood, though, Mr. Examiner, that by that amendment I wasn't estopping myself from offering evidence which would go to show the background of the employment conditions at the plant prior to July 5, 1935.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, you are putting in a date but you don't want to be bound by it; is that what you mean?

Mr. Leary: No, not at all. I think the Act only became effective on July 5. That is why I am selecting that date.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand what you mean by background. Of course, background may be necessary up to a certain point, but, of course, if the background becomes the picture it is not so well.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, we would like to put in evidence to show the attitude of this respondent toward the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, commencing in 1935 down to now.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 67] Mr. Ingraham: If Your Honor please, the pleading starts with April 27, 1937.

Mr. Leary: Excuse me. I must take exception. It starts with February 12, 1935.

Mr. Ingraham: That is the date of the Donnelly Loyalty League. But, I want to call Your Honor's attention to this: There was a case before the old N.R.A. Labor Board and that case began approximately the 1st of February, and ran clear to June. Now, if we are going into all these old ancient history matters we are going to be here for over a year, because as soon as they go into it we have got to. We have got to deny the evidence and put in our evidence, and that is going to consume a terrible length of time; and, in addition, Your Honor, that is all mat-[fol. 68] ters that occurred prior to the passage of the Wagner Act that I can't believe would be material.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 94] Mr. Langsdale: I wish to dictate into the record a motion to strike certain portions of the answer of the Donnelly Garment Company, which motion I will at a later date reduce to writing, if the Examiner wishes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 95] Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed with the motion and I will assign a number to it now. That would be Board's Exhibit 1-QQQ.

* * * * * *

[fol. 106] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, have you anything?

[fol. 107] Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, I think that these facts are certainly germane to this issue, go to the very guts of the case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you mean that we should try out both of these injunction suits.

Mr. Ingraham: No, your Honor, that is res adjudicata. These parties were bound by that decree, but I do say that we have a right to show the conspiracies and the fact that the International is now using the Wagner Act to carry on this conspiracy. It is using the instrumentalities of the Labor Board to injure respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you think, Mr. Ingraham, in a case where you are charged with a 8(1), (2), and (3), that you should be able to come in and try the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Labor Board in this hearing?

* * * * * *

[fol. 108] Mr. Ingraham: But I would think, if Your Honor please, that Your Honor would certainly consider germane as to whether or not the International had complied with the Wagner Act or whether it was acting contrary to the very spirit of the law that Your Honor is here to enforce.

* * * * * *

[fol. 109] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, surely, in an action, if you were charged with some offense under a Federal statute, and you should come into court and show that the person who appeared before the Grand Jury or filed the information was a worse person than you, would that relieve you of any responsibility?

Mr. Ingraham: No; but, let me put this question to Your Honor: Supposing in a prosecution it is charged that the prosecuting attorney is in a conspiracy with the complaining witness. Do you mean to say that the court wouldn't allow the defense to show that?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I say that in that action you would not show that by an answer, surely.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't know how else you would show it, then. You could go—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Do you mean to tell me that you would go into court in answer to—we will say you were charged with a violation of the Nar- [fol. 110] cotics Act, and you were to come in and show that the Narcotics Division Agent and the prosecuting attorney were in a conspiracy to convict you of a violation of the Narcotics Act; would that relieve you of any responsibility?

Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think it would be material along with my denial.

Trial Examiner Batten: My point is, do you think the Federal Court would entertain such a proposition?

Mr. Ingraham: I certainly do; in all earnestness I think that. And I think that for the purpose of understanding the situation that exists in this case, that it is very important that you would give consideration to what has taken place and what has been proven in court. I don't think that it is certainly the province of the Labor Board to assist in any way, shape or form, anybody that is out for the sole purpose of violating the Wagner Act itself, that is, injuring and attempting to damage a company because it won't violate the Wagner Act.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Ingraham, don't misunderstand me. I don't say that your contention is not one which the Board should entertain if properly presented to them. My only point is, is this the place? Is it a defense to the thing which the respondent is here charged with? I still don't see—when you say to me that if it were all true it still doesn't relieve you of the 8 (1), [fol. 111] (2) and (3), if it is proven. In other words, if you have committed an unfair labor practice and the record shows it, the evidence proves it, which is received, and there is no prejudicial error, there is no lack of due process, it is reviewable by the Board and the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Circuit Court of Appeals reviews it and they say there is no error, there is no lack of due process and they are guilty of 8 (1), (2) and (3); now, you don't mean to tell me that based upon the evidence that the Court would set it aside if these other things were not admitted by the union?

. . . . . .

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, I would think that it would not be the province of the Labor Board, at the request of somebody that is violating the—or attempting to violate the Labor Board Act, to prosecute a company on [fol. 112] charges made by that person or union, when it is known and been found that that union has been party to a conspiracy, has been a party to a scheme to make the company by force violate the very law that the Labor Board is to enforce.

I think the Labor Board, very properly, should hear matters of that character, and I think that the fact that it goes to the good faith—that is, witnesses get on the stand; if they were in good faith, that may be one thing, if you would believe that they were in good faith—but when it can be shown that they are just a party to a scheme and being used for a purpose, that is absolutely in violation of the Wagner Act, I think.

. . . . . .

[fol. 130] With respect to the motions made by the respondent and the intervener to dismiss, those two motions are denied.

Now, with respect to the request of Mr. Tyler, representing the intervener, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, an application for an election, of course, that would have to be denied because this is not in our proceeding, Mr. Tyler, and the Trial Examiner, of course, could not entertain a petition for an election in this proceeding, [fol. 131] and that decision is based partly upon the two petitions which were filed, marked as Board's Exhibit 1-NNN and 1-OOO.

. . . . . .

Now, with respect to the motions to make more definite and certain, is there any objection on the part of the respondent and the intervener, if we consider both motions jointly?

* * * * * *

[fol. 133] Mr. Leary: With reference to paragraph 5 (a), Mr. Examiner, I am willing to amend the paragraph by inserting after the words "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union" the words "particularly in the months of April and May, 1937, and thereafter," so that the paragraph as amended will read "did encourage, allow and permit supervisory and other employees acting in the interest of respondent to organize, promote, encourage and coerce membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, particularly in the months of April and May, 1937, and thereafter, on respondent's time and on respondent's property, and at respondent's pay and at its expense."

* * * * * *

[fol. 135] Mr. Langsdale: There will be some evidence in my opinion very material to the allegation of paragraph 5 (a), of matters and things that were said and done prior to that time.

* * * * * *

[fol. 136] Trial Examiner Batten: All I can say is this: I am interested in limiting the time we are going to cover in this proceeding. I think I indicated yesterday that I am not going to go outside of the time stated in this complaint on the basis that it is background unless there are some allegations in the complaint with reference to it.

Now, I am not going to spend time in this hearing so that the background becomes the case. I have no objections in this case, as in all other Board cases, and which has been approved by the Supreme Court in the Greyhound cases, showing, for instance, the labor history of the Donnelly Garment Company by probably one witness in a half hour, that just merely gives the background of [fol. 137] the labor history; but I am not going to try out the Donnelly Garment Company dating back a number of years without an allegation in the complaint to that effect; and if that is the intent and purpose of the Board's attorneys, then they had better amend their complaint and I will then pass upon the complaint as amended.

I don't mean by that that even if it is amended that I will receive it in this hearing; but, certainly, if that is the purpose—I mean, if it is the purpose to go rather extensively into the labor history by a number of witnesses and devote quite a bit of time to it, then, certainly, this complaint needs amending.

* * * * * *

[fol. 138] Trial Examiner Batten: We are ready to proceed, I think.

Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, during the past half hour we have been attempting to particularize the complaint and particularly draft a paragraph concerning happenings prior to the effective date of the act, and we have found now that it is just about impossible to do it in a short time, and I would rather not go ahead, and within the next few minutes offer an amended paragraph without having the opportunity of studying the evidence completely on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, of course, you understand what I said a moment ago, I don't want you to misunderstand my remarks,—I said that in accordance with the rulings of the Board, and the Supreme Court in the Greyhound cases, if all you intended to do was to have, [fol. 139] we will say just one witness briefly sketch the labor relations of this plant, and take, just hastily run over it in order that it would be a background, I have no objection to that, and by that I don't mean that the other parties might not have an objection. I am merely stating the Examiner's position. If it is your plan, as I get it from Mr. Langsdale's remarks, that you intend to go into it extensively and show the discrimination, and so forth, prior to the time stated in the complaint, certainly, the complaint should so state because I don't propose to have the background become the case in this hearing.

* * * * * *

[fol. 155] Trial Examiner Batten: Now, I think that we may proceed with any further matters that the respondent has without prejudice, of course, to the first motion that you have stated, a motion to dismiss.

Mr. Stottle: Well, the respondent has a motion to strike, which is directed to the new paragraph 4 (a), which has [fol. 156] been incorporated in the amended complaint, 1-RRR, which I desire to read and urge upon the Examiner. It reads as follows:

* * * * * *

[fol. 159] (Thereupon the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 1-TTT" for identification.)

* * * * * *

Mr. Leary: Let me review briefly, Mr. Examiner, my position on this complaint. I believe that based upon the complaints that the Board has been issuing in the past, and in the various reviews that have been made of those complaints in the circuit courts, courts of appeals and in the Supreme Court, that that complaint as set out and originally served on the parties here was entirely sufficient so far as it permitted the counsel for the Board to offer any testimony regarding the background of the labor, [fol. 160] or the background of the unfair labor practices at the plant of the company.

Now, based upon the motion that respondent has made to make the complaint more definite and certain, and also based partially upon the discussion that was had between all parties at the hearing room yesterday, I attempted to, in paragraph 4-A, to set out in some detail the things that we propose to cover and the nature of the background. Now, none of those things—I concur with Mr. Stottle on it—are violations of the Act, because the Act was not a law at that time, but I do think that they are perfectly proper for the Board to consider in determining whether or not the acts and conduct of respondent since July, July 5, 1935, are unfair labor practices and, therefore, violations of the Wagner Act.

* * * * * *

[fol. 164] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, let me ask you this, Mr. Leary, with respect to those individuals: in this hearing, unless you show that those individuals were dis-[fol. 165] charged for union activities, it is of no value to you or to your case, is it?

Mr. Leary: No, it isn't.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right. If you show that, isn't the respondent entitled then to come in and show they were not discharged for union activities, but for cause; isn't that correct?

Mr. Leary: I believe you are correct, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right. Then what it means, that we must try out the issues of the discharging of all those persons. It is of no value to you unless you show they were discharged for union activity. If you do, the respondent is entitled to come in and show that that is not the reason for the discharge. Therefore, we have to try out every one of these as an 8(3) case, even though you don't allege it as an 8(3) case.

* * * * * *

[fol. 184] Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, if you please, I would like to have my motion for continuance marked and filed at this time. It is in the same words and figures as was exhibited to you a day or two ago, and I wish to make a remark about it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 185] Mr. Tyler: Well, I wish to present at this time, if the Examiner please, and has it been given a number?

Trial Examiner Batten: 1-RRR, I believe that is right. No, that is the amended complaint, and 1-XXX we will give to that.

Mr. Tyler: I desire to call the attention of the Examiner to the fact that since this motion was originally called to his attention, the intervener has filed with the Board a motion to elect—a motion asking for an election—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) You mean you filed the petition with the Board, is that right?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, the intervener has filed a petition, an application, I call it, for an election of the employees with the Board on a form presented and prepared by the Board and marked with an "R" number and not marked as being in this hearing.

[fol. 191] Trial Examiner Batten: Let me ask you the question again, Mr. Tyler, if the Board were to hold a secret election under the Board's supervision, and this hearing were to demonstrate that this organization were absolutely dominated by the employer, that it was formed by the employer, that it was sponsored by the employer, that it is supported by the employer, do you think that the next day you could hold an election and that all of that domination and support which we will say has run over a period of 2 or 3 or 4 years would be dissipated to the point where all the employees would go down and freely express their opinion in an election?

Mr. Tyler: I think Your Honor's suggestion involves a [fol. 192] contradiction in itself, that is impossible. If a secret, fair election shows that these employees desire to continue with the bargaining agency they now have, I think it would be impossible to find that they were dominated or controlled because the secret election—

Mr. Leary: (Interrupting) I wonder—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Will you tell me what you mean by "secret and fair election?"

Mr. Tyler: I mean an election which secures to the employee the right to express his own opinion without anyone finding out how he voted.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, absolutely.

Mr. Tyler: That can be done by this Board.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Tyler, a hundred per cent, that if this Board feels such an election could be conducted, it ought to be done tomorrow.

Mr. Tyler: I submit the Board can do it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well now, the only question is whether or not the Board agrees with you and me that the situation is such that you can do that.

Mr. Tyler: And I submit that the Examiner should continue this hearing until the Board decides whether to hold an election, and if they do, until the results of that election are known, because it is the most decisive and the most complete way of determining, the most important fact involved.

* * * * * *

* * * * * *

[fol. 203] Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, 1-ZZZ and 1-AAAA will be received on the same basis as Board's other exhibits 1.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, have you anything to say with regard to Board's Motion to strike and amend?

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, I am filing a motion to strike the Board's exhibit. I will take that up, if you desire.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed with that motion.

Mr. Ingraham: I think, in order for Your Honor to understand my position, I will have to read the Board's motion to strike.

* * * * * *

[fol. 206] Paragraphs (o) and (p) we move to strike for the reason that nothing contained in said paragraphs constitutes any charge or act in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

Now, in connection with paragraphs (o) and (p), Your Honor recalls that the Board in its first amendment alleged that the respondent discharged the persons named in these paragraphs on account of their union affiliations. These people were discharged prior to the enactment of the Wagner Act. Your Honor then struck out that allegation of the Board's amendment. Now the Board inserts these same names again which of course will involve the same issues that were involved in this prior amendment which Your Honor has struck out.

* * * * * *

[fol. 207] If we are going to go into those issues or would have to be compelled to meet that issue it is going to require going back over the whole NRA proceeding and the issues involved in that proceeding, and I think, in view of Your Honor's ruling that the Board should not be permitted to again plead these issues which you have ruled out and which are going to require a great deal of testimony if we go into it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 214] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the respondent's motion to strike is denied except as to paragraphs "O" and "P" in the Exhibit 1-ZZZ. I will reserve my decision on that until this afternoon, at which time I will decide what should be done with it, and if there is no further motions, we will proceed.

* * * * * *

[fol. 221] Rose Todd, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. State your name and address, please.
A. Rose Todd; 4343 Oak.
Q. Is that Kansas City, Missouri?
A. Kansas City, Missouri.

Q. Where are you employed?
A. Donnelly Garment Company.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:
Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?
[fol. 222] A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your position in that union?
A. Chairman.
Q. How long have you been chairman?
A. Since its organization in April—April 27, 1937.
Q. When did you first become employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?
A. Approximately 13 years ago. Two years of that time I was not in their employ.
Q. And you began in about 1926?
A. I believe it was 1926, yes.
Q. And what two years were you not in their employ?
A. Around November 1st of 1931 until about August 1st of 1933. I believe that is correct. I sometimes get confused on those dates, but I think that is correct.
Q. Where had you been employed prior to the time you went to work for the Donnelly Garment Company in 1926, or thereabouts?
A. For approximately five and a half or six years at the Thornton Minor Sanitarium, for Dr. W. E. Minor.
Q. In what capacity?
A. As assistant in his surgical work, assistant nurse, I mean, in his surgical work.
Q. Was that your first employment that you had?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you began with Donnelly in 1926, what was your work?
[fol. 223] A. Operator on power machine.
Q. How long did you remain as an operator?
A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary, just definitely, but I don't know whether to say several months or a few months, but it was, I would judge, about five or six months.
Q. Then what work did you start to do?
A. I helped on the floor as thread girl.
Q. When you—
A. (Interrupting) In one of the departments.

Q. When you say on the floor, will you explain that?

A. Yes, in one of the sections, helping at times distribute our work and giving out thread, notions; things of that type.

Q. Isn't a section composed of somewhere around forty girls?

A. I think it was approximately at that time forty girls.

Q. That is an independent operating unit, is it not, within the plant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there are many sections in the plant?

A. I don't know as "independent" is the word to use. We have sections, but they are dependent on each other.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean by that that one section doesn't complete a garment? Is that correct?

A. Sometimes, yes, but seldom without some work being done, in another section.

Q. Well, do each of these sections have a certain def- [fol. 224] inite work they perform? I mean a part of the operation, or the entire operation?

A. Well, at times they might perform all—well, they never do perform all the work, because that would go to—we would have to have button holes and various things, and various preparations for our notions with it, but you would call it a department inasmuch as that is possible. I don't believe any factory could function, at least, that one couldn't function, without the other departments.

Q. Well, of course, that is true. Will you just tell us in a few words exactly what this section did that you first worked in there as a thread girl, or whatever you call it? If you remember.

A. It has been so long ago I don't even remember what section it was, but at that time when some of the other sections—we were making dresses.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Isn't it true, Mrs. Todd, in so far as possible, after the materials are cut and all the various parts are assembled and put in bundles, that they pass through a section and an effort is made to complete it?

A. I think so.

Q. All the sewing on the garment was in one section?

A. Not always, no, sir, Mr. Leary. Is it "Leary" or "O'Leary"?

Q. It is Leary now. After you had worked as an oper-
[fol. 225] ator, I believe you testified you worked on the floor?

A. Yes, as a thread girl.

Q. Now, who are the persons that are in charge of these various sections?

A. The production manager, at that time, would have been Mrs. Reeves. Now, it is Mr. Baty.

Q. Do you have what you call an [instruction] in each section?

A. We have, yes, but our instructors in that plant are not given any directive authority, other than to handle the work.

Mr. Leary: I move to strike all that part the witness answered after the first six or seven words, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the question and answer?

(Whereupon, the following question and answer were read by the reporter:

"Question: Do you have what you call an instructor in each section?

"Answer: We have, yes, but—")

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken from that place on.

* * * * * *

[fol. 226] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Your answer is that you do have instructors?

A. We do have instructors.

Q. And the instructor doesn't do any operating at all,—do they?

A. Any actual sewing?

Q. Yes.

A. She shows the operator how to do her work.

Q. Does the instructor do any actual operating on the machines?

A. Do you mean productive operating?

Q. Yes.

A. Other than the amount necessary to show an operator how to proceed with her operation.

Q. That might take up about 2 or 3 per cent of her time during the [way] wouldn't you say?

A. I wouldn't think I could say the percentage, but any amount that is necessary with that many people.

Q. And are those instructors also called supervisors?

A. No, sir. They have always been called instructors, ever since I worked at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. You then don't have any persons whom you call supervisors, is that it?

A. We don't use that term.

Q. Do you remember—did you hear the testimony in [fol. 227] the NRA hearing in 1935?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, there is also in each section, is there not, a person designated as an assistant instructor?

A. No, sir. We have in our department what we call thread girls. That is what I was referring to when you asked me what I did.

Q. And isn't it a fact that these thread girls, even if they are not called assistant instructors, do act in that capacity of an assistant instructor in her work?

A. I think I couldn't say that, Mr. Leary, because oftentimes those people are not operators.

Q. But very often, and most often, as a matter of fact, they are the better type operators who have been promoted in a sense to be thread girls?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I object to the leading form and cross-examination form of the questions and ask that proper form of direct examination be followed by the Board.

Trial Examiner Batten: He may proceed. I think I said on the opening day, Mr. Tyler, that I am not going to try to tell the attorneys how to ask their questions. You may proceed, and if you testify for the witness, why, it simply means that no weight can be given to the testimony, [fol. 228] that is all, so you attorneys will have to assume the responsibility for the method in which you proceed on that. You may proceed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, in my hearings I don't class any of the witnesses any way. I mean, after all, we are not bound by the rules of evidence and why be bound by any technical proceeding of the court. We are interested in getting all the facts we can get, and it is immaterial to me whether it is an adverse witness or your witness or the respondent's witness. If we get the information we need here, that is the thing we are interested in.

* * * * * *

[fol. 229] Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed on the basis I have just explained.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Isn't it true that in every section there is an instructor and a thread girl?

A. Yes, sir. There might be at times an exception to that, but as a rule that is true.

Q. That has been the situation ever since you have been employed by the company, has it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you speak of working on the floor you refer, do you not, to the work done by either a thread girl or an instructor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all other work, then, at the plant is done by girls at machines; is that it?

A. No, not all other work, Mr. Leary.

Q. But substantially all other work as distinguished from work done on the floor is done on machines?

A. That is true in our sewing section.

Q. How long did you work as a thread girl?

A. Well, I don't remember. I think we were in the Coca-Cola Building at that time. I would have to refer to the records of the company, Mr. Leary, to tell you that.

Q. (By Trial Examiner Batten) Could you tell us approximately, roughly?

[fol. 230] A. Let me see. It must have been most of the time for, I think I would be safe in saying 2 or 3 years, but I am being more truthful when I say I can't tell you without referring to their records.

Q. Are those records available to you?

A. They would be in the employment department. Yes, they would show where I worked.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, I don't suppose there is any objection, is there, to respondent giving us this young lady's employment history?

Mr. Ingraham: No, if we have such a record I will produce it.

The Witness: It would just show, as I recall it, what department you worked in.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. After you worked as a thread girl what position did you assume?

A. Let's see. That must have been, after that, in the department where we made samples part of the time, and made dresses for our factory part of the time.

Q. How long did you work at that?

A. Well, part of that, Mr. Leary, was clerical work and part of it was working on the floor, doing anything that needed to be done. I am not definite about that period, because that was about the time that I began helping to set prices. I am not definite about that time, but it was in [fol. 231] that department.

Q. What is the name of that department, please?

A. I never thought of it having a name. I don't think it had a name. It was just another sewing department.

Q. Were you the instructor there? A. No.

Q. Were you ever the instructor there?

A. I don't think in that department you would say that that was an instructor. At that time Mr. Atchison had charge of that department, and there was always one or two girls there on that work.

Q. Who was Mr. Atchinson?

A. Dewey Atchison.

Q. What is his position now?

A. I think you had better ask Mr. Ingraham what you call him. I never think to call him anything. I don't know what the company calls him. He has been there so long—People around that place don't have titles.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. He was in charge of this department at the time you were helping in it?

A. That is right.

Q. What do you mean by having charge of it?

A. Making time studies and directing that work.

Q. And you say there were two of your girls working under him?

[fol. 232] A. I said sometimes there were two, and sometimes one.

Q. If there was only one under his supervision, would you be the one?

A. I would be the one.

Q. Did you assist in making time studies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would go out in the different departments and study the work? A. Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, do you have any objection if I ask questions?

Mr. Leary: No.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Are you referring to the work Mr. Atchinson was doing back at the time you were working in this section?

A. I am referring to what he was doing then. I thought that is what you were asking. If I didn't understand the question—

Q. Now, is Mr. Atchison still in that same line of work?

A. He worked in the production department, but we don't do that work in that manner. I don't recall that it has been done in that manner for, oh, I guess 5 or 6 years.

Q. Would you call that work efficiency work?

A. I think that would be all right, yes. I don't know that I am any authority as to what it should be called.

Q. What is your best judgment as to the year when [fol. 233] you began this work which, for want of a better term, we will call efficiency work? A. That I began it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, Mr. Leary, I never did do that work—I mean that I develop a plan or how it should be done. I followed instructions from Mr. Atchinson. You will just have to let me find out about that. I can't tell you the year. It isn't that I don't want to; I would be glad to tell you, but I don't remember it.

Q. It was sometime before 1931, was it?

A. Oh, absolutely. I was just going to tell you that. When I left the Donnelly Garment Company's employ in 1931 I was setting piecework prices, and all of this was previous to that time. I would say it was—I would just have to refer to those records some way. I just can't tell you those dates.

Q. It was something more than a few months before 1931, wasn't it?

A. Oh, yes, absolutely, but I don't like to try to give you accurate dates when I don't know the dates. I would have to have a chance to find out what it was.

Q. This man, Dewey Atchinson, was in charge of this work of setting the prices?

A. Yes, sir. Not in charge particularly of setting the prices, but in charge of the manner in which they were set. [fol. 234] When I made out—

Q. How many persons were employed under Mr. Atchinson at that time and assisted him?

A. In doing that work?

Q. Yes.

A. We have had other people, one or two at a time. I don't believe there were ever more than two at a time working on that work.

Q. Who was the other one than yourself?

A. I can't think of that little girl's name. I can find out her name, but I can't think of it now.

Q. Is she still employed there? A. No.

Q. Describe what your duties were when you were employed under Mr. Atchinson on this price-setting operation.

A. Sometimes taking time studies, and then out of that, Mr. Leary, is the time that I learned and acquired the information for setting piecework prices.

Q. First you started off doing this work taking the time studies of the various operations, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the first thing everybody in that line does?

A. I had sewed and working in the departments in the sense of putting a garment together, and things like that, previous to that. Then, we took our time studies with a stop watch.

[fol. 235] Q. And you used to take those in all of the departments of the plant, did you not?

A. Any place that was necessary, where we could find an average person that was working on different types of work so that we could establish something to work from.

Q. Who would it be that would tell you where to take a time study?

A. Sometimes it would be the girls requesting it, that they were not making enough money, of that they had a new type of operation. I don't know that it would be a specific decision. If we were making one dress in the department and we were having some difficulty with it, or it was a new type of work, if that girl asked—or—sometime, if we thought it was new and we were not sure of how we should set that price and what it should be, then we would time one of those girls for an average.

Q. After you had certain experience merely making time studies, then you actually began to set the prices yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many persons were setting the prices at the time you first began to do it?

A. That was Dewey's job, and I helped him do that in the beginning.

I don't think I am explaining it very satisfactorily, but that is a thing in a place like that—and I presume in [fol. 236] any factory—that you sort of grow into. At least, the foundation has to be there, and that is where I acquired mine, from his instruction.

* * * * * *

Q. You and Mr. Atchinson were setting the prices for the company at this time, were you not?

A. Not without assistance, no; not without somebody going over it and knowing whether it was going to be satisfactory.

Q. Who would go over it?

A. As I said a few minutes ago, whatever department had worked on it, the instructor from that department [fol. 237] might look over that. That was just an agreement so that we would know that we were coming as near as possible to something satisfactory on that. And if we had made a time study of an operator, then you had that very definitely to go by.

Q. You merely conferred with the instructors for the purpose of seeking information, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. Could the instructors change the price you and Mr. Atchinson fixed?

A. As long as I have been at the Donnelly Garment Company anybody requesting to have a price changed, it could always be changed. It has always been possible to make an adjustment.

Q. The point is, instructors or operators could request a change, but could they actually make the change themselves?

A. An operator or an instructor, or Dewey or I, or none of us, no one person would say, "We are going to change this price." It would have to be a mutual agreement, or whether we needed to change it, or if they didn't have enough money on it and would ask for more all there would need to be was a discussion on it and we would put more money on it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 242] Q. Why was it that you left the Donnelly plant in 1931?

A. I had an ambition to be a saleswoman, and I thought if I could help a little bit inside until I got onto the hang of it there I could go out on the road.

Q. And you returned to Donnelly's in 1933?

A. Yes.

Q. What position did you assume then?

A. Worked as a thread girl in the building at 2618 something Walnut.

Q. How long did you work as a thread girl?

A. I think that time it was three or four months, or [fol. 243] four or five months.

Q. Then what did you become?

A. Well, I have done just little things here and there and helped out in various departments where they needed help since then. Let me see if I can remember. I helped in one of the other sections over there in the other building since that, I don't remember which one. Then, for awhile—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) Just a moment.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What do you mean, you helped? What did you do?

A. As a thread girl. Then, I helped, in the following Spring—I think that is when I helped with the belt section. If I remember correctly, I spent a few weeks in [their]—or maybe I should say more than a few weeks, in the department where we make samples, helping the person—I don't know that you would say she was in charge, but we have usually two people up there that have had some sewing experience and run these errands and carry stuff back and forth to the girls making samples.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. When did you begin that work?

A. This has all been since 1933.

Q. When did you begin this sample room work, as you call it?

A. This is 1939—1938—I believe I did that part of it in 1935, and I know I did some of it again in the winter of 1936 and the spring of 1937. And one time in there when there wasn't any particular work for me to do—when [fol. 244] I went back of course I didn't expect to get the job back I had had—that desk had been filled and is still filled by the same person—I did some pattern work, or tried to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 245] By Mr. Leary:

Q. In your work, then, in the sample room, Miss Witness, was it not encumbered upon you to go all through the factory?

A. At times.

Q. And to talk to the instructors in the various sections?

A. Yes. If we wanted information from the factory, or if they wanted information from the sample room, or even taking those garments to the people setting prices and figuring that line on the production you would necessarily go through the plant.

Q. Who was the person who had your old job back when you returned there in 1933?

[fol. 246] A. Mrs. Nichols.

Q. Was Dewey Atchinson still in his same capacity when you returned?

* * * * * *

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I would say yes, as near as I know.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. And is Mr. Atchinson still in that capacity?

A. Well he worked with the production and the efficiency—the planning of some of that work. I don't know what kind of a title you would say he has. He worked with Mr. Batty in the production department.

Q. Does Mr. Batty have a title?

A. Production manager.

* * * * * *

[fol. 247] Q. Does he have charge of the price setting?

A. No.

Q. Who has charge of that?

A. Mrs. Nichols, and she has a young lady that assists here with that work, setting prices, and before they are sent down to the factory, they are O.K.'d by me.

Q. Is a Mrs.—

A. (Interrupting) May I add this: I O.K. them as a representative of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Does Mrs. Nichols have a Miss Spalito?

A. Spalito; that is right.

Q. This Miss Spalito, the young woman, you say assists Mrs. Nichols?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is Mrs. Nichols' first name?

A. Lulu, L-u-l-u.

Q. And what is Miss Spalito's first name?

A. Josephine.

Q. What is [Mrs.] Atchinson's duties; what is he doing now?

A. Well, other than what I told you a minute ago, I really don't know what his duties are, the particular duties that he has. I think Mr. Baty could explain that to you. He works with him, with the production, and I don't know the details of that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 248] Q. Where are their offices?

A. On the ninth floor, adjoining our designing department.

Q. Where is Mr. Baty's office?

A. On the tenth floor.

Q. Where is Mr. Atchinson's office?

A. Tenth floor.

Q. Where are the general offices of the company?

A. On the tenth floor. I might add in explanation, Mrs. Nichols doesn't have an office, and Mr. Atchinson doesn't have an office. They have desks, but not an office, a private office.

Q. Who is it, then, that at the present time sets the prices on behalf of the company?

A. Nobody—well, on behalf of the company, we are all employed by the Donnelly Garment Company, and Mrs. Nichols, that is her responsibility.

Q. She sets them on behalf of the company and has an assistant, Miss Spalito?

A. Miss Josephine Spalito.

Q. And then—

[fol. 249] A. (Interrupting) And I O.K. them on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Company, a plan that was established shortly after our union was organized. We discussed it at some length and decided it was a proper thing to do in view of the fact that I had had some experience, and knew approximately what should be fair and reasonable.

Q. What discussion was had on this matter?

A. With the committee [of] chairman of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. And with what representatives of the company?

A. Well, after we—after we had decided that that was what we thought should be done, it was taken up with Mr. Baty until we notified him that was what we desired to do.

Q. Now, if Mrs. Nichols establishes a price on behalf of the company, can that price be put into effect without your agreement?

A. No, sir. Without the agreement of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir. There are never any prices sent to the plant to be used that you might say, more or less permanently, at least, on our first cutting of dresses, without our O.K.

Q. And if you—

A. (Interrupting) I would like to add this, Mr. Leary: that that doesn't establish a final say-so that there will [fol. 250] never be a change in those prices. If an operator makes an objection, she may make it to either Mrs. Nichols or tell her instructor, or she oftentimes comes to me or some other member of the committee. She can go to anybody that she wants to. I think that our members have been thoroughly informed that they should.

Q. What committee do you refer to?

A. The committee of the union.

Q. Is that what you call your executive committee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mrs. Nichols,—is she in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Spalito in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have they been in the organization?

A. Well, I think since the origin in 1937.
Q. Do they hold any office in the organization?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have they ever held any office?
A. No, neither one of them.
Q. Do they pay their dues regularly, do you know?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where do you have your desk at the plant?
A. On the seventh floor.
[fol. 251] Q. And is that in what you call this sample group?
A. No. That is just inside the door there on the seventh floor. I don't work in that department any more, in the sample room.

I think I didn't explain very clearly; I said "sample." We call that sample department, and it really is not what you probably term a sample department. We make our first garment up there. It is a small sewing section, connected with our designing department where we make—it shouldn't be called a sample department. It should be called models, is what they really are, because our samples proper are made in our plant in various sections.

Q. The designers complete their work and it is sent to—

[Q]. (Interrupting) To that small department.
Q. Which is called the sample department, but is really the model department?
A. I inadvertently called it the sample, and it really isn't what I should say as a sample. It is the model.
Q. You have your desk in that modeling department now?
A. No. That is on the ninth floor, and my desk is on the seventh floor.
Q. What department is in the same room as you have your desk?
A. It really isn't any. It is just a space, as you go in on the seventh floor, the nursing department is on one [fol. 252] side and around in the other part of the room are three or four sections, sewing sections, and there is just a space there where I—
Q. (Interrupting) You are rather isolated, by yourself; and no other workers are with you; is that it?

A. It was just a vacant space where I could have a desk and handle my work that was convenient to the factory.

Q. Will you explain what work you are doing now?

A. As I said a while ago, I don't know that I have any title to it other than—the nearest thing I have for it is supply person, you might say supply girl there, keeping track—not track, but if our different departments, I make it a point to go through the plant and keep in contact with it—if they are needing notions or thread or, say, various work, that might be done in another section, and it isn't coming through, I would call. They might call me, even, if I wasn't there, and say they needed so-and-so, and I might try to find it for them, and if it were notions, for instance, I would call the notion department and ask them why it wasn't up there, that we were working on those dresses, and they needed those notions, and then if they say they didn't have it or back ordered on it, or something of that type, I would possibly call Mrs. Reeves, or if I saw her I would tell her that the department or the section was short on such-and-such articles, and we needed it.

[fol. 253] Q. When the department needs certain material or parts or notions, where does the requisition go?

A. It goes from the merchandising department to the notion department. We have a department we call the notion department.

Q. You don't ever see those requisitions, do you?

A. I have no occasion to handle them. If one of the thread girls say to me "We are short on navy thread" or "We need some material for such-and-such a garment," she might pull out her requisition that she has, showing maybe that she got part of it; if she hadn't gotten any of it she wouldn't have a requisition, and other than that, that would be the only occasion I would have of seeing them.

Q. And with regard to the flow of work through the plant, is it your responsibility to see that—

A. (Interrupting) No.

Q. (Continuing)—the various departments have the work available which is to be done?

A. No. It is my responsibility to see that they have notions and supplies. It isn't my whole responsibility. That responsibility primarily originates in the notion department. They are sent requisitions or instructions of some type to send those notions, and that thread, and equipment, to such-and-such a department. It is only my responsibility, if they don't receive it as quickly as they need it, and they are going to be short of work because they [fol. 254] haven't these supplies. Then they would call me and say "Rose, will you see if you can get such-and-such a thing for me. We are going to have it in a little bit," and then, in a plant of that size, we have basket boys that carry work and carry things from various departments, and they are young boys, and I sometimes—you will sometimes find that sitting around in baskets that should be delivered.

Q. It is your job, then, to check up on the delivery of these various notions and supplies and material that should be at the various departments or sections?

A. That is right.

Q. How many other persons are doing this same work as you?

A. Well, if an instructor knew she was short on it, she might, if she didn't see me or it wasn't convenient to find me, it took longer to find me, she might call the notion department or the thread girl.

Q. Are there any other persons who have the same duties and responsibility, exclusive of you?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Do you have any assistant?

A. No.

Q. Who had the job you have before you held it?

A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. [That] has always been somebody to kind of do that work. I believe, as near as [fol. 255] I can remember that must have been Herbert Mutchler.

Q. Do you know whether Mutchler ever had any assistant?

A. I don't believe he did.

Q. How long have you had this job which you are doing now?

A. Oh, I have been doing that, I guess, since either December or January, December of 1936 or January of 1937.

Q. What is Mutchler doing now?

A. I don't know. He isn't employed at the Donnelly Garment Company. The last time I heard of him he was in California.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 257] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who is your supervisor?

A. Mr. Baty.

Q. Is he the only person who gives you instructions?

A. That is right.

Q. Is it not true, Miss Witness, that in your duties at the plant, at present, that you do go around and talk to practically all of the instructors almost daily?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you talk to almost all of these girls daily in addition?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know [do] any employee at the plant whose duties carry them to more places in the plant daily than you?

A. Well, that is rather a broad question. Mr. Baty would certainly be through the plant every day, but, of course, you take your basket boys, anybody that is supply-[fol. 258] ing work to that plant, the size it is, would have to be through it. We have errand girls from various floors, have pick-up boys. I could name any number of people that go through that plant all day long. We have a pick-up system that two boys, that is all they do all day long, is go through the plant.

Q. They are messenger boys?

A. Take our thread girls there, that work necessarily takes them, going from one department to the other, notion department and pressing department.

Q. How did it happen that you were placed in the position you have now?

A. Well, I don't know, Mr. Leary. I have never thought of it as being a position, especially.

Q. Well, call it a job, if you desire.

A. I think that would be more like it. I don't know, because ever since I have been back there, having no opportunity to do the work that I had done previously, not even expecting that I would have as long as the person who occupied it was doing satisfactory, I have just filled in one place and another, and I don't [support] any particular thought was given to it.

Lots of times I might have been helping in one department and they needed something, some help in another section, and I would be called after I had gone to work, and they would say "You go help some place else." I don't [fol. 259] think that I could say I have ever definitely had a—known just what my work would be week in and week out since I have been back.

Q. Why was it—

A. (Interrupting) That was the only understanding I had when I went back, was that I would have to take what they had to give me, and that is about what I had to do.

* * * * * *

[fol. 260] Q. Since you returned to the Donnelly Garment Company in '33, what has been the nature of the work you have been assigned in the various sections throughout the plant?

A. Well, I think that would be going over what I have done. I have just helped in various places. I have never had any definite work. That was just any job, and nothing else.

Q. When you say "helped in the various sections" you mean you operated a machine?

A. Well, I did do that for a little while.

Q. When?

A. I don't remember. Sometimes when they have been —just haven't had another—any other work for me, I [fol. 261] have done a little of it, very little of it, but I have more often helped on the floor, or, as I say, in that department where we make models.

Q. When you say help on the floor—

A. (Interrupting) In the sewing section.

Q. I mean, take the place of the thread girl.

A. Yes.

Q. Or the instructor.

A. I think when I had that—when we had the belt section on the ninth floor, there was—well, I was helping then. I wasn't in charge of the section then. Then there was a girl—I don't remember any work that I have done in an actual section that wasn't helping some one else.

Q. Have you ever been—

A. (Interrupting) I did at one time help when they were just getting samples, sample line out, which actually is a sample department where they prepare samples for the salesmen. I helped back there a time or two.

Q. Have you ever taken the place of an instructor during vacation period?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 262] Q. Are you on a salary at present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your salary?

A. One hundred and—I have a check of $32.50 twice—

Q. (Interrupting) Wait. That isn't—

A. (Interrupting) I don't believe that is right. $60—oh, they deduct a little of this, and it is around $65.

Q. What is your basis a month?

A. It is $65 either—well, I think $65 by the time the deduction is made, around $62. It is odd figures sometimes. $65 a month.

Q. What is your monthly salary?

A. Then I receive a check of $32.50 twice a month from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, for the work that I do for them.

Q. So you receive, then about $130 from the company each month?

A. It is $125, I believe, Mr. Leary.

Q. You say $125?

A. That is right.

Q. And in addition you receive $30—

A. (Interrupting) $2.50.

[fol. 263] Q. From the union twice a month?

A. Twice a month.

Q. So you receive $65 from the union?

A. That is right.

Q. By what arrangement do you receive a check from the union?

A. By what arrangement?

Q. Yes, and for what work done?

A. That I would spend my noon time and whatever time was necessary before and after working hours to work, to do whatever was necessary for them, which I have been doing. Then, of course, during this last hearing we had, and this one, whatever time I spend here, they will pay me for this, and they did also with that last Federal Court hearing.

Q. Does the company pay you in addition?

A. Pay me in addition?

Q. Yes.

A. Only the hours that I work for them. I can't tell you just now the figures of it, but the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid me for all of the hours that I was at that trial, and the company paid me for the number of hours that I worked for them during those weeks.

Q. How much of your days, how much of each of your days are taken up in price fixing?

A. I don't fix prices, Mr. Leary. I O. K. them after [fol. 264] they are figured.

Q. Well, O. K.ing prices.

A. I don't do any of that in the daytime. I do, sometimes, do that at noon and sometimes do it in the evening. Sometimes I go down early in the morning and do it, but I don't do any of that during my working time.

Q. Well, do you do that in conference with Mrs. Nichols?

A. No.

Q. And Miss Spalito?

A. No, not necessarily. I seldom do. I usually take them and look them over, myself, because I am quite familiar with how a garment should go together, and I think reasonably so of what a price should be. If there are any, I have any questions about it, I would take it up with them.

Q. Did you work on a piece rate basis when you were doing piece work?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since 1933?

A. Yes, sir,—well, no, no.

Q. You have been on a salary, have you not, at all times since '33?

A. Yes, sir, I have worked on piece work, however, previous to that time.

Q. When was the first time that you ever went on a salary for the Donnelly Garment Company?

[fol. 265] A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. That is what I was telling you earlier. I dont remember just when I quit sewing on a power machine. I couldn't be accurate about that.

Q. Well, what was the first salary that you received from the company? I am referring now to a monthly salary, or a weekly salary.

A. I don't remember that, either. I believe that it was around $25 a week. I think it would have had to be, because when I quit sewing on the power machine, I was making around $25 a week, and I think I wouldn't have started working for them for less, but I couldn't be accurate in telling you that.

Q. What were you receiving when you began your work with Mr. Atchinson, some time prior to 1931, on the price fixing? A. I don't know.

Q. Haven't you any idea?

A. Well, it seems rather unreasonable that I wouldn't, but I haven't the slightest idea. If you ask me what Gernes paid me, I can't tell you that, either.

Q. Do you know what you were receiving when you left Donnelly's in 1931?

A. I don't know accurately. I think it was around $175 a month, I believe.

Q. And what did you receive when you returned in 1933? A. $25.00 a week.

Q. How long did you remain on that basis?

[fol. 266] A. Oh, for just ages. I don't remember that, either. It seems to me that was in 1933, and this is 1939, 6 years. I think it must have been 3 years or so, about 3 years.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 267] Mr. Leary: Now, Mrs. Todd, how do you arrive at your conclusion in your O. K.'ing of the prices, that a price is fair and reasonable as far as the operator is concerned?

A. Well, Mr. Leary, I have done that work, had done it for several years, and you may get rusty on some of those things, but you never forget that, and I don't allow myself to get rusty on it because it is a vital part of the work that I could do if I had the opportunity to do it, and with our work in our plant and the association with the operators, I just make it a part of my business to kind of keep informed on what is right and what is wrong. I don't say that I am as accurate as a lot of people would [fol. 268] be, but I do try to have a working knowledge of it and there is just never a day that some of the girls don't discuss with me what they are making, and I make it a point to discuss it with them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 272] Q. Do you know whether the Loyalty League is still in existence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who are the officers of the Loyalty League now?

A. I don't think I can tell you. I know that Miss Kathleen Denzel is president of the Loyalty League. It is a little difficult to recall all of those officers of it. They have one representative from each department, and it is about sixty people, I believe, and the chairman of one of their committees is Carl Crawford.

Q. Who is the secretary, if you know?

A. I don't recall at the present time who the secretary is. I believe Miss Hartman is the treasurer.

Q. What is the first name? A. Pauline.

Q. Are you still a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 273]—Mr. Tyler: Just a moment, Mr. Examiner. I object to any testimony or questions in regard to the Donnelly Loyalty League, for the reason it is purely a social organization that has no connection whatever with the matters involved in this case or with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, Mr. Tyler, they allege it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way I could determine that is to get some facts that will enable me to do it. So, I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Can you think of that secretary's name now, please?

A. No, Mr. Leary. I can't right now, but I will find out for you at noon time.

Q. If you will, please.

A. I get confused thinking of the officers of the union.

[fol. 275] Q. Do you know how many drafts were made of your contract with the company? I don't mean copies of the complete contract. I mean drafts that were prepared for you to sign.

A. You mean in working it out?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I don't. There were so many that I don't know how many of those. Now, you don't mean when it was completed, how many copies were made when it was all completed?

[A.] No, I don't mean that.

A. No, Mr. Leary, I don't know. There are several, but I don't know the exact number.

Q. Do you have any list of your members?

A. Yes, sir, we have a file.

Q. In what form is that?

A. We have a file, and I try to keep it up to date.

Q. In what form is that?

A. A metal card, about this size (indicating).

Q. A 3 by 5 card?

[fol. 276] A. I would say so.

Q. Is this the treasurer's card or the secretary's card, or whose card?

A. Well, it is kept in our desk there on the seventh floor where I keep it.

Q. You keep all the records yourself?

A. I keep those locked up. We try to keep them locked up.

Q. Who owns the file? A. Who owns the file?

[fol. 277] Q. Who owns the file?

A. The Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been using it?

A. I don't know. Ever since I have had that desk that file has been there, or some desk, or something of that type. There used to be some other metal cabinets there.

Q. Explain what kind of file it is.

A. Just a plain metal file, two drawers.

Q. Two drawers, to hold 3 by 5 cards?

A. No. That file belongs to the Donnelly Garment Workers, that little file. And there is a file sitting there at my desk that I use to lock things up in; that is what I thought you were referring to.

Q. That is the company's file?

A. Yes, but it is my desk.

Q. Is that a four-drawer file cabinet?

A. It has two drawers in it. Did you say four?

Q. Yes.

A. It has two drawers in it.

Q. What else do you keep in this company file?

A. Oh, anything that I need to lock up I just put it in there. I don't know that I can tell you the details of what is in there. There are a couple of insurance policies in it now that somebody wanted me to lock up for them.

Q. Do you keep any of the company papers in that file?

[fol. 278] A. I don't have any occasion to keep any papers for the company.

Q. All of the material in that file are Donnelly Garment Workers' papers except for perhaps a few insurance papers you mentioned?

A. I expect it is. I suppose there might be some magazine clippings and things like that in there. I think right now I might have a few sheets of instructions I take upstairs when I get a chance to.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 288] Q. Are you familiar with the Donnelly Athletic Association, or the Nelly Don A. A., as it is sometimes called?

A. It is an organization for the men employed at the Donnelly Garment Company. I am not familiar with any details of it at all. It is a social organization.

[fol. 289] Q. That has been in existence for a matter of five or six years, anyway?

A. I think every bit of that. They have golf tournaments, baseball, and things of that kind.

* * * * * * * *

Q. Do you know whether any labor organizations were in existence at the plant of the Donnelly Company in 1934?

A. No, sir, there wasn't. The first labor organization we had was the formation of our union in 1937.

* * * * * *

[fol. 290] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Your position is that you do not class the Loyalty League as a labor organization; is that what you mean?

A. No, sir. It is purely a social organization, and always has been.

Q. Do you know who formed the Loyalty League?

A. I think that would be difficult to say. I don't remember a great deal of the details. I do remember that there were some meetings of—oh, as I remember it, of, say 20 or 25 people, discussing it and making plans for it, but I don't know the details of it.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Gray?

A. Yes, sir. She works in our store.

Q. When you say your store, what do you mean by that?

A. The store they have there in the building.

Q. What is her first name, please?

A. I don't know. I have always called her Mrs. Gray. It seems like I should know, too. I don't know.

Q. Is she in charge of this outlet store?

A. I assume you would say she is in charge. The only charge I guess there could be is of remnants and things of that type sent down there for them to sell.

* * * * * *

[fol. 291] Q. Mrs. Gray was one of the persons who was concerned with the formation of the Loyalty League, was she not? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean newspaper announcements? You asked about announcements.

Mr. Leary: I refer to announcements in the various publications of the organizations that emanated from those organizations.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you know of any other persons who were connected with the formation of the Loyalty League?

[fol. 292] A. I think that Mrs. Strickland was, and I know there were girls from the different departments but I don't know the names of the others.

Q. What was Mrs. Strickland's first name?

A. Florence.

Q. What was her position at the plant in early 1935?

A. She makes patterns.

Q. Was she an operator?

A. She makes patterns to make dresses off of.

Q. Does she have charge of that pattern department?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who does, or who did at that time?

A. Well, I think I would be right in saying Mrs. Pilsbury has charge of that department.

Q. Is she in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. What is her first name? A. Beulah.

Q. This Loyalty League was formed in the early part of February, 1935, wasn't it?

A. I don't remember just the month, but it was the early part of 1935.

Q. When did you become a member?

A. I don't remember that, but I judge that I would have at probably the time of its formation, or near about that time.

[fol. 293] Q. You eventually became the president of that, did you not?

A. I believe I was elected president, probably the third time they elected officers.

Q. You did not hold office very long as president of the Loyalty League, did you? A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, it was on March 18, 1937 that you were elected president, was it not?

A. I don't remember. I was under the impression it was in February.

Q. February, 1937?

A. It is purely a social organization, and I think their officers are due to be elected in January, and something prevented it. I thought it was February. You may have the date correct; I don't know about that.

Q. You continued as president how long?

A. Until very shortly after the organization of our union, and, being elected chairman of that organization, I resigned as president of the Loyalty League.

* * * * * *

[fol. 298] Q. Did you attend all the meetings of the Loyalty League during the period when you were president? A. When I was president?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know whether we had any or not. I don't recall having had any. We had—I was present the day that their officers were elected. That, I think, as I remember it, I don't know whether they have a constitution or by-laws, it has been so long ago that I haven't had occasion to look it up, but the officers of the Loyalty League are elected by a group of what we call representatives. One person from each department, and it would be about sixty, I think, or seventy people, and the officers were elected each year by that group of people.

[fol. 299] Q. How often does the Loyalty League hold meetings?

A. They haven't any regular time for them. They meet more often, if they are planning some activity, and if they aren't, but they do not have a definite date for them.

Q. Do they ever have general meetings of the entire body? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was the meeting held when you joined the organization?

A. I don't know that, Mr. Leary.

Q. Was it held at the plant?

A. I imagine so, yes. Sure. I don't know that they have ever had any meetings any place else.

Q. Where at the plant are the meetings of the Loyalty League held that you attended?

A. Well, the one I referred to a minute ago, where they had their election of officers in 1937, I believe it was held in one of the recreation rooms.

Q. On the third floor?

A. On the third floor. What did you say?

Q. I said, on the third floor.

A. I think the third floor.

Q. How many recreation rooms does the company have?

A. At the present time, only one in the basement for the boys.

Q. And did they ever have one at any other place?

[fol. 300] A. They had one on the third floor for the women employees, which was later transferred, I believe, to the second floor, and is now used, being used, for some other purpose. As I say, they have just one now for the boys at the present.

Q. Now, is that hall on the third floor the one that is used for the Christmas parties?

A. No, Mr. Leary, that is a very small room, I would say probably—it isn't on the third floor. It is on the second floor, and I think it is probably 16 by 20 feet. It is not larger than that.

* * * * * * *

Q. As I understand it, then only the various departmental representatives of the Loyalty League were present at the meeting at which you were elected president?

A. Those people elected the officers of the Loyalty League. That is the way they are elected.

Q. Now, for the present, let's refer only to the general meetings of the Loyalty League.

A. The general meetings?

Q. Are you able to state where any of those were held?

[fol. 301] A. What did you say?

Q. Are you able to state where any of those were held?

A. Well, they would have been held at different times probably on the third floor when it wasn't occupied, or on the second floor if it wasn't occupied, and now they would be held on the first floor because that is the only available large space that is not occupied.

Q. When you say occupied, what do you mean by that?

A. Well, on the first floor of the—it is the Corrigan Building at the present time, the entire building is occupied by the Donnelly Garment Company and the first floor is an auditorium. It is just an empty room used for recreational purposes and various and sundry purposes. At other times it isn't used for anything.

Q. But this Loyalty League held meetings on the property of the company regularly—do they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether any rent was charged for those meetings? A. No, I don't.

Q. Of what was the membership of the Loyalty League composed?

A. As near as I can remember, it would just have been employees of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. All employees?

A. I don't know that I ever given it any thought. I [fol. 302] would assume so.

Q. Work supervisors?

A. We discussed the word "supervisor" this morning. If you are referring to our instructors, yes. I think that all of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company can belong to the Loyalty League.

Q. Mr. Baty?

A. I don't know whether I ever given it any thought. I don't know whether he is a member or not.

Q. Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde?

A. She might have been. I really don't know, but being a social organization, I would presume anybody working there that wanted to belong to it, it would be all right.

Q. What is Mrs. Ella Mae Hyde's position?

A. She is employed in our employment department.

Q. Is she not the employment manager? A. No, sir.

Q. Who is?

A. That is not my understanding. I understand that Mrs. Hyde interviews people and can employ people, but if it was a place of any great importance, I suppose she would have to take it up with the department head or Mr. Baty or somebody, the office manager or something of that kind.

Q. What do you mean by "matter of importance"?

A. Well, if it was going to be a position that somebody [fol. 303] was in charge of a department or something, I would assume. I don't really know the details of Mrs. Hyde's work.

Q. Mrs. Hyde hires the operators, does she not?

A. Yes, I have known lots of instances where operators have gone to Mr. Baty, also, and gotten employment, but I am sure if we needed operators and they told Mrs. Hyde to get some, she would try to do it.

Q. What is Mrs. Reeves' position?

A. I think you would say she was in charge of the merchandising department.

[fol. 304] Mr. Leary: I show you what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 2, Miss Todd, and ask if you identify that as an issue of the N. D. A. A. News of February 13, 1935?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 305] A. Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was that date?

Mr. Leary: February 13, 1935.

Mr. Langsdale: Did she answer the question?

The Witness: I said yes, sir.

Mr. Leary: Miss Witness, referring to the first paragraph in the article entitled "900 join Loyalty League", on page 1 of Board's Exhibit 2, as follows:

"The employees of the Donnelly Garment Company have in the past week formed the Nelly Don Loyalty League to refute untrue statements and propaganda circulated by the Union." Do you know whether that is true?

A. I think that is true.

Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 2.

Mr. Ingraham: I object for the reason that there has been no showing that the Donnelly Company Athletic Club —what is the name of this? The N. D. A. A. represents the company in any shape, way, shape or form, and nothing that it publishes in any way is binding upon the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see it, please?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes, sir.

The Witness: At that time, I think—

Mr. Leary (interrupting): Now, just a moment.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment.

[fol. 306] The Witness: Pardon.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you are offering it in its entirety?

Mr. Leary: I am, Mr. Examiner; yes, sir.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener desires to object to it on the ground that nothing done or said by the Athletic Association would be binding on the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or any of their members; also, that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, at this stage in the proceeding, it is pretty difficult for me to determine what, if anything, has any relevancy. So I will receive it subject to the connection with later testimony. In other words, the first day this hearing starts, I certainly can't tell what relevancy anything has.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 2" was received in evidence.)

* * * * * * *

[fol. 309] Q. (By Mr. Leary) What was this meeting about Mr. Dubinsky you refer to?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment; I don't want to go into that. I stopped the witness from making a voluntary statement, and you ask her about that. Did you want to go into that?

Mr. Leary: Yes, I certainly do.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right, Miss Todd, you may proceed with your voluntary statement about it.

The Witness: It seems to me there had been a meeting at which Mr. Dubinsky had talked and I know a conversation around the plant regarding some of the union activities, and saying what such terrible things about the working conditions at the Donnelly Garment Company, and [fol. 310] that was what we were trying to refute, that they shouldn't exist.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. You refer to David Dubinsky, International President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; is that correct?

A. Yes sir, I do, Mr. Leary.

* * * * * *

Q. Who was saying this?

[fol. 311] A. Well, as I said a minute ago, it was general conversation and I remember of hearing that there were various members of the International saying that we had such awful sweat shop conditions, and we worked such long hours. It has been a long time ago, and I don't remember the details of it, but I do recall that that was what we were trying to refute in that statement.

* * * * * *

Q. Isn't it a fact that you heard these statements from, —about the purposes of the organization campaign of the International Union from employees of the Donnelly who had been to meeting of the International Union?

A. I couldn't say as to that. It was such general conversation I wouldn't have any idea.

Q. Did you ever attend any of the meetings yourself?

A. One.

Q. Where was that?

[fol. 312] A. I believe it was over on Michigan, at the Music Hall.

Q. Is that what you call Musicians Hall?

A. Yes.

Q. Who spoke at that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q Under whose instructions did you attend that meeting? A. Nobodys.

Q. Was Mrs. Hyde there?

A. I don't recall who was there other than I stopped at the drug store and drank a coke with somebody from the pressing department. I don't remember who that was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 314] Trial Examiner Batten: Is this covered, Mr. Leary, in the NRA proceeding?

Mr. Leary: To a certain extent, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't want to go into those matters covered in those proceedings except by reference. I am not going back and try those things all over again. If it refers to the matters in those proceedings, if you want to make it part of this hearing by reference, as I told you, subject to objection, I will receive it, but I am not going to try out all of those matters that were tried in that hearing in this hearing.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me understand. Do I understand we can offer the record in those proceedings?

Trial Examiner Batten: I said I would receive it subject to objection by the attorneys; I mean by that, Mr. Langsdale, I am not going to try out all of the issues and repeat all of the testimony and go over all of the matters that have been gone over in that hearing in this hearing.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 315] Mr. Ingraham: If Your Honor please, of course we object to any of those matters as being immaterial and not bearing on any issues now pending.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, I would suggest this, I will be glad to confer with Mr. Langsdale and Board's counsel and see if we can agree on some stipulation to the effect that it be introduced over certain objections, and see if we can get together on it.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 317] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who was the first president of the Loyalty League?

A. I believe Herbert Mutchler was.

Q. Who was the president after Herbert Mutchler?

A. He was the second one I remember. Then, I was, for that short period of time.

Q. Who was the first one, then?
A. He was.

Trial Examiner Batten: He served two terms, is that it?

A. Two terms, yes, sir. I think I am correct in that. That is just my memory.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Are you able to name the other officers of the Loyalty League at the various times?

A. No, Mr. Leary, I wouldn't be. There were so many of them, and it is old, and I never have paid that close attention to it.

Q. Do you know what steps the Loyalty League took to refute the propaganda that had been passing among the [fol. 318] employees concerning the union?

A. No, I don't. I don't remember a lot about it, Mr. Leary.

Q. Who is it that would know a lot about the Loyalty League?

A. Well, I don't believe I would be much help to you on that either, not at the present time certainly. It is old, and really I can't think not—I could tell you in substance who could give you information about it at the present time.

Q. Who is that?

A. The president of the Loyalty League just now. I gave you those officers as I remembered them this morning.

Q. What duties did you have as president of the Loyalty League?

A. I think they must have been rather nominal. It lasted such a short time—It was just a social organization, and if you had something you wanted to do or a party you wanted to have the officers would take the initiative in it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 319] Q. What is the form referred to as an I.D.M.?
[fol. 320] A. That is a notice that you might call an interdepartmental memorandum they used at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Is that prepared on a special form somewhat like the little memorandum pad I hold in my hand?

A. Something on that order.

Q. And the company is the one who controls and has charge of all of those; is that it?

A. If they sent out I. D. M.'s they would be sent by the company or somebody working for them. Are you referring to company business, or what business are you referring to?

Q. They are used primarily for company business, are they not?

A. I suppose they are used for company business. If I send out a notice I don't refer to it as an I. D. M. If I sent out something for the company it would probably be an I. D. M.

Q. If you wanted to meet a friend on the corner you wouldn't send her an I. D. M. through the mail, would you?

A. No.

Q. The I. D. Ms. are exclusively, as a matter of fact, for the use of the company in the company's business?

A. That is just a term applied to a memoranda sent around. I don't know where you would draw the technical line on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean by that, is it not a printed form?

A. No. It is just a blank sheet of paper, and it ac-
[fol. 321] quired that name some way. It had no official significance whatever.

Mr. Leary: What were the matters that were discussed at these Loyalty League meetings?

Mr. Tyler: Just a minute. Mr. Examiner, I wish to renew my objection to questions as to the Loyalty League, the method by which it did business, where it held meetings, and the way it carried on its affairs, because it has no connection with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and because it has no bearing on the issues tried in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: He may testify as to what was discussed at any meeting he attended. To that extent I will overrule the objection. As I said this morning, there is an allegation here that it is a labor organization, and I presume the only way we can determine that is to get the evidence.

At any meetings you attended you may tell us what business was transacted.

A. I don't know. As I say, Mr. Leary, I don't recall any discussion that was business that wasn't about parties and such as that, so far as meetings of the Loyalty League were concerned.

. . . . . .

[fol. 322] Q. You did not decide, did you, to resign as president of the Loyalty League until after the April 27 meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 323] A. I am sure I didn't, no. I don't think—There wouldn't have been any occasion to. I wouldn't have given it any thought.

Q. So, it was sometime after April 27 that you resigned; is that it?

A. Surely. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

[fol. 324] Q. Do you know Marry Huffaker?

A. Thelma Huffaker?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. Now you have the information. I believe she was elected president. I had forgotten all about that. If that is true, then Miss Denzel must have been elected the next time. I am not positive about that, but I think Miss Huffaker was, because she became ill following that and has been in the sanitarium some time.

Q. Do you remember a meeting held on March 18, 1937, at the plant of the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who called that meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Who presided at the meeting?

[fol. 325] A. I did.

Q. Who told you to preside at the meeting?

A. I don't know. That was just one of those spontaneous outbursts—

Q. (Interrupting) As a matter of fact, you called the meeting yourself, didn't you?

A. I may have, Mr. Leary. I don't remember about that. I have been trying to remember about that, but with the excitement and turmoil of things happening then, I can't remember about that.

Q. Where in the building at 1828 Walnut was the meeting held on March 18, 1937?

A. I think that meeting was held on the second floor, as near as I can remember.

Q. Who gave you permission to hold it on the second floor?

A. That was a meeting of employees, and I don't know that anybody would have objected or would have thought to ask, other than talking to somebody in the maintenance department about preparing for a meeting.

Q. What did you definitely do that day to prepare for that meeting, if you did anything?

A. I wouldn't have done anything, Mr. Leary. You are saying I sent out the notices of the meeting, and I said I don't know whether I did or not, I don't remember.

Q. Did you talk to anyone about calling the meeting? [fol. 326] A. There is no doubt that I did, because I am sure, with as much conversation as was going on about the plant then, any number of us was talking about this, that, and the other.

Q. You talked to Nell Quinlan Reed about it, didn't you?

A. No. We did ask her to come down to the meeting. As I remember that, she was leaving town, or planning to leave town, or something, and we asked her to come down to that meeting to talk to us and tell us what she was going to do in the way of protection.

Q. For the purpose of the record, Nell Quinlan Reed is the former Mrs. Donnelly, or Mrs. Reed?

A. That owns the business, yes.

Q. She is the president of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was it talked to Mrs. Reed before the meeting, in addition to yourself?

A. I don't think anybody talked to her before the meeting. During the meeting I asked one of the boys who was standing in the aisle if he would go—I think I had seen Mrs. Reed come in—it seems to me as I came down to the meeting I saw Mrs. Reed go upstairs—and I asked him if he would go ask her if she would come down and talk to us.

Q. You wanted to find out from her what protection she was going to give you, is that it?

A. That is right, because at that time, if you remember, [fol. 327] these strikes and things were going on up on Grand Avenue, and the threats were that the same thing would be done to us, and that was the idea of asking her to come down and talk to us.

Q. What do you actually know of your own knowledge about threats being made?

A. If you are asking me what I actually know or of somebody telling me definitely, that was general conversation, and around a plant of that size, with as much as you could see in the newspapers, and could hear by word of mouth, that is what I would have to give you as information. It was very general.

Q. It was all hearsay, was it not, to you?

A. I don't know just the way you use the word legally as to hearsay but—yes, it was hearsay.

Q. Did anyone ever make any threat to you just prior to March 18?

A. Personally, no.

Q. Did you ever hear anyone make any threats to anyone else before March 18?

A. I don't know of anything personally, just as it was passed on to me.

Q. Who was it passed it on to you?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, suppose she can remember 50 people that passed on these rumors, it means we will have to bring those 50 people in here. I am wondering [fol. 328] how far we should go with these threats of violence.

Everybody knows when there is an organizational campaign on in a plant the employees say many things. That is, as I see it, none of our particular concern in this hearing. Employees have a right to do a great many of these things.

The question is, did the respondent take part in them? Did the respondent do these things? The employees as employees have a right to do many of these things, and if they do, it is no violation of the Wagner Act in any form or fashion.

[fol. 331] Mr. Langsdale: It seems to me this is all far afield. The question asked the witness was, who asked her to call this meeting, and she wandered all around the courtroom with this speech of hers, which she has been doing all afternoon, that there were so many speeches of violence she doesn't know who told her to call the meeting or whether Mrs. Reed was there, or what not.

I think the Court was right this morning in telling me to wait until my time comes, but I would like to see this witness answer the questions directly. Every time she answers a question she makes a speech. The question was, who asked her to call this meeting, and why, and before she gets through with that she has gone into all of these other things.

[fol. 332] Mr. Ingraham: I submit, Your Honor, the witness is answering the questions. I don't think the witness should be subjected to any harangue such as Mr. Langsdale is giving.

Trial Examiner Batten: I realize, of course, that counsel must indicate in the record the situation. I don't feel for one minute that the witness is deliberately attempting to proceed in this manner. I do think she is entirely too talkative. I think I told her twice this morning for her own good if she would answer the question and stop we would get along much better here, but I am not going to attempt to shut off the witness, nor am I going to attempt to tell a witness what they should say or not say. The thing we are primarily interested in in this matter is getting at the facts, and for that reason I do not propose to put anybody in a straight jacket.

Mr. Leary, you may proceed with your question, with this understanding, that the only matter we are concerned about here is whether the respondent or any of its agents were involved in these rumors. I will say again I will not sit here and listen to statements employees made on either side, because if I do we will be here until Christmas.

We will recess until 20 minutes of four.

[fol. 334] Q. The main purpose of this March 18th meeting was to discuss the protection the company was going to give the employees, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. And you testified, did you not, or did you, that you had discussed it with officials of the company prior to the meeting?

A. No, Mr. Leary. I said that I did not, but we did ask Mrs. Reed to come to that meeting after the meeting started.

Q. Why did you ask Mrs. Reed to come to the meeting?

A. Because we were wondering if she was going to do anything, if there was anything she could do to give us any protection whatsoever. I stated that she was leaving town, that we had heard about that, and that was the primary reason why we were trying to get some information from her direct.

* * * * * *

[fol. 335] Q. This was a Loyalty League meeting, wasn't it?

A. It was a meeting of the employees; not Loyalty League.

Q. Did you mention the Loyalty League at all when you presided at that meeting?

[fol. 336] A. I don't recall that I did. I don't imagine that I did, because it was not primarily a Loyalty League meeting. It was a meeting of the employees.

* * * * * *

[fol. 339] Q. What did Mrs. Reed talk about?

A. Well, she told us at that time that she had made arrangements to employ busses to bring us back and forth from work at different sections of the city, and as I remember, that bus system was established the following morning and lasted, I am not positive, but I think it was about the second or third week in May. Anyway, it lasted for a few weeks, and that was the same meeting that she said she was not going to be forced by Mr. Dubinsky or anybody that would force her employees to do something that she didn't wish to do.

Q. She said she wasn't going to let Mr. Dubinsky or [fol. 340] his union—

A. (Interrupting) That is right, to force her to sign up with somebody that would force her employees to do something against their will.

Q. She said also at that time, there was not going to be any union in that plant, didn't she?

A. No, Mr. Leary, I don't remember that. I don't ever remember hearing anybody say that there wouldn't be any union in that plant.

Q. She did tell the girls they wouldn't have to belong to a union to work there, didn't she?

A. That they wouldn't have to belong to a union to work there?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recall that.

Q. Did you get permission from anyone to hold that meeting during the working hours?

A. Mr. Leary, I didn't get permission. I was not wholly responsible for the meeting. As I tried to state a while ago, it was a spontaneous thing, a demand of a lot of people here and there, and I don't know whether we did or not.

* * * * *

[fol. 341] Q. (Interrupting) The truth is that you don't recall anything at all about this meeting, is that it, except what Mrs. Reed said?

A. That is what I have been trying to recall.

Q. After Mrs. Reed had spoken, what happened at the meeting?

A. I don't remember. I rather think that her talk closed that meeting. I am not positive about that.

Q. Do you remember any letter being read at the meeting?

A. I believe there was. That is the first recollection I have of that now. I am not even positive about that. I rather think, though, that there was a letter read at that meeting, that was from the International Union, but I couldn't say that that is positive.

Q. That was a letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to the company, was it not?

A. That letter was read, and I am inclined, since I bring it to my memory, it was read at that meeting.

Q. And it was read by Mrs. Reed, was it not?

A. I don't know. I don't remember Mrs. Reed reading anything. I don't remember any outstanding point of her conversation other than the two I have named.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting she was going to answer the letter?

A. No, I don't remember. The letter was new to me, [fol. 342] and I don't recall the details of it at all.

* * * * * *

Q. Then a few days later did you and a group of employees call on the Police Department in Kansas City?

A. Yes, I think you are right. Now, I am not positive about the secrets of that, but we did go down there, a group of us.

Q. Who was it went to see Mr. Higgins?

A. Well, I believe Mrs. McTernan was with that group.

Q. Is that Mr. Otto Higgins, the former Director of Police here?

A. That is right. I did have a picture in a newspaper clipping of that, but as to the individuals that went, I am not very clear about who they were.

Q. Who do you mean?

A. About the names of who went, if that is what you want to know. Is that what you want to know?

Q. Yes, and you had a picture of it, did you say?

A. I have had, but I don't have it any more, a newspaper clipping.

Q. Did you have—

[fol. 343] A. (Interrupting) Now, I think that Mrs. Strickland went down there. I don't remember who those people were.

Q. How many went altogether

A. I think there must have been something like fifteen or eighteen or twenty.

Q. When did you go to see Mr. Higgins?

A. I don't remember the date.

Q. Was it during the day? A. Yes, I believe it was.

Q. Did you get permission from the company to go?

A. I don't know about that, because I didn't instigate it at all. All I did was go, and I don't remember.

Q. Who instigated it?

A. I don't recall—don't really know.

Q. Who asked you to go?

A. I don't recall when I went down whether I was in the—there was a group of girls there in one of the rooms, and I don't remember. I think I was just passing there and they said "Come in", something of that kind. I don't remember the details of who called me at all.

Q. You were in the plant when you were asked to go along with the girls going to see Mr. Higgins?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who—did you leave your work then and go?

A. I don't remember what time we went, Mr. Leary. [fol. 344] It was—we may have. It was around—I would say, as near as I can remember, it was some time in the early part of the afternoon.

Q. And did you ask the company for permission to leave your work at that time?

A. I did not. As I said a minute ago, I don't know who made those arrangements.

Q. Do you ordinarily leave your work without asking the company's permission to absent yourself?

A. No, I am not in the habit of doing that.

Q. How did you happen to do it on this occasion?

A. I don't recall. I suppose that I assumed that some arrangement had been made. I really don't know about that.

Q. You name as many as you can of the people that went to that meeting, will you?

A. Well, I don't know who else went to that meeting.

Q. How many—who have you named this far?

A. Will you read those names?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. McTernan and Mrs. Strickland.

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. You can't remember any others?

A. No, I don't at the present time. I have a rather poor memory for names.

Q. This Mrs. Strickland, was the one that formed the Loyalty League?

A. Mrs. Strickland was one that helped form the [fol. 345] Loyalty League.

Q. Who is Mrs. Strickland?

A. Well, she worked, at that time, I believe in a little department we have up there where they keep notions and supplies for the designers, and that is where she was working.

Q. Did she hold any position in the Loyalty League?

A. I think not. I never remember that she did.

Q. You say you remember seeing a picture in the paper of your group with Director Higgins?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How did you happen to have a photographer there?

A. Down at Director Higgins' office? I don't have any idea, but I suppose there is always a photographer around a place like that.

Q. Did you call Director Higgins and tell him you were coming?

A. Mr. Leary, I didn't have anything to do with planning that. I was simply asked to go along and went. I don't know the details of it. I am sorry, I can't give them to you. I don't know them.

Q. Do you know anyone that would know the details of that call to Director Higgins?

A. That has been so long ago and one of those things that happened so quickly, I couldn't tell you on that.

Q. Did you know when you were on the way to Director Higgins' office why you were going there?

[fol. 346] A. Yes, I think I did, surely. I stated—

Q. (Interrupting) Why were you going there?

A. To see what we could expect in the way of protection from the Police Department, because of the things that had been reported going on up at 26th and Grand.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Todd, please—when you answer a question, the question was, why did you go.

The Witness: Well, pardon me, Mr. Batten.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no idea of wanting to stop you.

The Witness: That is all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: But when you answer a question as you think you should answer, and if they want to ask you further questions, they may do so.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Why was it, then, that you wanted to go to Higgins' office?

A. To find out what the police would do in the way of protection for us at the plant, in case of any violence.

Q. Had you been satisfied with the protection Mrs. Reed had promised you at the March 18th meeting?

A. I don't think, Mr. Leary, that I can answer that. By that time, I think you will recall the amount of articles that were in the paper, and the amount of disturbance that was going along. I don't know—we were just looking for protection, too. These things that had been [fol. 347] threatened would happen to us, only more so, and all we were asking was that it didn't happen to us or there be some protection there in case it did.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, between the time that Mrs. Reed spoke at this meeting and said that the busses would be provided, how long after that was it that you went down to the Chief of Police?

A. Mr. Batten, I don't remember exactly, but I believe it was a few days. This was a terrific thing in our understanding that was going on.

Q. I know, but between the time of the specific time, March 18th, and the time you went down to the Chief of Police, did anything actually occur?

A. Nothing actually occurred.

Q. So there were no reasons, then, for you going to the Chief of Police then, a few days after the 18th, than there was on the 18th, when you had the meeting?

A. I mean, a continuation of that same—

Q. (Interrupting) I mean, as far as any actual occurrence was concerned.

A. No activity at our plant, no. It was outside plants.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Well, after your visit to Director Higgins, were any meetings of the employees held?

A. I don't believe so. I don't recall any that were held immediately, or within a week or so. I don't recall any.

[fol. 348] Q. Did you tell the officials of the company what Director Higgins had said to you?

A. I didn't, Mr. Leary. I didn't.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you lose any wages for being absent from the plant that afternoon?

A. I believe not.

* * * * * * *

Q. And after going to see Mr. Higgins, a meeting subsequently was called on April 27th, was it not?

A. I believe you are right.

Q. Who was it that decided to call that meeting of April 27th?

. . . . . .

[fol. 349] The Witness: Pardon me. Does the question say who called it, or who decided to call it?

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who decided, I believe.

A. I don't know exactly how many people there were there. I believe that I should say that the three people that were instrumental in calling it were Rose Todd and Hobert Atherton and Sally Ormsby, but there was a general request from a great many employees that we try to do something for our own protection, and that was why this meeting was called. What date did you say, Mr. Leary?

Q. April 27th.

. . . . . .

[fol. 350] Q. Did any of them say why they wanted to meet, the meeting to be held on April 27th?

A. Yes. Now, it would take a little explanation of that, Mr. Leary, if you want me to give it.

[fol. 351] Q. You answer the question.

A. Well, previous, about around the 27th or the latter part of March, three of us had gone down to Mr. Gossett's office and talked to him, asking, the idea we had in mind was, would an injunction do us any good—

. . . . . .

[fol. 354] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who was it who suggested that the Donnelly Garment Workers Union should be formed?

A. Well, I believe that suggestion, I can't rightfully say whether it came from some of us as employees or whether it came from Mr. Tyler. It—well, I guess that answers the question. I don't know.

Q. You don't know who selected the name for the organization?

A. I believe Mr. Tyler suggested that name.

Q. When did he suggest it?

A. At a meeting that we held on April 27th.

Q. Was it the meeting of April 27th that he suggested the name? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the first time that you decided it, or anyone had suggested a name for the organization?

A. The first time there I recall. I know I had tried to think of something, and oh, we may have talked about it here and there among the little conversation discussions that came up, but I don't remember anything definite being said about it previous to that time.

Q. Now, before this meeting was held on April 27, by-laws had been prepared, had they not? A. Yes sir.

Q. They had been prepared by Mr. Tyler?

[fol. 355] A. Yes sir.

Q. Mr. Tyler read these by-laws at the meeting, did he not? A. That is right.

Q. Had you ever seen these by-laws before this meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you read them?

A. I don't quite know, Mr. Leary, how to answer these questions without telling you what leads up to this, and I haven't had an opportunity to tell you. Now, I can—it requires some explanation, but it is rather difficult for me to just go ahead. I have been critized for talking too much.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now Miss Todd, you haven't been criticized. I am not criticizing you. This question should be answered very easily. The question was, had you read these before this meeting?

A. Yes, Mr. Batten.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right, that answers the question.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Where did you read them?

A. I don't remember whether I read them at home or whether I read them in Mr. Tyler's office.

Q. Do you know who else read them before the meeting?

A. I think Mr. Atherton did, and I think Mrs. Ormsby [fol. 356] did. We were the three that went to see Mr. Gossett in the first place.

Q. When were these by-laws adopted that you refer to?

A. At the meeting held on April 27, 1937.

Q. Isn't it true, that you were the first one who said that your new organization would be called the Donnelly Garment Workers Union at the meeting of April 27th?

A. I believe I am, but Mr. Leary, if you are reading from those minutes, I don't recall all of the wording of those minutes, but I believe you will find there that Mr. Tyler had made that suggestion.

Q. That is the first time you had any idea what the name of the organization would be?

A. Mr. Leary, I don't remember a great deal of discussion about the name in deciding what it would be called. We had had some little discussion about it, but as to just saying that would be, I think you will find in those minutes it was put to a vote of the employees.

Q. Well, after the by-laws were read, did you do anything else at that meeting?

A. Mr. Leary, that is the meeting where we formed our union?

Q. Yes, and after the by-laws were read, did you do anything else?

* * * * * * * *

Q. Then, you had somewhat of an election there and so forth?

A. That is right.

Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I suggest that the minutes themselves are the best evidence of the meeting, and the witness ought to be allowed to refresh her recollection from that, rather than be cross-examined on her memory of those minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I see no objection [fol. 358] to Mr. Leary questioning the witness as to what she recalls. It is quite apparent he is examining her from the minutes, and if it is the purpose of counsel, of course, to examine with respect to a large number of meetings, when the minutes are here, I would suggest that the minutes be put in.

Now, I have no objection, Mr. Leary, to your proceeding to examine the witness with respect to her recollection. Of course, this is a matter that occurred back in 1937.

Mr. Tyler: Mr. Examiner, I suggest if the object is to bring out what happened at that meeting, that it is proper that the witness be allowed to refresh her recollection from the minutes, but if the object is to test her memory, that is purely and solely cross-examination, which is not proper at this time unless she had a chance to tell her story in chief, and I ask that she be allowed to refresh her recollection from the minutes.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I see no ob- [fol. 359] jection to this witness, or any other witness in line with your suggestion, Mr. Tyler, using a memorandum that she may have prepared or a record for the purpose of refreshing her recollection.

Now, in this instance, I see no need of it. She was there at the meeting, she was chairwoman of the meeting, and can tell us what she recalls. If there is any variance, I don't presume it would indicate that this witness is lying about it by any means. It is something that happened a couple or three years ago.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you know whether any stenographer was present at this April 27 meeting?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Who was it?

A. I don't remember. I don't think her initials are on that. As I recall it, I don't remember now who took those minutes.

Q. Who arranged to have a stenographer present at the April 27 meeting?

A. I don't know whether I did or not. I may have. In all probability, I did.

Q. And who did you see in order to have a stenographer there? A. Who did I see?

Q. Yes.

[fol. 360] A. Well, I would have seen the stenographer, but I don't—I have tried a dozen times to remember who that was, and haven't remembered.

Q. You have no idea at all? A. No, I haven't.

Q. Your memory is a complete blank on this matter of the stenographer and how she was obtained and who she was and so forth?

Mr. Tyler: Well, I object to that as repetition and argument with his witness. She said she doesn't remember. I object to the method of cross-examination and brow-beating of this witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, Mr. Tyler, there is no brow-beating or even indication of it thus far, not even a semblance of it thus far. I think Mr. Leary has been very gentlemanly, and that is what I expect all counsel to be in this hearing. Now, I am here for some purpose and if it got to the point in this hearing where anybody attempts to brow-beat a witness, I will see that they are amply protected.

Mr. Tyler: I submit that repeating the question with emphasis after she once answered it amounts to improper cross-examination, and is not proper at this time.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 362] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did anybody make any formal application for membership in your organization at that meeting?

A. Yes, Mr. Leary. At that—do you want me to tell about that?

Q. Yes, you may proceed.

A. We have passed out some cards there, of which I

[fol. 363] gave you a copy at noontime.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. I show you what has been marked as Board's Exhibit 3 and ask if that is a card similar to those that were passed out to the persons present at the April 27 meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many of those cards were passed out at [fol. 364] that meeting?

A. I believe that there were—I would probably say there were approximately 1300 or a few under, or a few less, a few under or a few over. I don't recall exactly.

Q. And the name of the organization hadn't been selected until the meeting itself started; isn't that right?

A. It was voted on at that meeting.

Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 3 in evidence.

* * * * * * *

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 3" was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Isn't it true, Miss Witness, that this card, Board's [fol. 365] Exhibit 3, is mimeographed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were all the cards mimeographed?

A. They were all like that, Mr. Leary.

Q. Who mimeographed them?

A. I don't remember now. I asked one of the boys if he would do that one evening, and he said he would and did.

Q. You asked one of the boys where?

A. One of the boys in the department, in the circular department.

Q. Of the company, you mean?

A. That is right. I don't remember which one it was right now.

Q. They have their own mimeograph machines and so forth there?

A. Yes, sir, and he prepared them for us after work one evening.

Q. Who was that boy?

A. I don't know. There are two or three boys in that department, and I don't remember which one it was.

Q. What are the names of the three boys in there, or were in there at that time?

A. I think I would have to go back to the record. I don't recall who they are now.

Q. Haven't you any idea of anybody who ever worked in there?

[fol. 366] A. Yes, I have, but to give you the ones that —I can probably find out for you by tomorrow, but the ones that are there now were not there then.

Q. How do you know he did it after work?

A. I asked him to do it after work, and I am sure that he did. I don't think he would—I know I wouldn't take that much of the company's time to do something like that.

Q. Is it your testimony you can recall definitely you asked him to do it after work?

A. I know I did.

Q. But you can not remember his name?

A. No; but I will be very glad to find out for you.

Q. Where were you when you were talking to this boy?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Whose cards did he use to do the mimeographing?

A. Some that we bought.

Q. Who bought?

A. The employees. I think I bought those cards myself.

Q. Where did you buy them?

A. Well, I don't remember, but I think I can look around my desk and find out. I may have gotten them from a man by the name of Westerholdt, but I will check on that and let you know.

Q. Who is this Westerholdt?

A. He is a young man I know who does printing part time.

[fol. 367] Q. Did you get any receipts from Mr. Westerholdt?

A. I don't know whether I did or not, but I think I may have some notation of it.

Q. How much did you take?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did the union ever pay you back?

A. I don't recall about that either.

Q. Did you ever ask the union to reimburse you?

A. I have spent, at different times, some odd amounts that I never have asked for. Sometimes I have for things that were expense, and sometimes I have not. They pay me a salary each month, and sometimes I would buy little things that we might need.

Q. This all happened before the union was formed, did it not?

A. Yes, you are right. By knowing of the possibility that we might form a union, I provided some cards to use.

Q. How did you know the employees were going to form this union at the time you had these cards printed?

A. Previous to this time, Mr. Leary, the Wagner Act, on the 12th of April—there were big headlines at that time that the Wagner Act was declared valid, and on the 12th of April there was an announcement in the paper that Sylvia Hull had been chosen to go to the convention to repre ent us. That was what put the idea into our heads to organize some kind of a union. We know by that time [fol. 368] that we could do that. That accounts, approximately, for the date of the meeting, Sylvia's announcing she was going to represent us, and we thought it was high time we did something to represent ourselves.

Q. What do you mean by "we"?

A. The employees.

Q. Where was it you got the idea, after reading Sylvia Hull's announcement in the newspaper, that you could form a union?

A. I just stated there was practically an inch and a half or two-inch headlines in the Kansas City Star on the 12th of April that the Wagner Act had been declared valid. I don't remember whether Mr. Tyler told us we could form an employees' union or whether we called him and asked him about the details. We have had some discussion about it at times. But we knew by that time we could form an employees' [under] under the Wagner Act if we wanted to.

Q. Didn't you know you could form a union before April 12?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you think a labor organization was illegal before then?

A. We didn't give any thought to forming a union of any kind before that. We did previously try to get an injunction in the court, and that was primarily what we went to see Mr. Tyler about in March. We went down to see Mr. Gossett, and talked to Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * *

[fol. 369] Q. What other materials have either of those boys duplicated for you [expect] the original application for membership cards?

A. I don't recall that those two have done any. I don't recall that they have.

Q. Did they mimeograph the copies of your bylaws?

A. Those are not mimeographed, are they, Mr. Leary?

Q. Did they mimeograph the copies of your agreement?

A. I think I ran those you have off on the ditto machine myself. I think they are dittoed.

Q. You are referring to the bylaws?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you run them off on the ditto?

A. On a ditto machine down at the office. I would like [fol. 370] to state that whenever I done anything like that I always done it on my own time.

Q. Did you always pay the company for using their equipment?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the company ever reprimand you for using their equipment?

A. I don't know that they ever knew I did it.

Q. Did they ever reprimand you for using their equipment? A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything ever said to you about using their mimeograph equipment?

A. No, Mr. Leary; I don't think I ever asked them. I have, lots of times, run things off on the ditto machine, and I don't think I ever gave it any thought.

Q. Who prepared the dittos for you?

A. Our secretary.

Q. Who was that, Majorie Green?

A. Majorie Green.

Q. Did she prepare them in the company's office?

A. No. We pay our secretary and our treasurer a nominal amount to take care of things we have to have done either at their noontime or after work, any time they see fit to do it.

Q. You, then, yourself did the actual ditto work, but the ditto was prepared by Miss Green?

A. Yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 371] Q. Does your union maintain any office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you own any typewriter?

A. No.

Q. Do you own any office supplies?

A. We own the paper and things we need to work with of that type.

Q. Majorie Green carries on all of her secretarial work in the offices of the company?

A. I don't think she does, all of it, no. She may have used that typewriter at times, but I know lots of times she has taken work home for me at night.

* * * * * *

[fol. 372] Q. Who prepared the form for this application card which has been identified as Board's exhibit No. 3?

A. That time we had had numerous discussions with Mr.

Tyler. I don't know whether that was a discussion of the three of us that had been talking with him—it came out of some of those conferences with Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 377] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who was it that actually wrote these bylaws?

A. I believe Mr. Tyler did.

Q. Did you suggest any idea yourself as to the bylaws?

A. I am inclined to think that— I know Mr. Tyler wrote them, or at least he said he wrote them, that is all I know, and they were discussed in a very slight measure. I don't remember, Mr. Leary, that there was any detailed discussion of the bylaws. They were to be presented and were presented at that first meeting, and I think you will find in the minutes there that there was some discussion that if anybody desired to make any changes in them, to request the changes and we could make them later if necessary.

Q. There never were any changes made, though, were there?

A. I don't think there have been, no.

[fol. 378] Q. Did you suggest any portions of these bylaws?

A. I didn't write those bylaws, Mr. Tyler wrote them.

Q. Did you suggest any part of them, or is Mr. Tyler responsible for all of them?

A. I don't recall that I made any worthwhile suggestions as to the bylaws. I am not familiar with organizing the meeting, and I don't recall making any suggestions as to those bylaws.

[fol. 379] Q. Do you know whether Hobart Atherton or Mrs. Ormsby made any suggestions as to them?

A. No, I don't know.

* * * * * *

[fol. 381] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, did you three you have mentioned have a meeting with Mr. Tyler?

A. We had several meetings with him.

Q. When did you have the first meeting with Mr. Tyler?

A. We went to see Mr. Gossett on the 27th of March—around the last part of March, Mr. Tyler tells me it was the 27th of March.

Q. Was it the day of the meeting?

A. No. The 27th of April was the day of the meeting.

Q. What occurred at the first meeting?

A. There had been this disturbance at 18th and Grand—

Q. (Interrupting) Don't tell me anything except what you said and what Mr. Tyler said in this meeting.

[fol. 382] A. We went to see about an injunction at that time.

Q. At the first meeting was anything said about a union?

A. There never was a meeting of employees where Mr. Tyler attended until the 27th of April.

Q. At this meeting at the law office was anything said about a union?

A. Not at that time.

Q. When was the next meeting at the lawyer's office?

A. I don't remember the date.

Q. How long afterwards? Was it the next day, or a few days later?

A. Probably two or three days later.

Q. Were the same three people in attendance at that meeting?

A. That is right.

* * * * * *

[fol. 383] Q. Did you have a third meeting up in the lawyer's office?

A. Yes. We have had more than that.

Q. What was said at the third meeting?

A. We were discussing by that time that a Federal injunction was what we needed instead of a state injunction, something of that type.

Q. Was anything said at this third meeting about the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. There was never anything said at any of these meetings about a union until after April 12.

Q. Do you remember how many meetings you had with the attorneys after April 12 about this matter?

A. I don't remember just the number.

Q. Did you have more than one?

A. Yes. We had several telephone conversations, and we had—

Q. (Interrupting) Tell me about the first meeting after April 12.

A. I can't tell you just in detail about that.

Q. Well, tell me in general.

A. I think the first meeting—Mr. Tyler called some time after April 12 and said—

Q. Called who?

A. Me.

[fol. 384] Q. And what was said?

A. That he had seen in the paper that the Wagner Act had been declared valid, and he had rather been inclined to think it wasn't a legal act. I don't know that I am using the right term, but that was the idea. And I don't remember that there was any particular me[illegible]ng or any particular conversation until after this notice in the paper on the 22d or 23d of April.

Q. What did he say at that time?

A. On the 22d or 23d of April one of our employee's picture was in the paper, with some other girls, saying she had been elected—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a minute. I am not concerned with what prompted anything. Tell me what Mr. Tyler told you and what you told him on the telephone.

A. He called and said there might be the possibility that there was something else we could do besides the injunction, that we might form an employees' union. I don't remember the remark I made; I no doubt said it was worth considering, or something of that sort.

Q. What was done?

A. Nothing was done until after the 23d of April, and then we called him and told him we had better be finding out what we could do about organizing.

Q. Up to the 23d of April you had not discussed in Mr. [fol. 385] Tyler's office anything about the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I doubt that very seriously.

Q. I am asking you if you did.

A. No. We had no discussion with him until after the 23d.

Q. What do you mean, after the 23d? The next day after the 23d or—

A. In all probability it would have been the 23d.

Q. Who went with you to Mr. Tyler's office on that occasion?

A. I think, Hobart Atherton, Sally Ormsby, and I. I don't remember whether one other person went or not.

Q. Tell me just what was done at that meeting.

A. We told Mr. Tyler we knew we needed not to do something to represent ourselves, that we had had other representation claimed to be elected by our people and sent to the convention as representatives of the Donnelly Garment Company. He gave us as much as he knew—he said he didn't know anything about organizing labor organizations but he would look into it very thoroughly, and do so as soon as possible, and give us whatever information he could.

Q. How long were you there on this occasion?

A. I think we were there quite awhile at that time, a half hour or 40 minutes or so.

Q. When was the next time you had a conference with Mr. Tyler?

A. I don't know, Mr. Batten, because that is just—four or five days had elapsed in there until we had this [fol. 386] meeting. There was considerable telephoning back and forth.

Q. Did you have any other meeting with him in his office, you and your committee?

A. It seems to me we went down there two or three times in regard to that, but as to any definite time, I can't give that, but I know we had quite some conversation with him about it.

Q. In his office?

A. Part of it was in his office.

Q. Tell me about the next meeting; when you went to his office what occurred?

A. I don't recall anything more definite other than his telling us he had read the law and we had the right, under the law, to organize a labor union, giving us some instruction. We discussed how we might do it, or if we should do it, and he wasn't concerned with that other than to tell us we had the right to do it.

Q. How long before the meeting of April 28 was it that you went over these by-laws?

A. I think the day before it was that we talked to Mr. Tyler about it.

Q. The day before you talked about the by-laws?

A. I believe it was the day before.

Q. That was your committee that went up there?

A. That is right.

Q. How long were you there at that time?

[fol. 387] A. I would judge, half an hour or so.

Q. Did Mr. Tyler have the by-laws all prepared when you got there?

A. Mr. Batten, I don't believe those by-laws were written out in complete form. I really don't remember.

Q. In other words, as you remember, at the last meeting you had with Mr. Tyler before April 28, when you organized, you had never seen a completed copy of the by-laws?

A. I don't recall whether the copy Mr. Tyler brought down to the meeting—whether he had it ready at that meeting or not, but they were discussed quite generally at the meeting on the 27th of April, in quite some detail.

Q. In Mr. Tyler's office?

A. No.

Q. Prior to your meeting of April 27 you had never gone over these by-laws, clause by clause, with Mr. Tyler, or other members of the committee?

A. Not in great detail.

Q. You didn't sit down and—

A. (Interrupting) We did, to some extent.

Q. Did you sit down and take paragraph 1 and discuss it and [why] should be in it?

A. No, sir, because I didn't feel I was capable of writing by-laws, and I don't believe either of the other people did at that meeting.

* * * * * *

[fol. 394] Q. Tell us the departments. Are there, for instance, five or six general departments and the subdivisions of those?

A. Would it be clear to you if I told you the departments on each floor?

Q. Yes.

A. The tenth floor is the office. The ninth floor is the designing department and the sample room where our salesmen's samples are sent. There is also up there what is called a binding department where binding is prepared for the factories. The eighth floor is the sewing room, composed of five sections, I believe it is, and the mechanical department emanates from there.

Q. You mean by that the department that does the repair work?

A. That is right. The seventh floor covers the sewing department and our infirmary, if you want to call it that. It is where our nurses and hospital equipment are located.

The sixth floor is also a sewing department. The fifth floor is the cutting and dividing department. The fourth floor is the pressing and shipping department. The third floor is the notions department, receiving department and the cafeteria. The second floor is a sewing room. The first floor, there is an employment office there, and the auditorium, and the entrance to the building.

Q. You have someone in charge of the office depart-
[fol. 395] ment? There is an office manager, is there?

A. I believe that is what Mr. Bachafor is. I am not sure that is his official title.

Q. As far as you know he apparently had charge of the office part of it? A. Yes.

Q. You have someone who has charge of the mechanical department, do you know?

A. I assume Mr. Batty has charge of that.

Q. I don't want you to assume, Miss Todd.

A. I don't know.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham, do they have an organizational chart, do you know?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Most plants have a chart that shows the departments, and so forth.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't know of any chart like that, but I could get you the heads of the departments.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you get that for me, please, so that we will have it in the record, so that anyone reviewing the record will know what we are talking about.

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. On what floor did you say your desk is?

A. The second floor.

Q. And the notions are on the fourth floor?

[fol. 396] A. Third floor.

Q. Did your office ever be on the ninth floor?

A. I never have had an office. I had a desk for a while. This desk I have now has been around different places where it was convenient to put it. I had it on the ninth floor for awhile.

Q. When was that?

A. I believe that was sometime in 1937, possibly for a few weeks, as I remember, Mr. Leary.

Q. Did you conduct any union business at that desk?

A. No, sir. I never do conduct any union business at my desk unless there is some work I am doing at noontime.

Q. How long is your noon hour?

A. How long is my noon hour?

Q. Yes. 30 minutes or—

A. No. An hour.

Q. How long do you take for lunch?

A. Sometimes from 11 to 12, sometimes from 12 to 1. I don't take the same time every day. It depends on when I am busy.

Q. Did you have to punch a time clock? A. No, sir.

Q. Did the other employees at the plant have to punch a time clock?

A. Some do and some do not.

Q. Which are those who do and which do not?

[fol. 397] A. I don't know, Mr. Leary, I know the pieceworkers do, and when I was a pieceworker I did. Since I haven't been doing piecework I haven't punched a time clock.

Q. Salaried employees do not punch a time clock, is that it?

A. I don't know about that. I am inclined to think some of them do, but I am not positive.

Q. Isn't it true, Miss Todd, that you are available at your desk to conduct union business from 11 to 12:45 daily? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been during those hours?

A. I don't recall that I have ever spent that much time in the middle of the day.

Q. Do you remember ever announcing to the employees that you would be available during those hours?

A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 400] Q. And do you remember what your duties were on April 23, 1937?

A. I believe that I was helping in the model department at that time on the ninth floor. Did you say April 23rd?

Q. Yes, 1937.

A. I am not positive about that, whether I was doing that or whether I was doing what I am doing now, the exact date of it.

Q. This was just before the April 27th meeting, if you can use that to establish the time.

A. To be definite about that, Mr. Leary, I would have to think about it a little bit. I have helped around various departments where they needed assistance or where I could be of help, and I would have to think about it a little bit.

Q. At that time did you have anything to do with the personnel?

A. I never have had anything to do with personnel.

Q. Do you remember the incident on April 23, 1937, regarding Fern Sigler?

A. Yes, sir, I remember some of it. I wasn't—I think I came to work about 8 o'clock that morning. I might have been there a few minutes before.

Q. On what floor did you see the incident take place? [fol. 401] A. I didn't see any of that.

Q. You didn't see any of that?

A. I didn't see the incident itself.

Q. But you heard about it, did you not? A. Yes.

Q. And you knew that practically the whole plant had engaged in the incident? A. No, I think not.

Q. How many girls did you find out had engaged in it?

A. I think all that I ever heard about was probably ten to twenty girls on the floor where she was working.

Q. What floor was that? A. The sixth floor.

Q. Did you talk to Fern Sigler at all that day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any effort to protect Fern Sigler that day from violence?

A. There was no need at that time, that I saw her, to do anything, Mr. Leary, of any kind.

Q. Well, do you mean that the violence was all over?

A. I didn't know there was ever any violence.

Q. At what time during the day did you talk with her?

A. As near as I can remember, it was about 10:30 or 11 o'clock. I expect 10:30 is nearer the time.

Q. Where were you when you talked to her?

[fol. 402] A. At her machine on the sixth floor. I went down with Mr. Baty and he asked her to come up to the seventh floor.

Q. You went down with Mr. Baty, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you happen to be with Mr. Baty at this time?

A. The girls had been talking to me about her, and in the early morning there shortly around the time I came in to work, and so when I knew Mr. Baty was in the building, I asked him if he would go downstairs and see what was going on or if there was anything needed to be done.

Q. Now, what girls had talked to you before 8 o'clock?

A. I haven't any idea.

Q. Or before the time you talked to Mr. Baty?

A. I haven't any idea, Mr. Leary, because at that time, so many people are coming and going and the time clock is right there inside the door on seven.

Q. What was the substance of the information these girls gave you?

A. I think that would be very difficult to remember. Of course, the thing they were incensed about was that she had an I. L. G. W. U. pin on and they were rather upset about it.

Q. How many girls talked to you about it?

A. I haven't any idea; any number. I would probably be safe—that hour of the morning there are at least two or three hundred people coming through there on the [fol. 403] various floors. I don't even remember what floor I was on; just as I went to work coming up on the elevator. I don't remember just where I stopped.

Q. Well, had this incident occurred at the time they talked to you, or did it occur afterwards?

A. I can't give you the details of that. I don't remember.

Q. You knew that the girls were going down to her floor, didn't you?

A. Going down to her floor?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. Well, at what time did you decide to talk to Mr. Baty?

A. I don't remember that. It was later in the morning.

Q. Well, in the sequence of the events that happened that morning, when did you decide to talk to Mr. Baty?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary.

Q. Haven't you any idea at all?

A. Well, I stated a while ago that when we talked to her, and when Mr. Baty talked to her, and I was present at that conversation, as near as I can remember, it was around 10:30 in the morning and I had only talked to him just a few minutes before that, so to get it down to a time, it must have been between 10 and 10:30.

[fol. 404] Q. It was after, then, the so-called incident had taken place that you talked to her with Mr. Batty, is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Why was it you talked to Mr. Batty in the first place?

A. I really haven't any definite reason for having talked to Mr. Batty about it. With that many girls around [distributed] about a thing of that kind—a number of them had asked me, "What are we going to do about it," and the only comment I had to make about a thing like that is, "What is there to do about it? If she wants to wear a pin, let her wear it. That is her own business."

Q. Was that your attitude, also?

A. It is still my attitude, Mr. Leary. It doesn't make any difference about who belongs to what organization, or when. That is everybody's privilege.

Q. Why is it that your union asked for a closed shop from the company?

A. Well, I think the law gives us that right if we think it is the best thing for our organization. I understand the law does give us that right, according to the information we have received from our legal counsel, and I think we have a perfect right to expect the people employed at the Donnelly Garment Company should belong to our union, and we asked the company to agree to that, and they did.

Q. But you still believe they should be permitted to [fol. 405] belong to any union they desire?

A. I never question anybody about what organization —we just expect them to belong to ours, and if they belong to others, that is their business.

Q. What was your purpose, then, in talking to Mr. Batty?

A. Well, Mr. Leary, with that many girls disturbed and talking to first one and then another about it—the only purpose I had at all was to let everybody stay at work and be peaceful and happy about it.

Q. Was that any concern of yours at that time?

A. No personal concern. I think anyone in an organization of that size, connected with the plant in any way, would like to see things run on as smooth as possible. It is no responsibility or no personal concern other than I would be interested in things that were going on.

Q. In what capacity did you talk to Mr. Batty?

A. No capacity—just as an employee.

Q. You were the president of the Loyalty League, were you not?

A. That would have no bearing on it. I wasn't thinking of the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, were you president of it?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Where did you first meet Mr. Batty that morning.

[fol. 406] A. I haven't any idea. I don't even know where I was when I called him. I might have been in one of the sections. I don't know.

Q. Did you talk to him personally or call him over the phone? A. I don't remember.

Q. What did you say to him?

A. I don't remember that either.

Q. You had no idea at all what the substance of your conversation was?

A. Not the faintest. I imagine I would have called him on the phone probably, or have asked the operator to locate him so I could talk to him.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 409] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you hear any of his conversation with Miss Sigler? A. Some of it.

Q. You stood right at the machine, did you not?

A. Close by.

Q. Was the incident over by the time you and Mr. Batty arrived at her machine?

A. There was no incident at that time.

Q. Had the power been turned back on and were the other girls working?

A. Everybody was working.

* * * * * *

[fol. 410] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Why was it you went upstairs?

A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. We do things sometimes for no particular reason. I don't know why I went.

Q. Was it any part of your business when Mr. Batty asked Miss Sigler to come to his office?

A. Probably none of my business other than just an interest in people, as you can't help but have and you couldn't help but have if you had worked around that plant as many years as I have, and I have always been interested in people.

Q. Did Mr. Batty ask you to go, did you ask to go yourself, or did Fern Sigler ask to have you go?

A. I don't know.

[fol. 411] Q. You don't know how you happened to go?

A. No. I didn't give any thought to it.

Q. Did Mr. Batty send you back to your own work?

A. I don't remember being sent back to my work. I usually try to take care of my work as I should. I don't remember anybody says, "It is time to get back to work." I don't think I would need to be told that.

Q. How many persons went to Mr. Batty's office?

A. Fern Sigler, Mr. Batty, and I went. I don't remember whether Mrs. Hyde was there or not. I rather think she was, but I am not positive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Who was that?

A. Ella Mae Hyde.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Was any other person present in the room?

A. There was a stenographer there.

Q. Who was that?

A. I don't remember who that was, Mr. Leary.

Q. What did the stenographer do?

A. She was taking notes.

[fol. 412] Q. Under whose instructions did they take notes of that conversation?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Was she in the office when you arrived with Mr. Baty and Miss Sigler?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Baty call her to the office?

A. No, I didn't. I don't know who called her to the office, Mr. Leary, or when.

Q. Well, do you know, Miss Todd, whether or not it is a usual thing at the plant to have a stenographer present when the production manager and the employment manager are talking to the employees?

A. No, I don't. I haven't any occasion to talk with the production manager and the employment manager when they are talking to the employees. I couldn't say.

Q. You never had occasion before, did you?

A. I never had occasion before?

Q. You never had occasion to be present when a production manager and the employment manager, or either of them, were talking to an employee before; is that your testimony?

A. State your question again. I don't think I understood it.

Mr. Leary: Please read the question, Mr. Reporter.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 413] A. When the production manager or the employment manager, or either of them talked to employees before? Yes, I have.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. On what occasions?

A. Oh, I don't know, Mr. Leary, that I could mention a definite occasion.

Q. Well, in what capacity would you be in their office when they were talking to an employee prior to April 23, 1937?

A. I might have gone in to ask for some information myself.

Q. You might have been incidentally passing through the office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. But I mean in this situation on April 23rd, you were definitely there, not incidentally there; isn't that correct?

A. I don't know whether you would call that incidentally or definitely or not. I don't—I think that would be difficult to define. It was something that happened on the spur of the moment.

Q. Didn't you do most of the talking at the April 23 conference in Mr. Baty's office?

A. It was in Mr. Baty's office, and as I remember, I did have very little to say. I did very little of the talking.

Q. Where was it held then?

A. In the nurses' office on the seventh floor, I believe.

Q. Who was the—

A. (Interrupting) You are speaking of the conversa-
[fol. 414] tion with Fern Sigler now?

Q. Yes.

A. I think I remember that was in the nurses' office.

Q. Who was it that suggested you go to the nurses' office?

A. I don't know. I didn't have anything to do with that part of it at all. I think Mr. Baty can probably answer that.

Q. Do you remember what, if anything, you said at that conversation?

A. No, I don't believe that I remember that conversation, Mr. Leary, to be clear enough to give it to you.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 425] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Miss Witness, I hand you what has been marked for identification Board's Exhibit No. 5 and ask you to read the document and state whether or not that is a transcript of the events that happened at that conversation about which you are testifying now.

A. You want me to read this first page or the whole thing?

Q. All of it.

A. I can tell you now, Mr. Leary, I know I have never seen this before. After I see it now I can't swear that it is, because I have never seen it before.

(Thereupon the document above referred to was marked "Board's Exhibit No. 5.")

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will, just read it, Miss Todd, and then tell us if that is what occurred at that meeting.

A. All right.

[fol. 426] Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, if I can look at this just a second, I think I can admit it is a transcript or copy.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may look at it.

Mr. Shepard: We will admit this is a copy.

Trial Examiner Batten: Respondent admits that, then, is a copy?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct.

[fol. 428] Q. Well, did you know on April 22d that Fern Sigler was in the union?

A. Mr. Leary, I am not clear on the date of that.

[fol. 429] Q. Well, that would be the day before this meeting. A. In the evening; possibly that night.

Q. April 22d?

A. It was either the 22d or the 23d. I don't know which it was. Whatever date that you say will have to stand, because I couldn't remember the date. It was the first that I knew anything about Sylvia Hull. I didn't know anything about Fern Sigler until this morning. So, what,—in that conversation there, I don't think I was referring to Fern at the time. It was just a general discussion of different people, about their feeling toward people that belonged to the International Union. As you will remember, that feeling was created by the disturbance that was going on around town, and particularly up at 26th and Grand.

Mr. Leary: I move, Mr. Examiner, that be stricken as not responsive.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Do you want the entire answer stricken?

* * * * * *

[fol. 430] Mr. Leary: Let the whole answer be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: The entire answer may be stricken, and read the question, please, Mr. Reporter.

* * * * * *

Q. Now, is it not true that you appeared at that meeting as president of the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember saying at the meeting, "As President of the Loyalty League, I am not going to try to sell you on the idea that we are right, but the majority will certainly rule in a case like this."?

A. I did say that, I guess. That is what this transcript says, Mr. Leary.

Q. Were you then appearing there as President of the [fol. 431] Loyalty League?

A. I should say not. No, I was not. You may make statements and include conversations of that kind without giving any serious thought to it. This was a thing that came up very quickly and I certainly wasn't giving any definite and serious thought to the words that I chose to use.

Q. By what authority did you tell Fern Sigler that "If you want to go home, all right."?

A. No authority whatsoever, very definitely saying something I had nothing—shouldn't have had anything to do with.

* * * * * *

[fol. 432] Q. Why was it you told Fern Sigler that you had worked in more different places at the plant—more different ones—than anyone else? What was your point in that?

A. I think this conversation here is explanatory. Do you object to my reading it?

Q. I do object, yes. A. I don't know why I did.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't hear your statement, Mr. Leary.

Mr. Leary: I said I do object to her reading it. I asked her why she made the statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know that it is particularly material, anyway, why she made it. The Board and the Examiner, and the parties, can take these statements and read them, and at this late date, two years later, I don't know that the witness' reason would be of any particular weight or value.

A. From the conversation, I suppose I was just trying to say in a rather lengthy way here any place you were you [fol. 433] expect the majority feeling to rule. That is what I would expect.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Why did you think at that time that if you joined the union you could not any more get by with it than "the man in the moon"?

A. That is a very crude way of expressing a thing like that. I felt that way because there had been so much resentment over the manner in which the I. L. G. W. U. had been conducting their organization at Twenty-sixth and Grand, and all of those things had a tendency to make you form opinions of what you wanted to do and what you didn't want to do, and I very definitely didn't want to be treated like that, and it was already very obvious that a great many of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company did not want to be treated that way. That conversation was very high. That is what I meant. I just meant to say I would either have to keep rather quiet about it or I would have to let my feeling be known with the majority.

Q. You knew if you joined you would be fired, isn't that correct? That is the way you felt?

A. No, sir. That never occurred to me.

Q. Didn't you state you would expect to be put out on the street and left there?

A. Yes, this article says that, Mr. Leary. I think, on the impulse of the moment you would say things and express them in a poor manner. There certainly wouldn't be [fol. 434] any thought in my mind that I would literally be thrown out on the street.

Q. You knew at the time the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company could not discharge each other, didn't you?

A. I didn't have any reference to being discharged. I didn't seriously have any reference to being thrown out on the street. I am sure we all make remarks in a conversation that if we knew it was going to come up and be used at a time like this we would use a little more discretion about the words we choose.

Q. Who was it that told you that Miss Sigler had told everyone she belonged to the union?

A. What time are you referring to, please? I don't know. Nobody definitely. I guess I should answer your question in that way. I don't know who told me. It was the first thing, I think, I heard when I came on the floor.

Q. When you stated, "we went downstairs and sent those girls back to work, and they went back to work," who did you mean by the word "we"?

A. That is a very bad use of the word "we". I didn't go down and send anybody back to work. I went down, I believe, with a group of girls. If I went through the plant any place at that time and people weren't working I would just say, "get back to work, get back to work."

Q. You would say, then you went down with a group of girls?

[fol. 435] A. I haven't the slightest idea. When I came on the floor I heard about some of this disturbance. I don't know what floor I got off on. I couldn't honestly tell you or anybody else.

I am sure there isn't anybody working in that plant and seeing people not at work and more or less disturbed who wouldn't say, "Let's get back to work."

Q. Didn't you mean you and Mr. Batty when you used the word "we"?

A. Mr. Leary, I think I told you earlier in the morning I don't recall talking to Mr. Batty until around 10 or 10:30 in the morning. I don't know whether he was in the building or not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 440] Q. Did the committee representatives have any preliminary meetings to discuss what they would ask the company?

A. A great many.

Q. When was the first one held?

A. I don't remember the date.

Q. Did the Donnelly Workers' Union at any time request the company to recognize them as the exclusive bargaining agent of the employees of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say there was a letter sent?

A. I don't remember that there was a letter sent. It was a verbal conversation.

Q. Who made the verbal request for recognition?

A. I talked to Mrs. Reed, I believe it was the following day after our union was formed.

Q. On April 28, 1937, you talked to Mrs. Reed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. In her office.

Q. What did you say to her?

A. Explained to her our union had been formed the previous night, calling it the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and also that we would like to reach some agreement with the company, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union being the representative agency to bargain with them, and [fol. 441] that is what led to this article of agreement.

Q. What, if anything, did Mrs. Reed say to you in reply?

A. I don't remember just the words she used. In sections, she said that if it were properly prepared she would consider it.

Q. Did she say at that time that she would recognize the union as the exclusive bargaining agent of the employees of the company? A. No, sir.

Q. Did she ever tell you she would recognize the union as the exclusive bargaining agent?

A. The words of this agreement, Mr. Leary, this supplemental agreement I believe will answer the question. It has her signature on it.

Q. That was the only occasion you remember when she did say she would recognize the union?

A. We have had various meetings with Mrs. Reed. I can't tell you just the conversation at those meetings, but when these agreements were signed, they are worded so that she has agreed to that matter.

Trial Examiner Batten: May I see that?

The Witness: Yes. (Handing agreement to Trial Examiner Batten.)

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed ever request you to prove that you represented a majority of the employees?

[fol. 442] A. I believe we did that in the first conversation I had with Mrs. Reed, because previously the cards that had been signed had been counted, showing a majority.

Q. Who counted them? A. I did.

Q. And as a result of that count what did you determine?

A. There is an affidavit of mine some place, and as I remember it, it is 1,303 people signed either that day or the following day, within a short period of time, and it wasn't an entire representation of the employees because some of them were ill and some of them away on account of no work, and some out of town.

* * * * * *

[fol. 444] Q. Where were the cards when you talked to Mrs. Reed on April 28? A. I had them with me.

Q. Did she count the cards?

A. I don't recall whether she did or not. I know she didn't do it. I don't know whether she had someone do it or not.

Q. She took your word for it, didn't she?

A. Mrs. Reed wouldn't take anybody's word for anything without proof of it. The cards were all together in a box there, Mr. Leary.

Q. What is your definite testimony, if you are able to be definite, as to the proof you showed at that time and what was done? Are you able to relate all of the circumstances?

A. Oh, presenting these cards to her and telling her that they had been signed by employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, requesting membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Did you at that time have any fear for the various employees if you disclosed their names to Mrs. Reed?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Did you have any fear if Mrs. Reed knew the names of the employees in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union they would be discharged?

A. She had every opportunity to know.

Q. How?

[fol. 445] A. I have no fear—

Q. (Interrupting) How did she have an opportunity to know?

A. Because the cards were there.

Q. Did you have any fear that because she knew who the members of your union were she might discriminate against those persons in any way?

A. I wouldn't have any fear of Mrs. Reed not knowing what union anybody belonged to. That is everybody's privilege, to belong to any union they care to.

Mr. Leary: I move to strike the last part of that, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 446] By Mr. Leary:

Q. At what time on April 28th did you talk to Mrs. Reed?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary. She just came into the office at irregular times, and when she came in, I think I talked to her shortly after that. I don't remember what time [on] the day it was.

Q. Well, do you ordinarily know when Mrs. Reed is going to be in her office?

A. No, I do not. If I ever have any occasion to want to talk to Mrs. Reed about any business matters, I would call her secretary, or if she wasn't there I would call the telephone operator and ask her to notify me when she was in, but [—] I were to see her, I would have to make an appointment through somebody.

Q. How had you collected all of these 1,300 cards?

A. Part of them—most of them had been signed at the meeting, and the minutes of the meeting show they were collected at that meeting, with instructions [of] the people wanted to turn them in in the morning they could.

[fol. 447] Q. And in whose custody did those cards remain that evening?

A. As I remember, they were locked in my desk.

Q. That is, your desk on the seventh floor, or were you on the ninth floor?

A. I think that my desk was on the ninth floor at that time.

Q. And when was it that you yourself had counted the cards?

A. That evening following our meeting.

Q. Did you remain at the plant and count them?

A. No, I took them home with me.

Q. You took them home with you that night?

A. Yes, and brought them back.

Q. Brought them back when?

A. I don't remember whether I brought those back late or whether I brought them in the following morning.

Q. Well, have you not just testified that they remained locked in your desk that night?

A. Well, Mr. Leary, that is rather technical. I shouldn't have worded it just that way. I had the cards with me long enough to count them, and I think that I brought them back that night, as I remember it. Now, I am not quite positive about that.

Q. Now, is it your testimony now that you counted them at the plant or counted them at home?

A. No, sir. I took the cards with me at home and [fol. 448] counted them.

Q. Then, how far away from the plant do you live?

A. I lived at that time at 3401 Central.

Q. That is about 2 miles from the plant, would you say?

A. I suppose that is as good a guess as any.

Q. And then, after you were through counting them that night, you returned to the plant with them and put them under lock and key at your desk?

A. I rather think I would. I would have to think about that a little.

Q. How did you get back in the plant that night?

A. You can always get in the building down there by ringing the door bell. There is always a night watchman there.

Q. Can any employee get back into the plant after it is closed for the day?

A. Yes, sir, by signing the book.

Q. Why did you desire to take them back to the plant that night?

A. Well, I assumed just to take care of them.

Q. Well, did you have fear that they would be lost, destroyed or stolen at your own home or apartment?

A. I don't think I gave that any serious thought at all.

Q. Well, was this special trip that you made back to the plant after you had counted the cards at your home that night, only for the purpose of depositing them in your [fol. 449] desk where they could be locked?

A. I don't remember that, Mr. Leary. Oftentimes, if I have things in my desk, either personal or things that might be pertaining to my work, and I want them, I feel perfectly free to go back and forth and get them.

Q. Was any other member of your organization present when you counted the cards that evening?

A. Not at that time.

Q. So, you were the only one, then, who knew definitely how many members had joined the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No; the following morning, Marjorie Green and I checked over them. I tried to get them in somewhat of an alphabetical order.

Q. What time did you get to work the next morning?

A. As I remember now, it was about 7 or 7:30; something like that.

Q. And after you got to work, you started counting them again?

A. No, Mr. Leary, I didn't go to work until 8 o'clock in the morning, as a rule. Some morning, if I have work to do, I might go a little earlier. Oftentimes I go and take care of union work early in the morning, that I want to do then, but, officially, I go to work at 8 o'clock.

Q. How long did it take you to count them again in the [fol. 450] presence of Marjorie Green in the morning?

A. I don't remember. It wouldn't take a great while to count that many cards.

Q. Why did you count them over again the next morning?

A. Well, just to have—we were checking them to be sure we had some accurate idea of how many there were.

Q. Did you talk to any official of the company between the time when the meeting ended on April 27th and the time you talked to Mrs. Reed the next day?

A. When I talked to Mrs. Reed that day was the first official comment that I had made with any of the company, or the first comment that I had made with any official of the company, is what I meant to say.

Q. Did you talk to Ella May Hyde in the meantime?

A. I don't remember talking with Mrs. Hyde. I don't know what business it would have been of hers.

Q. Do you remember talking to Mrs. Reeves?

A. Mrs. Reeves?

Q. Yes. A. No, I don't remember seeing Mrs. Reeves.

Q. Who was present in the room when you talked to Mrs. Reed on the—some time in the day of April 28th?

A. I don't remember whether Miss Frances was there or not. That is her secretary. She has a desk just outside of Mrs. Reed's office, and I don't recall whether she [fol. 451] was there in the room or whether she was outside.

* * * * * *

[fol. 452] Q. How long did your conversation with Mrs. Reed last on that day?

A. That is rather difficult to say. I would think some probably 15, 20 or 25 minutes; something of that kind. I don't know. Probably 20 minutes would cover it.

Q. Twenty minutes at the most. You would say that is it?

A. No, I wouldn't, Mr. Leary. I think that would cover it. It was a general conversation pertaining to the formation of our union and what we expected to do, and the fact that we would expect the plant, and draw up some kind of an agreement to submit to her.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed ask you about the formation of your union? A. Not a thing.

Q. Would you state everything that was said as far as you remember? A. I think I have.

Q. In that conversation.

A. As far as I remember, Mr. Leary, in substance. I [fol. 453] don't recall the details of the words that were used. What I have said wouldn't take 15 or 20 minutes to say, but that was the gist of the conversation, and what we were talking about.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, do you recall how it was left when you left the meeting? What was your under-[fol. 454] standing of the situation?

A. I don't know just how I said it previously. I will try to state it again; that she would be willing to listen to anything we had to say and use her own judgment about it, and at a later date we submitted a working agreement to her, for her consideration, and the signing of these two agreements here are her answer to what she would do.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you definitely ask her to recognize your union in that conversation? A. Certainly.

Q. What was her answer to that?

A. I don't remember just the definite answer she gave, Mr. Leary, and I don't think she would have given an answer to say "yes, I will do it" until she had proof. I left those cards with her to look over to see how many people had signed them; showed her how many had signed them, and further worked with her.

Q. Are you sure, now, you left the cards with her during that meeting?

A. I was going to say I left the cards. I didn't leave them. We used them while we were there. I didn't leave the cards with her indefinitely, no.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did you take the cards with you when you left the meeting?

A. I took the cards with me when I left, yes.

[fol. 455] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did Mrs. Reed make any check of those cards in your presence?

A. I don't know whether Mrs. Reed checked the cards. I don't think she did. I think Miss Frances did, her secretary.

Q. Well, what was the next request that you made to the company after this April 28th conversation with Mrs. Reed?

A. When our working agreement was presented to them, was the next.

Q. When was that?

A. I don't remember the date when it was first given to them. It was signed the 27th of May—yes, I think I do remember. I believe that agreement was given to them, I know it was, on the morning of May 27th, in Mrs. Reed's office.

Trial Examiner Batten: What was that date?

A. May 27, 1937. As near as I remember, it was about 10 or 10:30 in the morning.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. It was given, the Board's Exhibit 6 was given to her at that time?

A. The working agreement?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir, that is right, and it was left with her and her—Mr. Ingraham was there, Mr. Tyler was there, the committee of the union was there, Mr. Batty was there. I don't know that I remember the others that were there, but after some discussion about it, it was left with Mrs. [fol. 456] Reed and Mr. Ingraham and her counsel, anyway, until the afternoon of that day.

* * * * * *

[fol. 457] Q. Now, is this original which I show you now of the articles of agreement, the one or a copy of the one that you brought with you and left with Mrs. Reed that morning at about 10 or 10:30?

A. I didn't understand just how you worded that, Mr. Leary. I have a general idea of what you want, but I don't remember just the wording of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is, is that the agreement you left with Mrs. Reed on the morning, at the morning conference?

The Witness: There were two copies of this. This is one of them.

[fol. 458] By Mr. Leary:

Q. You left two copies with her that morning, is that correct?

A. I might have left three. Now, I am not positive about that. I may have left three, but I rather think it was two. This (indicating) was ours, and she kept [on].

Q. This document I show you is similar in all respects to the dittoed copy of it, Board's Exhibit No. 6, is it not, with the exception of the signatures on the last page?

A. I haven't read it word for word, but I gave it to you as a copy, and I think it is.

Q. Is it true—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Let me hear that answer again.

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: I think we are entitled to a definite answer.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The copy is a copy which you furnished, Miss Todd?

A. That is right.

Q. And you prepared the copy yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. The question is, is it a copy?

A. Yes, it is. I have read the copy this was run off of.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. And in all respects, then, the articles of agreement which you presented in the morning were the ones that [fol. 459] were eventually signed?

A. No, I think not, Mr. Leary. I think there were some changes in this copy, and I think that one you have there was typed later in the day. There were, I believe, some minor changes of wording, and so forth, after that discussion with Mrs. Reed. This is a copy of the one that was signed. There were some few changes in that original agreement.

Q. Will you point out what, if any, changes were made in the original agreement?

A. I don't believe I can do that from memory.

Q. You have a copy of the Board's Exhibit No. 6 in your hand now, have you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Reading that, are you able to point out any place where any changes were made?

A. Not now I am not, no, sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Could I get this clear? Are you asking the witness whether the identical paper which you are handing her is the paper that was left with Mrs. Reed on the morning of that conference?

Mr. Leary: I do not propose to answer that.

Mr. Ingraham: That is a fair question.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, I think the attorney has a perfect right to inquire what you mean by a question. I gathered what you meant was, was this contract, the way [fol. 460] it is now worded in Board's Exhibit No. 6 for identification, the same as it was presented to Mrs. Reed in the morning.

Mr. Leary: Yes, and she answered it was.

The Witness: No, I did not, Mr. Leary, I said it was changed.

Trial Examiner Batten: There is no use discussing what she said. The record will disclose what she said.

Mr. Ingraham: My thought was, from the questions, as I understood Mr. Leary, he wants to know whether the papers that were given to Mrs. Reed in the morning were the identical papers that were signed in the afternoon.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't gather, Mr. Leary, that you meant it was the same piece of paper. Did you?

Mr. Leary: I think the record is clear on that, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking you, is that what you meant, that it was the same piece of paper? I gathered what you meant was the same wording. If you want to know whether it was the same piece of paper I think the witness should know that is what you mean.

Mr. Leary: I am not concerned with the identical piece of paper. I am concerned with the writing on the paper.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I thought.

* * * * * *

[fol. 461] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The present question is, Miss Todd: Can you find out any place in Board's Exhibit No. 6 which you now have, which is a copy of this executed instrument, any changes made between the morning and afternoon meetings?

A. They were not made during the meetings, Mr. Batten.

Q. Between the meetings, I said. Can you point out any change of any kind.

A. Made between the meetings, you said?

Q. Yes. In other words, you presented her with a copy in the morning, and in the afternoon you signed Board's Exhibit No. 6?

A. I can't point them out at this time, no, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 465] Q. You mean you can't remember whether Mrs. Reed said, on any point, "I won't do this." In other words, did she refuse to do anything in the morning conference?

A. Mr. Batten, I don't remember that she very frankly said, "I just refuse to do any of these things." She very definitely refused to do anything about it until she had had time to study it. As to the conversation, with that many people in the room, I certainly can't remember what it was.

Q. How many people were there?

A. There were nine members of our committee, ten rather, Mr. Tyler was there, Mr. Ingraham was there, Mrs. Reed was there, and I am not positive whether Miss Frances, her secretary, was there or not, I am inclined to think she was, and Mr. Batty was there. I don't recall whether there was one or two other people there with Mrs. Reed or not. The ones I have mentioned are the ones that were there representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Where did you meet?

A. In Mrs. Reed's office.

[fol. 466] Q. Who talked first?

A. I don't remember whether I did or whether Mr. Tyler did, but I am inclined to think, as chairman of the executive committee I probably opened the meeting.

Q. Who talked after you talked?

A. I would think Mr. Tyler did.

Q. I don't want to know what you think.

A. Mr. Batten, that is all—

Q. If you haven't any recollection of it—Miss Todd, I told you yesterday and I told you this morning if you don't know say you don't know. Now, that is the most advisable thing to do. I do not want you to answer questions I ask, or that any of the attorneys ask, if you don't know.

A. I do know, Mr. Batten, generally what took place at that meeting. As to who said the first word, or who said the second word, I don't know.

Q. What did you say when you first talked?

A. I can't remember just the words.

Q. Tell me what you said.

A. What I have been saying we had spent some time preparing what we thought was a fair working agreement which we wanted to present to her at that time, and I believe what followed was that Mr. Tyler read it to her.

Q. Then, what followed that, if you remember?

A. I don't remember who talked and—[fol. 467] Q. Well, what was done next?

A. Everybody was given an opportunity to discuss it, Mrs. Reed, Mr. Ingraham, and members of our committee, and there was quite some discussion, lasting, as I have stated, from an hour and a half to an hour and 45 minutes.

Q. What, if you remember, in substance, did Mrs. Reed say when she first talked? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did she talk more than once?

A. Yes, Mr. Batten. There was a general discussion by everyone, discussing it very thoroughly.

Q. You do not recall even the substance of anybody's conversation, is that correct?

A. I don't believe that I can quote what the others said and what I said two years back.

Q. I said, the substance of what they said.

A. The substance of what we were saying—

Q. (Interrupting) Not "we". Any one person.

A. No, sir, I can't, Mr. Batten. I am sorry.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who was it who arranged this conference?

A. I think I must have arranged it, or maybe Mr. Tyler did. I don't know whether he arranged it through Mr. Ingraham or whether I arranged it through Miss Frances. One or the other of us would have done it.

[fol. 468] Q. Had you read the articles of agreement before you went to Mrs. Reed's office that morning?

A. Yes, sir. We had been working on them for some time.

Q. Who do you mean by "we"?

A. The committee and Mr. Tyler.

Q. Isn't it true, Miss Witness, that Mr. Tyler was the one who wrote the articles of agreement?

A. It is true that Mr. Tyler worded them as to the legal manner, but I don't think Mr. Tyler knew enough about the garment business to know what you would need in the contract except in a legal way.

Q. What, if anything, did you tell Mr. Syler you wanted in that contract?

A. We had a great many discussions and conferences about this. I don't remember the details of them, but the substance of what came out of those meetings is in the contract.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. The question is, Miss Todd, what if any one thing did you tell Mr. Tyler to put in that contract?

A. Do you mean I, personally?

Q. Yes, you.

A. I was particularly interested in our guarantee, and I was particularly interested in the promotion and seniority rights.

Q. You were interested. My question is, what did you tell Mr. Tyler should be in the contract?

[fol. 469] A. I can't tell you everything that I have discussed with him, because that would be beyond my memory.

Q. Tell me one thing.

A. Our agreement as to our minimum wage. Promotion and seniority rights. And I was one of the ones interested in having a closed shop if we could get it, and in having the union recognized as the sole bargaining agency.

Q. You were interested. Did you tell Mr. Tyler to put those things in the contract?

A. Yes, I did, Mr. Batten. I felt they were things we should actually have in our contract—

* * * * * * *

A. I can't claim all of these ideas in this contract. There isn't anything here that I wouldn't want to have in the contract.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't ask you that. I asked you what you personally suggested to Mr. Tyler.

A. I was wanting something definite said about vacations in this contract, because we hadn't ever had as definite an understanding previous to that time as we had [fol. 470] with this contract. And our hours of working, too. I believe I mentioned, didn't I, that I wanted to have in here some way that this union would be the sole bargaining agency if it represented the majority of the employees?

. . . . . .

[fol. 471] Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken. The question is, did you ever hold a meeting of all the employees and get from the employees an expression of opinion of what they wanted in the contract?

A. No, but we have had meetings with different departments concerning the contract; not all of them at one time, but different departments.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, what meetings did you have with the various departments to discuss the contents of your agreement with the company prior to the time the representatives themselves began meeting with Mr. Tyler?

A. I can't give you the dates of the meetings.

[fol. 472] Q. I don't desire the dates. I want to know how many, for instance, you held between April 27th and the first time you discussed the contract with Mr. Tyler.

A. No, Mr. Leary, we did not have them in that manner.

Q. In what manner did you have them?

A. The contract was presented to small groups of employees subject to their suggestion as to any changes that would be necessary.

Q. Isn't it true that the draft of the contract that you presented to Mrs. Reed on the morning of May 27th was the first complete draft of the contract that you had?

A. I wish you would read that question again, please. It doesn't seem to be very clear. May he read it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

A. The first complete draft—I think it is rather confusing, a confusing question.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. What is confusing about it?

A. It is confusing in this way: there were numbers of contracts written and changes made as we were working on it. Now, this is not this one, but the one presented to her in the morning is the completion of that work done previous to that time.

Q. Now, do you have copies of any of the drafts that you prepared?

[fol. 473] A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you know what was done with those?

A. No, I assume they were destroyed. I wouldn't know any reason for saving them.

Q. Did you ever discuss any draft of a contract with any group of employees at the plant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you do this?

A. I don't remember the instance, but through the entire life of this organization people have been constantly reminded whenever the opportunity presented itself to be thinking of what they needed in the contract. For instance, with our contract that just came up, everybody has been given ample—and requested and asked to make any suggestions necessary. They have always been that way.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 474] Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, Miss Todd, just a moment. The question is, when did you discuss with any group of employees in this plant the drafts of this contract?

A. The drafts of this actual contract were not discussed with a group as a whole.

Trial Examiner Batten: Were they discussed with any group?

A. Yes, sir, very definitely.

Q. When?

A. They were discussed with a committee innumerable times, Mr. Batten, and general information through the plant; this was a new organization—

Q. (Interrupting) Now, just a moment. Did you discuss personally with any group of people in this plant—

A. (Interrupting) Hundreds of them.

Q. Well, now, give me the names of those you talked to.

A. I don't think I could, Mr. Batten.

Q. Could you name one person?

A. Yes, I could name one.

Q. Well, name one.

A. Well, Ruby Hackett.

Q. Any others?

A. I could if I thought about it. I don't know. I could do it if I thought about it a few minutes.

[fol. 475] Q. You think about it a few minutes, and name some that you talked to.

A. You take 1,200 members, and everybody interested in the same thing, they were primarily interested in making a contract that would be worth while.

Q. I am not concerned about that, Miss Todd. I am concerned about whether before this contract was signed, and before the morning that you presented this copy to Mrs. Reed, who you talked over this contract with.

A. Mr. Batten, it was discussed at great length at meetings of the committee. In a general way with other members, as they came in contact with each other. People called me on the phone at home.

Q. I want to know who. I want to know their names.

A. I just stated, I don't believe I could do it. If I think about it a little while, I can probably tell you twenty-five or thirty.

Q. Well, we will give you a few minutes to think about it.

A. I don't think I can honestly tell you just that morning or within a period there of three or four week's time, just who I talked to. There were too many to do that.

Q. Well, can you tell me anybody besides the one you named that you talked to before the morning that you went in to see Mrs. Reed?

A. Do you want the names of the committee?

[fol. 476] Q. No, I want the names of others, other than those in the committee.

A. Well, Lynn Davis would be one. I think Pearl Black. I don't think I know—Pearl Fields, Ruby Lago talked to me about it. It is rather difficult to remember names of people, that many employees, without having it to refer to. If I had a list of them, I could probably tell you two hundred or three hundred of them. I don't believe I can name any more of them at this time, Mr. Batten.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. When was it that you talked to Lynn Davis?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary.

Q. Where did you talk to her?

A. Where—I don't remember just where. I talked to her over the phone several times. I have talked to her at 1820 Walnut.

Q. Well, what does Lynn Davis do?

A. She is an operator.

Q. In what department?

A. 411, I believe is where she is.

Q. And you talked with her over the phone at the plant, you mean?

A. No, at home.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, when you say "411"—

A. (Interrupting) That is the number of one of our [fol. 477] sewing sections.

Q. You mean each section has a number; is that what you mean? A. That is right.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. When did you talk to Pearl Black?

A. I don't remember that, either.

Q. Where did you talk to her? A. I don't remember.

Q. Where did you talk to Pearl Fields?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary.

Q. When did you talk to Pearl Fields?

A. I don't remember any of these people that I have mentioned. I have no doubt talked to them more than once about it. I have talked to so many, anybody that would listen to me.

Q. Do you know when and where you talked to Ruby Lago? A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember whether any of these persons made any suggestion to you as to what should be incorporated in your proposed agreement to the contract?

A. As to definite proposals, I don't remember.

Q. What, if any, proposals were made by any employees of the company to you?

* * * * * *

[fol. 478] A. I can't remember which of these came in that manner or which came from the committee, or just —I couldn't designate them in that manner.

Q. Well, are you able to name any proposal at all?

A. No, sir. This is a corporation of ideas, of a lot of ideas, and which one belonged to who, I cannot tell you.

Q. And did you talk to these four persons whom you have named, Davis, Black, Fields and Lago, individually?

A. No doubt I have.

Q. Well, did you talk to them between the time, April 27th and May 27th? A. I am sure that I did.

Q. Individually? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you talk to any of these persons while they were with a group of employees?

A. I may have. I don't remember. That would be a very logical thing to have happen.

Mr. Leary: I move that that portion of the answer be stricken, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. How much time did you yourself spend on this contract prior to the time it was presented to the officials of the company?

A. In hours' time, Mr. Leary, I couldn't tell you. I [fol. 479] spent so many nights working for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, I haven't the faintest idea how many hours I spent at that time.

Q. Did you have access to the plant at night to use your desk and the records of the union, which were kept in the file cabinet near you?

A. I don't ever recall going to the office to do union work at night.

Q. You mean with the exception of the time you took your application cards back?

A. I may have that, and I may have stopped and picked up paper or something other times. I am not positive about that. If I want to go and write a personal letter and use my desk, I do. Oftentimes, I go back to the plant at night.

Q. Who was it that proposed that the wage scale should not be included in the articles of agreement made between the company and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. That they not be enclosed?

Q. Yes.

A. That was a general idea of the committee, because we didn't have—we wanted to get some sort of working agreement signed, and did not have time to give to it to work out a wage scale at that time. As to a definite person having that, that idea, I don't remember who.

Q. Was the time of the essence in getting the articles [fol. 480] of agreement signed—

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: The question means,—that is a legal phrase—the question means, was it important to get some kind of a contract signed as soon as possible.

A. We felt that having organized our union, it was important to get some sort of an agreement signed; yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: And for that reason, you decided to delay the matter of a wage scale?

A. Yes, sir. We felt that needed a great deal more thought than we had time to give to it.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. I don't understand, Miss Witness, why it was of importance to you to get a contract or an agreement [fol. 481] signed right away.

A. I think I can explain that, Mr. Leary. This was following the time that Sylvia Hull had announced in the paper that she had been elected by the Connelly employees to represent us at the International Union. The law gave us a right to do something to protect ourselves, and the injunction was not doing a very good job, or we didn't feel very secure with it.

Q. At that time had you filed the injunction?

A. We had filed an injunction previous to the formation of this union.

Q. In what court had you filed an injunction previous to May 27, 1937?

* * * * * * *

A. I don't remember whether we had filed. We had been to see Mr. Tyler in the latter part of March about getting an injunction. He was working on it. I don't recall all the technicalities of that. I know he can tell you; and following this episode, or this announcement, rather, in the paper that Sylvia was going to represent us at the International, we felt like people here and there, most anybody, might say they had been elected to represent us. We hadn't elected her. Nobody had any knowledge of it, and that is why we formed this organization, and that is why we felt that we needed to be recognized by our [fol. 482] employer as our representatives, and our bargaining agency.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Had you made an investigation to determine that no one had elected Sylvia Hull?

A. We knew, it was common talk around the plant, and 1,200 people would tell you they didn't know anything about it. That was the thing that caused all that thing to happen.

Q. You mean, to form the union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the only reason?

A. I don't know that it was the only reason, but it was certainly the reason that made us get busy in a hurry.

Q. Was it the main reason, would you say?

A. I wouldn't say that it was. The law gave us the privilege to do that, and if the majority wanted to do one thing or wanted to do another, and it happened in this instance that the majority thought they ought to form their own union, it isn't very likely that 1,200 people would want to sit around and wait for somebody here and somebody there to say they represented them.

[fol. 484] MARJORIE GREEN, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. State your name and address.

A. Marjorie Green, 25 West Seventy-third Street Terrace.

Q. Kansas City, Mo.? A. Kansas City, Mo.

Q. Are you presently employed, Miss Green?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. A little over six years.

Q. How did you happen to secure employment at the [fol. 485] Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I was sent there through an employment agency.

Q. Do you have any relatives at the Donnelly Garment Company that work there? A. No, sir.

* * * * * * *

Q. What is your present position at the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Stenographer and typist.

Q. In what department or what part of the plant are you employed? A. Merchandising.

Q. Is that in the general offices of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you work for the sales company or the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. And where is the office located in which you are employed? A. On the tenth floor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 487] Q. Now, who do you take orders from?

A. Mrs. Reeves is in charge of the merchandising department.

Q. And are you her private stenographer?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is there any other stenographer that does work for Mrs. Reeves other than yourself?

A. Mrs. Richmond is Mrs. Reeves' stenographer.

Q. And does she work for Mrs. Reeves more than you do? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, outside of yourself and Mrs. Richmond, are there any other employees who do stenographic work for Mrs. Reeves?

A. Well, not regularly. They might if some one was gone, was out on vacation, out on account of illness, they might. Teressa McFadden is the stenographer in our department and there are others who can act as stenographers, although that isn't the regular duty.

Q. But you and Mrs.—

A. (Interrupting) I don't work regularly for Mrs. Reeves. She has charge of the department in which I work.

Q. Whom do you work for directly, then?

A. Mrs. Nichols.

[fol. 488] Q. And who is Mrs. Nichols?

A. She works in the production department.

Q. Is that Lulu Nichols? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

Q. Does her work consist of adjusting and fixing piecework prices? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 490] By Mr. Foster:

Q. What is it that you do for Mrs. Nichols?

A. I do some typing.

Q. Are you a member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a member?

A. Since its formation.

Q. To the best of your recollection is that since April, 1937?

A. It was in April, 1937.

Q. And have you held any office in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what office is that? A. Secretary.

Q. How did you become secretary?

A. I was appointed or selected.

Q. By whom were you appointed?

A. By the committee, nine group chairmen.

Q. Now, just exactly how did that happen, and when did it occur?

A. It occurred at the first meeting, I believe, of the group chairmen.

Q. Now, approximately when was that?

[fol. 491] A. It was a few days after April 27, 1937.

* * * * * *

[fol. 493] Q. Where are your union files?

A. We have a file at Miss Todd's desk.

Q. You mean, then, that any records that you have custody of were kept in her file?

A. That is, when I finish with them they are turned over and put in the book and kept in the file.

Q. If you want to get them then, you have to go to Miss Todd for them; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 494] Mr. Foster: All right. Will you mark that, please?

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 8" for identification.)

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, this is the thought of counsel for the Board, that we introduce the minutes of the general meetings and the meetings of the group committee, meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, as one exhibit, and ask leave to substitute copies of the minutes, either photostatic or stenographic copies of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, this Board's Exhibit 8, then, is the minutes of the general meetings as well as the minutes of the committees?

Mr. Foster: It is the minutes of the general meetings of the union and the minutes of the—or the group chairman of the union.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, if it please the Examiner, I want the union to be understood that we don't admit that these are authentic minutes of either the union or the executive committee, that we are claiming, and we think that we will [fol. 495] be able to prove that some of the minutes have been doctored and are not authentic, and are not true records of the occurrences at those meetings.

* * * * * *

[fol. 496] Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, in view of Mr. Langsdale's statement, I am certainly going to require very definite and positive identification of these minutes before ever I receive them. So I advise you of that now.

So, you proceed in any manner you please.

Mr. Foster: Miss Witness, I hand you what has been marked for the purpose of identification as Board's Exhibit No. 8, and ask you whether that—the minutes contain therein are the official minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union from April 27, 1937, to date, including both the general meetings and the meetings of the group committee?

Mr. Langsdale: May I inquire as to what counsel for the Board means by "official"?

. . . . . .

Mr. Langsdale: If you mean by that that I am to be bound by the authenticity of these reports, I don't expect to be.

. . . . . .

[fol. 500] Mr. Lane: The intervener objects to Mr. Langsdale being permitted to take an adversary position to that taken by the Board for the reason that Mr. Langsdale is here representing the International Union, the complainant here. It would be highly unfair to the intervener to permit Mr. Langsdale to cross-examine witnesses which the Board puts on in support of the claim made here by the I. L. G. W. U., and therefore I object [fol. 501] to his right to interpose objections to the questions which the Board asks and to cross-examine the witnesses which the Board produces.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, may I state my position?

Trial Examiner Batten: In just a second. I want to make this statement:

Of course, Mr. Lane, under the rules of the Board, there is no doubt in your mind, is there, that any party to the proceeding shall have the right to appear at the hearing in person, by counsel, or otherwise, and to examine or cross-examine the witnesses, and to introduce in the record documentary evidence?

The thing I was concerned about in starting this was, I wanted to understand the position of the parties.

Do you have any doubt, under Section 25, page 6, that it is entirely proper?

Mr. Lane: I think he cannot be permitted to take two positions in the same action, and I think he is going to take an adversary position he should do so.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean, take two positions?

Mr. Lane: If he is cooperating with the Board as claimant in this case in the production of witnesses and of testimony, then I think he is taking another position in undertaking to cross-examine the witnesses the Board pro- [fol. 502] duces. I don't think the rule is so extensive as to give him that right. I think that is equal to cross-examination of his own witnesses.

Trial Examiner Batten: In the first place, of course we are here because the National Labor Relations Board has issued a complaint. That is the basis of this action. And any party in interest may appear by counsel or otherwise.

I don't think there is any question about Mr. Langsdale's rights, as far as that is concerned. I was only concerned in trying to set forth the disposition so that I as Examiner can rule when matters come up.

Mr. Foster: I would like to be permitted to withdraw my question.

Mr. Lane: The Board asked the witness a question and before she was permitted to answer the question Mr. Langsdale interfered, asking for an interpretation of that question, which I say he has no right, under this proceeding, to do.

Mr. Foster: I withdraw my question.

Trial Examiner Batten: I suppose any attorney has the right, if he doesn't understand the other man's question or wants it explained or made more complete, to do so.

You may proceed, Mr. Foster.

Mr. Foster: I withdrew my previous question.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be withdrawn.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Miss Witness, what does the document which has been marked for purposes of identification as Board's [fol. 503] Exhibit No. 8 purport to be?

A. It appears to be the minutes of the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the minutes of the chairmen of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Who compiled or made the minutes appearing in what has been marked for purposes of identification as Board's Exhibit No. 8?

A. I did, practically all of them.

Q. Which of them did you not prepare?

A. I don't know. There are some times when I was on my vacation, or possibly I might have been ill, when somebody else might have done it.

Q. Do you know when your vacation was?

A. No, I don't; I don't know exactly.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Is there any way you can identify the ones you prepared and the ones you didn't? Don't your initials appear on them?

A. My initials are on the ones I prepared. Shall I take them a meeting at a time?

By Mr. Foster:

Q. I would like to have you turn to the first minutes there and see if your initials appear. That is the meeting of April 27. A. No, they don't.

Q. Do you know who made those minutes?

A. I typed this copy here. There was some misspelling [fol. 504] of names in the original copy.

Q. Who prepared the original copy?

A. I don't know.

Q. You simply retyped it? A. Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the date of that meeting?

Mr. Foster: April 27, 1937.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Now, turning to the meeting of May 25, 1937, will you tell me whether you typed and prepared the minutes for that meeting? A. Yes, I did.

Q. You are positive you prepared them, as well as typed them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those minutes accurate and complete, with reference to that meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other stenographer present at that meeting? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Now, turning to the minutes of the group committee, will you tell me who prepared and typed the minutes of the meeting of April 29, please—if you know?

A. I typed them.

Q. Turning to the minutes for May 27, 1937—

A. (Interrupting) Is that a chairmen's meeting?

[fol. 505] Q. Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Was the 29th a chairmen meeting?

Mr. Foster: Yes.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. With reference to the various minutes of different meetings of group chairmen on May 27, 1937, will you please state who prepared the various minutes for those meetings? A. Which meeting?

Q. Of the different meetings.

A. Of the group chairmen?

Q. Yes.

A. I did, all of those that have been referred to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 506] Q. Do the various minutes of the various meetings on May 27, 1937, purport to be true and accurate accounts of what occurred at the various meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you prepare those minutes?

A. How? I don't believe I understand you.

Q. Did you take stenographic notes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In shorthand? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take down everything that was said?

A. Well, I don't claim to be an expert. There were possibly a few words I missed, but this is the sum and substance of those meetings.

Q. Directing your attention to the minutes for the meeting of July 12, 1938, I would like to ask you, if you know, who the initials P. G. stand for.

Mr. Langsdale: Is that a committee meeting or mass meeting?

Mr. Foster: This is a general meeting.

A. No, just offhand I can't say.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. You have no idea?

A. I think I was on my vacation at that time. I wouldn't be positive, though.

Q. You have no idea who P. G. was?

[fol. 507] A. No, I don't offhand. We have a number of girls there. I can't think just now who that could be.

Q. Was there anyone who had the initials P. G. who was a member of the group committee?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may I ask the date that is being referred to now?

Trial Examiner Batten: July 12, 1938.

A. No, I believe not.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Now, referring to the minutes of the meeting on May 11, 1937—

A. (Interrupting) General meeting?

Q. Yes. On page 18. Will you please tell me who the initials E. N. stand for, if you know?

Mr. Langsdale: What date is that?

Mr. Foster: May 11, 1937.

Mr. Langsdale: General meeting?

Mr. Foster: Yes.

A. I don't know who that would be.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Have you no idea whatsoever?

A. No.

Q. How many stenographers do you have at the Donnelly Garment Company, approximately?

A. I don't believe I could guess. A number of them. I would hate to guess.

Q. And you cannot recall any stenographers with the [fol. 508] initials E. N. or P. G., is that correct?

A. I don't recall anyone I can think of.

Mr. Foster: The Board would like to offer in evidence at this time as Board's exhibit No. 8 the minutes of the general meetings, or what purports to be the minutes of the general meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and to offer in evidence as Board's exhibit No. 9 what purports to be the minutes of the group committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 512] Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, they will be received.

(Thereupon, the documents heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibits 8 and 9" were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Now, Miss Witness, do you have any other minutes of any meetings which have not been included in the minutes which have been produced for the Board that you know of?

A. There are a couple that I do not have written up as yet.

Q. And they are of recent meetings?

A. Yes.

Q. And with that exception, are all the minutes of all the meetings present that you know of?

A. Well, we might have said some chairmen meetings at which there were no minutes kept.

Q. But these are all the minutes that you know of?

A. Besides those I have mentioned.

[fol. 514] Q. There is one question I would like to ask before Mr. Langsdale starts. Do you have in the secretary's records— or let me ask it this way: do you have any other records of these meetings except the records, the Board's Exhibits 8 and 9 that you have just looked over?

A. No, those are the copies.

Q. My point is this: do you have originals? Do you have any stenographic notes? Do you have any sheets of paper with penciled memorandums on them?

A. No; my notes have been destroyed by now.

Q. In other words, this is the only record you have of these meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all other records, notes, matters of that kind have been destroyed. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, prior to Mr. Langsdale's cross-examination I renew my objection as to his right to cross-examine this witness on the ground that he is taking the position adversary to that of the Board, which he, being counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which is the claimant in this case.

[fol. 515] Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled.

* * * * * * *

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You stated that you are Mrs. Lulu Nichols' stenographer. What position does Mrs. Lulu Nichols occupy with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I do some typing for Mrs. Nichols.

Q. Well, you state, did you not, that you were her stenographer?

A. No, I don't believe I did. I do some typing for her.

Q. I don't want to misquote you. That is what I understood you to say. Do you type for anyone else except Mrs. Nichols?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Who else?

A. Well, I do just general typing for the department which I work in. I also run a Teletype machine and a Western Union machine. I have typed different reports. I have various duties.

Q. Who is Mrs. Nichols?

A. She makes the instructions on the dresses which are sent down to the factory to be made.

Q. What do you mean, "instructions"?

A. Well, on how to make the dresses.

[fol. 516] Q. Does she fix prices, piecework prices?

A. Yes, I suppose what you would call it.

Q. Well, do you know what I mean when I say "piecework prices"? Do you?

A. Yes, she puts the prices on the different types of work.

Q. And do you type those prices for her to be sent around in the various sections?

A. I type the instructions on how the dress is made.

Q. You type the piecework prices?

A. I type the instructions on the various operations of the dress.

Q. Do you type the piecework prices? "Yes" or "no."

A. Well, I don't believe I understand.

Q. Well, do you know what I mean by "piecework prices"? You say Mrs. Nichols fixes those. Now, do you ever type them for her? A. Yes, I type some.

* * * * * *

[fol. 517] Q. Do you have a typewriter at your home?

A. I borrow a typewriter occasionally.

Q. I mean, do you own one that you keep at home?

A. No, I don't own one.

Q. For what purpose do you borrow one?

A. I borrow one to do union work at my home.

Q. That is, these minutes that you have written up, you mean to say you have written on some typewriter that you have borrowed to take home? A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever write any of these minutes up at the plant? A. Yes, I have.

Q. During the daytime? A. No, sir.

Q. When?

A. Unless it would be on my lunch hour, lunch hour or in the morning before time to go to work, or in the evening.

[fol. 518] Q. Always, of course, outside of working hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where would you do that work outside of working hours?

A. Well, at my typewriter.

Q. Whose typewriter is that?

A. It belongs to the company.

Q. The Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give us the name of any stenographer [tho] took any minutes of any of the meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union except yourself?

A. Well, I wouldn't know. If anyone took any, it would be while I was away. I wouldn't know who it was.

Q. You don't know, then, the name of any stenographer who ever took any minutes except yourself?

A. No, I don't.

Q. What kind of record did you take of the minutes or of the happenings in these various meetings? I mean, did you take them in shorthand? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 529] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Miss Green, did any officer, official, or anybody with authority to hire or fire ever pay you anything or ask you to do anything for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has the company and the men I have mentioned, or the officers of the company I have mentioned had anything to do in any way with the preparation of the minutes you have been referring to?

A. No, sir, not one thing.

Mr. Ingraham: That is all.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Now, Miss Green, referring to Board's Exhibit No. 8, pages 1 to 11, inclusive, those are the minutes of the meeting held on April 27, 1937, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are those 11 pages, the pages which I have in my hand here, which I am showing you, pages which you yourself typed? Was this typewriting on these pages done by you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that done by you?

A. Several days after the date of that meeting.

Q. How many days?

[fol. 530] A. I can't say exactly, but I would say within 3 days.

Q. Three days after the April 27, 1937, meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have there been any changes of any kind made on those 11 pages since those three days after the 27th of April, 1937?

A. No, sir.

Q. And these are the original pages which you typed within that time and which have been kept by you ever since?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to all of the other minutes which you yourself typed have there been any changes made in them from the time you typed them up to the present time?

A. No, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment. You have 300 and some pages there.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean that your answer, Miss Green, covers all of those pages?

A. Well, from what I can see.

Q. As to those that have your initials, there have been no changes made, is that correct?

A. From what I can see from glancing through it.

Q. I don't want any qualifications. All of those that bear your initials are now as you typed them? Is that what you want me to understand?

A. I would have to read them over to say definitely.

[fol. 531] Q. I am only interested in your statement. That is your answer, that they are now as they were when you typed them?

A. I haven't made any changes in them. If these are like—

Q. (Interrupting) Now, Mr. Lane's question was, are they now, as they are before you, the same as when you typed them and placed your initials on them?

Mr. Lane: May I add to my question the phrase, as far as you know?

A. As far as I know, they are.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, how far do you know?

A. I have glanced at a number of the minutes, and from a glance they appear to be as I have typed them.

Trial Examiner Batten: You can proceed as you please, but I think if that answer is to be of any value, either the witness should look them over and say whether they are, because when she makes the statement she has just made, as far as she knows, that means all she has to do with regard to any one is to say, "I didn't look that one over carefully."

Mr. Lane: I will rephrase my question. I will ask this question of the witness.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Miss Green, within what time after each of the respective meetings where you yourself kept the notes and transcribed the notes, within what time did you type the notes which you made at those meetings?

[fol. 532] A. Oh, within three or four or five days, I would say.

Q. After each of the respective meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to all of the minutes here which you yourself typed, have you made any change in any of those minutes from the time you typed them up to the present time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were the minutes of the meeting which you yourself did not take down in shorthand typed by you or by somebody else?

A. They were typed by somebody else, with the exception of this first meeting here (indicating in minutes book).

Mr. Langsdale: Did I understand her to say she took the minutes of the first meeting?

The Witness: No, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: You did not?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. From what material did you type these first 11 pages?

A. From the typewritten copy that whoever took them had made.

Q. You were present at that first meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there supplied you a typewritten copy purporting to be minutes of that first meeting of what took place at that first meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do with that typewritten copy?

[fol. 533] A. It was destroyed.

Q. Before it was destroyed what did you do?

A. I retyped it.

Q. This is merely a retyping of that original report that was furnished you? A. Yes.

Q. Have you read over the minutes of that first meeting? A. You mean just now, or—

Q. Well, have you read it over recently enough so that your recollection is refreshed as to what it contains?

A. Yes.

Q. I will ask you whether or not the minutes as contained in these 11 pages, of the meeting of April 27, accord with your recollection of what occurred in that first meeting? A. Yes, they do.

Q. Miss Green, will you take this minute book sometime at your leisure and go through and find out what minutes were taken down at each of the meetings by somebody other than you, and report that fact back to us at some place or date? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 535] Rose Todd, a witness previously called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, resumed and was further examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued).

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Miss Todd, I notice in Board's Exhibit No. 7, on page 3 thereof, the words "methods now used by the employer in determining piecework rates shall be continued." [fol. 536] Do you see the sentence to which I refer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What methods had been in force and effect prior to the time this agreement was entered into on June 22, 1937?

A. As far as I know, Mr. Leary, they had been made out by Mrs. Nichols, with the help of Miss Spalito.

Q. Had you taken any part in the making of piecework rates prior to June 22, 1937?

A. That used to be my work down there.

Q. Yes. But just immediately prior to that time had you yourself been engaged in that system at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where in your articles of agreement, Board's Exhibit No. 6, or your supplemental agreement, Board's Exhibit No. 7, copies of which I now show you, is any mention made of the fact that the piecework rates will be reviewed by you as representative of the union?

A. That statement is not in either one of these agreements.

Q. By what arrangement with the company did you begin to review the piecework rates?

A. By a verbal arrangement with Mrs. Reed.

Q. When did you make such arrangement?

A. I don't remember the date. It was—oh, possibly—it must have been something like two or two and a half months. I don't remember just the time.

[fol. 536-A] Q. What were the circumstances leading up to the inauguration of your reviewing the piecework rates?

A. Discussion at the meetings of the executive committee of the manner in which we thought would be a fair way of doing that.

Q. Showing you Board's Exhibit No. 9, are you able to pick out the date of the meeting in which you first discussed with the other members of the executive committee the proposition of your reviewing the rates set by Mrs. Nichols and Miss Spadito?

A. I don't know that I will be able to. I will be glad to look through here and see if I can find them. As I think I stated this morning, these minutes of our executive meetings are very incomplete, as you can see. Some of them are very brief, and it might not be in here at all. If it is here—Shall I take time to read these?

Q. You are able to set approximately the time when you started this, aren't you? A. Yes.

Q. Well, check the executive board meetings about that time.

(Witness looks through Board's Exhibit No. 9.)

A. I don't see it in these minutes.

Q. That was a matter of relative importance to your organization, was it not, Miss Todd?

A. It was of greatest importance to us.

[fol. 537] Q. And you do not find any mention of it in the minutes of your executive board meetings?

A. I do not at this time, in glancing through them. It was discussed at great length as to what would be the best way for us to handle that.

Q. How did the discussion begin?

A. I don't know. I don't remember the details of it. It was a meeting of our committee.

Q. At whose suggestion was the matter taken up in the first place?

A. I don't remember whether it was one of the operators or whether—I don't remember who it was.

Q. What, if anything, was said about it during the discussions of the matter?

A. I don't think, Mr. Leary, I remember the details of that discussion. There have been a number of requests or comments by different people, particularly pieceworkers.

Q. Is it a fact that they were not satisfied with the way the company was setting the rates?

A. I think it isn't a question of their not being satisfied with the way they were being set, but they felt we should have some check on them, that the union should have some check on them, so that we would be in a position to know whether they were right or wrong.

Q. The union wanted to check up on the company, is that it?

[fol. 538] A. That is right.

Q. Had you had any experience to indicate that the company needed to be checked up in this matter?

A. I can't say we had had any serious complaints. Any of the pieceworkers in that plant, or any of the time workers for that matter, if they are not satisfied can go to anybody they want to to make complaints. And, as a matter of safeguarding our right and privilege, we felt we should have a check on these prices before they were sent to the factory.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Had some of them actually complained?

A. With that many garments in a place the size of that, Mr. Batten, it is a very common thing that there may be some change necessary in prices.

Q. Did anybody complain to you?

A. Why, I am sure that they did. I have some—

Q. (Interrupting) Now, I don't want you to say you are sure unless you recall who they were and when it was.

A. I have in my desk some records of complaints we have had. A great many of them have been taken up and settled and they have never been written down.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Were not the operators satisfied with the piecework prices when they were being set by members of their own union?

A. Not entirely. We are all human beings and can [fol. 539] make mistakes setting prices, especially if you have a new type operation. In that case it is rather impossible that anybody would just set a price there and know that was going to be absolutely right. On the whole I would say we do a very good job of it.

Q. Isn't it true, Miss Witness, the setting of the piecework prices is perhaps the most important thing the individual operators have to bargain for with the company?

A. I guess you are right.

Q. It is a constantly recurring situation, is it not, and it is a daily happening, that piecework prices will be changed? A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it true that Mrs. Nichols and Miss Spalito spent all of their time adjusting piecework prices, and so forth?

A. No, sir.

Q. What proportion of their time would you say they spent setting piecework prices?

A. It takes most of their time doing that work. That is what their work is. That is what they are employed for. I don't know what the percent is. Sometimes they might not be as busy as others. I can't tell you the percentage.

Q. Who represents the company in setting the prices?

A. Other than Mrs. Nichols and Miss Spalito being hired by the company nobody represents them.

Q. And you represent the union yourself?

[fol. 540] A. Yes, sir. There is never any hesitancy on any operator's side, if she isn't satisfied she doesn't hesitate to say so, I am sure.

Mr. Leary: I move to strike the last part of the witness' answer, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

Mr. Leary: Did you have any open meetings of your organization to discuss the certain provisions of the supplemental agreement identified as Board's Exhibit No. 7?

A. Not before it was signed. It has been thoroughly discussed with departments or groups of departments since then.

Q. Did you discuss it with any groups of employees prior to the time it was signed?

A. Yes, sir. Do you want any explanation of it?

Q. No, I do not, not right now. Who were the persons who you talked to personally?

A. The executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Did you in your capacity as chairman of the execu- [fol. 541] tive committee discuss the provisions of your proposed supplemental agreement with any employees or groups of employees prior to June 22, 1937?

A. That was thoroughly discussed by the committee—not at a general meeting, no, sir.

Q. Did you give the employees any opportunity at all to have any say-so in what they desired to be included in the supplemental agreement? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 542] Q. What opportunity did you give them?

A. We have always tried to keep the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union informed as to these activities or something that we are working on so that if they have any suggestions they might make them. I don't know when they did it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Will you tell me what you did to advise the employees that you were going to make the supplemental contract? A. I have no doubt—

Q. (Interrupting) I don't want any doubts. Tell me what you personally did.

A. I have talked to any number of individuals.

Q. How many, off-hand, would you say you talked to before the supplemental contract was entered into?

A. I think that was an important as that to us, I no doubt would have discussed it with numerous, I would say probably hundreds of people. I don't know whether the minutes will show—

[fol. 543] Q. Now, just a moment. You discussed it with them before the supplemental contract was signed?

A. As we were working on it, I mean. I never did have a general meeting.

Q. Now, just a moment. As you were working on this you discussed it with several hundred employees?

A. Different phase of it.

Q. Now, over how long a period were you working on this?

A. I would say that I know we were working on it better, the better part of a month, and even before our working agreement was signed, we were thinking of it and trying to formulate in our minds what should go into this other agreement.

Q. Well, now, was it over a month that you talked with several hundred employees about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many hundred would you say?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Well, can you give me any idea? Was it 200 or 500 or 800?

A. Well, where you would be with a group of people, there might sometimes be one and might sometimes be six or eight or ten that would be interested in talking about the thing. I couldn't give you a definite figure on how many.

Q. Well, I am asking you, was it 100, more than 100?

A. I am sure that it was.

Q. Was it more than 200?

[fol. 544] A. Well, I couldn't—I don't know that I could sit here and name 200 people, but I surely feel like I am justified in saying more than 200.

Q. Was it more than 300? A. I don't know.

Q. Well, would you say more or less than 300?

A. I don't know, Mr. Batten. I think I could safely say between 200 and 300 people that I have discussed that with.

Q. Now, during this month, where did you talk to 200 or 300 people?

A. Well, if you were with a group of people, having a party, that the topic of conversation with employees of that plant at that time and members of our union would be what we should do about this.

Q. Well, did you talk with the two or three hundred at a party? A. No, not as a whole group of people.

Q. Well, tell me where you did.

A. Whenever we have a party there is all the way from 1,000 to 3,000 people there.

Q. Where did you talk with the two or three hundred people?

A. I would say some time around the plant. Sometime I met socially with them. Sometimes I would go to a [illegible] my house or numbers of people called me on the phone and talked to me about it.

[fol. 545] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you know whether any of the employees gave you any suggestions as to what should be included in the supplemental agreement?

A. There were numerous suggestions made.

Q. What, if any, were some of the suggestions made?

A. Well, there was quite some discussion of various ones, and comments by various ones of what our minimum wage scale should be.

Q. And what did you decide it should be?

A. Our minimum wage scale, as you will notice in our working agreement, calls for $15. I don't know just where the idea originated that that agreement should read $16.50 in that supplemental agreement.

Q. Now, when you refer to your original agreement, do you mean Board's Exhibit 6?

A. I don't remember the number on it. Yes. This calls for $15. We all felt that the company was probably able to pay more than that, and, at least, we could ask for it, and in the working out of this supplemental agreement, we established a $16.50 minimum.

Q. And you agreed that on May 27th that the minimum would be $15; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what did you agree the minimum would be in your supplemental agreement of June 22d?

[fol. 546] A. $16.50 for an absolute minimum.

* * * * * *

Q. Well, referring particularly to your minimum wage, was that—what are the circumstances leading up to the change in your minimum wage on June 22nd, when less than a month before you had established a minimum wage?

A. Well, we felt like there wasn't any harm in asking for it, and if we could get it, we would be glad to have it.

Q. You were cognizant of the fact, were you not, that you had agreed to work with a minimum wage for two years, beginning May 27, 1937?

A. I believe that is worded "Unless there is some change demanded by the other party." I am not positive about that.

Q. To what clause of the contract identified as Board's Exhibit 6 are you referring?

A. That wording is not in that agreement. That was [fol. 547] my mistake.

Q. Now, then, who was it who suggested that you ask for a $16.50 minimum?

A. I don't remember where that came from. Mr. Tyler and I have had some discussions as to whether he did or I did, or whether I said that some of the operators mentioned it. We never have agreed on who originally thought of it.

Q. What was the purpose of asking for a $16.50 minimum?

A. The purpose of asking for a $16.50 minimum?

Q. Yes. Why did you select $16.50 rather than, say, $16 or $17?

A. As I recall, my memory is correct, there had been an article in the paper that evening that the International were going to get $16 for it, and we thought if we could get $16.50, we would do it, and we did.

Q. Without any difficulty at all?

A. Well, we had a little difficulty over it, but got it.

Q. What difficulty did you have?

A. Well, from $1.50 more, more than they had guaranteed in the first place to give us, was quite a little money.

Q. What difficulty did you have?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean by "difficulty" in that sense.

Q. Well, did you go through any bargaining process with Mrs. Reed in order to get this $16.50 minimum?

[fol. 548] A. Absolutely.

Q. All right. What were the things that you asked for in addition to this $16.50 minimum when you went in to bargain on your supplemental agreement?

A. Holidays, pay for holidays for pieceworkers who previously had not been paid for these holidays.

Q. Did you get that? A. Yes.

Q. And you asked for the $16.50 minimum, and you got that, did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ask for anything else that was different from the conditions of employment of the plant?

A. We asked for classification of our operators, and if,—as you no doubt have seen, this is worked out in quite some detail, and it gives you a grouping here with a higher guarantee than $16.50 for a major portion of our operators.

Q. Well, is it true that the company had no groups of operators for salaried purposes or pay purposes prior to the June 22d supplemental agreement?

A. I don't believe they had ever been divided into groups.

Q. And what information—strike that, please. Who was it who prepared those groupings?

A. There was a great deal of work that was done by the committee, with Mr. Tyler's assistance. The informa-[fol. 549] tion as to the factory for that, he would not be familiar with, came from the committee. The technicality of it was his suggestion, and it is his formation.

Q. And when you had all your groupings prepared, did you present them to Mrs. Reed?

A. After we had worked on it for some time, and rearranged it a great many times.

Q. What, if any, changes were made in the supplemental agreement you presented first to Mrs. Reed?

A. I don't believe I remember the details of those changes, Mr. Leary. We worked with this thing so long.

Q. How long did you work on it with Mrs. Reed?

A. Well, I believe the first meeting we had with her about this was in Mr. Tyler's office.

Q. On what date, approximately, was that?

A. I don't remember just now. I remember it was an awfully hot afternoon and we were there quite a long time. I don't remember the length of time.

Q. Did you present your proposed supplemental agreement to Mrs. Reed on this occasion? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then what did she say?

A. Well, she considered this agreement at quite some length, and I think, particularly, this holiday part and this minimum for all employees, of $16.50.

* * * * * *

[fol. 550] Q. Now, how long after you presented this agreement to Mrs. Reed was it signed?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary.

Q. Haven't you any idea at all?

A. It seems to me in substance, not, now, just the way this is now, that we discussed it with her two or three days, or a day or two, before this agreement was signed.

Q. Now, what, if anything,—

A. (Interrupting) It was signed in Mr. Tyler's office.

Q. What, if anything, did you ask for in the supplemental agreement proposed by yourself that is not contained in the agreement which was signed by the company?

A. What did you say?

Mr. Leary: Read that question, please.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, was there anything that you asked for that you didn't get?

A. Yes, there were. The major thing we are asking [fol. 551] for, the difficult [thin], or the major thing was these guarantees. Now, I don't know in substance—

Q. (Interrupting) In substance, you got everything that you demanded; is that it?

A. Yes, I believe that is right.

Q. In other words, there might have been some differences in the details? A. That is right.

Q. But, in substance, you obtained what you asked for?

A. That is right. Not by merely asking, but by discussing.

Q. Well, whatever the process was, you got it.

A. That is right.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, were there any things that Mrs. Reed wanted contained in that agreement which are not in the agreement? A. I don't recall at the present time.

Q. In substance, then, there are none that she wanted in that that are not in there now?

A. There are none she wanted in that are not in there now.

Mr. Shepard: The witness said she can't recall.

A. (Continuing) I don't recall Mrs. Reed, her personal comments on this. I know the things we were definitely concerned about getting. Now, if there were things that Mrs. Reed wanted in there, she would have to answer that question herself.

[fol. 552] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Well, was there any one thing in this supplemental agreement that was originally proposed by Mrs. Reed and incorporated in the agreement?

A. Yes, I think, Mr. Batten, this agreement is worded—

Q. (Interrupting) Well, now, read it over and tell me. A. I can't tell you the details of it.

Q. I want to know any one point. I don't care about the wording of any one point. This agreement covers a certain number of points, doesn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. Vacations, and so forth. Now, you look through there and tell me one of those subdivisions or main points that was proposed by Mrs. Reed and incorporated in the contract.

A. I can't give you those details. There are so many here that I think look like things that she would have been—would have demanded, but I am not positive about it.

Q. Well, then, your answer in substance, is that you can't say. Is that right?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Well, in order to obtain the $16.50 minimum per week of 40 hours, did you have to make any concessions to the company?

A. Did we have to make any concessions? I don't think I know what you mean by "concessions".

Q. Well, if you had asked for $20 per week minimum, [fol. 553] and a 30-hour week, would it not have been a concession for you to work 40 hours a week at the same minimum? Now, do you understand what a concession is?

A. Yes, I do. I believe that—doesn't our working agreement call for a 40-hour week?

Q. I merely used that as an example, Miss Todd. What concession, if any, did the union make to the company in order that they might obtain the $16.50 minimum per week of 40 hours?

A. We didn't have in mind making any concession. I don't recall that we did.

Q. I want to know, Miss Todd, what, if any, bargaining took place between you and the company.

A. I don't know whether I use the word "bargaining" in the sense that you use it, or not. Maybe I am using the word "discussion."

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, bargaining, Miss Todd, in simple words, means, did you do any horse trading.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you give and take with the company?

A. In working out this agreement to the satisfaction of both, there were changes, minor changes, in this agreement, yes. I don't know whether "Yes" is the word I should answer that question, or not, with, but this agreement was not just written up and handed over, and they signed and said "We are just thrilled to death to do it." [fol. 554] There was a great deal of discussion about it before it was signed.

Q. You remember there was a great deal of discussion, do you? A. I certainly do.

Q. Do you remember any matters that you discussed?

A. Yes, each step of that thing was discussed, Mr. Leary, in detail.

Q. Now, will you explain any bargaining that went on between yourself and the company?

Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner please, I submit that calls for a conclusion and I think the witness said there was a great deal of discussion pro and con, back and forth, about the terms, and that constitutes a part of it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I will agree with you this far: that there is some difference of opinion as to what bargaining is. I think if the witness will tell, the unfortunate part about it, Mr. Lane, is that the witness just can't tell us what the discussion was.

Now, she said there was a lot of discussion. That doesn't mean anything. Now, if she could remember what, as usually is done in these matters, she could tell what she said, what Mrs. Reed said, what the other members said, but she can't remember what anybody said. So I can't accept her statement that there was any discussion, when she can't remember anything, even if it was 2 years ago.

[fol. 555] The Witness: Mr. Batten—

By Mr. Leary:

Q. You may state, Miss Witness, any discussion that took place.

A. I did say, or try to say, that each step of this agreement was discussed.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Miss Todd, there is the point where I would like to ask you a question. Now, that doesn't mean anything unless you can tell in substance, at least, what you said and what Mrs. Reed said, who was another very important party to this transaction, or what the attorneys said. You can't tell us anything about it.

A. Well, I don't know, Mr. Batten. This agreement was primarily drawn up by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union with the assistance of our attorneys, and we would naturally have been presenting this to her as it was written.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. I know all that, but, Miss Todd, my point is this: that if I attended the meeting, at which I entered into a contract, and I were to enter the organization, even if it were two years ago, a matter of wages and working conditions, I would have some idea about what took place at the meeting. At least, I would remember what I did and what I said. Now, you don't seem to have any recollection of it.

A. Well, I certainly will never forget that meeting. Now, as to going in and telling—I seem to be in this [fol. 556] position: that if I say I said such-and-such a thing on that day, then I am to be asked something about this, and if—I couldn't word a thing that I said on that day like that now.

Q. Miss Todd, I am asking you, in substance, what did you say, if anything?

A. That this was what we had prepared; not this particular paper, but a similar paper, and we would want to offer it to her for her consideration.

Q. Well, now, just—

A. (Interrupting) And these are the things that were demanded—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. Are you the one that offered her the paper?

A. I don't think that I did. I think—

Q. (Interrupting) Who did?

A. I think Mr. Tyler did.

Q. Well, are you sure that you didn't?

A. Yes, I am quite certain that Mr. Tyler read this to Mrs. Reed. I know I am right about that.

Q. Now, at any point in this conference, did you say anything at any time?

A. Yes, Mr. Batten. I had a great deal to do with the conversation. It was a general discussion of the people that were there.

Q. Well, now, tell me now some of the things that you said.

[fol. 557] A. Well, I just don't know how to tell you any further than that; discussing each point of this contract is what went on, at that meeting. I don't know how to tell you any different.

Q. Did you discuss each point?

A. I don't know that I discussed each one, but I took an active part.

Q. Did you discuss any one of the points that you recall?

A. I surely did. I think I probably discussed,—I think I probably should say, then, that I particularly discussed with her these piecework guarantees. Now, there were operators there, and they may have said something, too. No doubt they did.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, "may"—of course, "may" anything. I don't want what may have happened or what might have happened. If you don't know anything about this meeting, just tell me you don't remember anything about it, and we will let it go.

A. I just told you, Mr. Batten, that I could never forget that meeting the longest day I live.

Mr. Ingraham: Just a moment—

Trial Examiner Batten, (interrupting): Tell me what you remember about it.

A. I don't seem to know how to tell it.

Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, I want to except to your remarks. This witness hasn't said she knows [fol. 558] nothing about this meeting. She said they discussed every single point.

Trial Examiner Batten: I said as to specific things that transpired at the meeting. Now, when she says she discussed everything, Mr. Ingraham, surely you don't think that means anything from the standpoint of evidence, do you?

Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think when she says they discussed every point, that that is about as far as anybody can go. You mean that she is to tell some conversation?

Trial Examiner Batten: No, but I think that a person who attended one of these bargaining meetings, if that is all she can tell about it, I think she has a very, very faint recollection of what happened, not sufficient to accept in any way, in any form, as evidence of anything.

Mr. Ingraham: I except to your Honor's remarks.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may except, but I am saying that I don't think it amounts to anything.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener wishes to except, also, and calls your Honor's attention to the fact that this meeting occurred more than two years ago, attended by many people, that the results of it were crystallized in written form, which is the summary of the witness' memory of what was done; that there is no provision or presumption that she doesn't remember conversations connected with it, any further than that, that her evidence is, you say, worthless.

[fol. 559] If the court will recall, she has testified that these demands were submitted as demands of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, my only position about this witness is this: that either she has an extremely poor memory or else she doesn't want to remember some of these things. Now, you may take exceptions to that, because that is clearly, Mr. Tyler, my impression thus far of this witness' testimony, and I think, as the Examiner in this hearing, I have a perfect right to express such an opinion, and instead of expressing it in my report, I express it now so you may take the necessary exceptions to it.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent excepts to the remark.

Mr. Tyler: The intervener excepts.

Mr. Ingraham: As highly prejudicial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, if it is incorrect, I think it is, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: I think it is incorrect.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I doubt if anyone present could state what question Mr. Leary last asked, and that occurred less than an hour ago.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I think the record will clearly indicate what everybody's position is, what questions were asked and what the answers are. Of course, if it is prejudicial, the record will bear it out.

* * * * * *

[fol. 567] Mr. Leary: I show you what has been marked for identification, Miss Witness, as Board's Exhibit 10, and ask you if that is a copy of extension of agreement between the company and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

[fol. 568] (Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 10" for identification.)

A. Yes.

Mr. Leary: The Board offers its Exhibit 10.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no objection, it will be received.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 10" was received in evidence.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that a supplemental contract?

Mr. Leary: Yes, that is entitled "Extension of Agreement", having been signed June 2, 1939.

[fol. 569] Q. Did you sign any agreements with the company during the year 1938, Miss Witness?

A. I think not.

Q. The only ones you have signed are the ones that you signed on May 27, 1937, and June 22, 1937?

A. That is right. Using the word "agreement" as our original agreement?

* * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you remember, Miss Todd, going to St. Joseph, Mo., in May, 1937? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what business was that trip made?

A. To explain to the employees working in part of the plant that was operating in St. Joseph that the employees in Kansas City had organized an employees' [fol. 570] union, and asking them if they cared to join.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You have a branch plant there, is that it?

A. We did at that time, Mr. Batten. The company was operating, I don't remember how many machines, but it was a small place there.

Q. Do you remember approximately how many employees there were at that time?

A. I think there must have been around 75. I do have a record of that some place.

Q. Just roughly.

A. I think, 75, 80, or something like that.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you hold a meeting with those employees?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you leave Kansas City on that trip?

A. I think, Mr. Leary, it must have been probably 1 o'clock or 1:30, something like that.

Q. When did you return?

A. I returned that evening sometime.

Q. That was not on a Saturday, was it?

A. No, it wasn't. I don't remember the day. I have a record of the date, but I don't remember the day. I think I ate dinner in St. Joseph and came back that evening.

Q. Did you obtain permission from the company to leave your work that day?

[fol. 571] A. I don't recall. I don't think I ever leave the plant without asking to go. I am not in the habit of leaving the plant without saying I want to get away for a while.

Q. Well, did you do it on that day?

A. I must have, Mr. Leary. I don't think I would ever leave the plant without asking to leave.

. . . . . .

[fol. 572] Q. Do you know whether your pay was docked by the company for that afternoon you were gone?

A. I don't recall that it was. I don't imagine. When I am asked to leave, I would always explain why I was leaving. I don't remember.

Q. I don't understand your answer. Do you know whether your pay was docked or not?

A. I do not, no.

Q. Would that be indicated on the payroll records of the company?

A. I presume so, but I don't know about that, either, Mr. Leary.

Q. Your union at one time or another had membership pins or buttons, didn't they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was an opportunity given to the employees to see the pins before they bought them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were the pins displayed?

A. On the seventh floor.

Q. Where on the seventh floor?

A. Well, I believe it was on the north wall, just inside [fol. 573] the door.

Q. Is that a bulletin board? A. Yes, sir.

Q. A company bulletin board?

A. I don't know whether it is a company bulletin board or whether it belongs to the building. It is a bulletin board.

Q. But the company occupies the entire seventh floor, do they not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who puts the pins on exhibition there?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Leary. I might have put them up, or Marjorie might have. I don't remember who put them up.

Q. And then, who was—what method was followed to determine what pins the employees desired to have?

A. I remember of announcing at a meeting that the pins would be displayed on the seventh floor, and that the employees could make their choice known. The manner in which it was done?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recollect.

Q. Did you ever take any vote on what pin you wanted to select as your union pin?

A. In some manner we did, because I remember very definitely stating that whatever the majority selected, that decision would be abided by.

* * * * * *

Q. What was your custom of notifying members or [fol. 574] employees of meetings of your organization?

A. By sending a notice around to the different departments.

Q. What kind of a notice; an I. D. M.?

A. I don't know that you would call it an I. D. M. I would refer to it as a notice.

Q. Would it be an I. D. M. form?

A. We do not have any I. D. M. forms that belong to the union.

Q. The company has, do they not?

A. It would be a piece of note paper, Mr. Leary.

Q. Who customarily prepares those notices?

A. Our secretary.

Q. Under your instructions?

A. Yes, sir. Well, unless it would be a request by somebody else, but if I am calling a meeting, I would instruct her to prepare them.

Q. Then how is the notice passed around through the plant?

A. By a pick-up system that is operated in the plant. It is just, you might call it a post office system, if you want to refer to it that way. There is a box on a lot of desks.

Q. Is that where these messenger boys you are talking about came in?

A. That is all they do; yes, sir.

Q. And those notices would be put, say, in your out box or in Marjorie Green's out box?

A. That is right.

[fol. 575] Q. And then the messengers would pick them up and take them to the various departments?

A. That is correct.

Q. When you prepared notices of your meetings, do you prepare one copy for each department?

A. I usually try to.

Q. And then, to whom in the department does the notice of the meeting go?

A. To the department. If I was sending it to Section 517, for instance, I would write "517" on it.

Q. And who in 517 gets the mail?

A. Well, the thread girl usually picks up something like that and would give it to the operator and pass it through the section. They would pass it from one to the other.

Q. Do you ever post notices of your meetings?

A. I sometimes do in addition to that, probably post the same notice.

Q. Where do you usually post it?

A. In the bulletin boards, on the different floors.

Q. Are there in your recollection now, bulletin boards on each of the floors that the company has?

A. Most of them, Mr. Leary. I think not on all of them.

Q. Where are those bulletin boards? Are they in the main corridors?

A. Usually just inside the door from the hall.

[fol. 576] Q. Has the company ever reprimanded you for posting notices on the bulletin boards?

A. No, Mr. Leary. The bulletin boards are used by anybody that cares to use them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 577] Q. Are you able to remember, Miss Witness, how long you continued to hold meetings of your general membership on the second floor of the Corrigan Building?

A. No, Mr. Leary, I am not. We did that as long as the Donnelly Company did not lease that floor. They have been held, since the company leased the building, on the first floor, but we pay rent for the use of that space since that time. I think I could get that information for you, but I don't recall just the date.

Q. By what arrangement did you use the space on the second floor?

A. By an arrangement made with the management of the building.

Q. Who was that in particular?

A. I believe at that time it was a man by the name of Meyers, but it is the Corrigan estate. Whoever operated that estate is who it was taken up with.

* * * * * *

[fol. 578] Q. Who was it made arrangements with Mr. Meyers? A. Hobart Atherton.

Q. And you never paid the Corrigan estate any rental, did you?

A. We offered to, Mr. Leary, and they would not accept it. It was a vacant space, and they said, "Use it."

Q. The company leases, as far as you know, all of their property from the Corrigan estate, did they not?

A. As far as I know.

Q. Do you know or remember the occasion when you were notified that the second floor would no longer be available to you?

A. No, I don't. I expect I noticed that by seeing it was being occupied by someone else. I don't remember the definite time.

[fol. 579] Q. Then you began to use the first floor of the building, is that correct?

[fol. 580] A. After the Donnelly Garment Company had leased the entire building we began to use the first floor.

Q. By what arrangement did you begin to use the first floor?

A. By an arrangement with the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Did you enter into any agreement with them to lease the space? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the agreement?

A. It was an agreement with Mr. Green, I believe.

Q. Who is Mr. Green?

A. I have forgotten what official he is of the company. Mr. Ingraham can tell you. It shows on that agreement, too. I don't know what officer he is, I don't remember.

Q. Is he one of the executives of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his first name?

The Witness: What is Mr. Green's first name? (Addressing Mr. Ingraham)

Mr. Ingraham: Alec.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Is there any written agreement with Mr. Alec Green?

A. I believe there is, Mr. Leary. I would have to look through the files. I think there is a letter to that effect. I remember talking to him, and I think there was also a letter.

[fol. 581] Q. That space on the first floor is in the form now of an auditorium, is it not? A. That is right.

Q. And it was not an auditorium prior to the time you began holding your meetings there, was it?

A. It was a sort of a vacant space then, just occupied for miscellaneous purposes, and it has since been built into an auditorium.

• • • • • • •

[fol. 584] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Whom did you say Miss Pilsbury was, the other day?

A. In charge of the designing department.

Mr. Langsdale: What department?

A. The designing department. That is S-p-i-l-s-b-u-r-y.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, there is no Miss Pilsbury down there, is there?

A. No, sir. You misunderstood the name.

• • • • • • • •

Q. Isn't it true, Miss Witness, that you paid no rental for your hall for meetings during the year 1937?

A. Mr. Leary, I think that is not true, and I can—we have checks and very definite records as to how long that rent has been paid, and it has been paid ever since the Donnelly Garment Company leased that part of the building. The dates I can't give you at this time, but I can give them to you if you care to have them.

Q. When was it decided, Miss Todd, to ask the company for a check-off system?

A. I have records on that, and I believe that it was when the union was about three months old. Now, I am not just positive whether it was the end of the second [fol. 585] month or the first of the third month, but we have records on that.

Q. You made no arrangements with the company, nor had any discussion with the company concerning the check-off prior to the time you wrote your agreement on April 27, 1937, and your supplemental agreement on June 22, 1937, did you?

A. I—in answer [—] the previous question, I think you will find it comes between those two agreements. April, May—I think it was either the last of May or the first of June, Mr. Leary. There are some records over there (indicating), if you care to have them.

Q. You began your discussion of it at that time, or entered into an agreement with the—

A. (Interrupting) I can't give you the date of the discussion, but I have a letter that—or I have a copy of a letter that will give you that information.

Q. The check-off has never been incorporated in your contract or agreements, has it? A. No, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 586] Q. Was this check-off system suggested by the company or was it suggested by the union?

A. It was—it began as a request of some of the members of the union.

Q. Who were they?

A. Well, I believe, I know the committee had discussed it with those members, and agreed that we would like to do it if they—if we could get the company to do it, and I believe Margaret Dulcolumbier—may I be understood that these are names that come to me; that is the best of my recollection?

Q. Yes.

A. Lena Canady, Linda Crume, Charlotte Casey, Virginia Dare, Helen Walton, Ethel Carpenter.

Q. Are those the committee members that you are naming?

A. Dora Mattocks. No, I believe I did repeat one of the committee members' names there.

Q. Now, where did you talk to each one of these girls?

A. Probably around the building, Mr. Leary.

Q. Where in the building in particular?

[fol. 587] A. I don't know any place that I might have seen them; before work or at noon time, or as you were going or coming from the building.

Q. How do you remember definitely that you talked to Ethel Carpenter?

A. I have a very definite recollection. She is a rather positive person about things she wants and doesn't want. I remember talking to her about that.

Q. What did she positively say then?

A. Why didn't we do it some way to make it a little easier for us.

Q. Beg pardon?

A. Why can't we do it some way to make it a little easier.

Q. What was found difficult in the collection of dues?

A. It was difficult in this respect: that with that many members it takes quite a little time to collect that money and that small amount of money from each person.

Q. Didn't you have one person in each section to collect dues?

A. Yes.

Q. And who was that person, usually?

A. It was—I couldn't give you a list of those. I think I could refer to our records, I could, and give them to you, but it was a person that was appointed in each department.

Q. Who were they appointed by?

[fol. 588] A. I believe the committee of chairmen did that.

Q. They used to go through the section and collect the dues every once in a while; is that it?

A. No, sir.

Q. How did they used to do it?

A. Collect them at noon time.

Q. As a matter of fact, they were Loyalty League representatives, were they not?

A. No, sir, they were not representatives. It was just an individual selected, one in each department, to collect those dues.

Q. Well, these are the same girls who sold the union pins, are they not, in each section?

A. No, sir. The union pins were not sold in the sections at all. If anyone—my recollection of the union pins is this: anyone wanting them came to my desk and got them.

Q. Are you able to state, Miss Witness, any of the things that were mentioned to you about the check-off by these certain persons that you talked to?

A. Well, the thing that they were primarily concerned about, Mr. Leary, was in making it an easier plan to handle, and we spent a little money to have our dues collected, and not having very much money, we were interested in saving it, and that is what their conversation consisted of.

Q. You relate the conversation in substance of any one [fol. 589] girl in particular.

A. Well, I think my conversation with Ethel Carpenter was very much along that line. "Couldn't we find an easier way to do it and other people used to use the check-off system. Why couldn't we use it." I have had others ask me was it the right thing to do, having in mind that some one had advised them that it was not a correct thing to do.

Q. What was not satisfactory with the system of having a person in each department collect the dues?

A. We were more interested in saving a little money on that account than anything else. It was just the effort, and the little bit that we could save doing it in another manner.

Q. Isn't it true you used to give the people that collected dues free membership?

A. We allowed them their dues for collecting the dues, yes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 597] Q. Do you remember talking with Mrs. Reed about the arrangement by which you would work part time for the company and part time for the union?

A. To spend whatever time, as I recall it, was necessary for my work with the union.

[fol. 598] Q. Was that the arrangement you made with Mrs. Reed?

A. No. That was the discussion. And then, with our committee discussing it and deciding it would not be necessary to spend any company time if I would be willing to spend my own noontime was the arrangement that was made, that I would do my work before and after working hours and at noontime.

Q. Why was it necessary to discuss the employment by the union of yourself with Mrs. Reed?

A. Because she was wondering if I was going to be working for her full time, or whether I would be working for the union.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, in this Board's Exhibit No. 9-1, if you will read it, there is a statement here as follows: "The suggestion was made that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union employ Miss Todd's services part time, the company to retain her as an employee the balance of the time." Is that correct?

A. There was a discussion, Mr. Batten, but the decision that was reached by the time we had gotten into it a little was that I wouldn't need to work—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 599] By Mr. Leary:

Q. What, if any, follow-up was made of that suggestion, Miss Todd?

A. The final decision being it was not necessary for me to work part time, that I would do my work at noontime for the union, and before and after work.

* * * * * *

[fol. 615] Mr. Leary: Who was it selected Josephine Spalito and Mrs. Nichols to be on the price-fixing committee?

A. That is their work, Mr. Leary. They are employed by the Donnelly Garment Company, and at a meeting of the chairmen—Do you want me to find the place? I couldn't find it the other day, but it was the meeting of June 3. At that meeting it was discussed what would be the best manner in which to handle this, and that was the decision that was reached. The exhibit is marked 9-18. It was agreed on by the committee of chairmen.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 619] Q. Do you accept into membership all of the instructors of the company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what the basis of pay to instructors and inspectors is?

A. Approximately. I know what our guarantee is, that our contract calls for.

Q. Is it a weekly salary or a piecework proposition with them?

A. With the instructors it is a weekly salary. It is with the examiners, too.

Q. You mean the inspectors? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do the thread girls get weekly salaries, too?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 621] Q. What employees of Donnelly Garment Company do you exclude from your union?

[fol. 622] A. Department heads and people with the power to employ and discharge.

Q. Who are the department heads that you can remember who are excluded?

A. And the officials of the company, too.

Q. Yes. Will you name the department heads and the departments of which they have charge?

A. Mr. Keyes, salesmen. Mrs. Stephenson, credit department. Mrs. Reeves, merchandising department. Dewey Atchison, production department. Mrs. Pilsbury, designing department. And Mr. Batty and Mr. Green.

Q. What is Mr. Batty's title?

A. Production manager, I think. And Ella Mae Hyde—

Mr. Langsdale: Who was the [only] following Mr. Batty?

A. Mr. Green.

[fol. 623] By Mr. Leary:

Q. What is Mr. Green's position?

A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. He is an official of the company. I don't remember the office.

Q. Did you mention Ella May Hyde? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is her position?

A. In the employment department.

* * * * * *

Q. Are any others excluded?

A. It seems to me I have forgotten one other. Mr. George Barton.

Q. What is his position?

A. He is one of the representatives, sales representatives, and some time back was an officer in the company. I don't remember how long ago. It seems to me there should be one more, that I am forgetting. I don't recall it now, but if I do, may I refer you to it after lunch?

Q. All right. Is everyone in the cutting department in [fol. 624] your union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the top man in the cutting department?

A. Ted Scoles is the top man in the department proper, but his work is directed by Mr. Batty.

* * * * * *

[fol. 630] Q. Showing you, Miss Witness, Board's Exhibits No. 1-OOOO, is that not the original of the amended petition for investigation and certification of representatives pursuant to section 90C of the National Labor Relations Act which was signed on June 2, 1939, by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by Rose Todd, chairman of the executive committee? A. Yes.

Q. And you are the Rose Todd who signed that original petition? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I direct your attention to the portion of the exhibit entitled Classification of Employees in Such Unit, giving approximate number of employees in each department or class, and call your attention, first, to operators, 642. All of the operators are under Mr. Batty, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Next, Miscellaneous Pieceworkers, 82. Are they not under Mr. Batty?

A. I think they are. Now, I am not positive about the ones in the notions department.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I submit there is a better source of this information than this witness. If information is what they want, I think it is improper to ask this witness as to details of the different employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: She has been asked a good [fol. 631] many questions about such things. I think she may answer, if she knows. I think she said in the first part of her testimony that she daily went over the plant, so I think she should have some knowledge of it.

Mr. Lane: I object to it as not the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

A. I think these people are under Mr. Batty. There might be some few exceptions in the notions department. I am not positive of how all of that might be tabulated in their accounting system.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. That is, the miscellaneous pieceworkers group?

A. To my judgment, they are.

Q. The hand ironers, 77.

A. They would be.

Q. Folders, 11.

A. They would be.

Q. Examiners, 41.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by "examiners," Miss Todd, do you mean inspectors?

A. Inspectors. And I see I made a mistake in my number awhile ago.

Q. Cutting department, 44?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Dividers, 15.
[fol. 632] A. Yes, sir.

By Trial Examiner Batten:
Q. What do you mean by "dividers"?
A. The persons who divide our work into bundles preparatory to sending it to the plant for sewing purposes.
Q. In other words, they make up the bundles that go to these different sections?
A. That is right.

By Mr. Leary:
Q. Instructors and work distributors, 44.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And by your answer "Yes, sir," you mean they are under Mr. Batty, do you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Mechanics and helpers, 14, are they under Mr. Batty?
A. I think they are.
Q. Designing and pattern workers, 40.
A. I think they are not.
Q. Under whom are they?
A. My observation would be that they are under Mrs. Spilsbury.
Q. Mrs. Spilsbury, in turn, under Mr. Batty, do you know?
A. I believe Mrs. Spilsbury is under Mrs. Reed.
Q. Bundle boys, 11.
A. I believe they are under Mr. Batty.
Q. Clerical, 62.
A. I am not able to state about that.
Q. By clerical you mean the office staff?
[fol. 633] A. And it might mean some in connection with the plant. I can't tell you about that, Mr. Leary. That might be divided.
Q. Does the company have an office manager?
A. I don't know. Mr. Bachofer is there, but I don't know if they term it that way.
Q. Miscellaneous time workers, 60.
A. Now, I think part of those would be under Mr. Batty and part not. I can't tell you definitely.

Q. By time workers, you mean persons on a salary, do you not? A. Yes.

Q. As distinguished from girls and men on piecework basis? A. That is as I understand.

Q. Generally what do you include in that category as miscellaneous time workers?

A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. I cannot separate that for you. That would have to be done by the person who gave me this information.

Q. Who was it that gave you that information?

A. Miss Pauline Hartman, I believe.

Q. Who is Miss Hartman? A. She is in the office.

Q. Porters and maids, 20.

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Watchmen, 3.

[fol. 634] A. I can't tell you about those either.

Q. In what category are you included, Miss Witness?

A. I expect, in those time workers.

Q. Miscellaneous time workers, 60? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You wouldn't be possibly included in the designing and pattern workers, would you? A. No, sir.

Q. Will you explain any others, Miss Todd, who are not eligible for membership in your union than you have named previously in your testimony?

A. I have been trying to think. It seems to me there is just one other, Mr. Leary.

Q. By chance, is that Mr. Bachofer?

A. He doesn't belong, no. I didn't mention him, but he doesn't.

Q. Might it be George Fitzgerald?

A. He does belong to our union.

Q. What is Mr. Fitzgerald's position?

A. He is in the advertising department.

Q. Who is the head of the advertising department?

A. I think he is.

Q. How many persons are in that advertising department? A. I don't know.

Q. Do all of the salesmen belong to your organization,

[fol. 635] Miss Todd?

A. With the exception of Mr. Barton.

Q. What is his first name, please? A. George.

Q. That is the one you stated was once an officer of the company, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he what you would designate as sales manager?

A. No, I wouldn't.

Q. Is there a sales manager for the company?

A. I don't know, Mr. Leary. Mr. Keyes seems to have charge of the salesmen; I don't know whether they call him sales manager or not.

Q. Does your organization have as members all of the road salesmen of the company? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 639] Q. Let us take in this same person with the $18 guarantee, who worked during certain weeks only 20 hours, [fol. 640] but who during those 20 hours of work earned only $9, or rather, $8.50, on a piecework basis. What would be the person's pay check for that week?

A. I am not very good at mathematics.

Mr. Stottle: The respondent doesn't object to the witness telling what she can about that, but we do object to a witness trying to interpret a written contract, which is here in evidence, and—

* * * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: And allow those interpretations of a written contract to be deemed as binding on the respondent. We don't believe that is proper.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, don't you think, Mr. Stottle, a person who is a party to the contract has a right to give their idea of how it should be interpreted; whether it is binding, I am not passing on that, but surely the person who signed it ought to be in a position to say what they think about it.

Mr. Leary: I will withdraw the question, if Mr. Stottle will point that portion out in the contract to me.

Mr. Stottle: I say, there is a written contract that provides, that all of that is provided about the guarantee.

Mr. Leary: Will you point that particular part out to me now?

[fol. 641] Trial Examiner Batten: The witness may answer the question. I have said she is qualified as a party to this contract to give her idea of what it is.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 642] Q. Well, are time workers, Miss Todd, paid when they are absent from duty?

A. A great many of them are, Mr. Leary. I am inclined to think that all of them are, but I couldn't answer that question truthfully.

Q. Are you, yourself paid when you are absent from duty? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Leary, will you state what you mean by "absent from duty"? Do you mean by sickness or what purpose?

Mr. Leary: Well, for any purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is it?

[fol. 643] Mr. Leary: I think for any purpose at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I would suggest this, Mr. Ingraham: that if that question needs any further,—or there should be a further question asked, why, of course, the attorneys on cross-examination may inquire of the witness as to what she meant by it. If Mr. Leary wants the question to stand as it is.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 644] Q. Have you had the assistance of your advertising department, or, rather, the company's advertising department in the preparation of posters for your parties? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you had the assistance of the advertising department of the Donnelly Garment Company in any way in connection with your organization?

A. Only as some of the members may have donated some of their time to make some of those posters, some of the members of the union, but not made by the Connelly Garment Company.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 650] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: If—

Mr. Lane: Now, if the Examiner pleases, before Mr. Langsdale begins any examination of this witness, I desire to object to counsel for the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union being permitted to interrogate this witness or to cross-examine this witness, for the reason that counsel for that organization, the claimant in this case, [fol. 651] have during the entire progress of this hearing sat across the counsel table from the attorneys for the Board, have continuously and constantly consulted with the attorneys for the Board, have been in numerous conferences with them, have passed notes back and forth across the counsel table, have participated in directing the course of the examination made by the Board's Counsel of this witness, to permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which has shown itself to be so identified with the Board in this case, it being the complaining party, as to have a unity of interest and to be essentially the same as the Board in this case, for purposes of prosecuting this case. To permit counsel to interrogate this witness at this time would permit a double cross-examination by the same parties of this witness. This witness has, over our objection, been subjected to what we consider cross-examination for pretty nearly three days, and to now permit counsel for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to take over examination at this point, and further cross-examine, or to cross-examine this witness at all, would be unfair to this witness, would be illegal examination and—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a moment. Whenever you say a thing is illegal, I want you to tell me why. I mean, I can't accept that.

Mr. Lane: On the ground that it is so far a departure from the rules of procedure and progress which obtain in [fol. 652] courts of law, and which should obtain in administration tribunals as to be a negation of the rules of fair play, as to deprive the intervener in this case of due process.

[fol. 653] Mr. Stottle: Respondent makes the same objection.

* * * * * *

[fol. 654] Trial Examiner Batten: I think it is very clear the rules permit a party to call witnesses, examine them, cross-examine them, and take part in the proceedings.

Mr. Langsdale, you may proceed.

[fol. 655] Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, you stated that prior to going to work for the Donnelly Garment Company you worked for Thornton and Minor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was a firm of physicians engaged in rectal surgery, isn't that correct?

A. Partially, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. That was the major part of their business?

A. Not the major percentage of it. That is not the thing I spent the major part of my time at.

Q. Are you a registered nurse? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From where did you graduate?

A. Research Hospital.

Q. When? A. 1918.

Q. Was any official of the Donnelly Company ever a patient of Thornton and Minor while you were employed by them? A. I don't recall that they were.

Q. Was Mrs. Reed a patient of Thornton and Minor while you were employed there?

A. I believe she was, but I don't remember—

Q. (Interrupting) Did you become acquainted with her while she was a patient there?

[fol. 656] A. To a very minor extent. I had forgotten all about it.

Q. And it was after that acquaintance that you quit Thornton and Minor went to the Donnelly Garment Company and secured employment?

A. It was following those years, but it had no bearing on that—

Q. (Interrupting) I am not asking you that. I am asking you if it wasn't subsequent to your becoming acquainted with Mrs. Reed while you were a registered nurse that you quit that employment and went to work for Mrs. Reed. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were president of the Donnelly Loyalty League when the meeting of March 18 was called?

A. I was president of the Loyalty League on March 18, yes.

Q. Is that the day Mrs. Reed appeared before the employees and read a letter she had received from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

A. That is the day she appeared before the employees, and it is the day the letter was read.

Q. I believe you stated that you were responsible for calling that meeting of the employees?

A. I acted as chairman at that meeting. I don't know whether I stated I was responsible for calling the meet[fol. 657] ing or not.

Q. Did you initiate the call?

A. I don't recall that I did.

Q. Do you know who did?

A. No, Mr. Langsdale, I don't believe I could tell you. That was a spontaneous thing of employees, and I don't know that I recall who called me.

Q. Tell me what you mean by a spontaneous thing of the employees. They were all distributed about the plant, 1,200 of them, doing their work, weren't they?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then, someone said, "Let's call them together." Who did that?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who told you to take part in it?

A. I don't believe anyone did.

Q. You presided at the meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. As president of the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you preside at the meeting?

A. The only explanation I could have for that is that at a time like that, when people are distressed and wondering what could be done and talking about things that were happening about town, any one person or group of [fol. 658] persons would be apt to take an initiative in it.

Q. And that happened to be you.

A. That is why I got into it.

Q. You just happened to be the one who led the flock there and presided at that meeting?

A. I can't say I led the flock.

Q. You presided? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anyone tell you to? A. No, sir.

Q. You just went up and took the chair?

A. I don't remember how that happened.

Q. Did anyone tell you to?

A. I don't recall anyone telling me to.

Q. You didn't do it as president of the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. You were president of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any reason why you didn't call the Loyalty League together that day?

A. It didn't occur to me.

Q. That was a meeting of the members of the Loyalty League? A. They were employees.

Q. They were all members of the Loyalty League, were they not?

[fol. 659] A. Not all of them.

Q. Who was there who was not a member of the Loyalty League? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know of any one of them?

A. I wouldn't know, because my recollection of the members of the Loyalty League is they have to be employed 90 days before they become members, and there might have been a sizeable group of people there who were not members. That is purely a matter of choice, whether they belong or not.

Q. Can you name any one individual who was at that meeting who was not a member of the Loyalty League?

A. No, Mr. Langsdale. If I might refresh my memory later—

Q. I am asking you if you can now. If you can't, then you can refresh your memory. Can you tell me now?

A. I can't tell you now.

Q. Was Mrs. Reeves there?

A. I don't remember seeing Mrs. Reeves.

Q. Was Mrs. Hyde there?

A. I doubt that. I don't remember that she was.

Q. Was Mr. Batty there?

A. I don't remember seeing Mr. Batty.

Q. Was Mr. Green there?

A. I don't remember seeing him.

Q. Was any executive there, anyone you would call an executive?

[fol. 660] A. I don't believe I saw a single executive there.

Q. Was there any reason why no executive was there?

A. Not that I know of. Mrs. Reed was there.

* * * * * *

Q. What was the purpose of calling the meeting on March 18?

A. Because the employees were becoming quite distressed about the threats that were being made against us, and because of the picketing, and so forth, primarily, at Twenty-sixth and Grand, the threats having been made that what they did up there was just a sample—after they organized these small places they were going to organize [fol. 661] us, and what they did up there was nothing to what they would do to us.

That was the primary reason that was called. And we were interested in knowing if Mrs. Reed was going to do anything to protect us. That was the primary reason for getting her down there at that meeting.

Q. I believe you stated when you were on your way to the meeting you saw Mrs. Reed come in.

A. That is correct.

Q. She wasn't at the plant, then, when the meeting was called? A. When it was called?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know. I don't think she was, no.

Q. Then, how did you expect to find out from her when you called the meeting what she was going to do to protect you?

A. Maybe I didn't explain it correctly, or maybe you misinterpreted it. I believe I said I hoped we would be able to get an expression from her.

Q. Did you first ascertain whether she was at the plant before you called the meeting?

A. No. I think I saw Mrs. Reed as I came down on the elevator, or in the hall, when I came down to the meeting.

Q. On your way to the meeting? A. Yes.

[fol. 662] Q. You called the meeting to get an expression from Mrs. Reed as to whether or not she was going to do anything to protect your union, not knowing whether she was in the plant and available?

. . . . . .

A. I am somewhat using Mrs. Reed's name as meaning the head of the company. We would have asked anybody, but seeing her, we asked her. But, also, we were interested in discussing what different things might mean to us, and all of this disturbance that was going on around town. It was a get-together of the employees.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, Miss Todd, you did say one purpose of calling the meeting was to find out what Mrs. Reed was going to do to protect you from all of this [fol. 663] rumored violence, is that right?

A. It is only partially correct.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that much of it correct, Miss Todd? The question is, did you say that?

A. I said that, but I wasn't confirming my meaning to Mrs. Reed personally.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When you got to the meeting you took charge, didn't you?

A. I did, I did.

Q. Did you call for a secretary?

A. I don't remember, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Did you call a stenographer?

A. I don't remember whether there was a stenographer at that meeting or not.

. . . . . .

[fol. 664] Q. Give us your best judgment of the time the meeting started.

A. I don't believe I could, other than that, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. You could say whether it was 2, 2:30, 3, 3:30, 4 or 4:30 couldn't you?

A. No. My best memory is, it was late in the afternoon, but as to the definite time I can't give it to you.

Q. It was before the plant shut down, was it not?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Wasn't the power shut off for the purpose of having this meeting?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did the employees return to their machines after the meeting?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you take it upon yourself to call a meeting while the plant was in full operation? Had the power been shut down without consulting any of the management?

A. I don't remember that I took the responsibility for calling that meeting.

Q. Was the management consulted about calling that meeting? A. I don't know.

. . . . . .

[fol. 666] Q. Well, was anything done at all, any business transacted or anything brought up before the meeting before Mrs. Reed got there?

A. No doubt there was, Mr. Langsdale, but at the time, I don't remember. I don't remember.

Q. Why do you say "no doubt there was"?

A. Well, I just assume the meeting must have been opened, or something.

. . . . . .

[fol. 668] Q. Well, did anyone suggest to you that you act as chairman?

A. They must have.

Q. Well, did they? Tell me.

A. I don't remember who did.

Q. You don't remember anyone who suggested that you take the chair? A. No, I do not.

Q. All right, now. The only thing you recall that happened before Mrs. Reed got to the meeting was that you did take the chair and you opened the meeting; did you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember with what statement you opened the meeting? A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you tell them why the meeting was called?

A. I don't recall what I said at that meeting.

Q. Now, at that time did you know that Mrs. Reed had received a letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. I did not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 670] Q. Was any rent paid down for the second floor that afternoon? A. I do not know.

Q. Now, that is the same floor that you used on the 27th of April, when you formed your union; isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Mrs. Reed got there, she immediately started to talk, did she?

A. I believe she did. I believe, I remember, I have stated previously that I asked one of the boys to get her.

[fol. 671] Q. Yes.

A. Asked her if she would come down and I believe I must have said "Mrs. Reed is here and we will ask her to talk to us."

Q. Well, did she start talking to you right away?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did anyone else talk before she did that you know of? A. I don't recall.

Q. All right. Now, how long did she talk?

A. She just talked a few minutes.

Q. Well, can you state whether it was five, ten, fifteen or twenty?

A. I think it couldn't have been more than between five and ten minutes.

Q. And when she got through—

A. (Interrupting) According to the comments she made.

Q. When she got through, did you adjourn the meeting?

A. I believe so.

Q. So the only business transacted at that meeting, so far you can recall, was the speech of Mrs. Reed?

A. That seems to be the only thing I remember.

Q. Now,—

A. (Interrupting) In detail.

Q. It was at this meeting that Mrs. Reed read the letter of March 9th which she had received from the Inter-

[fol. 672] national Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was it?

A. That is that meeting where the letter was read.

Q. Do you know that she said she was not going to reply to it? A. No, I don't remember that.

Q. You say she didn't say that?

A. I didn't say. I said I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember that it was at that meeting that she said she wasn't going to permit any Dubinsky or any other "sky" to tell her how to run her business?

A. That is not what she said, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. What did she say that is similar to that?

A. She said she was not going to [—] any Dubinsky or any "butinsky" force her to do something that would force her employees to do something they did not want to do.

Q. Now, did she say what that was she didn't want them to force her employees to do?

A. I don't know that she said that, but we knew what she was talking about.

Q. Well, what did you understand her to mean?

A. I understood her to mean that she was not going to be forced into any labor organization that would force us to join against our own desires.

Q. Now, did she say at that meeting that there was not going to be any union in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Plant?

[fol. 673] A. She did not.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. She did not say that.

Q. You say positively she didn't say it?

A. I surely do.

Q. What else did she have to say about this one letter?

A. I don't remember any other details or comments about that letter.

[fol. 674] Q. Was that the first time you had seen Mrs. Reed, if you remember, on that day, March 18, 1937; I mean, the time that you saw her coming in while you were on your way to the meeting?

A. That I had seen her?

Q. Yes.

A. I might have seen her coming or going from work, I don't know.

Q. Had you talked to her? A. I had not.

Q. Had any of the employees, to your knowledge, talked to her?

A. I don't know that any of them had talked to Mrs. Read.

Q. Do you know of any group of employees talking to Mrs. Reed on that day?

A. No. I was of the impression that day that that was the first I had known of her being in the building. If she had been in previous to that time I didn't know it.

* * * * * *

Q. Let me ask you if you have read or heard read an [fol. 675] affidavit filed in that suit, signed by Nell Quinlan Reed, dated November 5, 1937, in which she stated, "In the first place, a group of employees—

Mr. Lane (interrupting): Just a moment. I am objecting, of course, to his reading the affidavit made in that trial as not being proper cross-examination of this witness and an improper way of trying to get that into this record.

* * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: Have you heard this part of Mrs. Reed's [fol. 676] affidavit read:—

Mr. Lane (interrupting): Just a minute. The witness' testimony, as I understand it, is she has not read or heard read any portion of that affidavit.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, there is no objection to asking her if she has? You don't mean this has anything to do with the evidence, because an attorney reads it in here? I suppose if you got up and read this whole case in here, line by line, then when you got through you asked the witness if she had ever heard it read before—It doesn't mean anything when the attorney reads it.

Mr. Lane: I object to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Langsdale: Let me ask you if you heard read in that lawsuit this part of Mrs. Reed's affidavit: "In the first place, a group of employees on or about March 18, 1937, came to my office and told me that all of the employees were going to meet and discuss ways and means to protect themselves against any assaults or acts of violence on the part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union."

A. I did not know that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 677] Q. Did Mrs. Reed state at that meeting that the Donnelly Loyalty League was all the union the employees needed?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Would you say she didn't say it?

A. I said, I don't remember that she said it. I don't remember hearing it.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed say at that meeting if any employees knew of any of her employees belonging to the I. L. G. W. U. she wanted that reported to her?

A. I don't remember hearing Mrs. Reed make a statement like that.

Q. Would you say she didn't make it?

A. I said I never heard a statement like that made by Mrs. Reed.

* * * * * *

[fol. 678] Q. Did she say that she was going to make [fol. 679] plans which would prevent the unionization of her shop?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Did she say she had called you all together to say, "If we would stand by her she would stand by us?"

A. I don't remember a statement like that.

Q. Would you say she didn't say it?

A. I said I don't remember a statement like that.

* * * * * *

[fol. 680] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. When you first came back to this plant in 1933, my recollection is not clear as to what you said you started to do.

A. My memory is that I was a thread girl in one of the sections over at the building at 26th and Walnut.

Q. Now, when was that?

A. It was,—I don't remember the date, Mr. Langsdale. It was in 1933, in the summer.

Q. In the summertime?

[fol. 681] A. Yes, sir. The weather was still hot.

Q. And how long did you remain there?

A. I don't know.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you attend a meeting of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union held at the Musicians Hall on Washington Street, in 1934?

A. I attended one meeting over there, and I don't remember the date.

Q. And who went with you? A. I went by myself.

Q. Were you instructed to go by anybody?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, how did you happen to go?

A. Curiosity, interest.

Q. Did you have any notion whatever that you might join that union?

[fol. 682] A. Well, it was possible, if it was the kind of an organization I thought was worth while.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 683] Q. Well, would your say about August, 1933, you went back up to the main plant?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What duties did you assume when you went back up there?

A. I don't remember that. I have just done—at that time, I was taken back with the understanding that I would fill in any place they could find work for me to do, and I couldn't begin to tell you.

Q. And was it at that time you commenced to have a position that sent you all over the plant?

A. I think it was. Most of the work I have done in the years I have been at the Donnelly Garment Company has been work that has done that, always.

Q. Now, as a thread girl, as thread girl, you would be confined to one section; wouldn't you?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Well, when—

A. (Interrupting) You might have to go to one de-

[fol. 684] partment to get thread or might be looking for something you needed to go with some work in your department. You might have to go to the notion department. You might be sent on errands any place in the plant.

Q. Well, the general duties of a thread girl are in connection with one section. Is that true?

A. To a certain extent.

Q. Yes. Now, then, when you went back up to 1828 Walnut, you got a position that caused you to go all over the plant, from one floor to the other?

A. I just stated, Mr. Langsdale, that I believe most of the work I have had since I have been at the Donnelly Garment Company—

Q. (Interrupting) Now, just answer the question.

A. I can't answer the question.

Q. Did you, when you went back—

A. (Interrupting) I don't remember when I first went back.

Q. Did you take a position that confined you to any particular location in the plant?

A. I don't remember what I did when I went back over there. It wasn't a position. It was merely a job.

Q. Well, you can call it a job or a position, but what were the duties of it?

A. I don't remember what it was, to be very truthful.

Q. You don't remember when you were elected Presi-
[fol. 685] dent of the Donnelly Loyalty League?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What date?

A. Sometime in February, 1937.

Q. That League was organized in February, 1937, was it not?

A. I believe it was organized in the early part of 1935.

Q. '35. You are right about that, but in February, 1937, you became president? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any office in it prior to that time, the Loyalty League?

A. It seems to me that one time I was one of the representatives. I don't remember about that.

Q. Well, representative from what department?

A. Until you mentioned it that minute I hadn't thought of it, it was so many years. I couldn't tell you.

Q. You don't know what department you were a representative from?

A. No, sir, I don't. I had forgotten all about it.

Q. But on April 23d you were President of the Loyalty League? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the day that Fern Sigler and Sylvia Hull were sent home. Is that correct?

A. I didn't know they were sent home.

Q. Well, at any rate, they left the employment of the [fol. 686] Donnelly Garment Company that day?

A. They left that day.

* * * * * *

[fol. 687] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, did you get hold of Mr. Batty and go down to where Fern Sigler was? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she was told to go to the office?

A. Yes, sir, she was asked to come to the office.

Q. And you and Mr. Batty went up to the office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, again, at that time you were the President of the Loyalty League? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 688] Trial Examiner Batten, (interrupting) Yes, in what capacity did you call Mr. Batty to go down to see Mrs. —what is her name?

A. Fern Sigler. No, no capacity especially; just as an employee.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. It was just a "happen so" was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just like it was a "happen-so" that you took charge of the meeting on March 18th?

A. It was the same kind—

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, was it spontaneous or spontaneity that caused [fol. 689] you to call Mr. Batty?

A. I think it was.

Q. You think it was? A. I think it was.

Q. Did anyone suggest it to you at all?

A. I don't know that they did.

Q. And was it spontaneity that caused you to take—to say what you said when you got up to the office?

A. I think that was interest and curiosity, needless conversation, probably.

Q. Well, it was not in your capacity as president of the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Nor can you tell us in what capacity it was that you went up there?

A. I think I stated yesterday, Mr. Langsdale, and I feel the same about it today, there was no capacity to it.

Q. You just—

A. (Interrupting) It was something I did and just as well not done, I presume.

Q. Something rather spontaneous?

A. If that is the word you want to apply to it.

Q. This has been offered as an exhibit, has it not?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is Exhibit 5, is it not? Is that that transcript?

[fol. 690] Mr. Langsdale: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, I am reading from Exhibit 5, which purports to be a stenographic transcript of what occurred in the office. After you and Mr. Batty and Mr. Sigler got up there, this transcript shows that you said to Miss Sigler—that you opened the conversation; that is true?

A. I don't remember. I don't know whether—I don't think I read that the other day.

Q. Well, you have read it, haven't you?

A. No, I haven't. What I saw of it the other day is the only time I ever seen it.

Q. Well, is it correct that you opened the conversation?

A. If that is stated so there.

Q. It says you say "I hardly know what to say. It is all right for you to work. I don't know what you can do with that many girls that feel that way." Now, what did you mean when you said it was all right for Fern Sigler to work?

A. As I look back at it, and hear you read it there, all I would have meant was that—

Q. (Interrupting) Well, what did you mean?

A. Will you read that again, please, Mr. Langsdale?

Q. You are speaking to Fern Sigler: "I hardly know what to say. It is all right for you to work, but I don't know what you can do with that many girls that feel that way."

A. Well, that was a very terse time, Mr. Langsdale. [fol. 691] There had been an article in the morning paper that Sylvia Hull was representing us at the International, and then she had a union pin on and there were so many girls around here that didn't feel the way she did about it, that I just felt like it was rather difficult to expect that nobody was going to make any comment about it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 693] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you have any right to tell her she could or could not work?

A. None whatever.

Q. Then, you asked her, "How long have you belonged to the Union?" And her answer was, "A couple of wee."

Did you have any right to ask her how long she had belonged to the union?

A. No, I didn't have any right to, but it was just a question that you would be interested in knowing.

[fol. 694] Q. Just as any of the other 1,300 employees would have been?

A. I think any one of them would have said the same thing to her.

Q. You were not asking her as president of the Donnelly Loyalty League?

A. It didn't make any difference to me.

Q. Were you asking her as president of the Donnelly Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Then, you asked her, "I wish you would tell me why you feel the way you do." Why did you ask her that question?

A. I think all of this was just a varied conversation. I don't know why I asked her. I think that is just a natural reaction, that you would ask a person a question like that.

Q. But you had this girl up in the office with Mr. Batty?

A. I didn't have her in the office.

Q. You were there with her? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there was a stenographer there taking down what she said? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were examining her?

A. I wasn't examining her.

Q. I think the transcript will show you were.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 696-697] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this whole line of testimony on this exhibit for the reason that Mr. Leary went through the same exhibit and asked the same questions, and it is repetition, for one thing; and, for another thing, the transcript speaks for itself. As to why she said a certain thing or didn't say it is immaterial to any issue in the case. I believe the Examiner in his own statements made some such remark as that when this was gone into before.

Trial Examiner Batten: What have you to say as to that, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: As to what part of it, Mr. Examiner?

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume you are referring to the entire line of questioning, are you not?

Mr. Stottle: As to this exhibit, yes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 698] Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to sustain the objection unless you take the position that you are an entirely independent and separate party to this action, Mr. Langsdale. If you are, then I will permit you to proceed as an entirely separate and independent party.

Mr. Langsdale: I have taken that position, and I take it now.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object to his being accorded the right to take that position.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not according it. The rules so provide. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union is mentioned in this complaint. And if that is Mr. Langsdale's position, he may proceed as a separate and independent party and assume the responsibility for the conduct of his case independent of the Board's attorneys.

[fol. 700] Mr. Ingraham: If the Examiner please, if Mr. Langsdale is representing a separate party he should also apprise all other parties of the position he takes, and all other parties should have pleadings setting forth his position.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to complicate this question I have raised by the matter of pleadings. I will permit you to raise it when I get my point settled.

[fol. 703] Mr. Bane: We do not agree with Your Honor's position. Our position is, if the Examiner please, this witness is produced by the Board, and that the I. L. G. W. U., by rule 5 is party a party to the proceeding, the complaint being filed in the name of the Board, and that in attempting to cross-examine this witness Mr. Langsdale is in effect attempting to cross-examine his own witness.

There is not anything in rule 25 which gives the Board or Mr. Langsdale the right to cross-examine his own witness.

[fol. 730] Mr. Langsdale: Now, Miss Todd, further down in this transcript of the happenings when Fern Sigler was in the office is the following statement made by you:

"Of course, we have had union people working here for years. I have been here most of the last twelve years and there has always been union people here. We don't care. We have hired union people."

For whom were you speaking when you used the word "we" in those three instances.

[fol. 731] A. I was just thinking of the employees, the group, the organization as a whole, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. But you stated you were not representing the Loyalty League in that meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you representing any organization at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you said, "We have hired union people," about whom were you talking?

A. I don't know that I had anything definite in mind at that time, Mr. Langsdale, but when you have worked in an organization so long you just say "we" without giving any thought to it. I would say "we" about the Donnelly Garment Company or about a group of employees. It is just a word you use and don't give it a great deal of thought. It doesn't have a definite meaning.

Q. Farther on you stated, "I talked to some of the girls yesterday afternoon and tried to get them to see it is all right if you want to work and belong to the union."

In what capacity did you talk to those girls that afternoon?

A. Not any, Mr. Langsdale. As I remember, some of the girls had talked to me—they were disturbed and didn't [fol. 732] like the happenings that had been going on, and would naturaliy—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. I asked you the simple question, in what capacity were you talking?

A. Just as an employee, just as one of them.

Q. Not for the Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. Nor for any group?

A. No, sir, not other than as one of the employees.

Q. Then you said: "However, they felt so keenly about it we don't think we can do anything about it."

Did you mean just yourself then?

A. I meant the employees.

Q. Were you representing the employees?

A. No, I wasn't. I don't know. Maybe I didn't explain the use of the word "we" very clearly. I wasn't speaking for anybody. I was just using "we" without any particular thought about it.

Q. Farther on you asked Fern Sigler:

"What do you think you have gained that we haven't by joining the union?"

In what capacity were you asking her that question?

A. None whatever, just a personal question.
Q. And Fern Sigler said, "Shorter working hours."

And you say, "You have been able to work most any hours you wanted to. Nobody forced you to work on Saturday."

[fol. 733] Were you just talking for yourself there, or were you talking for the management?

A. Speaking for myself.
Q. Farther on you say to Miss Sigler:

"Nobody is going to do any violence against you. If you want to go home, all right."

In what capacity were you telling her it was all right for her to go home?

A. I didn't have any right to tell her at all.
Q. You did do it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know why?
A. No, sir. I wasn't doing it—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 737] Mr. Langsdale: Now, Miss Todd, after further consideration of this transcript and after my examination, is your memory refreshed upon the fact that you were not at that hearing as president of the Loyalty League?

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, that is the same question that you just sustained an objection to,—it is, in substance.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think she may answer the question as to whether or not since that time she has given any further thought to it. Is that in substance your question?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, sir.

A. I have thought about it, Mr. Langsdale, but it was still something done on the impulse of the moment. No serious thought had been given to anything that was said there.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Your answer is still that you were not there representing the Loyalty League? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In this transcript, in your talk with Miss Sigler, you say: "I used to have a desk upstairs." What did you mean by that?

A. Is there any more to that, Mr. Langsdale?

Q. Yes. I will read that which both precedes and follows it. "I have no authority. There isn't anybody who has worked around this place and in as many different places as I have. I used to have a desk upstairs. I was gone a couple of years and took what they had to give me when I came back."

[fol. 738] Now, does that call your attention—

A. (Interrupting) Is that all of it, please?

Q. No.

A. I would like to hear the rest.

Q. (Reading): "Nobody has done more different kinds of work than I have. Many times I didn't know where I was going to work."

Now, is that enough of it for you to understand, now?

A. I think so.

Q. What you meant when you said you used to have a desk upstairs?

A. Well, I must have been referring to a desk where I worked when I worked on instructions.

Q. Well, did you mean by that that you used to have a place of authority as an executive at your desk upstairs?

A. No, Mr. Langsdale. I have never had any authority in all the years I worked at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Well, when you did have that desk upstairs, you were fixing time, piece prices, weren't you?

A. I was setting piece prices but I wasn't the last word in what they were going to be.

Q. Well, you were setting piece prices at the time you had the desk upstairs that you referred to?

A. Yes, sir, but they were passed upon by somebody else after I finished with them.

[fol. 739] Q. Further on, you say "My advice to you is, if you feel that strongly about the union, and have enough people to back you up to be a union shop—"

A. (Interrupting) I didn't understand just the last of that, just before "union shop."

Trial Examiner Batten: Is that in the same statement, Mr. Langsdale?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, sir.

Mr. Shepard: At the top of page 7.

A. To be in that, is what I didn't understand.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What did you mean by that?

A. I believe that says "If you feel that way and you have enough people to back you up to be in a union shop" —well, if you had enough people to back you up you would have a union shop.

Q. Did you mean for her to do that at the Donnelly Garment Company, or get out and go to some other union shop?

A. I don't think I gave it a great deal of thought as to what I meant about it.

Q. Then you followed that with the statement "I wouldn't any more think that I could join a union and get by with it than the man in the moon. I would expect to be put out in the street and left there."

You made that statement?

A. If it says it, I did.

* * * * * *

[fol. 741] The Witness: I said—may I make an explanation of it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if you have anything further to say, Miss Todd, you may say it.

The Witness: Well, the feeling that I had was, the girls were incensed about it. I didn't mean that anybody would throw me out in the street, literally, but I would feel, with a plant as disturbed as they were by happenings caused by the I. L. G. W. U., I would feel with the majority of them against me, I would sort of hesitate to say that I belonged to an organization of that kind. I don't think I could blame them for not liking it.

Mr. Langsdale: And the next few lines, you say—well, that is the same answer she gave you.

A couple of lines farther down, you say "We went downstairs and sent those girls back to work and they went back to work." Who did you mean by—when you say "We went downstairs and sent those girls back to work"?

A. I haven't any idea, Mr. Langsdale. I don't think—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting): Mr. Langsdale, it seems to me that came within the ruling I made a while ago, when I said the use of this word "we" I think has been sufficiently gone into.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I mean, I am not asking it in [fol. 742] exactly the same sense, if the Examiner please. What I want to know is, did you send the girls back to work?

A. I have made a statement about that before. I don't remember the words I used, but I didn't send the girls back to work.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. So when you said "We sent them back to work," you were inaccurate, at least?

A. Absolutely. I don't even recall that I was down there.

Q. And the last statement you make in that transcript is this sentence: "We're going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way."

You made that statement?

A. That is what that transcript says.

Q. Well, do you say you didn't?

A. I don't say I didn't, but I say I don't know why I made it. It was just another remark, made on the impulse of the moment.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, as far as any of these statements in any of these transcript that are attributed to you, this is correct, a correct transcript, is it not, of that meeting?

A. As far as I know, Mr. Batten. I have never seen it until I was here that day, and it has been a long time, and something quite impulsive done, but I think generally speaking it is correct.

. . . . . .

[fol. 743] Q. Now, despite the fact that you said on the 23d day of April that "We're going to run an open shop", you presided at a meeting four days later where the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was formed?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I object to that for the reason the question omits certain important additions made in the statement as shown by the transcript. The full statement attributed to Miss Todd being "We're going to run an open shop as long as the majority feels that way. The majority is going to rule, as always."

Mr. Langsdale: Well, now, I object to his incorporating anything in my question. I have a right to take such parts of the statement as I desire to examine her about and not use her self-serving—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Read the question, please.

[fol. 744] (Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And on the 27th day of May, you and other officers of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union entered into a working agreement with the Donnelly Garment Company in which you provided for a closed shop.

A. Yes, sir, but in the meantime, Mr. Langsdale, the happenings of April 22d paper in the evening, and the morning of the 23d of April, 1937, were the things that very definitely made us decide it was time to protect our own rights in the manner we chose to do.

Q. But those things had happened when you stated on the 23d that "We're going to run an open shop", hadn't they? A. Also, the happenings—

Q. (Interrupting) Had they or had they not

A. Yes, sir, but, also, Sylvia Hull had announced in the newspaper she had been chosen—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Now, I have no objection, Miss Todd, to your explaining your answer. I do think that it would be better if you would answer the question and the cross-examination by—

The Witness (Interrupting): I am sorry. I thought I had.

Trial Examiner Batten (Continuing):—by the attorney [fol. 745] for the intervener. They may ask you such further questions as—

The Witness (Interrupting): I am sorry. There is such a definite explanation of that, I couldn't resist making it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. In reply to one of Mr. Leary's questions I believe you stated that there was nothing of any importance in the working agreement as presented by you and your committee to Mrs. Reed changed at Mrs. Reed's suggestion or at the suggestion of anyone representing the management.

A. Did I say "nothing of importance"?

Q. Yes. Didn't you?

A. Well, I don't know. I can't imagine saying "nothing of any importance" when I know how important that agreement is to us.

[fol. 745] Q. No, I don't believe you understood me.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I think you are referring to the fact, are you not, that you testified, as I recall, that there was no substantial change.

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, I used the words "not of any importance."

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you understand the question, Miss Todd? You remember in answer to Mr. Leary's questions you stated that you and your committee had presented a working agreement drawn up by you and Mr. Tyler to Mrs. Reed, which she took and kept for a few hours, and brought back [fol. 746] with certain suggested changes; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that none of those suggested changes—

A. (Interrupting) I didn't say Mr. Tyler and I drew up that agreement, I believe, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. I didn't get that.

A. I don't think I said Mr. Tyler and I drew up that agreement.

Q. Whoever did, you and Mr. Tyler and the rest of your committee, is that the answer you wish?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At any rate, whoever drew it up and presented it to Mrs. Reed, and she brought it back with no changes of any importance in your mind?

A. I think, Mr. Langsdale, I said I couldn't remember at that time. I do remember since what they were. I didn't remember that morning.

Q. Well, did you know at the time that you submitted this working agreement to Mrs. Reed, that you had placed no limitation upon your right to choose your representatives, and that she did place a limitation upon your right to choose your representatives at the time it got back to you?

A. I can't answer that question without referring to this agreement, Mr. Batten.

Q. Well, I will—I have in mind particularly,—I have [fol. 747] in mind particularly paragraph 4 of the agreement, which reads "The employer recognizes the election of a committee of the union to represent it, provided members of such committee shall have been continuously employed by the employer for a period of at least a year preceding election of such committee."

Now, that was not in the agreement when you submitted it to Mrs. Reed, was it?

A. I think it was; might not have been worded that way, Mr. Langsdale. We had a provision in there that we wanted them that were going to represent us to be people that had been there long enough to know the employees and to know our problems. The wording "The employer recognizes the election", I don't know whether that changed any or not.

Q. Don't you know it was changed by Mr. Reed before she would sign it?

A. Well, Mrs. Reed didn't have anything to do with that clause other than to agree with it. That is a thing that we very definitely wanted in that agreement.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 748] Q. Then why did you submit to a change in your working agreement by Mrs. Reed in which she places a limitation upon that right by saying that those representatives must have been employed at least one year?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 749] Mr. Patten: She had just said a few minutes before that Mrs. Reed did not make the change. His question assumed that Mrs. Reed had made the change, and she submitted to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can't help what the question assumes. I don't think the question implies that Mrs. Reed wrote it. The question is, why did she submit:

Mr. Stottle: To a change made by Mrs. Reed.

Trial Examiner Batten: Was that the intent of your question?

Mr. Langsdale: No, I—the intent of the question—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I don't think it was.

Mr. Langsdale: Was to find out why she submitted to that clause in that contract, regardless of who placed it there.

Trial Examiner Batten: With that clarification, you may answer. In other words, why did you agree to the contract, with that clause in it?

The Witness: Well, we think we are being smart to have people on our committee, Mr. Batten, that have been there long enough to understand our problems; not somebody that might come in on a week's notice and not know the conditions that we are concerned with. I think we are smart to have that clause in there.

. . . . . .

[fol. 751] Q. Let me ask you if the minutes of your meeting of the group chairmen for May 27, 1937, refreshes your memory with reference to that particular point?

A. May I have the minutes, please?

Trial Examiner. What date was that?

[fol. 752] Mr. Langsdale: May 27, 1937. It is marked 9:15.

(Mr. Lane hands minutes book to the witness.)

The Witness: Do you want me to refer to this—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now that you have been permitted to refer to that, I want to ask you a question about it. I want to ask you if this really occurred at that meeting. This was a meeting of your group chairmen after the contract had been in the hands of Mrs. Reed and her attorneys for some hours, was it not?

A. Yes, sir, if you are talking about the second meeting of the day.

Q. Yes. And in that Mr. Tyler said, "In this agreement we find it necessary in defining employees not to include executives. Also, we have added to this agreement, to become a member of this committee you must be employed here for at least a year. This is to eliminate the possibility of someone getting on this committee who is not a true representative of the employees and who is working here merely to act as a traitor to the company."

Does that refresh your memory as to whether or not that provision was in the contract when you submitted it to Mrs. Reed?

A. The way this was worked, Mr. Langsdale, it wasn't added until later in the day, but I didn't recall that it wasn't there. I know we had talked about it and considered it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 753] Q. Do you know why you submitted to that limitation upon the activities of the members of your committee?

[fol. 754] A. There is no limitation as to the activities of our committee, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. There is the limitation that none of them can spend any working hours for the union except the general chairman.

A. No, sir. If we felt that was necessary we would make provision for it.

Q. Nevertheless, that is the provision in the contract, isn't it?

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the contract speaks for itself, whatever it may say, and we object to asking the witness to interpret something that is perfectly plain in whatever it says. If it wasn't plain I don't believe this witness would have the right to interpret a written contract.

. . . . . .

[fol. 758] Mr. Langsdale: Well, I want to be sure that I [fol. 759] understand the Examiner, and I am going to ask another question, which may be ruled upon.

Mr. Langsdale: Miss Todd, paragraph 11 of the working agreement entered into on May 27, 1937, is as follows:

"The employer agrees that the individual who may be chosen as general chairman of the union shall be entitled to spend the necessary time on the affairs of the union and to continue her employment with the company at the proportionate rate of pay hitherto received by the company in the time thereafter given to the company."

Will you tell me why you as a member of this contracting committee submitted to paragraph 11, placing a limitation upon the activities of the representatives of that union as paragraph 11 does limit them?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as it does or if it does?

Mr. Langsdale: As it does.

Mr. Patten: Mr. Examiner, intervener objects to the question, adopting for that purpose the objection heretofore made by Mr. Stottle, and sustained, and the objection made by Mr. Lane; and further—

. . . . . .

[fol. 760] We further object because the question assumes, as other questions have assumed, that this committee submitted to it. There is no evidence whatever that they submitted to anything. For that reason we ask that the question be excluded.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection sustained.

Mr. Langsdale: The union makes an offer to prove that this witness, if permitted to answer the question, would testify she intentionally desired to limit the activities of the representatives of the union for the purpose of crippling that representation and, in addition to that, the further motive was developed by propaganda indulged in by the management of this company against union representation and the necessity therefor.

. . . . . .

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, if this witness will answer as you have just said, I will permit you to ask the question, because you have said if she is permitted to testify she would testify in a certain way. On the basis of [fol. 761] that you certainly can proceed.

Mr. Patten: If the Examiner please, I suggest that Mr. Langsdale agree to be bound by the witness' answer. Otherwise his offer is improper.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that Mr. Langsdale proceed with his offer of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: Now then, will you say why you did submit to the limitation of paragraph 11 upon the activities of the representatives of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

* * * * * *

A. There are no limitations on the committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 762] They all take an active interest. They all have time at noon or after work, the same as I have, and you will find continuously through these minutes where they have done a lot of work and taken an active interest in it. I couldn't dominate those people if I wanted to.

Mr. Langsdale: I move that the answer be stricken out as not responsive.

The question was, why did she submit to paragraph 11, which puts a limitation upon the activities of the members?

Mr. Stottle. Mr. Examiner, respondent objects in that the offer of proof is not being made, and asks that it be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

* * * * * *

[fol. 768] Mr. Langsdale: Now, the question is, why did you sign a contract with paragraph 4 in it?

* * * * * *

[fol. 769] A. We were very much interested that anybody would not be discharged because they belonged to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. We feel like we have asked for a lot of things in this contract, and that we couldn't entirely deny the employer the right to hire people when he needs them, and when he didn't need them, because in the garment industry, you do have a seasonal business. Now, if we have people that have been laid off because they feel they were being—that they were not being treated fairly, we would call them back to work and discuss it with the employer as to why they were laid off, and why they shouldn't be brought back.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, under this provision, you permit the employer to discharge any employee whose services are unsatisfactory to the employer for any reason, which to the employer shall seem sufficient. Did you think there was anything left there to arbitrate?

A. As to the particular—

Mr. Patten (Interrupting): If the court please, this is purely argumentative. I don't think it furthers the pur- [fol. 770] pose of this hearing at all, and I object to it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the point is, Mr. Langsdale, as a matter of fact, an employer can discharge a person for any cause or no cause, can't they, as long as it is not for union activity?

Mr. Langsdale: That isn't true in what I consider a real, genuine labor contract, not any cause that may be sufficient to the employer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I mean, as far as the law is concerned.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, when it comes to collective bargaining, I never saw a contract with this broad provision in it, and I have helped negotiate hundreds of them, that an employer can discharge an employee for any reason that may seem satisfactory to the employer. Why have union contracts? What possible benefit is it except maybe setting wages and hours, something of that sort.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, any contract, even this contract, the supplement and the later contracts, aren't those all matters, subjects of negotiation, collective bargaining?

Mr. Langsdale: If the Examiner please, it is my purpose to show that this contract doesn't take on any of the attributes for real, genuine, collective bargaining union.

Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the case, wouldn't the [fol. 771] supplement—the contract and the supplement speak for itself?

Mr. Langsdale: Now, in addition to that, I am asking this witness to tell me why she entered into such an obviously poor agreement for her people. She might say, of course,—I feel sure she isn't going to say it—at least, I have a right to prove she did it because she was representing the management and not the people.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I have no objection to your proving that.

Mr. Langsdale: Why can't I prove it by her; at least, ask her the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection. I don't see it is material.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, does the Examiner get my theory in this line of questioning, that this contract is no protection at all, or isn't the result of real, genuine bargaining between the employer on the one hand and the employee on the other?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I think the Examiner, as well as the Board, can determine what the status of this contract is, if the evidence is put into this record of leading, which Mr. Leary did, the negotiations leading up to it and what is embodied in the contract, and those matters are matters for consideration, and if all those matters are placed in the record, the Examiner and [fol. 772] the Board can consider the evidence and make such findings as are proper.

The Witness: May I add an explanation?

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest, Miss Todd, that—there is no question pending.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, it is true, Miss Todd, is it not, that your prime purpose in assisting in the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was to keep out the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. That was not your prime purpose?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I feel that anybody has a right to belong to any labor organization they want to. It is very definitely shown that a large majority, in fact, a unanimous majority, as far as I know, of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company wished to form their own union, and did so, but that still doesn't give them the privilege today, they can do as they please. If they want to join the International or anybody's union, they still have that right.

Q. But, of course, they can't do it under your closed shop agreement, can they?

A. I think there is a wording in our agreement where it says they shouldn't belong to any other union, but I still don't know that if they want to belong to it, how we know or what difference it would make.

Q. If anyone should join any other union than yours, [fol. 773] they could be immediately discharged, and would be, under your contract?

A. Wait until I find the wording of that, please.

Q. Well, don't you remember it? We have read it several times.

A. Well, I have read it several times, but I don't know just how it is worded. Pardon me a minute.

"Closed shop: the employer agrees on and after June 5, 1937, no one of its employees shall be retained in its employ who is not a member of this union. It is further agreed that hereafter no person shall be employed by the employer who does not at or prior to such employment sign an application for membership in this union, and no such person shall be returned as an employee who shall not within two weeks after such employment begins be accepted by the union as a member."

We do have a closed shop agreement, and we expect them to belong to our union. It says "It is further agreed no one shall be continued as an employee after such person shall have resigned from or ceased to belong to this union, either by voluntary retirement or by expulsion."

Q. Then, by Article 3 of your By-laws, you provide this—

A. (Interrupting) That is what I am wanting.

Q. "The union shall be opened to all employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, shall be an independent organization, not affiliated with any other labor union or [fol. 774] organization of labor union and members of it shall not be members of any other labor union."

A. That is worded—that is the way it is worded.

Q. So that no employee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union—strike that. No employee of the Donnelly Garment Company can continue as or in her employment after joining the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

A. Well, we would expect, if they were interested in our union, and belonged to it—

Q. (Interrupting) Just answer the question.

A. They wouldn't—

Q. (Interrupting) Answer the question, Miss Todd.

A. I wouldn't have any control over an individual as to what union he belonged to.

Q. But under your by-laws, in your contract, no one can continue to work for the Donnelly Garment Company who joins the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; is that correct?

Mr. Stottle: Just a moment. Mr. Examiner, we object to this question for the reason, as we have several times, this just involves an interpretation of the by-laws and contract. If this witness gave an answer, your Honor wouldn't feel bound by it, if you thought the contract meant something else, and what is the materiality of having her answer something that wouldn't bind you and bind Mr. [fol. 775] Langsdale and not bind the respondent. It possibly might be binding on the intervener, I don't know that it would be, with a written contract made by the intervener.

Mr. Langsdale: The question is provoked by the long answer of this witness that anyone could join any organization anyone wanted to with the Donnelly Garment Company, and, of course, this is very plainly written that cannot be done.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think it isn't so much a question of interpretation of the contract. It is a question of this witness on the basis of her volunteering a statement that anybody can join anything they please.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, the question, Miss Todd is this, or at least, my question: How can a person join any union they please under the restrictions in these contracts?

A. Well, any individual might join something because they were going to be employed here, join our organization, and want to belong to some other organization.

Q. Well, supposing you knew that several people had joined some other labor organization, and you have this restriction.

A. We have a closed shop agreement, and we would expect them not to be employed at the Donnelly Garment Company if they did not belong to our organization.

Q. Well, supposing they belonged to another one with this clause that you have here?

A. I think that would be taken up as an individual [fol. 776] thing, and under the terms of our contract, we don't have to keep them there.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Under the terms of your contract, they would have to discharge them? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, getting onto another subject: Mr. Leary asked you if you had received any raise in salary from the—just prior to the organization of this union, and I believe you said you didn't think so. Was that your answer?

A. I said I didn't remember the date, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, can you give us the approximate date?

A. No. You asked me to find out about that.

Q. Well, to save time —

A. (Interrupting) I told you I could find out about it.

Q. We have here what purports to be a copy of the payroll, including your salary, showing that in February, 1937, you were receiving $54.17 every two weeks.

A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. And in March, 1937, you got up at $65 every two weeks. A. That is 1937?

Q. Yes.

A. I thought it was 1936. 1937.

Q. Just the month before this union was organized, you got a raise, didn't you?

A. I didn't remember the date, Mr. Langsdale.

[fol. 777] Q. Well, does this refresh your memory?

A. Well, I would just have to take that as a fact. If that is a fact, that is it. I did receive that raise at the time a great many others did, however. I remember that distinctly.

Q. Now, you never were after that time, during 1937, or clear through 1938, docked one cent because of any time that you gave to the union?

. . . . . .

[fol. 778] A. I don't believe that I have. I have tried to take care of it, as I explained before.

Q. Now, you spent five and one-half weeks in the United States District Court recently, didn't you?

A. I explained that, to Mr. Leary.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Has there been any time since the formation of this union that you have not received your full salary check from the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

[fol. 779] A. During that time I was paid by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for all the time that I spent.

Q. And you were not paid by the Donnelly Garment Company? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, that was what I thought—

A. (Interrupting) That is all right, but I didn't make the explanation of it before.

Q. Were you paid anything by the Donnelly Garment Company during that five and a half weeks?

A. For the hours that I worked for them.

Q. Well, weren't you in court all the time?

A. No, sir. We only had, I believe—

. . . . . .

[fol. 780] Q. Without going to the records, can you tell us what your—the deduction was from your salary checks during that five and one-half weeks?

A. You mean in dollars and cents?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I couldn't. I can only tell yor this; that it was the hours that I spent, the union paid me in accordance with what the Donnelly Garment Company would have paid me.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 784] Q. Approximately after you entered into your working agreement contract you entered into what you called a wage and hour supplement agreement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you entered into that on what date, if you know?

A. The 22d day of June it says, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. That has been marked Board's Exhibit No. 7. In that agreement you provide for wages and salaries for the various classes of employees of the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first group you provide for is marked group 1, operators. There you say "Operators who work a portion of the time on garments selling above $45 per dozen work the remainder of their time on garments selling at $45 per dozen and below, and who efficiently perform two or more different types of operations or operate efficiently two or more different types of machines, conforming to the quality standards set by the employer."

Who passed upon that classification, as to whether or not the employee did the work efficiently?

A. The daily performance of their work would show that, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. I know, but show it to whom and to whose satisfaction?

A. It would show it to the employer, and to the union also.

Q. But who passed upon who belonged to that classifi-
[fol. 785] cation, group 1 operators, performing their work efficiently?

A. Who passed on this, at this time?

Q. Yes, under this contract.

Mr. Stottle: If the Examiner please, respondent objects to the question as to who passed upon it. There is nothing to indicate the question has ever arisen as to whether the operator was efficient or otherwise.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course Miss Todd is reading this. Apparently someone has to pass on it if the question arises. I think the witness should testify who. The statement is there, as Mr. Langsdale has read it—I haven't read it.

It seems to me that this witness should state that. That apparently is the sum and substance of the paragraph.

Mr. Stottle: How could the witness state who passed on something if it never has been passed upon?

Mr. Langsdale: Here is the contract that provides for the classification of employees on the basis of efficiency. Certainly I am entitled to know who says an employee is efficient or is not efficient.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, is that contained in all of these classifications, or many of them?

Mr. Langsdale: Not in all of them, but in most of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: Miss Todd, in those classifications, where it states, "who efficiently performs . . ." [fol. 786] who would determine that efficient performance?

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I think we should make our objection to your own question, also—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting). You are perfectly free to.

Mr. Stottle—for the reason that you are asking the witness to interpret a provision of the contract which does not say who is to, and you are asking her to say who is to do something that is not provided for.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is why I cannot possibly determine it myself by reading the contract, it does not say who it is.

Mr. Stottle: There are lots of things that contract has not mentioned; that is one of them. If it isn't stated in the contract it is not a part of the contract.

Trial Examiner Batten: As far as the Examiner is concerned, I would like to know what this witness, who was a party to the contract, representing this organization, says as to who performs efficiently.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Who determines that?

A. The operator herself would help determine that.

Q. Who else would help?

A. Any member of the committee has that information available to her if she wants to get into it. I know what those girls do. The performance of their work shows you that.

[fol. 787] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, that is not the question. The question is, whose final duty is it to classify these employees as to efficiency? Who says Jane Smith belongs to group 1 because of efficiency, or that she does not belong to that group?

A. Jane Smith's work would speak for itself.

Q. That is your answer?

A. Yes, sir, with my explanation.

Trial Examiner Batten: Your objection is overruled. I didn't say so, but by the following question I asked I supposed it was understood.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may respondent have a continuing objection to this kind of questioning as asks for an interpretation of provisions of the contract?

Trial Examiner Batten: I prefer that you not have it, because I don't know that I am going to make the same ruling on all of the questions that may be asked. I would prefer you make your objections, Mr. Stottle, as the questions are asked; that is, on this matter.

[fol. 789] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You have here "group 1 operators, which includes operators who work a portion of the time on garments selling above $45 per dozen and worth the remainder of their time on garments selling at $45 per dozen and below, and who efficiently perform two or more different types of operators or operate efficiently two or more different types of machines, conforming to the quality standards set by the employer."

In this contract you don't say who shall pass upon the efficiency of the operator. What was the understanding at the time you entered into this contract as to who should pass upon the efficiency of the operator, if there was any understanding.

Mr. Bane: If your Honor please, that is not in line with the suggestion Your Honor made as to the type of question that could be asked. What would be the under-[fol. 790] standing in the minds of the parties to the contract would not be a proper question, because the contract itself. As I understood, Your Honor's suggestion was he could ask what has been the practice as to the classification of employees since the contract was entered into.

Trial Examiner Batten: That was the suggestion I made, and it seems to me that is the important point in connection with this. It is not what she may think it is; it is what has been done since it was entered into.

Mr. Langsdale: I think I have a right to ask the question I have framed, and that is, what was the understanding at the time this contract was made, if there was an understanding?

Trial Examiner Batten: Was there an understanding at the time the contract was signed? You may just say Yes or No.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: What was the understanding as to who should pass upon the efficiency of the operator, placing her in one group or another?

A. Wait a minute. What was the question.

Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. Considering that person as an individual, her work would show whether she could or whether she could not. [fol. 791] She was considered, the union was considered, and so was the company.

* * * * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: The question is what was the understanding? Who was to pass upon this matter?

A. All of the people involved in it passed upon it.

Mr. Langsdale: Isn't it true the employer is the one who graded the operators into one class or another, and has done it ever since this contract was signed?

A. It is not.

[fol. 792] (Whereupon, the hearing was resumed, pursuant to recess, at 2 o'clock, p. m.)

Trial Examiner Batten: The hearing will come to order, please.

Rose Todd, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross-Examination (Continued).

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union members wear pins? A. If they care to.

Q. Well, did you adopt some pin that was worn by all of those who care to? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You don't have but one pin, do you? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you one with you? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever worn one? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any vote taken by the membership as to which pin should be adopted? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what the result of that vote was? [fol. 793] A. The result was in favor of the pin that was adopted.

Q. Well, was there any percentage of votes, or anything of that sort?

A. There was a great percentage. I don't remember the percentage any more, but that was why it was chosen, the greatest percentage of them chose that one.

Q. Refreshing your recollection, was it 84 per cent of those chose that pin?

A. I don't remember. It is in our minutes some place.

Q. I just asked you if you remembered.

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. What did you sell the pin for?

A. Exactly what it cost us.

Q. What?

A. 81 cents, and 6 mills, if they happened to have the mills.

Q. Do you know what jewelry store made up the pin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which one?

A. Green Jewelry.

Q. Green Jewelry? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: Mark that as an exhibit.

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as [fol. 794] "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibit No. 1" for identification.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I hand you this document which has been marked International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibit No. 1 and ask you to state what that is, if you know.

A. It doesn't look like anything I have seen before, but it says—do you want me to read it?

Q. First, you say you haven't seen that before?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. Or any copy of it?

A. Not in this color ink, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, any other color ink?

A. I don't recall a thing just like this, but it is for, about our pins.

Q. Is there anything in that that isn't true?

Trial Examiner Batten: Were there two exhibits or just one exhibit with two pages?

The Witness: It is just a blank piece of paper on the back. In substance, I believe this is true.

Mr. Langsdale: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Ingraham: Let's see it. Well, has this witness identified that?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes. She said in substance it was true.

The Witness: I said I never saw it before.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I object to the introduction. [fol. 795] She hasn't identified it.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think there is insufficient identification, Mr. Langsdale. I might ask this, Mr. Langsdale, if you care to tell me, what is the purpose of this? I will excuse the witness if you don't want to say it in front of her. The thing is, I don't exactly see—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) That hasn't anything to do with my desire to get the document in. I don't like to tell the witness what the purpose is.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am not asking you to tell the witness nor do you need to tell me if you don't want to. I don't think it has been properly identified.

[fol. 796] Mr. Langsdale: I think you are right about that.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 797] Q. When was it, Miss Todd, that you decided it was time to form a plant union?

A. I didn't decide that it was time.

Q. Well, for yourself, when did you come to the conclusion that it was time to form a plant union?

A. The thing that was directly responsible for that was the announcement by Sylvia Hull on April 23, 1937.

Q. On April 23 you told Fern Sigler that you were going to run an open shop. Now, on April 27 you presided at the meeting when the union was formed. Was [fol. 798] it sometime between those two dates that you determined for yourself it would be a good time to form a union?

A. That was what made me decide it was high time for us to do something about some representation for ourselves.

Q. You didn't approve of labor unions, did you, at that time?

A. I have always approved of labor unions, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Well, I find in the minutes of your first meeting, held on April 27, 1937, the following statement by you:—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 799] Mr. Langsdale: I was getting ready to quote from this. The question preceding this was that, "You didn't like labor unions?" And she said she always liked labor unions. Now then, I wish to read this from the minutes of April 27.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. (Reading from minutes). "We have been trying to think of a name to call this organization because as many of the details as we can should be worked out today. I have this suggestion to make, and we have also talked this over with Mr. Tyler, and we have agreed that it is a good one. Our new organization will be called the [fol. 800] Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I am launching right into discussing this with you because we have a busy afternoon and a lot to take care of. My personal distress was the use of the word 'union'."

What did you find distressful about the use of the word "union," Miss Todd?

A. I was particularly referring, Mr. Langsdale, to all of the disturbance that had been caused by the I. L. G. W. U. at Twenty-sixth and Grand, as had other employees in the plant, too.

Q. Then, you did have a distaste—distress for labor unions?

A. Not for labor unions as a whole.

Q. "My first personal distress was the use of the word 'union.' You probably don't like it any better than I do but you must see by this time to meet the demand that can be made by outside organizations that our organization will have to be a union."

You made that statement, didn't you?

A. In substance, yes, sir. There is also more of that statement.

[fol. 801] Q. Now, Miss Todd, you have testified you went to see Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when asked as to how the three were chosen, I believe you made this statement, this answer, at the hearing before Judge Miller:

"I think there was nothing definite about that, either. I have been personally one of those people that kind of always get into everything, and I got into this some way."

Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The committee wasn't chosen by the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. It wasn't chosen by any mass meeting of employees?

A. I don't recall that it was.

Q. Just you three; you got the other two together and you went to see Mr. Tyler and Mr. Gossett?

A. I don't remember that I got them together particularly. We had been talking about it, a number of us, and the three of us decided to do something, and that is what we did after talking with the employees, some of the employees.

Q. Not after any meeting of the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or any other meeting of employees?

A. I don't know that it wasn't after that. It was after [fol. 802] that, but I don't know that that was directly responsible for it. It was partially.

Q. Just you and these other two, Mr. Hobart Atherton and Mrs. Ormsby; is that correct?

A. We were the three that went, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. I have here an affidavit filed in the three-judge hearing, signed by Sally K. Ormsby. She was one of the three that went down to see Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In which she states: "The committee of employees was authorized at a meeting of employees to see what could be done about protecting us from threats, violence and intimidation, and I was a member of that committee. We consulted attorneys."

Is that a true statement in that affidavit?

A. I think, Mr. Langsdale, you are referring to that meeting of March 18th, and I don't remember—don't seem to remember the details of that meeting. Now, that may be what she is referring to. I don't know.

Q. Well, I am asking you if that happened as stated by Mrs. Ormsby, that at a mass meeting of the employees, a committee selected, of which she was one, and you were one, and Hobart Atherton was the third, to visit attorneys?

A. Well, I think the only way I can answer that question is that I don't remember the details of that meeting.

Q. Do you remember that that committee was selected [fol. 803] in that way? A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, I have here an affidavit of Hobart Atherton signed on the 12th of October, and subscribed to, 1937, filed in the same three-judge proceeding, in which he states: "A committee of the employees was authorized at a meeting of the employees to see what could be done about protecting us from threats, violence and intimidation. I was a member of the committee, and we consulted attorneys."

Is that true?

A. I don't think those two people would make that statement if it wasn't true.

Q. Well, do you know whether it is true or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, here is your own affidavit filed in the same proceeding, signed by you on the 7th of July, 1937, in which you stated, "As a result of the above conditions and for the purpose of protecting them in their rights to continue work without being prevented therefrom by violence or intimidation, a large number of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company authorized several employees of that company, including myself, to make such arrangements as we deemed proper to protect the employees from situations being forced on the plant by outsiders similar to those which had occurred at other garment plants men[fol. 804] tioned. Those representatives consulted and employed attorneys."

Were you telling what happened in that affidavit?

A. I think I would have to see the first of that affidavit. I haven't seen it since the day it was written.

Q. Well, do you remember whether that correctly states the occurrence?

A. Mr. Langsdale, if that is my affidavit, I think it does.

Q. I am asking you if your recollection is that is the way you three people got together to go see the attorneys?

A. I think that must be correct. My memory of that is from memory, and is not good, but I certainly abide by anything that is in that affidavit.

Q. Now, how did you happen to go to Mr. Tyler's office?

A. Primarily, we were going to Mr. Gossett's office, and I had known them, or who they were, and had known Mr. Tyler and Mr. Gossett somewhat for several years, and anyone that we had talked to knew immediately who Mr. Gossett was, and we just thought it was a good place to go, and went to see what we could find out.

Q. Had you ever had any business with either Mr. Tyler or Mr. Gossett before you went with this committee of three?

A. No, sir. You mean business?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever had any social contact with either [fol. 805] Mr. Tyler or Mr. Gossett prior to that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever met Mr. Gossett? A Yes, sir.

Q. Where?

A. Through Dr. Sulzbacher at Thornton-Minor.

Q. Had he been there as a patient?

A. Not that I recall, Mr. Langsdale. I don't know.

Q. Well, you had just been introduced to him then, was that it?

A. I have seen him up there numbers of times.

Q. By Dr. Sulzbacher? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Dr. Sulzbacher is dead, is he not?

A The one I am referring to is not.

Q. Now, you had never known him, though, in a professional way?

A. Well, I have never known him personally, in a professional way. I knew he had been a member of the Council for a good many years.

Q. Well, of course, everyone knew Mr. Gossett was.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But did you also know that his partner, Ellis, at one time was a partner of Senator James A. Reed?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

[fol. 806] Q. Did that have anything to do with your going up there?

A. I didn't know who Mr. Ellis was until a few weeks ago.

Q. Now, in your testimony before Judge Miller, you testified that you had known Mr. Gossett in a professional way for some years. That wasn't correct, was it?

A. Well, I think not the word, used the word "professional." I had known Mr. Gossett through the manner I testified to a minute ago for years, and had known him in the halls to speak to him, and talk to him.

Q. Just like we all know any prominent man about town by name, and so forth. What day was it you went to see Mr. Gossett?

A. I believe it was March 27, 1937.

Q. And did you have any consultation with him at all?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Gossett was then in quite bad health, was he not?

A. Not in very good health, but he was there.

Q. And so he turned you over to Mr. Tyler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That meeting was when, if you know?

A. When, did you say?

Q. Yes, the first meeting with the attorneys.

A. March 27, 1937.

Q. Following that meeting, a number of you went down to see the Director of Police, Higgins?

[fol. 807] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Among those who went to see the Director of Police was Mrs. Strickland and Mrs. Gray?

A. I know Mrs. Strickland went. I am not positive about Mrs. Gray. I have been trying to think of that since the other day, and I am not positive about it.

Q. Well, if you testified that Mrs. Gray went, in your testimony before Judge Miller, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mrs. Strickland and Mrs. Gray were the organizers of the Loyalty League, were they not?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, the meeting was held at their home where the first organization work was done on the Loyalty League, was it not?

A. The meeting of some of the employees. I don't know where that was held, Mr. Langsdale. I know there was a meeting of quite a number of them, but I don't know where it was held.

Q. Had it ever occurred to you before the 12th of April, 1935, or '37, rather, when the National Labor Relations Act was declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, to organize a union?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 808] Q. Did you know that that had been the law since July 5, 1935?

A. That it had been?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I did not.

Q. You mean you didn't know there was any such thing as the Wagner Act?

A. I knew there was a Wagner Act, but I didn't know it had been declared valid until April 12, 1937.

Q. You knew it had been passed by Congress and signed by the President, and that they had examiners and attorneys and directors in charge of offices all over the United States, didn't you?

A. I don't think I had occasion, Mr. Langsdale, to pay any particular attention to the details of that.

Q. Had you been advised to pay no attention to the Wagner Act because it wasn't constitutional prior to April 12?

A. I hadn't been advised about it at all, because the thing we went to see Mr. Gossett about was an injunction, not a union.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What date was this you first went up there?

A. The 27th of March, 1937, Mr. Batten, we went to see Mr. Gossett, and the thing we had in mind was an injunction or some kind of protection, and that was all we talked about.

[fol. 809] Q. Was there any talk up there at that time about forming a union?

A. None whatever.

Q. You stated in your testimony before Judge Miller before April 12 the Wagner Act had been declared constitutional and Mr. Tyler called you and said he would like to talk to you, he had been reading the Labor Act and said, "There are certain things that would be a benefit to us." Is that right?

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. Then when he talked with you you decided to form this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, we didn't decide that soon.

Q. How soon after that?

A. As I remember, there was quite a little conversation with one and then another after that time, and then the thing that made us definitely decide to discuss it and see if it was what we should do was the event of Sylvia Hull and Fern Sigler on April 23, 1937.

Q. That was the day on which you said they were going to run an open shop?

A. That was in that conversation, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you started your meeting on the 27th of April, 1937. That was the meeting in which the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was organized. You had already had the cards printed and had them there at the meeting place to be signed by the employees, to the [fol. 810] effect that, "I hereby join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union"?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you have those printed?

A. I tried to remember the other day and didn't remember it correctly, and in looking back over our records I find we had them printed at the Kauffman-Eppinger Printing Company.

Q. And they were printed with the name in them, and everything?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Tyler appeared at that meeting with the by-laws all drawn up?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 811] Q. You consulted with Mr. Tyler about a great many matters before April 27, 1937?

A. Before April 27, 1937.

Q. Yes. Before the formation of the union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you pay him for that advice?

A. For which advice do you mean?

Q. The advice about the injunction?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 812] Q. With what money?

A. With money of the employees.

Q. Where did you get it?

A. We donated it.

Q. Who donated it?

A. The employees.

Q. How did you get it together?

A. We donated 50 cents a piece.

Q. I am talking about prior to the formation of the union.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you pay Mr. Tyler prior to the formation of the union?

A. I believe it was $500.

Q. Did you have a meeting in which that $500 was collected?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you have the meeting?

A. We must have had it on the second floor. I think that was the only available space to have it.

Q. On what day did you have the meeting?

A. I don't remember.

Q. In your testimony before Judge Miller you mentioned just the three of you going down to see Mr. Tyler. You didn't recall having any authority from any meeting. When was it you had that meeting to collect the money?

A. I don't recall, Mr. Langsdale. It would have had [fol. 813] to be the latter part of March.

Q. How much money did you collect?

A. I don't remember the dollars and cents of that. I judge we collected around $500.

Q. Did you have any treasury of the Loyalty League?

A. The Loyalty League had a treasury, yes, sir.

Q. Did it have any money at that time?

A. I don't know. I wasn't treasurer.

Q. You were president of it, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they had $500 in the treasury of the Loyalty League at the time you paid Mr. Tyler the $500?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you take the money out of the treasury of the Loyalty League to pay Mr. Tyler that $500?

A. As I remember, that $500 was put into the Loyalty League treasury to pay Mr. Tyler. We had no treasury of the employees except that, and we used it.

Q. That $500 paid him for the advice about the injunction and for drawing up the bylaws and other advice leading up to the meeting of April 27, 1937?

A. That $500 paid him for his advice about the injunction.

Q. You paid him $500 just to talk to him about the injunction?

A. I wouldn't say it as light as that. We paid him for the advice and assistance he gave us.

[fol. 814] Q. Did he send you a bill for $500 for advice about the injunction?

A. I believe he did.

Q. He didn't draw up any papers for an injunction, did he?

A. I don't remember about all of the details of that now. I know he said he went down to court, and I think I remember him saying he went to two or three different courts where the same thing has been considered.

Q. You went to him first on the 27th of March, 1937, didn't you?

A. That is right.

Q. How many times did you visit him between that and April 27, 1937?

A. I have no idea.
Q. Was it more than twice?
A. Between that and when?
Q. April 27.
A. More than twice?
Q. Yes.
A. Oh, yes, sir.
Q. How many times?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Give us your best judgment.
A. We talked to him on the phone several times, and we went to see him several times. I can't tell you the [fol. 815] number of visits, Mr. Langsdale.
Q. When did you pay him the $500?
A. I don't remember the date of that either.
Q. Wasn't it after the union was formed?
A. It was not, no sir.
Q. You paid him the $500 before the union was formed?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How did you pay him, in cash or by check?
A. By check.
Q. Of the Loyalty League?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Signed by whom?
A. I explained that a few minutes ago.
Q. Signed by you?
A. I don't remember. The treasurer would have signed that. I don't remember who it was.
Q. Do you know where the cancelled check is?
A. No, sir.
Q. Are they kept in the records of the Loyalty League?
A. I don't know about that.
Q. Do you know where that $500 check is?
A. No, I don't.
Q. But you feel certain it was paid to him prior to April 27, 1937?
A. Yes, I do.
[fol. 816] Q. Who gave him the check?
A. Who gave him the check?
Q. Yes. Who manually handed it to him, if anybody; or who mailed it to him?
A. I don't remember that either.

Q. I wish you would be a little more definite, Miss Todd, as to when you made this $500 payment, if you can.

A. Mr. Langsdale, I did state, and I am very positive about it, that it was paid to him before the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union was ever organized. As to the date, I just can't tell you.

Q. Whether it was paid one day, two days, three days, or a week before, you don't know?

A. No, sir, I can't tell you. I am not trying to be evasive, but I just don't remember.

Q. Is there anything in your memory that makes you positive it was between the 27th of March and the 27th of April?

A. I know it was done before then.

Q. You say you know it, but is there any milestone or anything else you base that on?

A. Yes. I base it on that meeting of employees we had and donated 50 cents apiece. The date of that meeting I don't remember, but it was the latter part of March or the first part of April, within a week or ten days there. It might have been the 5th, 6th, or 7th, I don't remember.

[fol. 817] Q. Is that cancelled check available so that you can produce it in court?

A. I don't know about that. I haven't thought of it for so long I haven't any idea.

Q. As president of the Loyalty League did you keep the cancelled checks?

A. I [didn,] no, sir.

Q. Where did you keep the Loyalty League account?

A. At the First National Bank.

Q. In whose name was that account kept?

A. I imagine it was kept in the name of the Loyalty League.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 819] Q. Now, in your testimony before Judge Miller, I find from the transcript that you gave there—

Mr. Ingraham (Interrupting): What page?

Mr. Langsdale: Page 698—1082.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. "As employees, we have always felt free to discuss any grievances with our employer. We recently formed our employees' union because we did not dare to be dictated to by anyone from the outside."

A. That is a mistake. It says "care."

Q. Well, it says "dare."

A. Well, it is a mistake by the stenographer, because I called Mr. Tyler's attention to it when it happened.

Q. You said "care"? A. That is right.

Q. Instead of "dare"?

A. That is right. I called Mr. Tyler's attention to that, as soon as he showed me that transcript.

* * * ** * *

[fol. 821] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, I hand you this document which has been marked "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit 2" and ask you to read it and see what it is, if you know.

A. What did you ask me about it, Mr. Langsdale?

Q. Do you recognize that document as a copy?

A. I think I do.

Q. That was sent out with the formation of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, something similar to that, as near as I can tell it would be a copy.

Mr. Langsdale: I offer that in evidence.

* * ** * * *

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to the introduction of this exhibit at this time because there hasn't been any identification that would show that it has any materiality on the case.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, now, there are two objections in one. You object to it once because it isn't identified and another because it isn't material.

Mr. Stottle: Yes. I am making both of them, neither identified properly or material if it were identified properly.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I think it has been sufficiently identified and certainly, it is material.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't see; I will receive it subject to further identification. I don't think this [fol. 822] witness' statement, Mr. Langsdale, is sufficient to receive it without qualifications.

* * * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I said I would receive it subject to further identification. I don't think that is sufficient, and there is also a question there in connection with that that I would like to ask, Mr. Langsdale. [If] that notice, it refers to the fact that the employees there were receiving good wages, and so forth. I don't recall. Of course, I don't want to be put in the position where, we are going to have to prove, in this hearing, compare the wages, and go through all that, that is paid here and paid in other places, because I don't think it is of sufficient importance on the issues of this case to open up that whole line of questioning; and I just want to say now that by receiving it, I am not putting myself in a position where—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): I am not offering it for [fol. 823] that purpose. My only purpose is to show why the Loyalty League was organized.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 825] Q. In April, 1937, when your membership attended a meeting, was it customary to change from working clothes to street clothes before going to the meeting?

A. In April, 1937?

Q. Yes.

A. Some of them might have and some of them might not have. I think that would be just a personal choice in the matter.

Q. It would have been convenient if the shop was closed to have changed their clothing first and have gone to the meeting?

A. No. Often times, Mr. Langsdale, a lot of the girls will come down with their uniforms on and change them afterwards. Sometimes it is hot in there and they don't care to change.

Q. And some of them wouldn't?

A. Yes, sir. As a whole, I expect most of them wouldn't in hot weather.

Q. You [suspect] most of them would not change their [fol. 825a] working clothes to street clothes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In cooler weather was it customary to change their uniforms to street clothes before going to the meeting?

A. I think that would depend on whether they were in a hurry to get there, whether they might have just a few minutes or whether they might have several minutes.

* * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, it is alleged in the complaint filed here that the respondent, which is the Donnelly Garment Company, has dominated and interfered in the formation and administration of the labor organization among its employees known as the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and has given financial aid and other support to said organization by the various things [fol. 826] that are thereafter listed.

I now wish to ask you whether you know of any officers or executives or supervisory employees of the Donnelly Garment Company encouraging, allowing or permitting other employees to organize, promote, or encourage membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, particularly in the months of March, April, and May, 1937?

Mr. Leary: Just a minute. Mr. Examiner, I wish to object to that question as calling for a conclusion. And, along that line, I want to say that the issues raised in this case here and to be determined by the Board are the very issues he wants this witness to answer or give an opinion on. I think it is invading the prerogatives of the Examiner and the Board to permit an answer from this witness on that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. The question is, do I know if any of the officials of the company have prevented the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union being organized?

Mr. Stottle: Or encouraged or promoted the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

A. Whether they have encouraged or promoted—

Mr. Stottle: Read the question, please.

* * * * * *

[fol. 827] Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I want to say, also, that I think this witness should be permitted to state what was said and done during those particular months with reference to the question that Mr. Stottle has asked her, but I don't think that it is proper to ask her to give the legal conclusion that the question is calling for.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, I have said before in this hearing that I am not going to attempt to tell attorneys how to ask their questions. If Mr. Stottle wants to ask it in that form, I permitted the witness to answer.

The Examiner and the Board, when they consider the evidence that is in here, will give such weight to answers as in our opinions those answers should have.

Mr. Leary: Well, on the other hand, Mr. Examiner, I don't think that if the question is improper to begin with that the witness should be permitted to answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't consider it to be improper.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Well, did any of the officers or executive employees of the Donnelly Garment Company ever come to you, Miss Todd, and suggest that you form the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear them say that to any other employees? A. I never did.

[fol. 828] Q. You stated that you had gone over the plant a good deal in the course of your work, talking to 200 or 300 employees. Did any of those employees ever say to you, Miss Todd, that any of the officers had suggested to them that there be a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union formed?

A. I never have.

Mr. Leary: I object, Mr. Examiner, to that as calling for a self-serving statement, and improper cross-examination in that it is assuming facts that are not in evidence. Now, we haven't put in the evidence, thus far, as to the fact that are mentioned in Mr. Stottle's question. He is denying, he is asking to have be denied now things that aren't affirmatively proven.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, that you want to restrict the cross-examination to the direct examination? Is that what you are in substance meaning?

Mr. Leary: Yes, Mr. Examiner, I do. That isn't the entire purport of my objection, though, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I have always taken a position in these hearings that cross-examination doesn't necessarily have to be restricted to the direct examination and that if an attorney in a cross-examination of a witness cares to examine the witness about some matters that might be considered affirmative, that they may do so, rather than the necessity of bringing the wit- [fol. 829] ness back. Now, of course, if we are going to proceed on that basis, I don't see there would be any objection to this examination.

Mr. Leary: Well, in that event, Mr. Examiner, if Mr. Stottle will state that he doesn't intend to bring the witness back, I will withdraw that portion of the objection.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we don't wish to state that. I think this is a proper cross-examination on matters brought out. Their whole case is on these points. If their examination didn't relate to these matters, it ought to be all stricken out to this point.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

The Witness: Is there a question to be answered? I thought I answered that.

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Whereupon, the question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

Mr. Stottle: Do you know of their encouraging or promoting the organization after April, March and May, 1937?

A. I haven't had a thing to do with it—

Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting): Well, now, let me ask you this, Mr. Stottle: are you going to have her categorically deny each one of these allegations and then go into all the details of each one?

Mr. Stottle: Well, that was somewhat along the line I [fol. 830] had in mind.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, if that is your plan, I see absolutely no necessity of categorically sitting there reading the allegations, having the witness say "No", because I think you know as well as I do that not a great deal of weight could be given to that.

Mr. Stottle: Well, if your Honor please, if the company's officers said nothing to this witness about the matter, there is nothing she could say that they did say.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true. My question to you was, are you going to read all of these and have her deny them, and then are you going to start out and examine her in detail with respect to the testimony which she has thus far given? I mean; I can't see that there is any reason for doing both.

Mr. Stottle: Well, it seems to me the only way you can show by this witness whether she was encouraged, is to ask whether the officers encouraged her or promoted the organization.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to your asking her that.

Mr. Stottle: That is what I have asked is whether any executive officers have encouraged her or other employees that she knows about.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

[fol. 831] A. They have not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think you did answer, did you not?

The Witness: I did.

Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, do you know of any financial aid or other support that the Donnelly Garment Company or any of its officers have given to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. They have never given us a dime.

Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I desire to make my record objection to that question.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Would that apply to the Donnelly Garment Sales Company as well?

A. That does apply to the Donnelly Garment Sales Company as well.

Q. Miss Todd, you stated that you were a member of the Loyalty League?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Loyalty League or its officers ever act as a labor union down at the Donnelly Plant?

A. Never to my knowledge.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that—just a moment,—as calling for, certainly, a conclusion this witness shouldn't [fol. 832] be permitted to draw, because that depends on acts and conduct and a great many things, and it is for the Examiner to conclude; not this witness.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What do you mean, Miss Todd, when you say they did not act as a labor organization?

A. As a labor organization?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, they never did, Mr. Batten.

Q. Well, what—

A. (Interrupting) It has always been a social organization.

Q. What does a labor organization usually do?

A. Well, I assume—

Q. (Interrupting) What is the function of a labor organization?

A. Well, the activity of our Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is what I consider the activity of a labor union, and taking their right and opportunity and using it for collective bargaining.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Well, Miss Todd, did the Loyalty League or its officers ever tell the employer down there, the employees down there, that they couldn't work or they could work? Did it do that?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

Q. Did it recommend to the officers of the company what employees should be hired or discharged?

[fol. 833] A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. Did it ever ask the Donnelly Garment Company to recognize it as a bargaining agent for the employees?

A. Never.

Q. Did it ever ask the Donnelly Garment Company to recognize it as a union under the Wagner Act?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Loyalty League ever make any demand on the company as to establishing working hours?

A. I never heard of any.

Q. Did they ever make any demands on the company as to establishing wages?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Did they make protest to the management for discharging any employee or for paying too low wages, or anything of that kind?

A. I never heard of it.

Q. Did it ever enter into any contracts with it, with the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Sales Company concerning working conditions of any kind?

A. No, sir, that—not that I know of.

Q. Since the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has there been any change in the Loyalty League in the nature of its work?

A. Not any that I know of.

[fol. 834] Q. That has always continued to be social, as it was before?

A. It has always been a social organization and still is.

Q. It still functions as a social organization down there?

A. It is still an active organization, as it has been the last—since its organization.

Q. Have you ever heard or known of any discussion about changing the name of the Loyalty League to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. No, sir.

Q. Well, is there any connection at all that you know of, Miss Todd, between the Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union except the fact that there may be the same members or some of the same members in each organization?

A. There is no connection whatsoever. There is some definite statements in the minutes of that first meeting about the Loyalty League status and what this union would be if we formed it. It has never been anything but a social organization.

Q. If there was a mass meeting or a general meeting of employees down there, Miss Todd, there would necessarily be members of the Loyalty League present, would there not?

A. There couldn't be otherwise, because everybody, the employees, belong to both organizations.

[fol. 835] Q. If you held a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, a mass meeting, there would necessarily be Loyalty League members there, would there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't believe I recall the testimony—Did the Donnelly Loyalty League have a constitution or by-laws?

A. I don't believe it has been in the testimony, Mr. Batten. They have something that is so old, I don't remember what it is. They do have something; I don't know whether they call it by-laws or what they call it.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. You have been asked a number of times by counsel for the Board or the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union if you were president of the Loyalty League at the time you did certain things, attended certain meetings or otherwise. Is it a fact, Miss Todd, that while you held that office you were the president when you ate your lunch or whatever your activity might be?

A. Yes, sir, I was president, but it didn't always mean I was acting as president of the Loyalty League when I attended meetings.

Q. When you participated in the Fern Sigler incident that you have testified about, although you may have been president of the Loyalty League, is it your testimony that you did not act or purport to act as representing the Don-[fol. 836] nelly Loyalty League?

A. I was not representing the Loyalty League.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Company or any of its executives or supervisory employees ever tell you, Miss Todd, that you could solicit membership, hold meetings, and engage in other activities on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union during the working hours and on company property?

A. They never did say I could do it during working hours. Any activities that we have on company property in the way of meetings we pay rent for.

I think there are two questions in one there.

Q. Well, Miss Todd, do you know of any, whether it is one I mentioned or not in which the Donnelly Garment Company or its officers or supervisors or employees have contributed to the support of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or promoted or encouraged it?

A. Not in any way whatsoever.

Q. Miss Todd, it is alleged in the complaint that the respondent, that is, the Donnelly Garment Company has interfered with and restrained, coerced, intimidated or threatened its employees to refrain from becoming members or continuing membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by certain acts that are thereafter set forth. I will now ask you whether, to your knowledge, any of the officers, executives or supervisory [fol. 837] employees of the Donnelly Garment Company have restrained or intimidated you or any of the other employees from becoming members in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, as far as she knows?

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. As far as you know.

A. Not as far as I know. I have never heard of it.

Q. They never did that to you, anyway?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear any other employee, in going about over the plant, say that?

A. I have never heard anyone say that.

Q. Miss Todd, do you know of any rumors circulated by the officers or supervisory employees or other executives of the Donnelly Garment Company at its plant in the spring of 1937 that respondent's employees would be subjected to violence, intimidation, or assault at the hands of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union or its members or agents?

A. It was very common knowledge around that plant at that time.

Q. That that would happen?

A. Will you repeat the first of the question, Mr. Stottle? All of the employees were talking about the things that were happening.

Mr. Stottle. Will you read the question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

[fol. 838] A. I never heard it circulated by the officers of the company. It was common knowledge, and being circulated among the employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, you have answered the question. Let's not get into these rumors, because if we try to run half of them down we will be here until this time next year. In any place where you have a couple of unions trying to organize you have so many rumors you can't keep up with them.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Were you ever told or did you understand, Miss Todd, that the company was going to charter buses for the purpose of creating fear and hatred and contempt in the minds of the employees against the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of chartering buses?

A. The purpose was to give the employees protection in coming to and from work that apparently was needed.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You say "apparently." What do you mean by "apparently"?

A. Because of all of these threats and rumors.
Q. Were you ever threatened individually by anybody?
A. Not any one person, Mr. Batten.
Q. Did anybody ever threaten you personally?
A. Not personally, no, sir.
[fol 839] Q. Then, all you know about it is what you heard, is that right?
A. That is right.

Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, you had read in the paper what was going on at the other garment company plants, had you not?

A. The papers were full of it, and I could see what was going on at Twenty-Sixth and Grand as I came to and from work.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as not material, and if it is material we want to be permitted to show that when A. A. Ahner hired strikebreakers it was to prevent most of the violence she claims she saw.

Trial Examiner Batten: We are not going to try out the newspaper in this case and have all of those articles brought in, and then have the reporters brought in and prove that it is true or not true. If there were threats and violence, bring the people in here that were threatened, and the people violence was done to, and let them testify.

I will sustain the objection as far as that part of it goes. We are not going to try out all of those matters.

By Mr. Stottle:
Q. Miss Todd, it is alleged here that the respondent interfered with, restrained, coerced and intimidated its employees to refrain from becoming members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union by keeping [fol. 840] its meetings in Kansas City, Mo., since July 5, 1937, under surveilance. Do you know of any officers or supervisory employees of the company that were keeping the meetings of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union under surveilance?
A. No, sir, I don't.
Q. Did they ever ask you to go to any of those meetings and report on what occurred?
A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of their telling any other employee to go to the meetings and report what occurred?

A. Not that I ever heard of.

Q. It is alleged that they induced and compelled employees to sign a petition professing their loyalty to respondent, and permitting and causing said petition to be circulated in its plant during working hours on or about March 2, 1937. Are you acquainted with that petition?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any of the officers or supervisory employees asking that that be signed?

A. I don't believe they did. That was circulated by two employees in the shipping department, shipping clerks.

Q. It was circulated by the employees among the employees?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of the company, or any of its officers [fol. 841] or supervisory employees, inducing or allowing or permitting instructors or other supervisory or confidential employees to become members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and to be active in its affairs?

A. The company had nothing to do with who would be members of the union. And the officers are not members.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the question and answer, please?

(Thereupon the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the officers of the company?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. The instructors are members, are they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they permitted to join at the instance of the company?

A. No, sir. They didn't have anything to do with it. The company had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that conclusion and ask that it be stricken out for the reason that the Examiner has a right to find if the instructor is in a supervisory capacity. The instructor is the company, acting as an agent for the company. Our contention is that these instructors [fol. 842] are in a supervisory capacity, and in a position to hire and fire. And for her to say that no officer of the company permitted any supervisory employees to join the union is pure conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten. Assuming this to be true, Mr. Langsdale, if you very definitely proved the thing which you say you are contending, her answer to this question would not stand in the Examiner's or Board's way, would it, in considering the case?

Mr. Langsdale: That is true. Nevertheless it is a conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: I see no objection to permitting it to stand.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd, do you know whether the company or its executives or supervisory employees instigated, caused, allowed, or permitted its employees to engage in a violent demonstration on its time and property about April 23, 1937, against Fern Sigler, Sylvia Hull, and May Fike, or other members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. The company didn't allow that, no, sir.

Q. That is the incident you have already testified to?

A. Yes, sir. It was something the employees did.

Q. Do you mean by your answer that it occurred voluntarily, or what is your answer to that, Miss Todd?

[fol. 843] A. It was a voluntary act by the employees. The company did not promote it or have anything to do with it.

Q. You didn't see any of their officers promoting that incident?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of the officials, Mr. Batty or others, try to stop that demonstration or put an end to it?

A. Mr. Batty talked to Fern Sigler after she came to work, but I don't remember seeing any of the officials there. Mrs. Hyde, I believe, was there earlier and asked them to go back to work.

Q. Who was that?

A. Mrs. Hyde.

Q. Did Mr. Batty ask them to go back to work, do you know?

A. I don't know whether Mr. Batty was there at that hour of the morning or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: At what time was it that this started, Miss Todd?

A. It was early in the morning, Mr. Batten; I think, around 7.20 to 7:30. It only lasted a few minutes. It might even have been 25 minutes of 8, I don't know.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. There was no actual violence there, was there, Miss Todd?

A. No; it was just a demonstration. The girls didn't [fol. 844] like the articles they had seen in the paper, and didn't like the pin being worn.

Q. Did you personally feel, Miss Todd, that you had been interferred with, as far as you personally were concerned, as to what union you should join or belong to, by the officers of the company, or any of its supervisory employees?

Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, I wish to object to that question because it calls for the mental feelings of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to this witness answering it. I, of course, don't want either the respondent or the intervener to assume that because I permit this witness to answer that question that I would not want to give very serious thought to the matter if you were going to bring in 1,200 people up here and ask them that one question, but as long as the witness is here, I see no reason why she shouldn't answer it.

Mr. Stottle: Of course by silence I don't want to indicate that it might not be the desire of the respondent to offer further evidence along that line, because we have been charged that these people have been dominated.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't mean by my statement—I said, I believe to Mr. Tyler, on that other matter that I don't want to be put in the position on this particular question—I am not passing on it now. If you present [fol. 845] the problem to me I will then pass upon it, but I didn't want you to use this as a precedent for bringing them in here. If you do contemplate that I hope you will bring the matter up before you bring them all up here in the courtroom, so that we may argue the matter out here.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd, the complaint alleges that the respondent has coerced its employees in what union they might belong to, and threatened them against belonging to the International, and dominated the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union by the making of a closed shop contract with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. I will ask you if that closed shop contract was sought in the first instance by the Donnelly Garment Company or its officers.

A. It was sought by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and at first Mrs. Reed didn't know whether she would agree to it or not. There was quite a bit of discussion before she decided she would agree to it.

[fol. 846] Q. In other words, you sought that yourself on behalf of the union?

A. It emanated from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Miss Todd, recalling your attention to the first meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, I mean the one on April 27th, when the union was formed, I wish you would tell the Examiner whether the company or any of its officers or executives, or supervisory employees, had anything to do with the calling of that meeting.

A. They did not.

Q. Did they have anything to do with the carrying on of the meeting after it was called?

A. No, sir. I called the meeting and they had nothing to do with it.

Q. Did any of them suggest the formation of the union at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether the officers of the company were present at that meeting?

A. I did not see any of them, and I don't think they were.

Q. Did you see any of the—the officers—any officers that would be deemed supervisory employees of the company at that meeting?

A. No, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean that she would consider?

[fol. 847] Mr. Stottle: That she would consider.

Trial Examiner Batten: Supervisory, is that what you mean?

Mr. Stottle: Yes.

A. I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is a little indefinite. Of course, you may let it stand that way if you wish.

Mr. Stottle: Well, did you see anyone that would have authority to hire or discharge employees present at the meeting?

A. I did not.

Mr. Leary: Now, I object to that in that there has been no showing that she knows who does have authority to hire and fire.

Mr. Stottle: Was Mr. Batty present at the meeting, that you know of?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Leary: I move the witness' answer to that question, if it was received, be stricken now, Mr. Examiner, pending a ruling upon my objection.

[fol. 848] Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Stottle: Did you see Mr. Batty at the meeting?

A. I did not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Who, as far as you know, had the right to hire and discharge, Miss Todd? Do you know?

A. I think that is confined to—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Will you answer a little louder, please?

A. (Continuing) So far as I know, that is confined to Mr. Batty, as far as the Donnelly Garment Company.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I mean't in the production department Mr. Batty hires and fires?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Now, at this meeting of April 27th, you say a great many cards were signed that night at the meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many were signed at that time?

[fol. 849] Q. About how many were signed at that time?

A. I expect that well over 1,200 of them. I know there was probably 1,260, 1,250; something like that, and the balance of them were turned in the following morning.

Q. Approximately how many employees were there in the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company at that time?

A. As I remember, it was 1,333 and 1,303 signed that evening or by the following morning.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. So that when you went to see Mrs. Reed the following day or the day after that, you knew that she had a membership of far more than a majority of the employees?

A. Yes, sir, around 1,300 people.

Q. I believe you testified you had those cards with you, or some of them, when you went to see Mrs. Reed?

[fol. 850] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell her how many there were, approximately? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed examine those cards?

A. Yes, sir; not every individual one, but they were there in a box together.

Q. What did Mrs. Reed do regard to the cards, if anything?

A. Turned them over to her secretary to check to see that there was that approximate number there.

Q. Well, did she express any doubt as to whether there was the cards there equaling more than a majority of the members?

A. No, she did not, because there was around 1,300 cards there.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was the name of the secretary?

A. What is the name?

Q. Yes. A. Miss Frances.

Q. Frances? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Then after that, Miss Todd, what did you do towards the making of a contract with the Donnelly Garment Company on behalf of your union?

A. This contract was drawn up and presented to Mrs. Reed on the officials of the company on the 27th of May, 1937.

[fol. 851] Q. Well, now, during that period of approximately a month, well, exactly a month, I guess, between the time your union was organized and the time you presented this completed contract, or, at least, the form of contract that you wanted, to Mrs. Reed, what did you do with regard to preparing that contract?

A. Well, there were a number of conferences and discussions with the members and with the members of our committee with Mr. Tyler, about this contract, and quite a little conversation with Mr. Batty too, regarding some salaries in different departments so that we would have some more definite ideas to work with.

Q. Well, Miss Todd, it has been intimated here this wasn't a good contract for you. Did you examine any contracts of other unions during that month or as to any knowledge of the contracts of other unions?

A. We have some knowledge of others, and their guarantees, being much lower than what we asked for. We felt that this contract, when we—after we negotiated with Mrs. Reed, was better than any that we knew about.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to the minimum wage?

A. Yes, sir. This contract, of course, called for a supplemental or a wage contract to be negotiated later.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Well, after the first contract was signed, what ne- [fol. 852] gotiation among yourselves or otherwise did you have leading up to the making of the supplemental contract?

A. The discussion of the committee and comments of the members as to what they thought would need to be written into this contract, and with Mr. Tyler, and furthermore, from Mr. Batty and officials also of the Donnelly Garment Sales Company showing us, giving us some idea of what they were paying so that we would know what we were working with.

Q. Well, when was the supplemental contract presented to the company, do you remember that?

A. June 22, 1937, is when it was signed, and, well, that answers that question, I believe.

Q. Well, now,—well, what information, Miss Todd, did you ask from the company as to what wages had been paid? Did you ascertain from them what the average wages of employees were?

A. No. We were interested particularly in our mechanical department, in our cutting department, in places like that, as to what they were paying their men, so that we could compare with what we understood was being paid in other plants, and you will find in that contract that there was a substantial increase gained in our contract after this discussion and negotiation with Mrs. Reed. Not that she was heartily in favor of doing it, but she did sign the contract with that in it.

[fol. 853] Q. Well, now, on the first contract with Mrs. Reed, which you presented, I believe you say on May 27th in the morning, what did she say with regard to signing the contract at that time?

A. I believe, in substance, she said she would like to look it over and discuss it with Mr. Batty and Mr. Ingraham, and the officials of the company, and to have some time to think it over. In substance, it might be all right. However, there were some changes made in that contract before it was signed in the afternoon.

Q. Well, did she make any objection to signing a contract with you at all, a written contract? Was that matter discussed?

A. She—I don't remember that she objected to it, because we had far in the majority that we were asking, we were asking to represent ourselves because we had a great majority. She did make some objections to one or two points in that contract.

Q. Now, this meeting that you attended at the Musicians Hall, Miss Todd, that you testified about, why was it you went to that meeting?

A. Mr. Stottle, I was just curious to know about their organization.

Q. Well, what information—did they—didn't they hand out circulars in front of the plant? A. Oh, yes.

[fol. 854] Q. Inviting you to attend?

A. It was an open meeting, and we were requested as employees of the Donnelly Garment Company. That seemed to be the primary reason for having that particular meeting. That is the one that I went to.

Q. Well, in what way were you requested to attend the meeting, Miss Todd?

A. By an invitation from the International, that the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company attend their meeting.

Q. Well, was that in the form of handbills?

A. Yes, it was some sort of a circular that was passed around.

Q. You saw some of those handbills? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was a result of seeing them that caused you to go to the meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And not any request of the officials of the company that you should go there?

A. Oh, no, no one ever asked me to go to that meeting.

Q. Well, now, Miss Todd, you have testified about a check-off in the—being inaugurated. That wasn't provided for at the time the contract was entered into?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 855] Q. Well, isn't it a fact, Miss Todd, that the company objected to giving you the check-off when you asked for them?

A. Our conversation I remember about that was that we asked for it and Mr. Ingraham said "Oh, no, we can't do that." But they did finally agree to it. There was quite a little discussion about it pro and con.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the company or Mr. Ingraham, representing the company, refused to sign or to agree to that, until every employee had signed a card or a request asking that it be done?

A. Oh, yes. That was his request, that if they did it, that is the only way they would do it. If each individual member would request that it be done.

Q. Well, wasn't that card in the form of an authority on the part of the employee to the company that the company could take this money out of their wages?

Mr. Langsdale: I think the card would speak for itself, and be the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think the card, if you have a copy—

The Witness (Interrupting): I will be glad to bring one. It is something about "We hereby request",—

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment, Miss Todd.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think this card would be much better.

Mr. Stottle: At least, that was one matter that the [fol. 856] union presented to the company in the nature of a complaint, but not of a complaint of something that you wanted, and you eventually did get that from the company? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: Do I understand that you will present—

Mr. Ingraham (Interrupting): We will present the card, yes, showing the authority.

Trial Examiner Batten: I understand it would be furnished. What is it, the form of an individual assignment of so much per month?

Mr. Ingraham: That is right, as I recall, it is authority on the company, signed by the individual employee to deduct a certain amount.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you can bring in a blank one.

Mr. Ingraham: I will do that, your Honor.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Now, Miss Todd, there has been some comment here about why you didn't put the wage agreement into the first agreement. What is the fact in regard to that?

A. We didn't feel that we had had enough time to work on that wage agreement when this working agreement was presented, and it was agreed, and we felt that we needed some negotiation with her because we represented a majority of the employees and expected her to agree to some sort of a working agreement, and we wanted more time to work out the salaries and wages to be paid. [fol. 857] Q. Well, when you put the provision in the first contract about the minimum wage being $15, was it contemplated at that time that there would be another contract that would cover all matters relating to wages?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of that was discussed—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): As a matter of fact, I think the first contract specified that, as I recall it.

The Witness: It says something about it.

Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, do you know what the minimum wage provision is in the Gernes, Gordon, and other contracts—

Mr. Leary (Interrupting): I object to that as incompetent,—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Wait just a minute. Will you read the question that you have?

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Stottle: I wasn't quite through.

Mr. Stottle (Continuing)—in this city with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

Mr. Leary: Let the record show my objection, Mr. Exam- [fol. 858] iner.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection?

Mr. Leary: On the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Mr. Ingraham: If your Honor please, Mr. Langsdale asked this witness in regard to the terms and conditions of the contract which she negotiated with the company, and his questions were directed at showing that the contract was not a good contract for the employees. Now, I think we have a right to come in and show that it is a far better contract for the employees than any contract that the International has entered into with any other garment company in this part of the country. It is competent for that purpose.

* * * * * *

[fol. 860] Mr. Langsdale: My thought is this, whether or not this is a company-dominated union does not depend upon what someone else pays as wages. We made certain specific charges here that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is company-dominated, company-financed, and that they discriminated against certain employees because they belonged to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Now, what they pay in some other factory does not bear upon those issues at all. If it does, then we expect to be permitted to go back to 1933, before the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union came to Kansas City, and show what the contract was with those employees at Gordon's, Gerney's and others.

Trial Examiner Batten: I was going to say this, irrespective of what questions Mr. Langsdale has asked or what questions Mr. Leary has asked, I am assuming all of those questions merely to the question of how these matters were negotiated and whether there was bargaining and whether those parties as a result of collective bargaining arrived at these things.

Mr. Langsdale: That is right.

Trial Examiner Batten: The purpose of the question—I think I made a remark this morning in which I said that any labor organization can sit down and negotiate a contract with an employer, and the Labor Board never has and never will attempt to pass upon the actual pro[fol. 861] visions of the contract except in so far as it has been negotiated through collective bargaining with a labor organization.

Now, therefore, I do not consider any questions that have come up thus far raise the question of proving by comparison with another plant that they are getting more or are getting less. I think it is immaterial whether they are getting more or getting less, because one group may be in a better position to bargain and negotiate than another group. There may be all of the factors come in which Mr. Langsdale has mentioned.

Maybe other plants pay substantially less than the Donnelly Garment Company over a long period of years, so that the increased amount received by the employees in these shops, while not equal to the minimum wage at the Donnelly plant, was a very substantial gain for the employees, which would mean that we would have to try out all of the conditions surrounding all of these contracts.

Now surely you do not mean, Mr. Ingraham, we would have to do that.

Mr. Ingraham: No. Here is my position, Your Honor: If this Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is a dominated union and would be used by the company to beat down wages, and the company would be taking unfair advantage of the employees, that is one thing; but I think when the evidence shows, and the only evidence that should be admissible would be the contract itself—when it shows when these employees were able to obtain from the company better rates of pay than have been obtained by the In[fol. 862] ternational with other companies—

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think in this case it means a thing unless you try out, Mr. Ingraham, all of the things I have just said.

Mr. Ingraham: No, Your Honor. The point has been raised that Miss Todd and other members of the committee didn't really negotiate.

Here is a company that has been paying good wages, here is a company that treats its employees fairly, here is a company that does not try to beat down the wages. These employees come in and say they want to bargain collectively and want to enter into a written contract.

The company enters into a written contract, and in doing that, because it doesn't get into a fight with the employees, and because it doesn't haggle, and because they do arrive at a fair kind of a contract and the employees have better wages than are contained in any of these other contracts, I think that is very conclusive evidence that this union is properly representing the employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would say this, Mr. Ingraham, if all of the things you have just mentioned are proved, except the last thing, that is, that they have better wages than the others, then you do not need that. In other words, the situation, it seems to me, is this: If there was collective bargaining here and if this organization was not [fol. 863] formed by the employer and is not supported by the employer and there were negotiations here, that is all there is to it. I just can't see how comparison with somebody else means anything.

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, it certainly means that this union was able to obtain for its members the best collective bargaining contract that has been obtained in the industry here, and that is an accomplishment and it should be recognized.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, of course it might, on the other hand—there is just a possibility it might mean they were given it to encourage membership and discourage membership.

Now, don't misunderstand me. I am not saying that that is what is even being attempted to be proven here, but you can't help but agree with me that the very point you want to prove might be used either way.

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, I think it would be very farfetched to say a company would enter into a binding agreement which goes on over a period of years of paying substantially 30 to 50 per cent more to its employees than is paid by other garment companies, that that company would do that just for the purpose of keeping out of the International.

Trial Examiner Batten: My remark simply was that it might be used either way. It might be worth that much to the company.

[fol. 864] Mr. Ingraham: I certainly think, Your Honor, that since Mr. Langsdale has gone into the question of the negotiations, and he said, "Now, do you think this was good for your people?" "Do you think that provision was good for the members of your union?" I think in view of that examination of this witness we are certainly entitled to show just what contract was obtained, and of course it will show that the company gave up a great deal. The company signed a contract—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Mr. Ingraham, you may go ahead on the basis you are now talking just as fully as you desire. In fact, I want you to show the negotiations, the bargaining, and the process that was gone through in arriving at it. You may go into that as fully as you care to, but I am not going to go into this matter from the standpoint of comparison with other companies here or any other place.

If you want to do this, I have no objection—of course the other attorneys may—I have no objection if you want to select, we will say, a dozen collective bargaining contracts by different unions and offer them here as a sample of the substance which is usually embodied in a collective bargaining agreement. But even then, I am not going to in this hearing attempt by comparison to go into all of those matters.

As far as this organization is concerned, the respondent, I want you to fully develop the idea of collective bargain[fol. 865] ing and the negotiations that were had in arriving at it.

Now, what they arrived at is none of the Board's concern, and none of my concern, if it was arrived at by an organization which was selected by the employees without any interference, coercion, or anything of the kind on the part of the respondent.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, may I state the intervener's position in connection with this matter?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Lane: It has been asserted here by Mr. Langsdale from time to time that he expects [of] offer evidence to establish that the intervener union is merely a sham union, that it is not in fact and under the law a representative of the employees. Now, in that connection the intervener asserts that the establishment of the results that were obtained in the contract which was entered into is an important point to be considered in determining the bona fideness of the intervener union, and in connection with determining the results that were obtained by that contract the prices and the minimum wages guaranteed by other garment concerns, the same industry, in the same community, is a point to be taken into consideration, so that a comparison of those figures will at least tend to show one of the results obtained by this contract.

Whether that result was obtained by collective bargaining or not would have to be determined from some other [fol. 866] means. But the comparison of the prices is an important factor to determine the result obtained by this union in the contract, and I submit it is therefore proper, and we will expect to offer evidence to show that the minimum wage guarantee obtained in our contract was substantially in excess of that obtained in other garment industries.

Trial Examiner Batten: I presume it would be well now to settle this question so that everyone will know, as I have done once or twice already, what my position is.

I want you to be prepared for it, although the evidence is not submitted. I can tell you now, Mr. Lane, I do not propose to go into that matter. The only reason I tell you that is this, that you may be making your preparation and preparing an offer of proof. I want to advise the attorneys now that I am not going to try this case by comparison with other plants in this town or in other towns. It is not material to the issues in this case.

I think the material thing is, as I told Mr. Ingraham, whether there were negotiations, whether there was collective bargaining, and whether it was arrived at freely by a representative of the employees and the management. If so, it wouldn't make any difference what the employees of the Donnelly Company were getting, whether $5 minimum, or half as much as any other plant in town. The employees, if they are free to bargain and contract, can [fol. 867] contract and bargain for anything they want, so you do not have to compare it, Mr. Lane, with somebody else's plant.

. . . . . .

[fol. 870] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, of course, one of the reasons we are going into this, although not the sole reason, is that Mr. Langsdale has taken the position that provisions in this contract were not good provisions for this union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Not with respect to the minimum wage.

Mr. Stottle: No, but with respect to other provisions. He said "I have negotiated hundreds of contracts but I have never seen a provision like this," or words to that effect.

Trial Examiner Batten: That particular provision you can examine this witness about all you please.

Mr. Stottle: I was referring to the principle thereof, that this was not a good contract for the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Irrespective of what Mr. Langsdale said, I am not receiving his statement as evidence, and you may proceed on the basis I have just stated; that is, you may go as far as you please into the nego- [fol. 871] tiating and the bargaining, and whether this was freely arrived at, and if it was, as I said a moment ago, they could have put in a minimum of $1.50 a week, and it would have been their own affair.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd, you had a contract on May 27th for $15 minimum; why didn't you leave that in?

A. Because there was a notice in the paper, I believe—and Mr. Tyler, I think, called our attention to it, and I think several members—more than several members of the union had mentioned that the I.L.G.W.U. was going to try to get a contract for us for $16, and we thought if we could get a contract for $16.50 we would give our members a higher guarantee, and we had better get it.

Q. Was that suggested to you by the company or by any officer or supervisor or employee of the company?

A. Oh, no. That originated from our side of the argument, and Mrs. Reed wasn't very much in favor of doing that.

Q. That was the matter you negotiated about with the company?

A. That is correct. She said that was a lot more than she had expected, and we had already asked for $15. I don't know just what she did but I know she took some time and did some investigating or telephoning, or something, to get in touch with her bookkeeping department to see if she should sign it with that clause in it.

Q. At lease, that matter was demanded by the union [fol. 872] and you eventually did get the increase?

A. That is right.

Q. Miss Todd, it is alleged in the complaint that the company caused a violent demonstration against Fern Sigler and others as a means of causing the employees either to join the Donnelly Garment Workers Union or to refrain from joining the International Union. I hand you here a paper which is marked Respondent's exhibit No. 1, and will ask you if that is one of the notices in the newspapers that you have referred to that caused the incident at the plant that you testified about.

(Whereupon, the newspaper clipping above referred to was marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 1" for identification.)

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as an improper question. She is merely handed the document and asked to identify it, and he tacks onto that question, "Was it something that caused the incident about Fern Sigler at the plant."

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Have you seen that before, or read it? A. Yes.

Q. At the time it was in the paper, is that it?

A. Yes, sir. That is very definitely what caused that disturbance that morning.

Mr. Leary: What was that?

The Witness: That article in the paper, Sylvia saying [fol. 873] she was going to represent the employees—

Mr. Leary: I move that the witness' statement be stricken out. I asked the reporter what the witness' answer was.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be stricken.

May I ask, Mr. Stottle, if you are merely offering this as an article that appeared in the paper—not as proof of the truth of anything stated therein, are you?

Mr. Stottle: No. I am offering it to show what caused that demonstration.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am asking you, are you offering this to prove or disprove any statements made in the article?

Mr. Stottle: Well, we will want to ask a question about that.

Mr. Leary: About what?

Mr. Stottle: About the statement that is contained in that clipping.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we had better proceed with the examination, Mr. Stottle.

* * * * * *

[fol. 874] By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Witness, this exhibit which has been shown to you, Respondent's exhibit 1, a copy of the newspaper item, which you have testified about in the Fern Sigler incident? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that, the printing of that article in the paper and the seeing of it by the employees, is that what caused the demonstration against Fern Sigler on the morning of April 23d?

Mr. Langsdale: Just a moment. I object to that question as calling for a conclusion on the part of this witness. [fol. 875] She can't tell what was in the minds of the other people who caused the demonstration, and it—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): Well, this hasn't been offered yet, has it?

Mr. Stottle: Well, I was trying to identify it sufficiently to offer it.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, you have identified it as an article that appeared in the newspaper. There has been no objection to that identification.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you offering it, Mr. Stottle, as yet?

Mr. Stottle: Well, I was going to await this answer and then offer it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think you should break it up. I think you should identify this first, although you can proceed any way you please, but I want to know when this is offered. I have some questions I want to ask about it.

Mr. Langsdale: I want to make some objections to it.

Mr. Stottle: Well, will the reporter read my last question?

(Whereupon, the last question was read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd, as I understand, this is an article that appeared in the Kansas City paper on the date shown there?

[fol. 876] A. Yes, sir.

Q. You read it at the time, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to that upon the ground it is calling for an improper conclusion from this witness, calling for her to pass upon the mental attitude, status and purpose of those who were engaged in that demonstration and not being in any way defense to the company's conduct, standing by and permitting it.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may testify, as far as she herself is concerned, as to what—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): It seems to me to be by way of confession—

A. (Interrupting) I think this article in the paper is what prompted that action that taken place down there that morning—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): I said you may testify as to your own feeling in the matter, as to what prompted you.

A. Yes. Well, I didn't take part in it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, then, if you didn't take part in it, are you able to testify as to what prompted the other people—

A. (Interrupting) From the reading of that article and the comments around, I don't know if that is permis- [fol. 877] sible or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: Go ahead, Mr. Stottle.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Did you hear other employees talking about this article that morning?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that the general topic of conversation among the employees at the plant that morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Stottle: Well, we now offer in evidence Respondent's Exhibit 1.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, as I understand it, Mr. Stottle, you are not offering this as any proof of truth of the statements contained in there; simply as a newspaper article which apparently some of the employees read.

Mr. Ingraham: But Your Honor, the next question will probably go into that. Miss Todd was present in court when Sylvia Hall testified as to the truth of that article, and she heard Sylvia Hull's testimony in that respect.

Trial Examiner Batten: But I mean as far as the newspaper article itself, Mr. Ingraham, is concerned, you certainly aren't offering that as being true or untrue?

Mr. Ingraham: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: Merely as a newspaper article which this witness read, and on the basis of what she heard from some of the other employees, they acted upon it.

[fol. 878] Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is the purpose of it thus far.

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received on that basis, then. You may proceed.

(The document heretofore marked as "Respondent's Exhibit No. 1" was received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 886] By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd, are you acquainted with Mr. Fitzgerald, employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he a member of your union at this time?

A. Not at the present time. Very recently he asked to be—to withdraw his membership as he had been made head of the advertising department.

Q. About when did that occur, do you know, that he was made, or given a promotion?

A. I think around the first of June, is my information.

Q. Around the first of June? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he has withdrawn, then, from the union since then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Todd, there has been some question raised here as to whether there was real bargaining between your [fol. 887] union and the company with regard to your union contracts. I will ask you to state if there were any provisions in the contracts that were favorable to the company, did you feel that they were more than offset by the provisions which you obtained favorable to the union?

Mr. Leary: I object to this, Mr. Examiner, as calling for a legal conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I object to it if he is asking her if any provisions with reference to wages and hours offset those provisions which prohibit collective bargaining as defined by the Wagner Act, because I don't think that those provisions can be offset, as the Examiner stated yesterday, by any wage agreement or any other agreement with reference to hours or conditions.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

* * * * * *

A. Yes, we felt like that is a good contract. We have certain things that we had to give—

Mr. Langsdale: (interrupting): I object to this part of the answer as voluntary and not responsive. Her an- [fol. 888] swer to the question was "Yes."

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Well, what was your feeling with regard to that matter, Miss Todd?

A. Well, we felt that we have had good working conditions and we have gained certain rights and certain things with that contract over what we had been receiving before, and we also had to allow the company to obtain certain privileges, but we felt that we did work out a good contract for our members of our union.

Q. I believe you testified that from the time the union was formed, you spent approximately a month before you were able to fully negotiate the first contract?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And during that time, were you working on the terms of that contract?

A. Yes, sir. We spent a great deal of time working out that contract before it was presented to the company.

Q. And at that time you didn't feel fully ready to go into the second contract at the time the first one was formed?

A. No, sir. We didn't think that we had had time enough to work out the details to draw up a satisfactory wage agreement. That was deferred until a later time.

Q. And then did you spend from May 27th until the signing of the second contract, June 22d, in gathering in- [fol. 889] formation and preparing the second contract to submit to the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Todd, I notice in yesterday's transcript that I asked you this question, which was not answered, and I now ask you the question over:

"Did you personally feel, Miss Todd, that you had been interferred with as far as you personally were concerned, as to what union you should join or belong to, by the officers of the company or any of its supervisory employees?"

A. I did not.

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner,—

Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I ask the answer be stricken until he has a chance to make his objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is your objection?

Mr. Leary: On the ground it calls for a conclusion and asks her for her opinion and mental state.

Mr. Langsdale: Instead of requiring her to state the facts.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I ruled on the same matter yesterday. The same ruling will stand.

[fol. 890] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, I don't believe you excluded the answer yesterday. It just got into a discussion and she didn't answer it. You did say you would reserve a ruling as to whether we should ask every one of the 1,200 employees the same question.

Trial Examiner Batten: My recollection is that yesterday I permitted her to answer that as far as she was personally concerned, but in doing so I wasn't passing on the general question as to whether every employee could be brought in to this hearing and asked the same questions.

Mr. Stottle: That is right. But after the ruling she didn't answer, and that is the reason I am asking it over.

Trial Examiner Batten: My same ruling would apply.

Mr. Langsdale: I understood you to say her answer might stand now.

Mr. Stottle: What was the answer, then? It was moved that it be stricken out.

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you read the answer, please?

(Thereupon the last answer was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, I will ask you whether by any act or deed or word to you, or any that you heard, any of the officers or supervisory employees of the company ever attempted to interfere with what union you should join or to coerce you into joining the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Mr. Leary: I make the same objection, Mr. Examiner.

[fol. 891] Trial Examiner Batten: Same ruling.

A. I never have heard any of them object. I never have had it brought to my attention.

Mr. Langsdale: I move that that be stricken as not responding to the question. She was asked about herself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you speaking of yourself personally?

A. I thought he asked—

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: That question applies to herself and no one else.

The Witness: I misinterpreted it, then.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Langsdale's comment, I think, is not correct. It asks if she heard anything of the kind.

Trial Examiner Batten: If she heard a supervisory employee or official say anything, is that correct?

Mr. Stottle: That is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: Which affected her joining.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think there is any question about its being clear.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did any supervisory employee or officer of the company ever say anything to you about that?

Is that correct, Mr. Stottle?

Mr. Stottle: Said to her, or that she heard.

[fol. 892] Trial Examiner Batten: Or that she heard them say?

Mr. Stottle: That is correct.

A. I never heard them say anything of that kind, and I still think I have a right to join any labor organization I want to.

Mr. Leary: I move that the latter portion of that, beginning with the words "I still" be stricken.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Were you given to understand in any way whatever that if you did join the International or if you didn't join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union that you might lose your job down there?

A. No, sir. I don't think I would lose my job for belonging to any labor organization.

Q. Miss Todd, have you received any money from the Donnelly Garment Company or any of its executive officers for use on behalf of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir, not a bit.

Q. Do you know whether the company has contributed any money toward the payment of the counsel for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Mr. Tyler, or his associates?

A. Well, I know they haven't in this respect, that we have paid every dime Mr. Tyler sent a statement for.

Q. By "we" you mean the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has taken care of that entire expense.

[fol. 893] Q. Miss Todd, you testified in answer to some question on direct examination that you wouldn't be afraid of being discharged for anything you did. I believe that is on page 446 of the record. Do you mean that literally, that you could do anything and not expect to be discharged?

A. What I meant was, I wouldn't expect to be discharged for any labor affiliation. I might do other things I would be discharged for.

Q. You had previously been discussing that question, membership in labor organizations, when you made that answer? A. That is as I remember it, yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 894] Mr. Stottle: Miss Todd, I hand you respondent's exhibit No. 2, and I will ask you if those are copies of the contracts made between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and other garment manufacturers.

(Thereupon the contracts above referred to were marked "Respondent's Exhibit No. 2:")

* * * * * *

[fol. 898] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, something was said in your direct examination about your using a filing cabinet of two drawers owned by the company, for your union papers. Did the company ever furnish you, or furnish the union, a filing cabinet, Miss Todd?

A. That was not furnished for us by the union. It was a file that had been there, that one, or there had been another one there, but there had always been a file at that desk, and I just used it.

Q. How long had it been there?

A. Well, it had been there, I don't—I couldn't tell you how long.

Q. Well, for a long time before the union was formed?

A. Oh, yes. Any time I used that desk, there had been some sort of a file with it.

Q. Did you ask anybody's permission to use that filing [fol. 899] cabinet? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you also mentioned a small file. To whom does that small file belong?

A. The small file belongs to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and contains our membership cards.

Q. Who paid for the small file?

A. The Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. On your direct examination, you didn't seem to be clear as to whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union purchased the cards used for the charter memberships, for memberships. Do you know now whether the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid for those cards or not?

A. Referring to our treasurer's book, I know that they did pay for them.

Mr. Tyler: I will ask that the reporter mark this paper for identification.

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Intervener's Exhibit No. 1" for identification.)

Mr. Langsdale: We have no objection.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What is the paper I hand you marked Intervener's Exhibit No. 1?

A. Well, it is the payment for the printing of those cards.

Q. Well, isn't it a bill for the payment? A. Yes, sir. [fol. 900] Q. For those cards?

A. Well, I should have said, a bill.

Mr. Tyler: We offer it in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(The document heretofore marked as "Intervener's Exhibit No. 1 was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Was that bill paid, Miss Todd?

A. Yes, sir. It is marked "Paid."

Q. By whom?

A. I paid that particular part right there.

Q. Now, in your direct examination you were asked about making a statement in a talk with Sylvia Hull on April 23, 1937, to the effect that "I wouldn't expect to join the union and get away with it."

Did you say anything like that in the incident in which Sylvia Hull or Fern Sigler—

Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): Wait a minute—

* * * * * *

[fol. 907] A. I was thinking of the feeling of the employees and the girls through the plant.

Q. Had the employees before that time manifested resentment against the actions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. Very definitely.

Q. In what ways?

A. One way was, we had been to talk to Mr. Gossett and Mr. Tyler previous to that time.

[fol. 908] Q. And had been to the police prior to that time?

A. And had been to the police. There had been a meeting of the employees, discussing what they could do in the way of protecting themselves against the actual physical attacks that were being threatened.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute, Miss Todd.

Trial Examiner Batten: Did anybody physically attack you?

A. Not personally.

Mr. Tyler: Had you or had you not seen notices in the papers of physical violence at the Gerney plant?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial and not proving any issue in this case, as to what occurred at the Gerney plant.

Mr. Tyler: I submit what is endeavored to be shown here is whether these people of their own volition desired to form their own labor union, and in so doing they are entitled to give reasons for taking that action. If the actions are probable they are persuasive; if they are not probable they are not persuasive. But they are entitled to give such reasons as they say they had to stay out of the International and join the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and if they did understand violence was being exerted by the International, that might well be a reason—whether it was true or not, if they so understood, that might well be a reason for their choice, and they are entitled to show good faith for their choice by citing [fol. 909] their reasons.

Mr. Langsdale: That speech might be proper at some other stage of the proceedings.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will forget about speeches. I will sustain the objection. As I said yesterday, I am not going into all of these rumors. If you have any evidence of anyone who was threatened personally, they may come up and testify to it personally and I will receive that testimony, but I am not in this hearing going into all of the rumors that fly around during an organizational campaign of unions.

Mr. Tyler: It is not the truth of the violence I am establishing. It is merely the reason these people had for staying out of the International and forming their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it is material for the purpose for which you have offered it.

Mr. Tyler: All right.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Had there been picketing of the Donnelly plant by the International before the incident to which you referred? A. There had been.

Q. On about what date did the International picket the Donnelly Garment plant?

A. That has been done a good many times, as far back as December, 1934, and I think again in the early part—January or February of 1935. And there has been [fol. 910] some other picketing since that time with—they had thrown pamphlets and circulars.

Q. Did you see this picketing you speak of yourself? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the banners or signs the pickets carried? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what they said on them?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a moment, Mr. Tyler. I do not intend to receive any of that, either, unless it is something which was unlawful or illegal. If these pickets picketed this plant in the way in which they are permitted to under the law and there was nothing unlawful about it which amounted to actual coercion, I do not intend to go into all of those matters.

Mr. Tyler: I expect to show, if the Court please, that these signs contained untruthful statements, and that that had some effect on the choice these people made.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest you embody that all in an offer of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: I wish to make a further objection to this question at this time. The question was asked her to explain her answer in the Fern Sigler incident that she wouldn't expect to join the union and get away with it. My objection to this picketing situation is that it is too remote to in any way throw any light on the Fern [fol. 911] Sigler incident, the picketing having taken place two years prior to the Fern Sigler incident.

Trial Examiner Batten: The only matter I am concerned about here is this—As far as its being remote is concerned, we might say that about a good many matters that have come up here or that might come up in the future.

My point is, if anything, Mr. Tyler, which you want to offer and show is actual coercion it should be received. Now, I can't see how you could possibly say that a thing which was being done such as picketing and these other matters, if they are lawful, could coerce anybody. They have a right to do them.

Now, if you intend to show that they did things which were unlawful, which amounted to coercion and not just a fight between the employees in one union and the employees in another union, which everybody knows occurs day in and day out all over the country—As I say, if you intend to go into actual coercion on this matter, then it ought to be in this record.

Mr. Tyler: I wish to say, we will show at a later period the acts of violence by the complainant in this case, and the threats that had been applied to these interveners, but I don't make my offer of evidence on that ground.

I submit to Your Honor that in showing what their real [fol. 912] choice of labor unions was they have a right to refer to any conduct, lawful or unlawful, of the International to show why they didn't want to join it. That is the vital crux. If the International had a habit of wearing red neckties and they didn't like red neckties and they didn't want to join the union for that reason, I submit they have a right to give their reasons for preferring their own union.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I say, I do not propose to go into it with this witness, and if that is your theory on this particular matter you may submit it as an offer of proof.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, you have stated every party has an exception without asking for it?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is right.

Mr. Stottle: In order that it might be clear, would the respondent be granted an exception to a question asked by the intervener when it is overruled?

Trial Examiner Batten: All parties receive exceptions to all adverse rulings.

Mr. Stottle: You might not deem it adverse to us.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not going to pass on that. If the parties deem it adverse you may have the exception. In other words, I do not intend to go through the record and determine whether it is adverse to certain parties or not.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Stottle asks if he could have an exception to Mr. Tyler's objection?

[fol. 913] Trial Examiner Batten: No. To the Examiner's ruling on the objection.

Mr. Langsdale: I would think if the respondent wishes an exception to an objection made for the intervener the respondent would have to join in the objection, because he has no objection that is overruled.

Mr. Stottle: I am not objecting to the intervener—I asked if I would have an exception to the Examiner's ruling, even though the ruling was made to a question asked by the intervener.

Trial Examiner Batten: I would say yes.

Mr. Langsdale: Even if he does not make an objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, if it is adverse.

Mr. Langsdale: The same applies, then, to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union where the Board may make an objection?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct.

Mr. Langsdale: We do not have to repeat that objection? We get an exception?

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct.

Mr. Tyler: I wish to make an offer of proof.

Intervener offers to prove by this witness that for months before the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the employees had seen numerous accounts of violence by the International against employees of other gar- [fol. 914] ment plants in Kansas City and had, many of them, seen such violence with their own eyes, and had, many of them if not all, heard reports of such violence, that they were in a state of almost hysteria from constantly overheard statements that the same tactics were to be applied to the employees at the Donnelly Garment Company, and that this was a reason which affected them in their choice as to forming their own union or joining the International or staying out of all unions.

Mr. Langsdale: May I ask Mr. Tyler a question about that offer?

Trial Examiner Batten: If an attorney makes an offer of proof—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): I want to know how to make my objection to it.

Mr. Tyler, is this offer of proof in connection with your effort to have this witness explain what she said as to the Fern Sigler incident?

Mr. Tyler: Partially.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, I object to it on the ground that it has no bearing whatever on the meaning of this witness' statement at the Sigler hearing.

Trial Examiner Batten: What is the balance of your reason?

Mr. Tyler: I submit it does, because she is saying of what she was apprehensive. She is entitled to say the [fol. 915] feeling of these employees was such that it would be very uncomfortable for her to join the union, and to say why the feeling of the employees was that way.

She is also entitled to testify along that line for the purpose of showing reasons for the forming of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

[fol. 916] Mr. Leary: I object to the offer of proof, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: The offer is denied.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, why did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ask for the check-off system in collecting dues? First, do you understand what the check-off system is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ask for the check-off system in the matter of collecting dues?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. Primarily, to save time and trouble of collecting the dues, and it was a small amount of expense to us. We were interested in saving that, also.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. How long after the organization of the union did they ask for the check-off system?

A. I believe that that was in August. I believe it became effective in August or September. I rather think it was August.

Q. Of what year? A. Of 1937.

[fol. 917] Q. Was any discussion of the matter of asking or demanding for that system had by the executive committee of the Union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you refer to that in the minutes, please?

A. I think you will find it in the meeting of June 3, 1937, not very complete, but there is some reference to them, and some conversation with—that is not referred to there with Mr. Ingraham, in regard to that.

By Trial Examiner:

Q. Is that the group meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What date was that?

A. June 3, 1937.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I hand you the minutes and ask you to locate the reference to which you refer? A. 9-18.

Q. Will you read, please,—

A. (Interrupting) Wait a minute. That isn't it. That was something else I had in mind. I remember so distinctly discussing that, and I thought it was in these minutes.

Q. Take your time and see if you can locate it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean there was some official action, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I believe there is a memorandum about the discussion, about that.

The Witness: There definitely was, and I thought it [fol. 918] was in here.

Trial Examiner Batten: I just thought if you had a note about it, it would save time.

Mr. Tyler: No, I don't have. I just believe it is in there.

The Witness: We discussed it several times and didn't know whether it would do us any good to ask for it or not.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you remember what date it was that you first took the matter up? It ought to be somewhere around that date.

A. Well, Mr. Batten, we wanted to do it from the time the thing was organized. We talked about it and that was where I thought that June 3d confused me, but I know our records show that. It didn't take place—I mean, it didn't actually become effective until about August.

Mr. Tyler: Well, May I suggest that we pass that and during the noon recess, [shw] may be able to find it; if she can't all right.

Trial Examiner Batten: All right.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, did you say that some discussion was had with Mr. Ingraham about the union getting a check-off system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just state what that discussion was, and how it came about.

[fol. 919] A. Well, we asked if the company would take the dues out of our checks, and Mr. Ingraham objected to it, but after discussing it the only way he would agree to do it was if each Individual member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union would sign a request that that be done, and I was asked yesterday to bring one of those cards, and I did bring it.

Q. Did each member of the union sign a request or authorization that his or her dues should be deducted from his pay check and paid directly to the treasurer of the union? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Tyler: I will ask, if Mr. Stottle will produce that, or if he can produce said request of the employees, that their dues be deducted from the pay check.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Tyler, I have just handed you the card which was furnished to me this morning and which I should have offered, and I neglected to do so.

Mr. Tyler: Well, do you have the signed requests of the employees?

Mr. Stottle: Well, I presume they are down at the company, but I don't have them here.

Trial Examiner Batten: I didn't understand that we wanted any signed one, did we?

The Witness: No.

Mr. Tyler: Well, it was my intention to ask for the signed—

[fol. 920] Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well that isn't what I asked for. I think I said a blank one, did I not?

Mr. Tyler: Well, I will ask the stenographer to mark this for the purpose of identification.

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Intervener's Exhibit No. 2" for identification.)

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What is the Intervener's Exhibit No. 2 which I hand you, Miss Todd?

A. It is a card that each member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union signed, requesting the dues to be taken out of their check.

Q. That is the form that each employee signed?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Tyler: I offer it in evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(The document heretofore marked as "Intervener's Exhibit No. 2" was received in evidence.)

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, Miss Todd, has the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid rent for the use of the room in the building occupied by the Donnelly Garment Company since the company became the lessee of that room? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has the union paid the rent for the chairs which are [fol. 921] used in those meetings when chairs are brought in in any number? A. Yes, sir, always.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I ask you, Miss Todd, what these papers are, marked Intervener's Exhibits 3 to 14, inclusive?

A. They are statements from the Kansas City Chair Rental Company for chairs that the union rented.

Q. Were those bills paid? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Tyler: I offer them in evidence.

[fol. 922] Mr. Langsdale: No objection as far as the union is concerned.

Mr. Leary: Well, I object to them, that they are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received.

(The documents heretofore marked as "Intervener's Exhibits Nos. 3 to 14, inclusive", were received in evidence.)

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, how has the union raised funds for its operation?

A. By our dues, some parties, and some special assessments.

Q. Has the employer directly or indirectly ever contributed money to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. The employer has never contributed one penny to the support of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Have the bills of Gossett, Ellis, Dietrich & Tyler for legal services furnished the union or the employees in any way separate from the union, been paid by the employees or by anyone else?

A. They have been paid by the employees.

Q. Now, in a general way, what expenses has the union had? I don't mean, to detail them dollar by dollar, but what general expenses have they had?

Mr. Langsdale: Pardon me, Mr. Examiner. I was asleep when that question and answer before this was had. [fol. 923] Would you mind stopping and reading it?

* * * * * *

Mr. Tyler: Now, Miss Todd, state in a general way what expenses the union has had during its existence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, might I say, are you going over every item?

Mr. Tyler: No.

Trial Examiner Batten: I thought if you were, she had better have her book.

Mr. Tyler: Well, I will hand her the book, anyway. It may refresh her recollection. I don't mean to read this book into the record, but I want her to tell generally what expenses.

A. Well, our largest expense has been our fees for our legal counsel, and we have had our—well, the general chairman's salary and our secretary and treasurer, and current expenses incidental to supplies, and if we have had parties we have had to pay the expense of that, and the rent of the auditorium or the room wherever we had our parties, and the chairs, things of that type.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What about printing of briefs?

A. We have paid for all the printing of briefs that have [fol. 924] been used in any of these court proceedings, and also, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid any of their members that it was necessary that they be at the hearing before Judge Miller. We paid that.

Q. What about traveling expenses?

A. We have paid any traveling expenses incurred by Mr. Tyler.

Q. What traveling expenses have you paid?

A. To St. Paul and to Washington, and I am inclined to think there was a trip to St. Louis. I am a little bit hazy about that. There have been other times, oh, for taxi fare for members of the union back and forth, gasoline books or something like that.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Miss Todd, pardon me. Does any member of the committee that incurs any expense, do they present that expense to the committee? Is that the—for reimbursement, I mean, generally speaking.

A: Generally speaking, I think sometimes. I know, myself, I don't always do it, and I know Jack drives his car and don't always do it. Sometimes we do. We should always do it, I guess. On the whole, we take care of it, if it is anything of any consequence. We might run down, you know, might run an errand, not do it on one errand.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Has the union ever been reimbursed by the employer directly or indirectly for any of those sums they spent?

[fol. 925] A. We have never received a penny from outside help from the company or anybody?

Q. Well, have they ever made any promise or agreement or suggestion that some day they would reimburse you?

A. Never one.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Well, how much are the dues in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, Miss Todd?

A. 25 cents a month.

Q. Have you had assessments in the union besides the dues? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell the court how many assessments and in what amounts.

A. I believe we have had one of a dollar some time the early part of the formation of our union. I say, early. I think I mean within—this book will show it—but I think it was within the first six or seven months, or so, and during the hearing before Judge Miller it was voted and we decided by the majority to donate $2 apiece.

[fol. 926] Q. That is the—what other income have you had besides dues and assessments?

A. Well, we have had some parties that we have made a little money off of from time to time.

Q. Would that income be shown in the treasurer's book?

A. All of our financial statements are in there; anything that we have made in the way of money is in there; any bills that we have made, I think are in there.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, during your membership on the executive committee of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, has that committee received and handled complaints of employees about their wages or their treatment or their hours or their holidays? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would your memory be refreshed as to some of those complaints if you were shown written records of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there written records kept of complaints made by employees?

A. The greatest proportion, no. We do keep some of them.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 929] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, can you give us some idea of the percentage of complaints handled which were in writing, and the percentage which were never put in writing?

A. The largest percentage were never put in writing.

Q. Now, will you state in the record some of the complaints you can remember which were not put in writing? Describe them and tell what was done with them.

A. Well, I recall Della Flannery in the pinking department objected to the way our work was being distributed, which I talked to Mr. Baty about and he talked to the instructor, and I talked to her, also, and it was adjusted satisfactorily.

I also have in mind a complaint of Virginia Dare about prices on first part work that she was doing, that she felt was low. That was taken up and adjusted. The price was raised.

Q. Who was it taken up with?

A. I believe that one was taken up with Mrs. Nichols.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What complaint was that?

A. About a price on her first part, on the work that she was doing that was too low.

[fol. 930] Q. I mean, whose complaint was it?

A. Virginia Dare.

Mr. Tyler: And was any relief secured for Virginia Dare?

A. I stated that the price was raised, yes.

I remember a complaint of Alphonso Staab. He wanted to be returned to the cutting department. That was taken up with Mr. Baty and was taken care of. He was not returned immediately, but he was returned as soon as it could be handled with the work that he was doing.

The complaint of Edith—Edna Troutman, and Edna Davis, about their vacations. They felt they were entitled to vacations. That was adjusted and they were given their vacations.

That makes me think, in 1938, there was some complaint from several people about not receiving their vacation of two weeks. In some instances, a few, it might have been one week that they were entitled to, and I took that up very thoroughly with Mr. Baty, and had discussed—the committee had discussed it, too, and Mr. Baty had their records gone over and there was some forty or forty-three people who received vacations that they had not previously been told they were entitled to.

Q. Was that as a result of taking up the matter by the committee with Mr. Baty?

A. Absolutely. I don't believe that the committee as a whole took that up with Mr. Baty. We discussed it, but [fol. 931] I think I talked to Mr. Baty about it myself.

Paul Sterner wanted a change of work and that was taken up with the company and he was changed to another position.

[fol. 932] Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. These are all other than the ones that are in writing; is that it?

A. Yes. Ruby Lago complaining about a price on the operation that she was doing which we called joining, and that was raised.

Effie Weigand complained about skirts she was working on being low. That was raised.

Don Lytle had been for some months folding boxes and wanting to get into the cutting department. That was discussed with Mr. Batty and arrangements were made for him to be placed in the cutting department.

I remember a pinking operation that Nellie Stites was complaining about being too low, which was raised.

. . . . . .

[fol. 933-934] Mr. Ingraham: I would like the record to show, Your Honor, that respondent has produced the cards of the employees authorizing the company to deduct 25 cents a month from their wages and turn it over to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I understand it, those are here for anyone's inspection.

Mr: Langsdale: May I ask a question?

Mr. Ingraham: Certainly.

Mr. Langsdale: Was this action unanimous?

Mr. Ingraham: We have a card from everybody from whose wages we have deducted 25 cents.

Mr. Langsdale: Has anyone refused to sign it?

Mr. Ingraham: I can't say.

The Witness: Do you want me to answer that?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes.

A. Everybody has been told, Mr. Langsdale, they didn't have to pay their dues that way.

[fol. 935] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. That is not the question. Did everybody sign it?

A. With the exception of the salesmen. The company did not agree to take the dues out of the salesmen's checks.

Q. But everyone that the company did agree to take dues from signed the card?

A. Yes, as far as I know. There might be—

Mr. Ingraham: They signed the cards before the company turned over any money or agreed to turn it over?

A. Absolutely, yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think, as long as they are in here, anyone may inspect them and go over them, and then if there are any questions—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) My only thought was, I don't care to inspect them if I have an answer that everybody signed the cards.

The Witness: Yes, everybody did.

Trial Examiner Batten: With the exception of the salesmen?

A. With the exception of the salesmen. The company refused to take theirs out of their checks. They paid theirs in cash.

Trial Examiner Batten: We will proceed.

Mr. Tyler: Miss Todd, at the time of adjournment you were repeating certain oral complaints of employees which [fol. 936] had been handled by the committee. Can you recall other complaints which were oral and not written?

A. Naomi Osipik wasn't satisfied to work continuously in the department where she was and wanted to be transferred. We were able to get a transfer for her to the department where they make models.

I remember that Ben James, in the cutting department, wanted an increase in salary. That was taken up with the company and he received an increase.

And I remember a complaint that Ola Jewett made about some prices on some work she was doing, and that was raised.

I remember a complaint rather recently of one of the operators on a button machine, Laura Lee Royce, who asked to have her guarantee lowered. I talked to her and told her I didn't think that was necessary. She had been ill and was out for several weeks. She said, well, she wanted it lowered anyway; if I didn't want it lowered she would go down and talk to Mr. Baty or somebody, because she didn't feel she was up to her earning capacity and didn't want to feel she was having to push herself in any way.

Then, a complaint that was made against one of the instructors, that she was being harsh in her manner of talking to the operators, and there was quite a little discussion about that. I remember at two meetings the committee discussed it, and it was taken up with Mr. Baty. [fol. 937] I know he reprimanded her and got results from that reprimand.

Q. Do you remember any oral complaint about the day before Decoration Day?

A. Yes. There had been a number of requests that the girls would like—some of them would like to be off Decoration Day and work the Saturday previous to Decoration Day. They became so numerous that we talked to Mr. Baty about that and asked him—well, the committee discussed it, also, at one of their meetings, about whether we would be justified in asking to trade Monday for Saturday.

Q. What Monday and what Saturday are you talking about?

A. The Monday before Decoration Day, trade it for the Saturday previous to that Monday so that it would give us a holiday, we would be off on Monday and Tuesday, three days there together. And the committee thought it was all right, if the majority of them wanted to do it. We asked Mr. Baty if he would do that. We got into some discussion but—oh, I think probably 10 or 12 girls in one department, because they said they didn't want to do that. It was settled in a satisfactory manner. There got to be quite a little discussion there about it, but it was decided that the majority would rule, and everybody had an opportunity to express their desire as to whether they preferred to trade Monday for the previous Saturday or not.

We did have those three days holiday, and it was decided [fol. 938] by the majority expressing their desire to do that.

Then— Did I mention Nell Stites before lunch?

Q. Yes. Were there other oral complaints handled by the committee which you do not recall by name or circumstances at this time?

A. Yes. There have been numerous--many complaints. I don't just recall all of the names of them right now. I know there were a great many requests that their guarantee be raised and that they be moved into another group, into a higher group.

One of those, I remember, was Mabel Bracey. She thought her guarantee should be raised from $22.50 to $25.60. That was discussed with Mr. Baty and it was taken care of.

Q. Has the committee taken any part in any requests or applications of employees for an increase in either classification or pay?

A. I got some information out of my desk here—

Q. Has the union taken any part in that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you name instances, if any, in which the union was successful in securing a raise in classification or a raise in pay for members?

A. There was one instance where there were 15 or 20 taken care of at one time. There are numerous instances where individuals have been taken care of. I can remember some, and I can give them to you if I can refer to this [fol. 939] sheet of paper.

Q. Is that a memorandum of your own?

A. Yes.

[fol. 940] Q. Will you give it, please.

A. Edna Rawlings—all of these are requests that have come to some member of the committee and have been taken up with the company and satisfactorily adjusted. Edna Rawlings. Her guarantee was raised to $25.60. Ethel Carpenter was raised to $25.60. Dorothy Deitz, her name now is Sharp—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. (Interrupting) Dorothy what?

A. Dorothy Deitz Sharp, D-e-i-t-z, was raised to $22.50. Inez Engle was raised to $22.50. All of these are guarantees that were raised that I am going to name, that are satisfied, that were raised to $22.50. May Ingold, Ann Murray, Opal Simmons, Pearl Boswork, Ruth Lowes, Regina Platner, Katherine Sutulovich, Laura Hills. I have one here, I have E. Cameron. I think her name is Elsie.

I get her confused with Edith Coll. Pearl Black, Lois Kessinger, Tibitha Miller, Mary Cox, Pearl Hall, Virginia Dare, Katherine Hardsau, Laura Hanson, Marie E. Richardson, Allie Rieman, Verna Harrison was handled in the same manner and raised to $22.50. Reba Hisel was raised from $16.50 to $18. Ellen Burton was raised to $20. Bessie Maxwell to $20. In fact, all of the following are to $20: Nina Stewart, Mary Warth, Rubie Clayton, Mary Crume, Evelyn Lewis, Ruth Davidson.

I would like to say this is not all of them, but these are notations that I have made of various kinds.

Q. Miss Todd, the wage agreement has some provision [fol. 941] to the effect that 40 per cent of the operators are guaranteed $25.60?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think my figures are correct. I want to ask you whether you do any checking or in any way check the situation to see that this guarantee by the company is carried out, that 40 per cent do get as much as $25.60?

A. I do check that each week, and if they are not correct, they are adjusted so that that is true.

Mr. Tyler: I ask the stenographer to mark the papers I hand him, being twenty-nine sheets of paper labeled, each labeled "Complaint form", Intervener's Exhibit 15-A, B, C, and so forth, on to the twenty-ninth sheet, making AA the second time around.

Trial Examiner Batten: They all pertain to the same thing?

Mr. Tyler: Yes. They are all about complaints.

(Thereupon, the documents above referred to were marked as "Intervener's Exhibits Nos. 15 to 15-BB" for identification.)

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What are these papers which have just been marked by the stenographer, which I hand you, Miss Todd?

A. They are complaints or adjustments of complaints made by members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Included in them are some responses by the company [fol. 942] to complaints?

A. That is correct.

Q. I will ask you if the printed form on them is the form supplied by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for the use of its members making complaints?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Tyler: I offer them in evidence.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received.

(The documents heretofore marked as "Intervener's Exhibits Nos. 15 to 15-BB, inclusive" were received in evidence.)

Mr. Tyler: On the sheets marked "complaint form", I understand that the printing is the form of complaint prepared by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union for the use of its employees who want to make complaints. Is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 944] Q. Are there any of them in which more than one employee joined in a complaint?

A. Yes, sir. The one on the top is by three employees.

Q. Will you point out others and give the names of others joining in the complaint where there are more than one?

A. There is one here that has several prices on it that needed to be changed. Those were made by different people, but I took that up with Mrs. Nichols personally and these were the changes that were made. Now, there is another sheet here—

* * * * * *

[fol. 945] Q. Are these all of the written complaints, as far as you know, that have been filed with the committee by employees?

[fol. 946] A. They are the only ones I have ever known anything about.

Q. Why didn't you have more complaints?

Mr. Leary: Just a minute.

A. We did have more complaints.

Mr. Leary: I object to that as being immaterial.

Mr. Tyler: I think she has a right to—They are criticizing us on the theory that it wasn't a real union because there were no complaints. I think the witness has a right to say whether there were a few or whether there were many.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, you do not mean that that is a proper question.

Mr. Leary: It calls for a conclusion, also.

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I think it is a proper question. If there were few complaints or many complaints, I think she should say—

Mr. Langsdale: How could she know the mental attitude of 1,300 people about signing or not signing complaints?

Trial Examiner Batten: She may say why she thinks there were not any more. Of course, I suppose first we will have to determine, should there have been some more, and if not, why not?

Mr. Tyler: I don't think we have come to that as yet, Your Honor.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer the question. [fol. 947] A. Well, there were more complaints. I didn't say there were not. There might be more.

I think we have a pretty good contract, and I don't think to just ask for something unreasonable— We do try to ask for the thing that is right and the thing we think we are entitled to, and try to get it.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. But what has that to do with why you didn't get more complaints?

A. I think we have already established a good setup in our salaries and piecework prices we are not apt to have as many as if we just had a very small guarantee.

Q. In other words, you think that would indicate the majority of the employees are very well satisfied?

A. In most instances—in a great many instances. I don't know whether that is just the word I should use. But, on the whole, we have a good contract. We have higher guarantees than they have around town.

Q. Does that stop anybody from wanting more?

A. It doesn't, but it does make us not want to be unreasonable and ask for something we couldn't possibly get. We have already created a condition by our contract whereby we have more than similar industries in Kansas City.

Q. Do you think on that basis you should forever be satisfied, then, as long as you are one jump ahead of somebody else?

A. I don't think we would forever be satisfied, no, sir.

[fol. 948] Q. Then, how much has that to do with it?

A. We have worked out an agreement there that is above the average in Kansas City, and in doing that we are not possibly creating a thing that makes somebody want something more, more, more, that is unreasonable.

Q. Suppose all of the other shops in Kansas City beginning the first of next month reduced their wages 50 percent, do you think you should agree to reduce yours 25 percent so you do not get too far away from them?

A. I don't think we would.

Q. Then, what relationship is there between them? Isn't it a question of what you produce and how our plant operates, and so forth, that should govern what you get?

A. It does. We have always, Mr. Batten, had good wages at the Donnelly Garment Company. We did get some decided increases in our contract—

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment. I want you to tell me what you mean by "good." How do you determine what is good?

A. I think in a community where—

Q. (Interrupting) Let's forget all about the community. You are putting this entirely on a basis of comparison. Outside of that point, what point do you mean by "good"?

A. They are away above the average—

Q. (Interrupting) I say, let's forget all about comparisons. On any other basis are they good?

[fol. 949] Mr. Tyler: If the Examiner please, I submit she cannot give an opinion as to whether the wages are good without in some way comparing them with others.

Trial Examiner Batten: Then, she should say so. I am asking her if on any other basis outside of comparison they are good. I am trying to find out if that is the only basis for determining if they are good.

A. No. I think the contract and the salaries the employees receive will speak for themselves, aside from anything else. We know that they are good.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. What other elements besides prices paid in other garment factories did you consider in determining what wages you should ask for in this contract, if any?

A. Well, we were trying to give some consideration to the living conditions, what we had to have to live on. In this community it may not cost us as much to live as in some other community; it may cost more than in some other community. We tried to give thought to those things, and we tried to get as much as we thought was reasonable to get, and we did get in some instances more than Mrs. Reed cared to give.

Q. Did you or did you not give consideration to general business conditions in the garment industry?

A. We tried to, yes, sir. We all have friends that are in the garment industry and know in substance, not in detail, what they are making. You have a general knowl- [fol. 950] edge of that from one industry to another when you are working in an industry of this kind.

Q. Did you or did you not give any consideration to the capacity of this particular company, your employer, to pay wages?

A. We felt they were able to pay higher wages, and that is why we asked for higher wages.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether it has been announced in meetings of the union that the employees were expected to present their complaints, if they had complaints, to the committee of the union? Has that ever been announced at the meetings?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as a self-serving statement of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: If she remembers; she may testify.

A. I think I am safe in saying we never have a meeting that that is not mentioned, if they have complaints to take them to the individual or anybody but please to let us know about them. If they have complaints and don't tell us there is nothing the committee can do about it.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Have the minutes of the meetings of either the union or the executive committee been "doctored"?

A. No, sir.

Q. In whose custody have those minutes been since they were originally prepared?

[fol. 951] A. In most instances, Marjorie Green's, or the secretary, when she is typing them—she has been the secretary all of the time. And, I have had them. Since this trial has been going on they were down for about 20 hours—the International Union, the accountants had them going over them, and they have been taken to Mr. Tyler's office, and the Labor Board has used them, and they have been at the photographer's—they have been a good many places.

Q. It is not your pretense or statement that these minutes are a word-for-word account of every word spoken in any of the meetings, is it? A. Not by any means.

[fol. 951] Q. What do the minutes represent?

A. They just represent—

Mr. Leary: (Interrupting) I object, Mr. Examiner. There has been no showing she took these minutes. I think this question might be proper of the person who took them. I can refer the Examiner to the fact that quotation marks are used almost throughout the minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't see that this witness is qualified to answer the question. In the first place, this witness is not the officer of the union responsible for these minutes. Unless she is definitely qualified I do not see how she can answer the question. If the secretary of [fol. 952] the organization, the person who took them—

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Were or were not these minutes submitted to the executive committee after they were written? Did the executive committee go over them after they were written?

A. In most instances; not in every instance.

Q. Were you present at these meetings that are written up in these minutes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. From examining the minutes after they were submitted to the executive committee, and from your knowledge by attending these meetings, and from the instructions of the executive committee about taking minutes, can you tell the Court what these minutes purport to be, as to whether they are a word-for-word report of everything that was said, or what are they?

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner on the same ground.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may tell what you think they are, as far as you know.

A. I know they are not word-for-word, Mr. Batten. In some instances—

* * * * * * *

[fol. 953] Mr. Tyler: I submit neither these minutes or the minutes of a similar body purport to be more than a substance of what action was taken.

Trial Examiner Batten: Is it your position, Mr. Tyler, that these in substance relate any action that was taken?

Mr. Tyler: That is my position. In substance they relate the action that was taken.

Trial Examiner Batten: Your question of the witness merely relates to whether it was a verbatim report; is that it?

Mr. Tyler: Yes. Our opponents suggest these minutes are incorrect in that they purport to be a word-for-word account, and they do not.

Trial Examiner Batten: These are not a verbatim report of everything that was said at the meetings?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: May I suggest to the Examiner, a very [fol. 954] large percent of these minutes are in quotation marks. Would you want to qualify that question?

Trial Examiner Batten: If you will wait a moment, Mr. Langsdale—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. As far as you know, they in substance show what action and what general subjects were discussed at the meetings; is that it?

A. Mr. Batten, I can't say that they do. In some instances I know they are the things that happen at some of these meetings. Here is one in my hand I can tell you very definitely about.

[fol. 955] Q. Well, then, you can't even say that they in substance represent—

A. (Interrupting). I do say in substance they do. I know there are things that are not even mentioned that are talked about at these meetings.

Q. I know, talked about, but matters of any importance that were passed upon or discussed, at least, it is mentioned in these minutes?

A. Any motions that were made, and so forth, those are very definitely here. I don't recall leaving any of those out.

Q. And official actions you took are recorded in the minutes? A. That is correct.

Q. So that the other might be argument, discussion, pro and con? A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Langsdale referred to certain matters which have quotation marks. Wherever there are quotation marks, I presume there is no question about that statement, is there?

A. Yes; I don't know. I don't see one just this minute. Well, yes, I do, right here in this one. I know there is something very definite should be in this thing that is here.

Q. I say, are the things here in quotation marks as far as they go correct?

[fol. 956] A. I don't feel that I could say yes without reading every one of them.

Q. Well, then, you better start out reading them, because we got to find out something about these minutes. They are either worth something or nothing.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to her answering the question upon the ground that she has already, by her answer, shown she is not qualified to answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think I shall let her go ahead and start out, Mr. Langsdale. These minutes mean something or don't mean anything. We might as well find out.

Mr. Tyler: May we defer the matter of her reading them more carefully until there is a recess or until this evening? It would take her, I expect, an hour or two to read them.

Mr. Langsdale: My experience is, I would say it would take nine hours.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I am perfectly agreeable, Mr. Tyler, if you want to have Miss Todd take your copy of those and go over them. I won't say that it even has to be done by tomorrow, but I would like to have her go over them carefully so she can make some sort of a statement. That is, the minutes either in substance are correct, or she has said they are correct, where there are motions, or they are correct where there are quotations. In other words, if she goes over them in the next day or two, [fol. 957] she can get some kind of an idea what they are.

Mr. Tyler: We agree to do that.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, wouldn't it be better to have the person who took this down testify about whether or not they contain what was done? Of course, I can see how her testimony would have some value. She was there, to some of them, not all of them, but the stenographer who claims to have taken down a shorthand record of everything that was done would be the best witness to testify as to whether or not these records show—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): I would like to have Miss Todd look them over and take sufficient time so that she can come in here and say definitely just what those minutes are or what they mean. She certainly doesn't know now.

Mr. Langsdale: My point is that Miss Green could give us a more valuable statement about that.

Trial Examiner Batten: I have no objection to getting Miss Green's statement, but I would like to have Miss Todd's statement, too, as to what she thinks they mean.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, was there any instance, to the best of your knowledge, or any occasion, to the best of your knowledge, when events that actually happened at any meeting was kept out of these minutes because it was feared they might be damaging to the union? A. No, sir.

[fol. 958] Q. Was there any instance or occasion, to the best of your knowledge, when things that did not happen were put into the minutes with the idea that it might be helpful to the union? A. No, sir.

Q. What advantage, if any, Miss Todd, did the Donnelly Garment Workers' employees gain by the wage agreement and the contract which they didn't have before the wage agreement and the contract were adopted?

Mr. Leary: Now, I object to that as calling for a conclusion, Mr. Examiner. The documents will speak for themselves.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, we haven't any document here showing what they were getting before.

Mr. Leary: Well, those are the payroll records of the company and I think those are the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think she may go ahead and answer.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 960] Mr. Tyler: You may answer, Miss Todd.

A. Well, we established in this articles of agreement, this $15 minimum was established.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, the important thing is not what you established. What was the minimum before? What was the situation in this plant before you ever had a contract?

A. In some instances some employees had been guaranteed $15. It was not my knowledge that all of them had been guaranteed nothing less than $15.

Mr. Tyler: Well, Miss Todd, can't you take certain paragraphs and say what the situation before this contract was and what it is since the contract, paragraph by paragraph, in cases where you know of a change?

A. Well, our operators had a guarantee at that time of $15, but time workers didn't have a definite guarantee, or a definite minimum at all, and that is established in this paragraph 2 of this working agreement.

Mr. Langsdale: Who was that that didn't have any [fol. 961] guarantee?

Trial Examiner Batten: The time worker did not.

A. (Continuing) I think the time workers did not. It was not my impression that they did have.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 966] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, what was the situation before the contract?

A. The situation before had been that the employer had the right to increase or reduce his working force, but this contract gives the union also the right to interfere if he feels so—if we feel that some one is being allowed to go unnecessarily.

Q. You mean because of the union activity?

A. Well, no, not necessarily that. We certainly would do that if they were being let go because of union activity, but if they are being let go and we felt it was not right, the union still has the right to go to the employer and see if these people couldn't be retained.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, I object to that answer and ask that it be stricken out as an explanation for paragraph 14, because there isn't anything in paragraph 14 upon which to [fol. 967] base that statement or conclusion, not anything. That says, "The employer shall have the right to discharge."

Trial Examiner Batten: I was just getting ready to ask another question or two, but in view of your motion I will have it stricken. I was going into that some more. You may proceed.

[fol. 969] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, Miss Todd, will you take the wage agreement and without—if you can, without reading out loud the whole agreement, read the paragraph to yourself, and when you have knowledge of any change produced by that wage agreement, state what the fact was before and what the fact was after the execution of that wage agreement in such paragraphs as you have knowledge of any change, if there was any.

A. The second paragraph of this agreement calls for five holidays, which are allowed all of the employees, and previous to this time the piece worker had not been paid for the holidays.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. That is the supplemental agreement?

A. Yes, sir, which is approximately—it is equivalent of a week's work during the year.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. I don't think your answer is plain. Do you mean it gives five holidays which shall be allowed with pay?

A. Shall be recognized, all workers shall be paid for these holidays.

Q. Now, what was the status before?

A. Piece workers had not received these days, these holidays, with pay. Piece workers "All workers shall be [fol. 970] paid for these holidays" is the way this contract reads, and is the way it has been executed, piece workers on the same basis as paid vacations, and if I didn't make [myself] clear, what I am trying to say is that piece workers had never received the five days vacation during the year with pay, which is the equivalent to them of a week's work.

This Group 1 operators gives these operators a much higher guarantee than they had ever been guaranteed before. Forty per cent of them receiving—

Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): Now, I object to that answer as a conclusion upon the part of the witness. The evidence ought to be as to what the increase is.

Mr. Tyler: I think it is desirable that she should give the figures as she knows them, but I think that if she can say as a fact that the figures are higher, she is entitled to state that, even if she can't give the figures.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think it means a thing in the way she answered, much higher. If she doesn't know, let's get somebody here that does. I mean, there is no use trying to have a witness answer questions that they can't answer. Now, surely there is somebody in the organization or with the respondent who could very definitely state, Mr. Tyler.

The Witness: I thought I stated, Mr. Batten, that we had received a $15 guarantee. Now, this supplemental con- [fol. 971] tract calls for a $16.50 minimum guarantee. This Group 1 raises this percentage of these operators to $25.60 for 40 hours, in this Group 1 operators receive a $25.60 guarantee as a minimum.

Trial Examiner Batten: Instead of what?

A. Instead of $16.50, instead of in this contract, and previous to this contract, they had not had a guarantee of over $15.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Do you mean there was no guarantee applying specially to that group of operators before this wage agreement was signed?

A. Before this wage agreement was executed, we had a minimum of $15.

Q. But no especial minimum for that particular group of operators?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. Then there was established a definite thing for all the employees to receive a minimum of $15 in this wage agreement. Now, this supplemental agreement established the $16.50, which we gained after some—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Well, now, you have told us that, Miss Todd.

A. (Continuing) Then, this Group 1, 40 per cent of them were guaranteed as a minimum, $25.60.

[fol. 972] Mr. Langsdale: $25.60?

A. Forty per cent, $25.60 per week of 40 hours; 30 per cent in that same group were guaranteed $22.50, and 30 per cent of them were guaranteed $22.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Now, Miss Todd, was it a fact that before this supplemental agreement went into effect, that they were all, the only guarantee any of them had was that flat minimum of $15 a week?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. Group 2 operators, 40 per cent of the operators shall receive a minimum of $20, and all the way through this, Mr. Batten, they had never had a guarantee of over $15 previous to this time.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you have any idea how much the payroll shows these same people actually made over a period of, say, 5 years, or 2 years before this contract? Do you have any of that information?

A. No, Mr. Batten, I couldn't give you that information.

Q. In other words, you wouldn't know whether by putting the guarantee in it actually meant more money to them or not?

A. Yes, I do. At the time that we were working on this agreement, we had a great deal of information from the company as to what people had been receiving in the [fol. 973] way of salaries, piece workers and time workers, too, but to tell you now just what those dollars and cents were, I don't think I could do that.

Q. But your recollection is that this is actually, this minimum has actually meant more to these people than the same groups' average wage we will say for 5 years before the contract was signed or 1 year, we will say?

A. Yes, I think so, Mr. Batten, because in this instance, if previous to that time they only had a guarantee of $15 and something happened to them, now, they should fall down below their earnings—

Q. (Interrupting) I am talking about what they actually earned when they were working.

A. Now, a lot of these people—

Q. (Interrupting) In other words, does the guarantee mean anything if they already made more than that?

A. Well, yes, I think it does.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to her answer for the reason that she shows she has no definite information and the payrolls themselves are the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I admit they are the best evidence, but they are not here at the present time.

Mr. Langsdale. We can get them here. They are available.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I presume if proper [fol. 974] steps are taken, I presume they would be brought here.

Mr. Tyler: I suggest that regardless of the facts that it did on the whole improve the actual income of these people, the mere fact that a guarantee is in existence for 2 years, which the company couldn't lower, existed, was an advantage in itself, even if it didn't raise the wages.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I didn't mean to imply, Mr. Tyler, it didn't.

Mr. Tyler: Well, I got your impression that you felt it was worthless unless they could show an actual increase in dollars and cents.

Trial Examiner Batten: No, I didn't mean to intimate such a thing.

Mr. Tyler: My mistake.

* * * * * *

[fol. 976] Mr. Tyler: Miss Todd, will you proceed with any other paragraphs in the wage agreement in which changes were accomplished by the wage agreement, and point out what the changes were?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, may I ask a question about this, please?

Mr. Tyler: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are going into all of these piece rates and getting a statement here from a person who apparently has not had access to all of the company's records. Supposing these questions are asked, and you have to bring in here all of these piece rates and time studies in connection with them, and just how they were arrived at, and check up all of these back payrolls, I am perfectly willing to do it, if you think this is of sufficient value to you.

Mr. Tyler: I do, Your Honor. I do not believe this witness can testify as to the actual number of dollars increase that was received, but I think she was in the price fixing department, she did work on this committee for years, she made investigations, and in most cases I think she knows of her own knowledge that rates of pay of certain classes were increased, and I think it is important to have that in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am perfectly willing, as I [fol. 977] said a moment ago. It is material evidence on this contract.

Mr. Tyler: I think in most cases she knows of her own knowledge the changes, and I think it important that it be in the record.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may go ahead, Miss Todd.

A. Group 2 operators, 40 percent of these people were given a guarantee of $20 a week; 30 percent, $18; and 30 percent, $18.60. Group 3, 40 percent were given a guarantee of $18, and the remainder, $16.50.

Group 4, which—

Mr. Tyler: (Interrupting) Just a minute, Miss Todd. Do you mean by your testimony that in each case where you recite those guarantees, that before the wage agreement the parties you mentioned had no guarantee except the $15 flat minimum? Is that the meaning of your testimony?

A. That is correct. Then, group 4, that we considered beginners were guaranteed the minimum of $16.50. The classification of beginners—

Mr. Langsdale: (Interrupting) Everybody in group 4?

A. Yes. Those people are considered beginners. And this period does not extend longer than 12 weeks.

The hand ironers are classified in groups the same as the operators, and— I think I can look through this very quickly, these in these different groups. They are getting more now than they were getting previous to the contract.

[fol. 978] By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Would your statement be with respect to all of the classifications mentioned? In other words, they now have a guarantee which amounts to more than the $15 guarantee before there was a contract; is that it?

A. Yes, sir. The hand ironers, 40 percent of that group, $25.60; 30 percent, $22.60; 30 percent, $20. Group 2, 40 percent of them were guaranteed $20; 30 percent, $18; 30 percent $16.50; all of which was higher than they had been guaranteed previously. Group 3, 40 percent were guaranteed $18; the remainder, $16.50.

The beginners, hand ironers, were guaranteed $16.50, the same as the operators.

The folders, who had previously had a guarantee not as high as this, were guaranteed, 40 percent of them, $20, and the remainder of them $18. Group 2, 40 percent of them, $18; the remainder, $16.50.

The beginners, folders, the same as the other groups, were guaranteed $16.50.

In our examiners' group, they were definitely given a raise. This contract calls for 21 and $18, which was a raise over what they had been guaranteed.

Q. What had they been guaranteed?

A. I don't know that they had a guarantee, but I know they had been receiving that much money.

[fol. 979] By Mr. Langsdale: Examiners, you say?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Leary: You mean inspectors by the word "examiners," also?

A. Yes, sir. In the cutting department there were increases there of approximately $2.50 a week.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean they are paid by the week?

A. They were increased $2.50 a week, yes, sir. Cutters are paid by the week.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Langsdale: They are what workers?

A. Cutters. And there is an increase here in the stretchers. As I remember it, that is $2 or $2.50 a week there.

In the dividing department, there is an increase there of —Mr. Batten, I am not positive about that. As I remember, it was $1.50 to $2.50 a week.

[fol. 980] Trial Examiner Batten: If you are not positive about it you had better not testify about it.

The Witness: I am not. There is an increase there; I don't recall what it is right now.

In the mechanical department there is an increase of $2.50 a week there in some instances; in some instances not quite that much.

To my knowledge, the work distributors had never had a guarantee that they would never receive any less than they were receiving. This does establish a minimum of $20 to $25 per week of 40 hours. I think I have stated that this is the first contract we have ever had, or the first agreement we have ever had that no one would receive less than $16.50.

There is another paragraph in this contract that we thought was a good thing for us:

(Reading.) "It is recognized in order to maintain as nearly as possible constant employment throughout the year it may be necessary to transfer people from one department to another."

We were particularly interested in that so that we can have as much employment as possible.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. State to the Court what change was made in the [fol. 981] rest of that paragraph, if any. Read the last sentence of it.

A. (Reading.) "But in case of such transfer should compensation be higher than the section from which the employee was transferred they shall be entitled to such higher rate while so transferred."

Q. Was there any agreement to that effect before this wage agreement was entered into?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do all of the guarantees you have referred to extend for a period of two years in the future from the date they were executed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Todd, did you hear the testimony of Velma Dowdy in the injunction suit tried before Judge Miller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had occasion to use the figures she testified that she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union for a period of a year—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting) Just a minute. I object to that as immaterial.

Mr. Tyler: Let me finish my question.

Mr. Langsdale: Then, you have the witness wait until I make my objection.

Mr. Tyler: I will. Please don't answer until Mr. Langs[fol. 982] dale makes his objection.

Mr. Tyler:—the figures she testified she paid to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union as a member of that union with the figures which the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid to their union, each for a period of one year?

Now, don't answer yet.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial. It doesn't tend to prove or disprove any issues in this case. It involves a lot of collateral issues which will greatly prolong this hearing, as we should be entitled to show what we do with that money and why we need it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not concerned with what you should be entitled to show. What is your objection to this question? That is the thing I am concerned with.

Mr. Langsdale: I object for the further reason it is incompetent and irrelevant what she heard someone testify to in some other court. We are about to enter into a stipulation, I hope, and then if they want to produce that testimony the Examiner will have an opportunity to rule on it.

Trial Examiner Batten: I now rule it is absolutely immaterial and irrelevant to this hearing. I do not intend to have a comparison between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Unions. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' [fol. 983] Union is not on trial here, neither is the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. It is the respondent who is here answering to charges of unfair labor practices. That is the thing we are going to try. If you have any further testimony of any kind pertaining to this matter you can present it in the form of an offer of proof, but I do not intend to receive it.

[fol. 990] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, suppose that the operator and the instructor disagree about what instruction is given as to some garment, or whether it is made according to instructions. Who would decide that dispute?

A. You say the operator and the instructor?

Q. Yes, or whoever—who would look at the garment made by the operator and comment on whether it was properly made or not?

A. That was the reason I was asking. If the garment was finished and it was being looked at, being examined, it would be the examiner or the instructor.

Q. Suppose the Examiner and operator disagree on whether it is made right. Who would decide that dispute?

A. Well, the operator would talk to her instructor first.

Q. All right, then. What—

[fol. 991] A. (Interrupting) And if the instructor agreed that she was right and the operator agreed that she was right or what she had been told, I think that operator would either take it to the union or she might take it to Mr. Baty.

Q. Suppose Mr. Baty sided with the inspector. Is there anything that the operator can do then, if she still believes she is right?

A. I think she would very likely bring it back to the union.

* * * * * *

[fol. 993] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, are you an executive down at the Donnelly Garment Company plant? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been an executive? A. No, sir.

Q. Has the management ever discussed with you or explained to you how the plant was organized as to departments, or who has jurisdiction of what number of employees? A. No, sir.

Q. When you say in direct examination that Mr. Baty has charge of such-and-such group of employees, what do you base that sort of a statement on?

A. On general knowledge from working there, and in referring to Mr. Baty, I do know that he is the production manager.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, I think I have never been definitely told that. I have that information the same way, just general information.

Q. That is, you gather information about the organization of the plant just from your observation, as any other employee would? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 995] Q. Did Mrs. Reed or did any other executive or representative of an executive ever give you orders or instructions about the organization or the operation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. Never did.

Q. What reasons, Miss Todd, did you personally have for coming to the belief that it was to the advantage of the employees to organize their own labor union?

Mr. Foster: I object to that as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you going to have her express an opinion as to why she thought it was for all of the employees, or are you going to have her give her views on it?

Mr. Tyler: I am going to have her give her views as to why she made that choice.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may give her views on it as to why she made that choice.

Mr. Foster: I submit, Mr. Examiner, that is not the question in the form it was asked.

Trial Examiner Batten: I say, that is what she is now going to give.

A. I didn't like the manner in which the I. L. G. W. U. seemed to conduct their plan or organization. I felt like we could operate a union with less expense than they apparently did.

The Wagner Act practically, from the parts Mr. Tyler [fol. 996] had read to us and discussed with us—practically invited us to form an employees union of our own; and, the law giving us that privilege, I thought we would be smart to do it, was the reason I wanted to do it.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Examiner, I move that the answer be stricken out due to the fact that it contains only conjecture and opinions of this witness not shown to be based on any facts.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't think there is any question but that this witness can express her opinion if she wants to. It may stand.

Mr. Tyler: Had you had any report on what injunctions could do for you that was not entirely satisfactory as to your protection of your individual members and employees?

. . . . . .

[fol. 998] A. Mr. Tyler did advise us he had attended some hearings of injunctions that were being asked for by other companies and he did not feel that they would give us the protection we were asking for and felt that we needed—and we felt that a union of our own employees would give us more protection.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. And did Mr. Tyler advise you that he thought that was the thing to do?

A. Yes, Mr. Batten. In reading from the Wagner Act—He didn't advise us he thought it was the thing to do; he advised us we could do it, and read and discussed parts of the Wagner Act. The way it is worded—

Q. (Interrupting) You gathered from what he told you that he was of the opinion that it would be better to form this union than to bother with the injunction?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Taylor:

Q. How long after you first consulted Mr. Tyler and Mr. Rossett did you get such advice with reference to a union from them, or either of them?

[fol. 999] A. How long after we first consulted them?

Q. Yes.

A. The first consultation was on March 27, and it was after the 12th of April when we had any advice as to form an employees' union.

Q. Can you fix the time any more definitely than by saying after the 12th of April?

A. I think it was probably April 13, or it might have been the morning of the 14th, or something like that. It was shortly after the Wagner Act was declared valid, which was April 12, 1937.

Q. Miss Todd, in your direct examination something has been said about the company putting a stage on the first floor of the building. The first floor, that is right, isn't it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any reason the company had for putting a stage on that floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. It was for the purpose of having their style shows there when they were presenting a new line.

Q. And so far as you know, it was not for the purpose of providing something for the union to use?

A. Oh, No. It was provided solely for that purpose. They use it six or seven times a year for that purpose.

[fol. 1000] Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union ever petition the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election of employees?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, and move the answer be stricken. I think if there is any petition they might have filed, it would be the best evidence.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I think that it is immaterial whether they have or haven't, so far as this hearing is concerned. What is the—how is it material to these issues, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I wish to show that they have at all times been willing to have such an election and have so expressed themselves, and have been confident of their ability to win such an election; that they have petitioned the Board for it, and that the suggestion which has appeared somewhere, I believe—I may be wrong about that—that they didn't petition until very late, has a very sound reason, that it doesn't in any way discredit their statement that they can prove their choice by an election.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, I don't see it has anything to do with this hearing at all. Any matter connected with the petition or anything with relation to it.

Mr. Tyler: Then, I wish to make an offer of proof.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may make an offer of proof.

[fol. 1001] Mr. Tyler: I offer to prove by this witness that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union has filed two petitions with the National Labor Relations Board for an election of the employees as to bargaining representatives and labor unions, both recently, before the beginning of this hearing; that the reason they did not file any such petition earlier was because they had a contract with their employer and were operating satisfactorily under it through representatives of their own choosing, and they felt that their situation was satisfactory and that if any outsider disputed the claim that they were being represented by representatives of their own choice, it was devolved upon such outsider to ask for such an election to change the status quo. Also, that the union on several occasions authorized their attorney to agree to submit to an election of the employees and abide by the result, and that that was done in the record and the three-judge court hearing and again during the hearing before Judge Miller.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1002] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler,—well, no, I don't know as—I thought I wanted to ask you a question there. Of course,—I think that I will. Of course, you know that any request of the three-judge court or Judge Miller is of no force and effect, don't you?

Mr. Tyler: I don't concede that, your Honor.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, as far as the Wagner Act is concerned, you concede that it is not?

Mr. Tyler: I concede that the Wagner Act does not authorize Judge Miller to hold an election. I concede that.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is what I meant.

Mr. Tyler: But I would insist very respectfully, but very earnestly, that what we are trying to find out here is what these employees really want of their own free will and this is some evidence of it. Now, it may be they are dominated in that, or somebody ordered them to do that, but I submit that I have a right to show that they are eager to have an election and they are willing to have it, whether it is under the Wagner Act or otherwise, and agree to abide by the results.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1006] Mr. Langsdale: My only purpose in making this statement is the idea that I have that these—that Mr. Tyler has the thought that maybe if the Examiner feels that these very highly respectable tribunals ruled on this same evidence and found some way, it might have some weight with the Examiner. It might have some weight with the Examiner, and the fact is they didn't rule on that issue at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it is immaterial to me. I won't give any consideration to it unless it is the evidence that was submitted here, was received in this hearing.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I feel sure of that.

Trial Examiner Batten: If any such was offered.

Mr. Tyler: I cannot let Mr. Langsdale's statement stand, because I assert that Judge Miller did find as a fact that this union was organized and operated by the free will of the employees. It is in the findings of fact, and I can't let Mr. Langsdale's statement stand without making that statement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, the record may stand as it is. I said that the Board has exclusive jurisdiction as far as the Act is concerned, and if the facts warrant it, we will take such jurisdiction, and if they don't, the Board would not take the jurisdiction irrespective of what may have been done in any other proceeding. We will proceed.

[fol. 1007] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Miss Todd, when you applied for work at the Donnelly Garment Company, did you use Mrs. Reed's name in order to get a job? A. I did not.

Q. What was your acquaintance with her before that time as to whether it was casual or close?

A. It was very casual.

Q. Have you ever been on intimate terms with Mrs. Reed? A. Never.

Q. Or terms other than those of another employee?

A. That is correct.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1013] Q. Do you consider you have some knowledge of what a girl ought to be able to do if she is a good workman on a certain machine, in a certainly kind of operation, based on your experience? A. I certainly do.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean that covers the entire plant?

A. The entire plant?

Q. The entire production department?

A. I am speaking now of pieceworkers.

Q. That covers all of the pieceworkers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You think you personally are sufficiently familiar with all of these pieceworkers and the operations, and so forth, so that you are in a position to pretty well determine—

A. (Interrupting) I think that I have sufficient information and past experience, years of it, that would give me a very good knowledge that would be dependable enough to work from. Now, that doesn't prevent that operator, if I should—

Q. (Interrupting) I am just talking about your own personal knowledge.

[fol. 1014] A. Yes.

Mr. Tyler: Did you or did you not consult other members of the committee, or parties in departments where a particular piece of work was under question, before coming to a decision of what that was?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as leading and suggestive. Having seen the apparent defect in her answer, he wishes to supply it by this question.

Mr. Tyler: I object to the comment on the part of counsel.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain it on the ground that if you want to show what she actually did—If Miss Todd will just tell us what processes she has actually gone through, that is more important than what she would do if something should happen.

Mr. Tyler: If you will do that, Miss Todd—

A. You want me to tell you—

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Tell us of a specific case. You have mentioned several people where you handled oral complaints for them. Just take one of those and tell us what you did.

A. I think, rather than to tell you just what I do, if she complained about the price you would have a clearer picture than to tell you how I arrived at it.

Q. I want to know what you have actually done in [fol. 1015] some case which you have handled.

A. In the way of a complaint?

Q. Yes.

A. You will admit, that already there is a price on that operation?

Q. I won't admit anything.

A. I mean, there is a price on that operation?

Q. I assume there is.

A. Then, if she would complain to me—I am trying to think.

Q. Now, let's go through an actual case once.

A. I am trying to think of one, and then I will tell you. For instance, Nell Stites—I mentioned her name yesterday—complained she wasn't making enough money on setting a sleeve in a certain garment. I don't remember the number of the garment—I think I could find that out—

Q. Just tell us the steps.

A. In discussing it with her she said, "I just can't do it." I said, "Nell, is it that something is wrong with the work that has been done previously, or that there isn't enough money on it?" She said, "There isn't enough money on it."

My conversation with her would be this: "I want you to tell me how much you have earned, how many you are able to put in in an hour, and I will talk to Mrs. Nichols and the other girls and we will see if there is something [fol. 1016] wrong with the work that has been done and see if you have enough money."

Q. Is that what you did? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go ahead and tell us what else you did.

A. In talking to Mrs. Nichols my stand would be, I don't think there is enough money on it until this girl shows us she can't do it. She is an efficient person and she needs more money on that. If I had any difficulty with Mrs. Nichols—

Q. (Interrupting) If you did? Did you?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell us about that.

A. In some instances I did and in some I didn't.

Q. Tell us about when you did.

A. In that instance I went to Mr. Baty about it and told him I thought Miss Stites was justified in asking for more money, and more money was put on it.

Q. Then, Mr. Baty made that adjustment? A. Yes.

Q. When you got more money on this operation did that mean more money on this same operation with the other employees? A. Absolutely.

Q. It was adjusted with all of them for that operation?

A. Absolutely. If one would receive it they all would receive it.

Q. Well, did they?

[fol. 1017] A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did this occur, if you remember?

A. Well, this is June, and, as near as I can remember about this particular thing, Mr. Batten, it might have been February or it might have been January; I would have to look that up. I can't tell you definitely about that.

Q. This year? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the number of that department or section, do you remember?

A. Well, no. It would either have been 411 or 415. I would have to look into that, too, because she might have been one place or the other.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Is the matter of whether an operator is classed among the more efficient operators a matter which is arbitrarily left to the employer, or does the union ever undertake to do anything about that classification?

A. It is not left entirely with the employer. I stated yesterday that there were—I think I gave some 20 or 30 instances there where their guarantee had been raised at the request of the union.

Q. Does that mean their classification had been changed at the demand of the union? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1018] Q. In regard to the bulletin boards you testified on direct examination, I believe, that the union at some time placed notices on the bulletin boards in the factory. Is it not a fact that individuals also used the bulletin boards for lost and found, and matters like that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has any request been made by the union from the company for permission to use those bulletin boards?

A. No, sir. Anybody uses them, and we have just used them.

Mr. Leary: I move to strike all except the first two words of her answer as not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

Mr. Tyler: Now, at the time you received what I believe you have testified to as the only raise you have had from the company, is it or is it not a fact that a large number of employees received raises at the same time?

A. It is a fact.

Mr. Langsdale: I object to this constant leading of this witness, his own witness, his own client, and I suggest that the payroll is the best evidence of that. How does this woman know what was on everybody's envelope or everybody's check.

[fol. 1019] Mr. Tyler: She has not testified to everybody's envelope or everybody's check.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I think your objection goes to the weight that may be given this testimony. If that remains as it now stands, without any cooperation, or anything of the kind, certainly the Examiner nor the Board could give a great deal of weight to it.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1020] By Mr. Tyler:

Q. Did you consult Mrs. Reed or any officer or representative of the company about hiring lawyers for the employees? A. I did not.

Q. Did Mrs. Reed, or anyone on behalf of the company, ever say to you or say in your hearing that she was opposed to labor unions? A. No, sir.

Mr. Tyler: I think if the Court please, I will release this witness, reserving the right to recall her, as has been generally reserved in the record.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1021] Redirect Examination

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Have you prepared a schedule of the wages you received during the period of the Judge Miller trial in 1939?

A. I asked for it, and then I didn't ask for it again. I know what the union paid me, but I didn't have a place where I could look up the cancelled checks. I moved and I couldn't get them.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1023] Q. Do you remember whether or not the Loyalty League and the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union have ever held a joint meeting? A. No, sir.

Q. You deny that they have?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You don't remember?

A. I don't believe they ever have.

Q. You say you don't believe they have. Did they?

A. I don't remember that they did.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you remember presiding over any meeting that was a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and then right after that they held a meeting of the Loyalty League? A. No, I don't.

[fol. 1024] Q. Do you remember a situation where a Loyalty League meeting was held and then a Donnelly Garment Workers' meeting was held?

A. No, I don't. You mean that both meetings were held at the same time?

Q. Yes. A. I don't remember it, Mr. Leary.

Q. Do you say you never presided over such an affair, where meetings of both organizations were held?

A. I don't remember ever doing that.

Q. Now, you think back carefully of the number of meetings of the Loyalty League over which you presided. Isn't it true, Miss Todd, that you only presided over two meetings of the Loyalty League?

A. I am just trying to think, Mr. Leary, and I have been trying to off and on since this thing has been going on these two weeks, and I don't remember having any meeting of the Loyalty League during that time. We had some meetings of employees at that time, and then we came along in April and organized the union.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What do you mean "meetings of the employees?"

A. They were very definitely meetings of the employees.

Q. Do you mean this was a third group that met?

A. They were, very definite, yes. They were not meet-
[fol. 1025] ings of any organization, they were meetings of the employees.

Q. Were they meetings you presided at?

A. Some of them were.

Q. When were they?

A. One of them was on March 18. I don't remember the date of the other one. That is the one I testified about yesterday.

Mr. Langsdale: April 27.

A. Yes, but, Mr. Langsdale, I testified to another one there around the latter part of May, when we were discussing—when we raised the money to pay Mr. Tyler. That was a meeting of the employees, and it would have been the 29th or 30th of May, or the 1st or 2nd of April—within just a week or two in there.

Mr. Ingraham: The witness has said the last of May or the first of April.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you mean, Miss Todd, March or May? A. I meant the last of March.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. You distinctly remember this March 18 meeting, do you not?

A. Mr. Leary, I don't remember a lot about that meeting. I remember a few more things than I did the other day, but it has been so long ago. I have refreshed my memory since in talking to some of the other people.

Q. You remember, do you not, the large assemblage of [fol. 1026] employees on the second floor of the plant meeting together on March 18?

A. Yes, I believe I remember that.

Q. Do you remember, also, the large [assembled] of employees meeting together on April 27?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember any other occasions around that time when the same large assemblage of employees met on the second floor of the plant?

A. That is what I am referring to; I think it was yesterday morning I testified to that. I do remember that meeting, and that was when we raised money to pay Mr. Tyler for investigating this injunction.

Q. You are definite about that meeting, are you?

A. Yes, and I testified to that yesterday.

Q. What is your testimony now as to the date of that meeting?

A. The date of it was sometime the very last of March or right around the first of April. I don't remember the date of it.

Q. Did you testify yesterday you were positive as to the date of that meeting, or the approximate date of the meeting?

Mr. Tyler: That is objected to as improper cross-examination.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. I don't remember whether somebody asked me that [fol. 1027] or not, but I think I did.

Mr. Leary: Am I correct, you did use the word "positive" in stating it was held some time in the latter part of April, 1937, or perhaps in the first few days of May, 1937?

Mr. Tyler: I object to that as being argumentative.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

Q. I made a mistake, Mr. Leary, and corrected it. I meant to say it was the last of March or the first of April.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. How are you able to be positive in the establishment of the approximate date when that meeting was held?

A. Because I know when we went to talk to Mr. Tyler and he wanted to know whether we were representing the employees or not. We said we did, and he said, well, he would discuss it with us on that basis, and if we didn't he would very soon find out. And then, I know we paid him shortly—I don't remember just the date, but very shortly after that we paid him, and that was why we had that meeting, was to discuss the suggestions Mr. Tyler had made, and our talk with Mr. Gossett. That was the meeting where we donated 50 cents apiece to take care of any expense concurrent with this.

Q. Do you swear under oath that you as president of the Loyalty League authorized the payment of $500 to Mr. Tyler before April 27, 1937?

[fol. 1028] A. I didn't do it as president of the Loyalty League. I will state that I did—I donated my 50 cents, the same as everybody else, and that is the purpose for which that money was used, and it was paid before April 27.

Q. The Loyalty League paid that, did they not?

A. No, sir. That was donated by the employees and paid by the employees, but it was paid by the Loyalty League treasury because there wasn't any other treasury of the employees available. That is exactly how that happened. We had no other treasury and, for convenience, used it, not knowing whether we would ever need any more or not.

Q. Are the members of the body of the Loyalty League and the members of the body you call "the employees" the same?

A. They might be. They might not be in its entirety. All employees would be employees, but all employees would not necessarily be members of the Loyalty League.

Q. Is it a fact, then, that the Loyalty League assumed the obligations of an organization or a group of employees some of whom were not members of the Loyalty League?

A. It is not a fact that the Loyalty League assumed the obligations of any employees.

Q. The Loyalty League assumed the obligations of only its members, is that correct?

A. The Loyalty League had nothing to do with this. This was a donation made by employees, 50 cents apiece, [fol. 1028] and there were between 1,200 and 1,300 employees. There was approximately—I can't say definitely now, I don't know that. I did not definitely then. It was approximately $600 they donated at that meeting, or collected from the result of that meeting. There might have been a few dollars less or a few dollars more. But that did not belong to the Loyalty League. Merely as a courtesy the Loyalty League let us use their checking account, because we didn't think it necessary to create another one.

[fol. 1030] Trial Examiner Batten: Were all contributions—were they paid by the individual?

A. They were paid by the individual in cash, and I think that I could get the check that was paid to Mr. Tyler, if you want it.

* * * * * *

Mr. Leary: Who has the check now, do you know?

A. No, I haven't. I would have to ask—I haven't the faintest idea.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1033] Q. Who told you what the company's reason was for hiring busses?

A. Mr. Leary, that was announced by Mrs. Reed, that they were considering doing that at that meeting on March 18th, as I recollect, and—

Q. (Interrupting) Was it Mrs. Reed, who told you?

A. She didn't tell me: She told that at a group at that meeting, and it was done.

Q. Well, did she consult you before? A. Me?

Q. On the matter, yes. A. No.

Q. Do you remember at that March 18th meeting, whether or not they passed out identification cards to the employees? A. They did not.

Q. When did they do that?

A. My memory is that that was two days later.

Q. Well, did they announce the intention of using the identification cards at the time of the March 18th meeting?

A. I don't remember that they did that then. It isn't my memory that they did.

[fol. 1034] Q. Well, isn't it a fact, Miss Todd, that the use of an—the use of identification cards and the hiring of busses go right hand in hand in that you had to have your identification card to board the bus, and so forth?

A. Yes, it was used as sort of a kind of identification.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1035] Q. Did you get an identification card?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know what it was for when it was given to you?

A. It was for the purpose of using of those busses.

• • • • • •

Q. Had you ever used identification cards at the plant before?

A. No. We were very definitely using those busses to give us protection to get in and out of the building.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1040] Q. Did you testify, Miss Todd, that the company had nothing to do with the April 23d demonstration?

[fol. 1041] A. The company had nothing to do with the April—did you say, did I testify that they had nothing to do with it?

Mr. Leary: Read the question.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

A. If I didn't, I will. The company didn't.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. How do you know that to be a fact?

A. Well, it was one of those things—why, the employees voicing their opinion of what they thought.

Q. Well, of your own knowledge, Miss Todd, not what you heard about the plant, but of your own knowledge, how do you know the company had nothing to do with the demonstration of April 23d?

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't think I am going to stop the witness at this stage drawing conclusions.

. . . . . .

A. Well, I think my best explanation of it would be that [fol. 1042] it happened early in the morning when the girls—just after they had come to work, and I doubt if there were any officials of the company there, but I certainly think that was the girls were responsible for that.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1046] Q. What was it that you saw about a demonstration involving Sylvia Hull on the seventh floor? When did it happen? Who was present? What happened?

A. All that I saw of that was just the end of it, and the girls were there, I think some twenty—

Q. (Interrupting) What time did this occur?

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment, Mr. Leary. I am not going to go all over this again.

Mr. Leary: I believe she brought up another demonstration, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you want to determine that question, whether this is something additional, all right.

A. I have told you two or three times, Mr. Leary, in my testimony, that it was with Sylvia Hull, is what caused all outburst.

[fol. 1047] Q. What outburst are you referring to?

A. I mean the thing that prompted us to get busy and form a union of our own, is the thing Sylvia Hull did.

Q. I am referring to April 23d, Miss Todd.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And ask whether or not there was a demonstration other than the demonstration that we have spoken about before involving Fern Sigler? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was that demonstration?

A. It was over Sylvian saying that she had been elected by us to represent us at the International Convention.

Q. When did that happen?

A. It happened on the morning of the 23d of April, 1937.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Were you there at this demonstration?

A. I was there at the end of it, Mr. Batten; yes, sir.

Q. You were there before it finished?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. What time did it take place?

A. Well, it must have taken place between 7:30 and 8 o'clock, because, as a rule I get to work around 8 o'clock unless I have—

Q. (Interrupting) Had the power been turned on?

A. Why, I don't know about that.

[fol. 1048] Q. Where on the seventh floor did it take place? I want to limit it to what you saw, now, Miss Todd, and what you saw—

A. (Interrupting) What I saw was at the employment office, or around the employment office there on the seventh floor of the building.

Q. You are referring to Mrs. Ella May Hyde's office?

A. That is right.

Q. What, if anything, took place that you saw?

A. The only thing, that a group of girls were there, and they were objecting—I mean, that was their form of objecting to Sylvia saying she represented them at the International. They were simply standing around there.

Q. Did you see girls standing around and talking? Was that it?

A. They were about, I would say there were about fifteen or twenty girls standing there.

Q. Was Sylvia Hull in the group?

A. She was not in the group. She was in Mrs. Hyde's office, you mean?

Q. Sylvia Hull was in Mrs. Hyde's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mrs. Hyde in there with her?

A. I think she was.

Q. And what, if anything, were those girls doing in addition to just standing there and talking among themselves?

[fol. 1049] A. They weren't doing anything.

Q. Now, that is what you refer to as a demonstration?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the demonstration where you say there was no violence?

A. I say, there was no violence at that demonstration, and that I was told, there was no violence of those others.

Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, as far as you are concerned, you didn't see any; is that it?

A. I never did see any violence; no, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Well, did you or did you not testify that Ella May Hyde made an effort to break up some demonstration on April 23d?

A. This is it. This is the one.

Q. This is the one about 7 or 7:30 or 8 o'clock in the morning on the seventh floor?

A. Between 7:30 and 8 in the morning.

Q. What effort did Mrs. Hydes—

A. (Interrupting) And the part I saw was near 8 o'clock.

Q. What effort did Mrs. Hyde make to break up this demonstration?

. . . . . .

[fol. 1051] Mr. Leary: Mr. Examiner, with reference to the question I was asking just preceding the recess, I haven't been able to find the portion of the record on that point, but I would desire to ask the witness whether or not that was her testimony, namely, whether or not Mrs. Hyde tried to break up any of the demonstrations on April 23. I have my note that that is what she did testify.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer, as far as you know.

A. My recollection is that she did, yes, sir.

Mr. Leary: And you are referring, are you not, to the Sylvia Hull demonstration on the seventh floor?

A. I could refer to both.

Trial Examiner Batten: Are you referring to both?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did your testimony that she did try to break up the demonstration involving Fern Sigler? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what floor did that demonstration take place?

A. It would have had to take place on the seventh floor, I guess, Mr. Leary, because that is where she worked.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Hyde make an effort to break up that demonstration on the sixth floor involving Fern Sigler? A. No, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did Mrs. Hyde do to break up [fol. 1052] the demonstration involving Sylvian Hull on the seventh floor that you yourself saw?

A. She asked the girls to go back to work, and they said they would if Sylvia would go home, and Sylvia said, "I want to go home." She said, "I will go home."

Q. Did you hear Sylvia Hull say that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was Sylvia Hull when she said that?

A. Inside the rail in the employment department.

Q. Is that adjacent to Mrs. Hyde's office?

A. It was her office at that time. All it was was just a partition by a rail there.

Q. Miss Todd, will you explain the nature of Mrs. Hyde's office, as to whether or not it is completely enclosed with a [well] going to the ceiling or whether or not there is a low railing?

A. It wasn't enclosed at all, Mr. Leary. At that time there was just a low railing there.

Q. When you say that on one occassion Sylvia Hull was in Mrs. Hyde's office, you mean she was inside the railing where Mrs. Hyde's desk was located?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And these girls were standing right outside the railing? A. That is right.

Q. And they could see and hear everything that transpired or that went on between Mrs. Hyde and Sylvian Hull, is that it?

[fol. 1053] A. I don't believe they could hear anything. They were not there but a few minutes, and that space is good sized.

Q. Were you in that group of girls outside of the railing? A. I believe I was.

Q. Or were you inside? A. I believe I was outside.

Q. Were you talking among yourselves, or were the girls' remarks being directed at Mrs. Hyde or Sylvian Hull? A. Both.

Q. You mean they were being directed to both of those persons inside the railing?

A. They were directed to both. I mean, they were making comments, and being directed at Sylvia, too.

Q. At the present time where is Mrs. Hyde's desk located? A. On the first floor.

Q. And are you on the seventh floor now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your desk where the employment office used to be? A. No, sir.

Q. Is the entire employment office now on the first floor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have a desk in or near the employment office on the seventh floor? A. Never did.

Q. You were never located on the seventh floor when [fol. 1054] the employment office was up there?

A. No, sir. I have worked on the seventh floor in one of the sections but not [hear] the employment department.

Q. Where was your desk at that time, namely, April 23, 1937?

A. I don't believe I had a desk at that time.

Q. What were you doing at that time?

A. What did you say?

Q. What were you doing at that time?

A. I testified to that, Mr. Leary. I was working in the model department.

Q. On what floor? A. Ninth floor.

Q. How did you happen to be on the seventh floor at the time Sylvia Hull was in Mrs. Hyde's office?

A. Well, the nursing department is right there on the seventh floor. I don't recall any particular reason for being there. I might have been going in there.

Q. You then had, on April 23, no desk; is that correct?

A. So many of the times there has been a desk around and I have stashed things in it. I don't recall that I had one right then.

Q. Were you really working in the model department on April 23?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary, what is the purpose [fol. 1055] of going over all of this? We have gone over all of this with this witness, what she did, where her desk was—There certainly were no questions I can recall that were brought up by the respondent or intervener since your examination that raises this issue again.

Mr. Leary: The record on it is confusing, Mr. Examiner, to this extent, that on April 27 she had a desk and on April 23 she didn't have a desk, she tells us now, and I want to know when she did get a desk.

Trial Examiner Batten: I do not propose to go over all of this thing again.

Mr. Leary: Well, I don't think it is going over it again, Mr. Examiner. I think we should have the record clear on it. I, frankly, am not clear on it.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1056] Mr. Leary: Why, Miss Todd, is there no provision in either of your agreements with the company, or your supplemental agreement, regarding the check-off system.

* * * * * *

A. The reason I would know was because we hadn't discussed it at that time, and it came up later.

Mr. Leary: You have written another contract, haven't you, since the check-off system was inaugurated or agreed upon?

[fol. 1057] A. Are you referring to the May 27, 1939, working agreement?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why was it not incorporated in that, Miss Witness, if you know?

A. We didn't think it was necessary.

Q. Did you take the company's word for their responsibility as to the check-off proviso?

A. I think you will have to explain that question a little bit.

Q. Were you, Miss Todd, as president of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union satisfied to accept the company's oral promise that they would abide by a check-off arrangement?

A. They have agreed to do that, Mr. Leary.

Q. Yes. Were you yourself satisfied with their oral promise?

A. I have every reason to feel they will live up to their agreement. I suppose it is still their right, if they don't want to do it, not to do it. At some future date are you referring to?

* * * * * *

[fol. 1060] Q. Is it not true, Miss Todd, that you previously testified, in response to a question by me, that the application cards for charter membership in the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were printed by a boy at the plant?

A. Mr. Leary, I think I explained that yesterday; and I did testify to that. In going back over the books I found this notation and that bill that was presented yesterday, which is the truth.

Q. You were in error, then, Miss Todd, in the answer you gave to my question in the first place?

[fol. 1061] A. Yes, I was, Mr. Leary.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1062] Mr. Leary: Miss Todd, I show you what has been admitted as intervener's exhibit No. 1, purporting to be an invoice from Kauffman and Eppinger Printing Company for 1,500 applications for charter member slips. Is that not correct?

A. That is what that is, yes, sir.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1063] Q. Who made the notation "pd. 50 cents" in the lower left-hand corner of that exhibit?

A. When I say this I looked it over, and I am inclined to think Mr. Eppinger wrote that (indicating), and I wrote this (indicating).

Q. Who wrote the word "paid" under "O. K. R. T."?

A. I think I wrote that.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1064] Q. Now, what, if any, agreement did you have with Mr. Eppinger?

A. Well, I talked to Mr. Eppinger about these cards.

Q. When was the first time you talked to him?

A. Well, I think I talked to him either the 25th or the 26th, right around the time of that thing, because it was just a small thing, and discussing with him that if we did form an organization, we might need some other thing, and he said, "Well, then, if you think you might, we will just let this thing ride," or something to that effect, "and you pay for the printing of them and you can pay for the cards later." Now, there is another invoice in that stack over there that will show where the cards were paid for; not the printing, but the cards. That is at a later date.

Q. Did you know Mr. Eppinger before this date?

A. No, I didn't know him other than I knew that he had printed some things for the Boys' Athletic Association.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1066] Q. I show you what has been marked for identification, Miss Todd, as Board's Exhibit 11, and ask you to state whether or not that is the application card for membership of an individual known as Madge Cole?

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 11" for identification.)

A. Yes, sir, it is, and I would like to make a little comment on this, if I may.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1067] Q. How many of the cards similar to Board's Exhibit 11 did you have printed? A. This last one?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, Mr. Leary, they were all printed at the same time. These cards were all printed at the same time.

Q. How many of the Board's Exhibit 11 did you have printed?

A. Well, we had approximately 1,500 of them printed at the same time.

Q. You mean to say—

A. (Interrupting) That applied to the first ones and the—

Q. (Interrupting) Together, Board's Exhibit 3 and Board's Exhibit 11, you had a total of 1,500?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1069] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, I believe there has been some confusion, Miss Todd. Am I not correct in this statement: that you had first printed Board's Exhibit 3? A. That is correct.

Q. For which you have the invoice identified as Intervener's Exhibit 1? A. That is correct.

Q. And that invoice shows you had 1,500 of those cards printed?

[fol. 1070] A. That is correct.

Q. Now, with reference to Board's Exhibit 11, is it your testimony that they were printed some time after April 26, 1937, the date which you cannot tell now?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the number of them that you cannot remember now? A. That is correct.

Q. Well, are you able to explain the circumstances as to why you do not have an invoice for the payment of those cards identified as Board's Exhibit 11?

A. I think I can. We have an invoice showing for the payment of cards, which is paid at the same time that Exhibit 11 was paid for.

Q. Where is that invoice, please?

A. Over there in the Treasurer's book. That makes me think that we must have run off about 1,500 of these. I can find that if you want me to.

Q. I would prefer, if you have any jurisdiction over those records, to produce it now, please.

A. I know where it is.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1072] Q. By the way, do you know where the cards were printed? A. I think I do.

Q. Where?

A. On the mimeograph machine at the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. When you say you think you do—

A. (Interrupting) Well, that is my recollection, and if you asked me if I looked for the invoice, and I will look for it at noon, my recollection is that there won't be one, that we ran those off on the mimeograph machine at the Donnelly Garment Company,—and you are talking about Exhibit 11?

Q. Yes. A. That is correct.

Q. Yes. With reference to Intervener's Exhibit 2, do you know who paid for the printing of that card?

A. I—

Q. (Interrupting) And also the card similar to it, approximately 1,300, I imagine?

A. The company requested this, and provided cards. They requested it be done this way, and they provided the cards. I guess they paid for it and had it done.

Q. Then the company gave the cards to the union, is that it, for signature?

A. Well, it is a card that they kept, Mr. Leary, and requested our signature on before they will deduct the dues.

[fol. 1073] Q. All right. After the card identified as Intervener's Exhibit 2 was printed by the company, do you know what was done with them, looking toward the obtaining of signatures by the employees?

A. How the signatures were obtained?

Q. Yes. A. The union obtained them.

Q. All right. Now, were all of the cards similar to Intervener's Exhibit 2 given to you as president of the union? A. No, sir.

Q. Who were they given to?

A. Well, what I needed were given to me. Is that what you mean?

Q. All right. How many were given to you?

A. Well, I think enough to cover that—

Q. (Interrupting) About 1,300, would you say?

A. About that many.

Q. Then what did you do with the cards?

A. We gave each member an opportunity to sign one.

Q. Where did you give them that opportunity?

A. At my desk.

Q. Is it true, then, that all the members of your organization had to come to your desk on the seventh floor and sign the card? A. I think that is true.

[fol. 1074] Q. You didn't distribute any of them first throughout the sections, did you? A. No.

Q. How long did it take you to obtain the signatures on the check-off cards identified as Intervener's Exhibit 2?

A. Several days. I think that took about two weeks, Mr. Leary, as I remember it.

Q. Do you know whether any cards were signed at any place other than your desk on the seventh floor?

A. I don't believe there were.

Q. Now, what does your invoice show as to the date on which you purchased the cards upon which the printing was done, referring to the cards, Board's Exhibit 11?

A. May 10, 1937.

Q. What does your invoice show as to the date on which you bought the cards identified as Board's Exhibit 3?

A. They are included in this invoice of May 10, 1937.

Q. May I see that invoice, please? A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are included, are they not, Miss Todd, in that notation on this invoice from Coffman and Eppinger Printing Company in the item 3,000 black cards, 3 by 5, $3.50? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, what is referred to here as 1,500 employees' memo sheets, questionnaire, $8.50?

[fol. 1075] A. Oh, I know what that is. It was a sheet of some information pertaining to the Wagner Act, as I remember, prepared by Mr. Tyler and we had them printed. I think it was questions that might be asked about the Wagner Act and the answers for the information of the members of the union.

Q. You have no objection if I use the document you have just referred to as a part of this formal file?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you what has been marked for identification as Board's Exhibit 12, and ask you to state whether or not that is the original invoice from Coffman & Eppinger Printing Company dated May 10, 1937, to the Donnelly Workers' Union, 1828 Walnut, Ninth Floor, in the amount, including the tax, $21.26?

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 12" for Identification.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This was delivered to the ninth floor, then, in the building? A. That is my recollection.

Q. To whom, on the ninth floor, was that invoice delivered? A. To me, I believe.

Q. Did you have headquarters on the ninth floor in May, 1937?

[fol. 1076] A. I think that I was still on the ninth floor at that time. Now, I am not—I think I stated before, Mr. Leary, that I was not clear about that particular month.

Q. Is the model department on the ninth floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you customarily have mail for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union delivered to you at your offices?

A. Yes, sir. What do you mean by that, Mr. Leary?

Mr. Leary: Read the question, please.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

A. At 1828 Walnut?

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Ninth floor?

A. It would be delivered to me wherever my desk is.

Q. Well, you are the Miss Todd you—the Miss Todd referred to on Board's Exhibit 12, are you not, as the person who gave the order? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was on your instructions, was it not, that the invoice be sent to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, 1828 Walnut, Ninth Floor?

A. Yes. I don't know whether that might be right or wrong, but that is what that said, and I would certainly have it sent to me at 1828 Walnut. I can't imagine saying what floor.

Q. Did you get any authority from the company to have mail concerning the Donnelly Garment Workers' [fol. 1077] Union delivered to you at their plant?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you get—do you get any other personal mail there? A. Lots of times.

Q. Do you know whether other employees have the privilege of receiving personal mail at the company?

A. I know there is never a day I don't see some in the mail box, going to somebody.

Q. Now, with reference, Miss Todd, to the handling of mail at the plant, is not the mail all opened before it is delivered to the individual?

A. No, sir. Why, nobody would open a letter that belonged to me; no, sir.

Q. Do you know where the mail first comes in to the company? Is there a mail receiving clerk?

A. I never had thought about it. The mail comes in there. The postman brings it, and I don't know whether there is anybody there that picks it up or not. I never had given it any thought. There is a pick-up system around there, and whenever I get my mail, that is the way it comes to me and the postman comes in there every day.

Q. How much mail do you get every day?

A. Do I get?

Q. Yes.

A. Some days, Mr. Leary, I might not get any, and [fol. 1078] some days two or three. Some days none.

Q. Well, the only mail that you receive is mail concerning the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No.

Q. What other mail do you receive?

A. Personal Mail?

Q. Yes.

A. Lots of times I get personal letters at the Donnelly Garment Company.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1079] Q. Does the union maintain any records of the employees who have authorized the company to check off dues from their pay checks?

A. We keep our file current, Mr. Leary. I think that will answer your question.

Q. What record do you keep as to the persons who have authorized the company to deduct union dues from their pay checks?

A. Well, it is easier for us to keep a record of the ones that haven't, and our file is current, and if there were any people who had not authorized their dues to be taken out in this manner then we would have a list of those. Does that answer your question?

Q. Do you get a list of new employees, then, with the company?

A. No. We try to keep in contact and know who our new employees are.

Q. Has it not been your testimony, Miss Todd, that the members of your organization were unanimous in authorizing the company to check off union dues from their pay checks? A. No, sir.

Q. How many did not authorize the company?

A. The salesmen. What I testified to, Mr. Leary, was that everyone was given an opportunity and told they didn't have to do this if they didn't want to, but if they [fol. 1080] so desired they signed this card. But the Donnelly Garment Company refused to take the salesmen's dues out of their checks.

Q. So, the salesmen are not part of the agreement, are they? A. No, sir.

Q. All of the persons who were a part of the agreement and covered by the same, does the union keep any record of those persons who have authorized the company to deduct dues? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What record do they have?

A. Our membership file is a record of that. We keep that file, as much as possible, up to date. There are a few cards that belong in it right now, but it has been gone so long that is the only reason they are not in there.

Q. Does the company give the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union a statement of account periodically of the moneys that have been checked off their union dues?

A. They give us a check. This card (indicating Board's Exhibit No. 12) states it will be taken out after—No, it isn't on here. They take that out after the first pay day and give us a check for that amount.

Q. They give you a company check, do they not?

A. That is right.

Q. Who signs that?

A. I think Jack could answer that better than I can. [fol. 1081] One would be from the Donnelly Garment Company and one from the Donnelly Garment Sales Company.

Q. Do they carry any covering statement with that check?

A. No, because we check that ourselves. We check that when we get it to know that they haven't made a mistake.

Q. What basis do you use to check the company's statement?

A. From our file, our membership file. If those people are there and we have their cards active in that file we know they should be paying their dues, and that is what we check it against.

Q. For instance, let us take the case of Marie Patten; did she pay her dues for January, 1939?

A. You say, did she?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Do you have the treasury records available here?

A. Yes, Mr. Leary. All of our treasurer's books are there. I don't think that you are understanding how we check that.

Q. I, frankly, do not, Miss Todd. That is what I want to trace through. Let's take Marie Patten for the month of January. Can you show me where in the records statement is made that Marie Patten paid for the month of January, 1939?

A. We don't make a statement like that. That is what I said, Mr. Leary.

Q. Do you make any entries in your record as to Marie Patten's payment of dues for January, 1939?

[fol. 1082] A. We don't make a statement like that. That is what I said, Mr. Leary.

Q. Do you make any entries in your record as to Marie Patten's payment of dues for January, 1939?

A. Mr. Leary, for the check-off system we use another method entirely.

* * * * * *

Trial Examiner Batten: I want you to show us how it shows in those records that Marie Patten paid her dues for January, 1939?

A. This is the file of our membership, of our union, and when we receive a check from the Donnelly Garment Company—or sometimes we do it before and wait—you know, so that we have a check on it. If there is a card in there from every member of our union we are entitled to that many quarters from those people.

By Mr. Leary:

Do you have information currently as to the number of employees who have done any work at the Donnelly Garment Company, say for any particular month?

A. Do I have?

Q. Yes. Or, does your union receive such information?

[fol. 1083] A. Surely.

Q. What information do you receive?

A. Any member of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union will report to you, if there is a new person in that department, that there is a new employee?

Q. There are lay-offs and discharges sometimes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you advised of that fact by the company?

A. Well, Mr. Leary, we take this file and keep this thing active. We have to have it.

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): The question is, how do you keep it active? Who tells you when a person is discharged or when these people are laid off? They do not pay dues when they are laid off?

A. Why, no, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, all right, then, how do you know when they are laid off or discharged?

A. The company would tell me if they were laying off a lot of people.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. What method does the company use to tell you they are laying off a lot of people?

A. By giving me a list of names.

Q. Do you have any of those lists of names that the company has given you?

A. I don't recall that I have any, no. I don't know [fol. 1084] whether I have or not.

Q. How does it happen that the company gives you a list of those names?

A. Why, we asked them.

Q. When?

A. A long time ago, when this union was first formed. Our agreement calls for people employed by the Donnelly Garment Company to be members of our union, and we are certainly entitled to know who is employed by the Donnelly Garment Company.

In a good many instances the members themselves would say, "There is a new girl in our department who wants to join the union." But the company gives that information, as to who they employ and don't employ.

Q. Do you have an established system whereby the company advises you periodically who their new employees are?

A. Not periodically, no, sir, but if they employ new employees I am notified. I don't mean I am notified, but the union is notified.

Q. Who in the union?

A. Well, it is sent to me.

Q. What form does the company use?

A. Just a piece of paper, or a notice—well, just a plain piece of paper.

Q. Have you any of those notifications from the company?

A. I don't know that I have right now. I haven't been [fol. 1085] there for two or three days, there might be one on my desk now.

Q. Will you search the files at noon and determine that?

A. Yes, I will.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, with reference to, let us say Marie Patten, for the month of January, 1939, and her dues payments in connection with the check-off system—Will you first take Marie Patten's card out of the file? Is it not true, Miss Todd, that the card you have there is similar to Board's exhibit No. 3?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is what you call her application for membership card?

A. That is correct.

Q. Does your union have any record at all that Marie Patten's dues were checked off for the month of January, 1939?

A. Mr. Leary, as long as this card is active in this file we know that—Each month if the members compare with these cards and the company's records—I mean the amount the company has given us, then we know that every one of those people have paid their dues. It doesn't say this individual paid, but by your balance of cards and your balance of quarters you can tell. That answers your question, doesn't it?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean for the current month?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Supposing you wanted to check back for the month [fol. 1086] of January, 1939?

A. We have never established, Mr. Batten—

Q. (Interrupting) I mean, without reference to the checks the company gave you, suppose you were going to determine just how many people paid dues in January, 1939, and who they were?

A. If we wanted to know who, we wouldn't know, because we keep these books current. We would know how much.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. In what amount did the company render a check to you for the month of January, 1939?

A. I can't tell you without looking at that book.

Q. Will you please determine that now?

A. (Referring to book.) Did you say January, 1939?

Q. Yes.

A. From the Donnelly Garment Company, $265.50; from the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, $21.

Mr. Langsdale: That is for January, 1939?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Have you any manner or means of determining, Miss Todd, whether that check was rendered to you in the correct amount?

A. I did have at the time. I don't have now.

Q. At the time what method would you use to determine whether it was correct?

A. Just the same one, Mr. Leary, that I told you awhile ago. We keep this file current, and we check it against this [fol. 1087] to know if our balance is right. We did the same thing then that we do now. We have always done it. I don't know, it may be a good method or a bad one, but it is the one we use. We felt like we were doing the right thing.

Q. When you make the statement "by keeping the cards current" you refer to your application for membership cards, do you not?

A. And at the time, Mr. Leary—

Trial Examiner Batten (Interrupting): That is what you are referring to, Miss Todd?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you count the cards each month you receive that check, Miss Todd?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you make any notation or entry as to the number you counted for that month?

A. No, we don't.

Q. Have you ever found any error, Miss Todd, in the check the company has rendered you each month?

A. Yes, we have found an error several times of people that I might have neglected to see and have them join the union and cheated ourselves out of a few quarters. I have never known there to be an error in the reverse, though, that the company had given us too many.

Q. Is there any arrangement, Miss Todd, whereby an [fol. 1088] employee has to be employed so many days per month in order that his dues should be checked off?

A. Yes.

Q. How many days a month must an employee work?

A. We expect if they work a week out of the month—

Is it a week or two weeks, do you remember, Jack? (Addressing Mr. Conaughey) It is some place in our minutes there. I believe it is a week, Mr. Leary.

Q. Right offhand do you know whether there is contained in your agreements with the company or in your bylaws of your union?

A. No. That is the agreement that the members of the union made.

Q. When did they make that agreement?

A. I don't remember how long it has been. It is in the minutes there some place.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, what method do you use to determine each month whether or not the members of your organization have been employed for at least one week by the company during that month?

A. We always do that against their payroll card, Mr. Leary.

Q. You see their payroll card every month, then?

A. Every week I see it.

Q. Who performs that check?

A. I do.

[fol. 1089] Q. When do you see the payroll?

A. I see the payroll every week, because I want to know that the people who have been guaranteed such and such salaries are receiving them.

Q. When is the payroll made available to you during the day?

A. Usually on Wednesdays.

Q. At what time on Wednesdays?

A. There isn't any set time for it.

Q. Is it during the working hours?

A. Why, sometimes it is and sometimes it isn't.

Q. How long does it take you to make such a check of the payroll every Wednesday?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you go over the names of the 1,300 people individually?

A. This is a piecework payroll I am referring to.

Q. Are there about 7 or 8 hundred names on that piecework payroll?

A. I think probably nearer six.

Q. Do you check the payroll of each one of those persons?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you check the time cards?

A. No, sir. It isn't necessary to check both, Mr. Leary. If they are being paid for a day's work they are already there.

Q. Are the number of hours work during the week indicated on the payrolls?

[fol. 1090] A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your best judgment, Miss Todd, as to how long it takes you each week to make such a check?

A. It doesn't take very long to run through that many cards.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. How long?

A. I don't know. Sometimes I get into it and a few of them would not be ready—

Q. Well, would it take 10 minutes?

A. Oh, it would take longer than 10 minutes.

Q. 20 minutes?

A. I judge that during the week it would probably take an hour, 45 minutes to an hour.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Against what do you make your check when you review the payroll on each Wednesday, Miss Todd?

A. Against the hours they work, Mr. Leary. Was that question, against what do I make my check?

Q. Yes. Do you carry in your head the wages or the guarantees of each of those 600 employees?

A. No. I have a sheet of paper.

Q. What sheet of paper do you have?

A. Just a penciled written sheet of paper.

Q. Containing the names and guarantees of 600 employees?

A. It does have that on it.

Q. Do you have that sheet available?
A. No, I haven't.
[fol. 1091] Q. Do you make a new sheet each month?
A. Mr. Leary, that isn't my sheet. I don't make it all.
Q. Whose sheet is it?
A. It belongs to the Donnelly Garment Company.

[fol. 1097] Trial Examiner Batten: I think the stipulation has been signed by the attorneys in the case, concerning certain testimony in the so-called NRA case before Honorable Andrew Miller, in the injunction case in the United States District Court, and the stipulation will be marked 1-DDDD and will be received on the same basis as the other exhibits and Board's Exhibit 1.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 1-DDDD" was received in evidence.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, in connection with this [fol. 1098] exhibit, I want to say that this exhibit, of course, does not cover the offers of proof which I have requested or might in the future request from any of the parties in this case, except this far: it is my understanding that all of you attorneys agreed that any evidence which has been introduced into this case, you might refer to by reference in your offer of proof. Now, is that the understanding which we had?

Mr. Ingraham: That is correct, your Honor, as far as the respondent is concerned.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Leary?

Mr. Leary: That is correct, Mr. Examiner.

[fol. 1104] Redirect Examination (Continued)

Mr. Leary: Do you have those records here, Miss Todd, that you had yesterday, referring to your long file of cards?

A. They are over there, yes, sir.

Q. Miss Todd, have you ever had occasion to determine whether or not an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company who is a member of your organization has paid his dues for any certain month since you had the check-off agreement with the company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not the company prepares any kind of an invoice or slip to be attached to the employee's pay envelope or pay check indicating what disposition has been made of certain deductions taken from the pay check or pay envelope?

[fol. 1105] A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that slip say?

A. There is a stub on the end of the check I received that says "Deduct so much for Social Security." And if it is time to deduct for the dues, it will state that or anything they have been authorized to deduct from the check is stated on this stub.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. You mean, Miss Todd, that is a part you can tear off and retain; is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you know whether the company keeps a duplicate of these small stubs that you refer to?

A. No, I don't.

Q. What other things is the company authorized on occasion to deduct from the employee's pay check?

A. On mine it is hospitalization or insurance, group insurance.

Q. When your labor organization authorizes the payment, let us say, of a dollar, in addition to your regular dues, for Mr. Tyler and his law firm, is that deducted from the pay check also? A. No, sir.

Q. How is that collected?

A. From the individual by the union, in cash.

[fol. 1106] Q. Do you have your record indicating the amount of money that has been paid to the union as a result of this check-off system? All I want, Miss Todd, is the amount that each month the company has turned over to you.

A. Yes, sir.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1107] The Witness: I said I thought maybe we better compare it with our check stubs, because it is entered here the first time three months together, and I didn't keep these books, so I wanted to know why. Here is the first entry, Mr. Leary, 11-3-37, dues for August, September and October by check from the company, $735.75, and these are the stubs for them. See, right here? As I remember, when we first started working on that—

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What is the date of that entry? A. 11-3-37.

Q. $700 and what?

A. $33.75. Also the check stubs are here.

When we first started doing this there was some difficulty in working out how they going to do it, and the first [fol. 1108] check came to us in that manner, those two.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Miss Todd, when was it that you made arrangements with the company to check off the dues of the employees?

A. I think the first that was—the first of it was some time in July.

Q. Well, do you know whether the check-off authorization cards which the company has indicated the date on which they were signed?

A. No, they do not. That is partially the reason for part of the arrangement of this. It was the early part of July when we talked to them about it and it took a while to get these cards signed and turned in.

Q. Why was it, then, that is wasn't until November—is that the date that you started?

A. No; August, Mr. Leary. It was for the first of August.

Q. But the collections were not made until November 3, 1937; isn't that correct?

A. Well, does it say the date here? Yes, that is correct, November 3d.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1109] By Mr. Leary:

Q. What was the amount of the two checks you received on November 3, 1937?

A. One check, $681.25 from the Donnelly Garment Company and the Donnelly Garment Sales Company, $54.50, which gives you that total of $735.75.

Q. Will you explain why it was that the company's check for the month of August collections was not rendered to you before November 3, 1937?

A. Yes, sir, because they were having some difficulty how they were going to handle it. They asked if it made any difference. It didn't make a great deal of difference to us, as long as we had a check on it, and so that was the reason it wasn't given to us until November.

Q. Well, you didn't decide until November, then, to definitely have the check-off, is that it?

[fol. 1110] A. No, sir. We decided in July, the early part of July, that we were going to have it. They evidently were having some difficulty, as I understood it, as to how they were going to handle it, how they were going to do it. Not that they weren't going to do it, but how they were going to do it.

Q. Who did you talk to representing the company on that matter?

A. Mr. Ingraham.

Q. Have you any place in your record, Miss Todd, any entry showing a date on which you made this check-off agreement with the company, and I include in your records, your minutes and all?

A. I can't answer that question without referring to the minutes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you will just have to get the minutes and go over them, please. If you need them, why, you better go over them.

The Witness: I don't know how long it would take me to look through.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, it doesn't make any difference how long, if that is what you need, why, we will just have to wait.

A. July 14th, Mr. Leary, meeting of the chairmen.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. And on—

A. (Interrupting) July 14, 1937, 9:34.

[fol. 1111] Q. Well, now, that was the occasion, was it not, Miss Todd, when you decided to ask the company for this check-off system?

A. That is the occasion that we decided finally to officially take care of it, yes sir. We had had—I had had some discussions with Mr. Ingraham about it before, and we had talked to Mr. Tyler about it on several occasions.

Q. I want you to trace, Miss Todd, as well as you can, the arrangements that you went through in order to obtain this check-off system.

[Q]. You want me to go over it again?

Q. No, not again. When was the first time that your union discussed it?

A. As members of the union, there had been discussions about it ever since the union was organized among themselves. The early part of—the first week in July was the first time I mentioned it to Mr. Ingraham. I had and I know other members of the committee had talked to Mr. Taylor about it several times previous to that, and this is when we finally made the final arrangements, decided to make the final arrangements about it. I think that I talked to Mr. Ingraham, I don't know whether it was a day or two or three days later, but it was—went right in close to this date here.

[fol. 1112] Q. Now, did the employees or members of your organization ever vote to request the company for the check-off system?

A. The members of the committee voted on it, Mr. Leary.

Q. Did the members of your organization as a body ever have that question put before them, namely, whether or not they would request the company for the check-off system?

A. As a vote, no, but as a general discussion, yes.

Q. In what meeting was it discussed generally?

A. It was discussed in—it seems to me the meeting in June that was discussed.

Q. If it was discussed, then, it will show up in your minutes, will it not?

A. No, I don't know about that. It might not at all. We have never said, Mr. Leary, in these minutes, "Don't show everything that has taken place in these minutes."

Q. Would you say if there was a vote taken on the question by the members of your organization that the results of that vote would show up in the minutes of your general meetings?

A. Mr. Leary, I said there wasn't a general vote taken, but before this was done every individual signed a card requesting that it be done. There has never been a penny taken out of our checks to pay for dues that there isn't a card in that file to show for it.

Q. What came first the discussion by the employees as to whether or not they would ask the company, or the signing of the cards by the individual employees?

[fol. 1113] A. The discussion by the employees, by the members of the union.

Q. What was the decision made as a result of the discussion by the employees?

A. The minutes show at a meeting of the committee chairmen representing the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union they discussed it and voted on it, and then every member of the union was given an opportunity to sign a card, which was turned over to the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Do your treasury records, the book to which you have made reference a short time ago, indicate what other payments were made by check from the company to the union under the check-off system?

A. It will show every one we have ever received.

Q. Will you itemize those for the record, please?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What was that, every check—what?

A. Every check that we have ever received from the Donnelly Garment Company or Donnelly Garment Sales Company for dues received by them, they are listed in here month by month.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Will you read those, the dates and the amounts, please?

* * * * * *

[fol. 1115] Trial Examiner Batten: I am going to recess, and will you prepare a statement of this, please Miss Todd? Just make it out in writing.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1117] By Mr. Leary:

Q. You have handed me, have you not, Miss Witness, what you have prepared during the recess?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Indicating the month and the year for which the dues were collected, beginning in August, 1937, and continuing through May, 1939; in the second column, date on which the check was deposited at the bank—

A. (Interrupting) That is what I think it is, from going through the book. It looks like the date that it was deposited.

Q. And in the third column, the amount of money that was paid by the Donnelly Garment Company's check, and in the fourth column, the amount of money paid by the Donnelly Garment Sales Company. Is that it?

A. Donnelly Garment—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Is that the name, Donnelly Garment Sales Company?

Mr. Ingraham: Donelly Garment Sales Company.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1118] Mr. Leary: Will the Examiner please direct the reporter to copy this information into the record at this point?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes. He may incorporate it in the record.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Miss Todd, what record do you have as to the dues payment for the months of April, May, June and July, 1937?

A. Of what—of April, May, June and July?

Q. '37.

A. Well, we have some little gray books that have it in, some little looseleaf sheets, is what they are.

Q. Are those available in the court room now?

A. I doubt if they are. We carried them around here for several days. I don't think they are here this morning, are they?

Mr. Patten: No, they are not here. They are at the office. We can bring them over for you, Mr. Leary.

Mr. Leary: If you will, please.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, was it your testimony, Miss Todd, that the first time you talked with Mr. Tyler was on March 27, 1937? A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 4120] Q. Is the check, cancelled check, identified as Board's Exhibit 13, the check that was sent to Mr. Frank Tyler, dated April 1, 1937, in the amount of $500 from the Nelly Don Loyalty League, Rose Todd, Pauline Hartman?

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 13" for identification.)

A. The words that you read are contained on this check, but I can't answer that question.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. You identify that as a check that was sent to Mr. Frank Tyler from the account of the Nelly Don Loyalty League on April 1, 1937? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Leary: Board offers its Exhibit 13.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1121] Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

(The document heretofore marked as "Board's Exhibit No. 13" was received in evidence.)

Mr. Leary: Will the intervener admit that this is Mr. Frank E. Tyler's signature on the back of the check?

Mr. Lane: Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1123] Mr. Leary: Do you know whether any records have been kept by the Nelly Don Loyalty League as to the persons who contributed certain amounts to cover that check?

Mr. Patten: We object to the form of that question. It assumes facts not in evidence, that the Nelly Don Loyalty League is the organization that took these 50 cent dues that were paid. The testimony was that it was at a meeting of employees.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think the question is, is there any record any place of those who paid this amount. Is that it, Mr. Leary?

Mr. Leary: Correct; yes.

Mr. Lane: He said the Loyalty League.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am saying, the question is, is there any record of the people who paid these amounts to make up the $500.

Mr. Stottle: May the respondent inquire, then, whether Mr. Leary's question is withdrawn for the purpose of answering your own?

Mr. Leary: I make no point over using the words "Nelly Don Loyalty League" here at all.

Trial Examiner Batten: No. I asked Mr. Leary if that is the question. I assume that is the question the witness is to answer.

[fol. 1124] Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, do you have a record any place showing the names of the people who paid these amounts?

A. No sir. We don't have, that I know of.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1128] Q. Do you know whether you had chairs for your March 18 meeting?

[fol. 1129] A. I don't think we did. I asked somebody about that, trying to refresh my memory about it, and I didn't arrive at any conclusion about it.

Q. Do you remember whether you had chairs for the April 27 meeting? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Who arranged for the obtaining of those chairs?

A. That was paid out of the balance of the money—not the balance of it, but part of that money that we used to pay that $500 for Mr. Tyler's fee. Part of that money was used for those chairs, I believe—I know it was.

Q. Do you have any record of that? A. No.

Q. Would your treasurer have a record of it?

A. I don't know. I haven't thought of that for a long time.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1131] Recross-Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, I am not entirely clear about the small file, as to where it is kept.

A. It usually sits on my desk.

Q. Your desk is on what floor? A. Seventh floor.

Q. Now, let me ask you, since this check has been produced, showing that the payment of $500 was made to Mr. Tyler on April 1, 1937, if your memory is thereby refreshed as to when the meeting was had of "the employees," as you have called it, to raise the money.

Mr. Patten: We again object to the question for the reason that it has been gone into heretofore.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

A. I don't know the exact date of that meeting, Mr. Langsdale.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Is your memory refreshed as to whether or not the meeting was held between March 27 and April 1?

A. I am positive that it was, but the date of it I don't know.

Q. Some date between those two dates?

[fol. 1132] A. Yes.

Q. Who called that meeting?

A. I believe I called that meeting.

Q. How did you call it?

Mr. Patten: If the Court please, I think that meeting has been discussed pages and pages in this record.

Mr. Langsdale: All we have asked her about is when it was held.

Mr. Patten: You are asking her as to who called it.

Mr. Langsdale: She answered that. The only question asked her about that meeting—In fact, the meeting was never mentioned until yesterday, when it was discussed in connection with the payment made to Mr. Tyler, and she says the meeting was called in which everyone was assessed 50 cents to pay Mr. Tyler. We didn't get that information until now, as to who called it. I want to know how [how] it was called, whether by telephone, by i. d. m., or by what method.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may ask this question, because there hasn't been any prior information as to who called it, so there couldn't have been anything about how it was called.

Mr. Patten: I think that has all been gone over.

Trial Examiner Batten: The witness didn't testify before that she called it. You may answer.

A. I don't remember.

[fol. 1133] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Have you any recollection at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask Mrs. Reed to help you get the employees together? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall what time of day the meeting was held? A. In the late afternoon.

Q. What do you mean by "late afternoon"?

A. My recollection is, it was about 4:30 or 4:15.

Q. 4:30 or 4:15. Now, you haven't the slightest recollection of how you got the employees together?

A. I have not.

Q. You stated that you raised something over $600 at that meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Out of which you paid $500 to Mr. Tyler. And this morning you have stated you paid for the chairs with part of that money raised in that way.

Mr. Patten: Intervener objects to the question, and submit, Your Honor, it has all been gone into time and time again.

Mr. Langsdale: It is purely preliminary.

Mr. Langsdale: What did you do with the rest of the money?

Mr. Patten: Wait for the ruling.

Trial Examiner Batten: If it is only preliminary, you [fol. 1134] may answer.

A. I can't tell you the details of what was done with the balance of that money.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. There was a balance, was there not?

A. There would probably be a balance.

Q. Have you any records anywhere as to how much was collected at that meeting?

A. Not any more, Mr. Langsdale. I have had.

Q. Have you now? Is there any record now in your possession, or in anyone else's possession, as to how much money you collected at that meeting?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Have you any invoice for the chairs that were rented for that meeting? A. I have not.

[fol. 1135] Q. Has anybody that you know of?

A. I can't answer that, because I do not know.

* * * * * *

Q. You have stated that when you first approached the management about the check-off system, that Mr. Ingraham objected. Do you recall what his objection was?

A. I recall that he had a very good objection. He was just very positive—

Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): I ask that the "very good objection" be stricken out.

Mr. Langsdale: I asked you what the objection was.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may be stricken.

A. He was very positive in saying they just couldn't do it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Well, why? Did he tell you why?
A. I don't recall that he did.
Q. He just refused to do it?
A. What did you say—just refused to do it.
Q. You don't remember any reason that he assigned?
A. No, I do not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1143] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Miss Todd, how many people would you ordinarily have in your meetings of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union? A. You want an average?

Q. Yes.

A. I think we never have less than—unless it is during a vacation period when there isn't so many people there—that we have less than 6 or 7 hundred people.

[fol. 1144] Q. Did you ever have more than that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would be your judgment as to the average? You said you never have less than 6 or 7 hundred.

A. Well, I think, Mr. Langsdale, that would be about an average. I know we have had a meeting or two or three where there have been less than that; they would be meetings during vacation times, or at Christmas and the holiday time, or something like that. I know we have had meetings when practically everyone was there.

Q. That is, 1,100 or 1,200? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have chairs for everybody?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do these invoices state the number of chairs you had for every meeting? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice on October 1, 1938, you called for just 450 chairs.

A. We usually have 400, 450 or 500 chairs, and the remainder of the members have to stand.

Q. October 4, 450 chairs. I notice here in this meeting of August 8, 1938, you ordered only 100 chairs. Do you remember that?

A. I think I do, but to be more definite about it I will [fol. 1145] have to see the minutes.

Q. Will you examine the invoice?

A. Yes. (Referring to invoice.)

Q. One hundred chairs for the meeting that day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Donnelly Garment Company own any chairs at that time? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. You do not know of any chairs that the Donnelly Garment Company owned?

A. Other than they use all of the time—I don't know of any chairs that they use for meetings and things of that kind.

Q. When you would have a meeting of everybody in the plant, executives, employees, and everyone else, were the chairs brought from the outside, or did the Donnelly Garment Company have some chairs?

A. I have never known the Donnelly Garment Company to own any chairs, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. You don't know of any down there now?

A. No, sir. I have never known of any.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1146] Q. When these invoices were mailed by the K. C. Chair Rental Company to the plant, to whom were they mailed?

A. To the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Q. And by whom were they received? A. By me.

Q. All of them? A. To my knowledge, yes, sir.

Q. I think this question has been asked you, but it is purely preliminary. Did anyone representing the Donnelly Garment Company open any of the mail that was addressed to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. I have never known that to happen.

Q. Let me show you this exhibit No. 11 and call your attention to the receipt stamp there of the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. What is the date on that?

Q. August 10. A. August 8.

[fol. 1147] Q. That is when you made the order and it was delivered August 10th, is the date that you evidently received the invoice?

A. I think, Mr. Langsdale, what has happened to this, I have O. K.'d it there, but in sending it to the treasurer, inadvertently, the boy that picks up that mail or delivers those things must have laid it down on the desk of somebody connected with the company, some clerk or somebody, and before she noticed what it was, she put that on it.

Q. Well, this round circle that is stamped on there, on Exhibit 11, is the regular receipt stamp of the Donnelly Garment Company for mail that comes into that plant, is it not?

A. I never have seen that, Mr. Langsdale. I don't know.

Q. You mean in your long 10 years with the Donnelly Garment Company, you never saw their mail receipt stamp before?

Mr. Lane: Just a moment. If your Honor please, that is argumentative. He just asked the question once, and she answered it. Now, he repeats it in an argumentative form and I object to the argument with the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer whether you ever have seen it?

A. I have never seen it, and never noticed it on there.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You had never seen the stamp before? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the stamp is also on the next exhibit, Exhibit 10. Do you know who placed that mail receipt [fol. 1148] stamp on there?

A. I don't know why it would be on there. Who did—I think it looks like carelessness of some sort.

Q. At any rate, the stamp is there, isn't it?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And that is not the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union stamp, is it?

A. We do not have a stamp.

Q. And that is the Donnelly Garment Company's stamp, is it?

A. I don't know. I have never seen it before.

Q. Now, Miss Todd, a check has been produced which shows that, dated April 1, 1937, drawn on an account in the name of the Donnelly Loyalty League. Let me ask you if it isn't true that that money to meet that check was not loaned by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Oh, no, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Was any other payment made to Mr. Tyler about that time or within the next—subsequent to the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. The next payment that was made to Mr. Tyler by was by the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and will show in the book of our treasurer.

Q. Well, have you any independent recollection of the books as to when the next payment was made?

. . . . . .

[fol. 1150] Trial Examiner Batten: In other words, do you know when the next payment was made to Mr. Tyler?

A. I do not remember just the date of it.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Can you give us an approximate date?

A. No, I don't believe I can, Mr. Langsdale. It has been a long time ago.

Q. Did you ever pay him for his advice and work in drawing up the by-laws? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay him for his advice and work in helping you draw up the working agreement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay him for his advice and work in helping draw up the supplemental agreement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you pay him for his visit to the 27th of April meeting in which he explained the purposes of the meeting and produced the by-laws and gave other legal advice? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know when you paid him for that work?

[fol. 1151] A. I do not, from memory; no, sir.

Q. No recollection whatever?

A. I have no recollection from my memory when we paid him, but we paid him for everything that he has done or everything that he has requested.

Q. Was this $500 payment permitted to cover those services? I mean by that, the services I have just mentioned?

A. It was not. That was very definitely for a retainer fee and advice given us about an injunction, and that was all it was for.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1152] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Was any check drawn upon the bank account of the Donnelly Loyalty League in payment for services to Mr. Tyler or his firm subsequent to the check of April 1, 1937?

A. There had never been but one check issued, given to Mr. Tyler or sent to Mr. Tyler from the Donnelly Loyalty League.

[fol. 1153] Q. Now, you know that, do you?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Was any money collected subsequent to April 27, 1937, which was paid to Mr. Tyler for legal advice and services by the Donnelly Loyalty League, either by check or cash?

A. No, sir, by the Donnelly Loyalty League, you say?

Q. By the Donnelly Loyalty League? A. No, sir.

Q. You stated that the Loyalty League is still active. What do you mean by that?

A. I mean it was a social organization, Mr. Langsdale, and it is still active, as it has always been.

Q. Well, has it held any party? A. It has.

Q. And can you tell us when?

A. Well, they had one or two last winter.

Q. Well, do you know when?

A. I don't remember when.

Q. Do you mean in the winter of 1938?

A. Well, I think they had one during—since Christmas, since the first of the year.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1155] Q. Now, the Donnelly Workers' Union since April 27, 1937, has given a number of dances, skating parties, steak fries, carnivals, and other similar parties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you mean to tell the Examiner that in addition to all of the parties that are shown by the minutes of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union the Loyalty League has given other parties? A. I certainly do.

Q. Do you know where any of those parties was given?

A. I don't remember where they had the big party. There are several places around town where they have parties.

Q. Do you know where any one of them was given?

A. It seems to me the steak fry they had out at Swope Park, or they might have had it out at the club house.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1156] Q. You say you think a party was given at the club house. What do you mean by that?

A. Mr. Langsdale, that club house is for the use of the employees, and I doubt if there are two nights out of the week that that club house is not used.

Q. Where is it? A. I don't recall the address.

Q. Tell us approximately where it is located.

A. North of Swope Park and east of Swope Parkway.

Q. What is its capacity?

A. It is purely a club house.

Q. I know, but how many people can give a party there?

A. It is a 3-story house. I have been out there when there have been as many as 125 or 130 people.

Q. To whom does that club house belong?

A. I suppose it belongs to Mrs. Reed.

Q. To the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I don't know, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. It does not belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, does it? A. No, sir.

Q. And it does not belong to the Loyalty League?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1157] Q. Are any people kept out there to maintain it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?

A. Well, I don't know that either. When I have been out there, there have been all of the way from two to three or four people, and I don't know whether they are temporary, permanent, or what.

Q. Cooks and people who wait on those assembled?

A. If you are there for dinner, there are people there to prepare it and to wash the dishes.

Q. Did the Loyalty League ever pay any rent for the use of that club house, to the Donnelly Garment Company, or anyone else?

A. That is a club house for the use of the members and the employees are entitled to belong to it. They pay dues to belong to it, and whenever they want to use it they are privileged to use it. In addition to the use of it, depending on the number of guests you have or what you are doing, there is an additional charge for using it.

* * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. As far as you know, did they ever pay any rent? [fol. 1158] A. I don't think the club house is rented.

Q. I say, did they ever pay any rent, as far as you know? A. No, sir.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You say they pay dues to use the club house. What do you mean by that? Who pays dues?

A. If you are a member, privileged to use that club house, you belong to it, unless you want to pay for it as a special assessment. I don't know the details.

Q. To what organization must an employee of the Donnelly Garment Company belong to have the privilege of using that club house?

A. None.

Q. Then, what do you mean by dues? Are there some monthly dues that the employees pay for the privilege of using that club house?

A. For the privilege of being a member.

Trial Examiner Batten: If you remember, what [does] do you pay? A. $2 a year.

Mr. Langsdale: A member of what?

A. Well, I think it says on the card "Nelly Don Country Club," or "Nelly Don Club"—I don't know what it is.

Q. Is there another association, I mean different from any of those that have up to now been mentioned, to which [fol. 1159] you pay $2 a year dues?

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to getting into still additional organizations, if there are any. Certainly the respondent has a right to provide a country club for its employees if they want to, and let them pay so much a month. There is no showing that it is done for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't suppose there is any argument that the respondent could furnish the employees a country club for nothing if they wanted to.

Mr. Stottle: And of course it would not be material to these issues.

Trial Examiner Batten: I can't determine whether it is material or not until I find out about this matter of these rentals Mr. Langsdale is inquiring about.

Mr. Langsdale: Read the question, please.

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

A. I haven't mentioned all of the ones there are.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. To whom do you pay this $2 a year?

A. I think that card says "Nelly Don Country Club."

Q. To whom do you pay it? To what individual do you pay the $2?

A. Right now I don't know. I had a little envelope sent down to me with a card in it stating that I owed my dues, and I put it in the envelope and sent it back.

[fol. 1160] Q. Do you know who sent you the card?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know who sent you the dun for the $2.

A. No, I don't.

A. Well, I have told you as near as I can remember.

Q. Do you have the card in your pocketbook or anywhere else here? A. I think I have.

Q. Will you produce it?

(Witness looks through purse, procures card and hands it to Mr. Langsdale.)

Q. I hand you this card which has been marked International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's exhibit No. 3 and ask you to state what it is—not what is on it, but what it is.

A. It is a membership card of the club out there.

(Thereupon the card above referred to was marked "International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union's Exhibit No. 3.")

Mr. Langsdale: I offer exhibit No. 3.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that it is wholly immaterial to any of the issues in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: Thus far I don't see that it has any bearing.

Mr. Langsdale: I want to ask some questions about it.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed.

[fol. 1161] Mr. Lane: Intervener objects to International's exhibit No. 3 for the reason that it is not material—it is not within any of the pleadings in this case, and for the reason that it opens up ramifications that are wholly outside of any proper inquiry in this investigation.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may proceed until I can determine. And if when he completes this matter, Mr. Lane, if it is not connected up with the issues in any way you may make a motion to have it stricken and it will be stricken.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1162] Q. Is the club membership identical to the membership of the Loyalty League?

A. It has nothing to do with it at all.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1163] Q. Well, has the membership, the club membership, anything to do with whether or not members of the Loyalty League have the privilege of going to the club house to a Loyalty League party?

* * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects to that as being speculative as to whether there was a Loyalty League party or what Loyalty League party, wholly immaterial to any issues. It has been testified heretofore that the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company, a great many of them belong to the Loyalty League, that a great many of them belong to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, that a great many of them belong to this club business, a great many of them belong to the Athletic Association. If anything is done down there that involves employees, there is bound to be certain overlapping.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1167] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. You stated that someone named Fitzgerald asked to withdraw his membership from the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, because he had been made head of the advertising department.

A. That is correct.

Q. If he hadn't asked to withdraw, what would his status have been in that union?

A. Well, we would have asked him to withdraw. He [fol. 1168] wouldn't have been in the union.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1173] Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, so the record may be clear, I would like to have the record show that in response to Mr. Leary's request that we produce the record showing the collection of dues from the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union from the period of its formation up to the time the check-off went into effect, we produced here for his use this morning a series of records which he returned to us, saying he didn't care to examine on them at the present time. I want the record to show that we did have them here.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1181] Q. Did you have any occasion to leave the plant on union business?

A. Well, lots of times I have gone.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1182] Q. Well, tell me any one of them, Miss Todd.

A. Lots of times I have gone to Mr. Tyler's office when I left work at night, and I have gone lots of times at noontimes.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1184] Q. In answer to Mr. Leary's question about comparing the checks that you received monthly from the Donnelly Garment Company for dues of your members you stated that you had some document for each member which you checked over to see whether or not this check of the Donnelly Garment Company was correct; is that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, that [cocument] contained what information?

A. It isn't a document.

Q. Well, a piece of paper, record, or what-not.

[fol. 1185] A. Our cards, Mr. Langsdale, as I explained yesterday—we checked that from our membership file.

Q. But you stated, in connection with that testimony, that at that time you examined the records that you had before you, furnished you by the company, to see whether or not the check that was paid each member was correct.

A. I don't want to dispute you, Mr. Langsdale, but I don't think that is what I said, because we had the file up here on the desk and I was trying to show you how we checked that each month. I don't recall saying that we had a document we referred to.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1189] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, Miss Todd, will you tell me whether or not you received data from the Donnelly Garment Company management which you checked to see whether or not the payments made to your members, to the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union were correct payments? A. I did not.

Q. Did you ever at any time have any information that would tell you whether the Donnelly Garment Company was paying your membership what they should have paid them?

A. I don't know any way to answer that, Mr. Langs[fol. 1190] dale, but the way I have answered it before.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you check up the payments made by the Donnelly Garment Company to the members of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union to determine whether or not those payments were correct?

A. I do check them every month.

[fol. 1191] Q. How?

A. By the use of our membership file.

Q. I know, but according to what you have already stated, Miss Todd, all you have is the amount paid and the file which shows you that the member is a member.

A. Mr. Langsdale, I think this is the way I have stated it before. We keep that membership file active. If there are 1,240 cards in that file, we have 1,240 quarters coming to us, and that is the way we check it every month.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1192] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, the respondent, if Mr. Langsdale is finished with that offer of proof, moves that the latter part be stricken from the record as not made in good faith, because he hasn't asked the witness to go ahead and state that she spent hundreds of hours, or whatever his offer or proof was, on this matter.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, I—

Mr. Stottle (interrupting): It was just—it is not fair to have it appear in the record that he made an offer of proof by this witness—

Mr. Langsdale (interrupting): What have I done to you if I don't prove it?

[fol. 1193] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Stottle, I think— I think that Mr. Langsdale's offer of proof, and the questioning of the witness subsequent thereto speaks for itself.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. I don't know whether you have been asked, Miss Todd, when Mr. McConaughey was transferred from the mechanical department to the bookkeeping department, was it, or the accounting department?

A. Bookkeeping department, I think.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1194] Q. I have forgotten whether he was on your first Board of Chairmen or not.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He has been on all three of them, hasn't he?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I note from what I have from the books that he was getting $59.58 every two weeks until in the month of May, 1937, when he was raised to $65 every two weeks. Do you know whether or not that is true? A. I don't know.

Q. Now, Hobart Atherton was a member of your first board of chairmen? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he still a member? A. No, sir.

Q. Was he a member of your second board?

A. No, sir. Wait a minute. I don't remember, Mr. Langsdale. I have that information, and I can get it for you. But I don't recall right now. I think not, however.

[fol. 1195] Q. I note from the information I have from the company's records that Hobart Atherton was receiving $65 every two weeks until the middle of May, 1937, was raised to $75.83. Do you know that to be [illegible]? A. I do not, no.

Q. Fred B. Brown was a member of your first board, is he not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from what information I have, I note that he was drawing $92.09 for the first half of May, 1937, when he was raised to $97.50. Do you know whether or not that is true?

A. I don't know, Mr. Langsdale.

Q. Charlotte Casey was a member of your first board, was she not? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I note from what information I have from the company's records that she was getting $43.34 for the first half of May, 1937, when she was raised to $48.75. Do you know whether or not that is a fact?

A. That is probably a fact. As I listen to the date you are reading there, and our contract calls for a raise of some of those people in the dividing department, and I think she was one of them.

[fol. 1196] Q. How long did Fred Brown continue on your board of chairmen?

A. Through the first year.

Q. That was down to April, 1938? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I note that in January, 1938, Fred Brown got another raise, from $97 to $108.54 every two weeks. Do you know whether or not that is a fact?

A. No, Mr. Langsdale, I don't.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent objects to this evidence as being immaterial, what different employees, of which there are 1,200 or 1,300 down there—what raises in pay they may have received. The answers have all been in the negative and there is probably no evidence on it as yet, but it seems to me it is immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, in the first place, I don't suppose she knows about these matters. And, in the second place, I cannot tell now whether it is material or whether it isn't. If Mr. Langsdale has the records and [fol. 1197] that is what they show—

Mr. Langsdale (Interrupting): We will bring them in, but I think I have a right to inquire whether or not the president of the union knew about these matters.

Trial Examiner Batten: I am not telling you to discontinue.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1213] Q. I note in your contract, your supplemental contract that you entered into on the 22d of June, 1937, which is Board's Exhibit No. ....

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): 7.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. —7, the following: "Now, therefore, it is stipulated and agreed as follows: the following holidays shall be recognized, Decoration Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas. All workers shall be paid for these holidays, pieceworkers on the same basis as paid vacations." Following that, "The employer shall have the privilege to make up the time lost on account of holidays."

Can you tell me what that means, "Employer shall have [fol. 1214] the right to make up for time lost on account of holidays?"

A. Yes, sir. If they are in a busy season and they want their production, they reserve the right to ask us to work on the following Saturday or a day to make it up.

Q. Without pay? A. No, sir.

Q. What? A. No, sir.
Q. Well, without overtime?
A. I think you will have to interpret that, Mr. Langsdale. It isn't clear to me what you mean.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1215] Q. Well, say you work 48 hours a week; do you work for the same prices you work for 40 hours a week? A. No, sir.
Q. What happens the other 8 hours?
A. They have—get time and a half.
Q. Now, that is what I thought. A. Part of them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1219] Mr. Langsdale: Miss Todd, your working agreement signed on May 27, 1937, as I recall, one month following the organization of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and your supplemental agreement signed on June 22, following, now you have testified that between those dates you and your board of chairmen and Mr. Tyler were working with material to get up this supplemental agreement. Do you know when you first presented your supplemental agreement to Mrs. Reed or anyone representing the management?

You can answer that by telling me whether it was the day it was executed, or two days before, or—

* * * * * *

[fol. 1221] A. The 21st and 22d of June.

By Mr. Langsdale:
Q. The first day you submitted it to the management was the 21st of June?
A. To the best of my recollection, yes, sir.
Q. And had anyone connected with the management of the Donnelly Garment Company been helping you get up that agreement?
A. No, sir.
Q. Had you consulted with anyone connected with the management about the terms of that agreement before the 21st of June, 1937?

A. Not about the terms of the agreement.

Q. Had you consulted with the management about any of the minimum wages provided for in that agreement prior to the 21st of June, 1937?

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1222] A. No, sir.

Q. Had you consulted with anyone connected with the management about the different groups—I mean, group 1, group 2, and group 3, as to who should be placed in the different groups, prior to the 21st day of June, 1937?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you consulted with any of the management about the percentage of the employees to be placed in each group; that is, 40 per cent in one class, 30 per cent in another, and 30 per cent in another, prior to the 21st day of June, 1937?

A. No, sir.

Q. That was all done by your committee and Mr. Tyler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the first time the management saw that agreement or knew anything about its contents was the 21st day of June, 1937, isn't that correct?

A. To the best of my recollection, that is correct.

Q. And on the 22d day of June the management signed it without any changes, is that correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. What changes were made between the 21st and 22d of June?

A. The changes— Wait a minute. I don't think I answered the question previous to this one correctly, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you read the next to the last ques-
[fol. 1223] tion and answer?

(Thereupon the next to the last question and answer were read by the reporter.)

Q. Do you want to change that answer?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: Now, read the instant question, please?

(Thereupon the last question was read by the reporter.)

Mr. Langsdale: Do you want to change your answer to the question: "And the management signed it on the 22d day of June without making any changes?"

A. I will think about it a little bit. I can't answer the question that way. I have told you about that $16.50.

Q. I know. That was a change from your working agreement.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. She is—

A. What I was trying to say was, I can't answer the question that way, because I have answered and told you what happened about that $16.50 minimum.

Q. Well, Miss Todd, as I remember, you said your working agreement contained the $15 minimum, and when you presented your supplemental agreement you had changed that to $16.50?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was in the supplemental agreement when you submitted it to the company on the 21st of June, wasn't it, $16.50?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, the present question is, did the management [fol. 1224] insist on any changes in the agreement you submitted to them on the 21st day of June, 1937?

A. They did insist on that $16.50 being changed.

Q. You mean they tried to put it back to $15?

A. There was a discussion of putting it back to $15, and a discussion of leaving it at $16, and they finally agreed to sign it for $16.50.

Q. Can you think of any other provision in your supplemental agreement about which there was any discussion whatever—

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. (Continuing)—after you submitted it to the company and before they signed it?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1225] Q. What?

A. Discussion about the guarantee for the mechanics was higher than they wanted to sign it.

Q. But they did sign it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, can you think of any other provision in the agreement as you submitted to them on the 21st of June, about which there was any discussion before they signed it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?

A. The guarantee for the dividing department.

Q. That is the minimum guarantee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any other provision?

A. May I look at that contract a minute? Here is one, Mr. Langsdale.

There was a discussion about these five holidays.

Q. Yes. All right. That is, you mean the management was reluctant to sign the agreement with that provision in there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, tell me anything else.

A. There was a discussion about this group 1 operators and hand ironers.

Q. What was that discussion?

A. About the percentage that should be guaranteed, $25.60.

[fol. 1226] Q. And you wanted 40 per cent to be guaranteed that, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did the management want?

A. To the best of my recollection, it is that they would consider 25 per cent, yes, that is correct.

Q. And have they always had that divided into 40 per cent and 30 per cent and 30 per cent?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. Go ahead. You said something about the hand ironers.

A. That same thing applies to that percentage of hand ironers.

Q. Yes. All right.

A. It seems to me like there was one more. I don't recall any others just now.

Q. But they did sign the agreement on the 22d of June, just as you submitted it to them on the 21st of June, without change. Is that true?

A. In substance, I think it was signed as it was presented to them.

Q. With whom did you have the discussion about these various matters that you have mentioned?

A. Mrs. Reed, Mr. Baty and Mr. Ingraham.

Q. Where?

[fol. 1227] A. In Mr. Tyler's office.

Q. Well, that meeting in Mr. Tyler's office on the 22d—it was on the 22d, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is when you had the discussion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long was Mrs. Reed there on the 22d of June before she actually signed the agreement?

A. Mr. Langsdale, I don't remember how long. That meeting was two or three hours that afternoon.

Q. In Mr. Tyler's office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she was there during that two or three hours, was she?

A. Yes, sir. She was out part of the time, but she was there.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1230] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, you were asked yesterday, but I don't think you made a definite answer, as to whether or not you had a desk at which, or with which you worked on the [fol. 1231] 23d of April, 1937. That is the date of the Sigler-Hull demonstration.

A. Are you asking me that?

Q. Yes. Did you have a desk on that day?

A. I did get confused on it yesterday. I did have a desk on the 9th floor.

Q. One the 23d? A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Leary asked you yesterday if the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Loyalty League ever held a meeting jointly, and I believe you said no, not to your recollection. Did they ever hold a meeting, or meetings, consecutively. That is, I mean, was there ever a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union when that union meeting was adjourned and then the Loyalty League was called to order?

A. Not to my recollection.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1239] By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Miss Todd; I believe you testified in answer to a question by Mr. Leary that you never had occasion to determine whether any member of the union had paid his dues since the check-off system was established. Hadn't you previously testified that you determined whether every member of the union had paid their dues—their dues had been included in the check from the company each month?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Todd, in answer to Mr. Langsdale's questions on the matter of separation of your supplemental contract of June 22, exhibit No. 7, you had obtained information from Mr. Baty and others concerning wages, and so forth, at the plant that your committee used in preparing that contract, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not just prepare it out of your own head and submit it on June 21?

A. No, sir. I didn't think that was what he asked me.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1242] MAY FIKE, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. State your name and address, please.

A. May Fike, 5221 East Twenty-ninth Street.

Q. Is that Kansas City, Mo.? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in Kansas City?

A. Over 20 years.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become employed by that company?

A. It was sometime in 1926 or 1927 the first time, I don't just remember.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1243] Q. How long then did you remain on the single needle machine? A. About a week or ten days.

Q. Is that the elementary operation with a machine, the operation on which all operators first start to learn?

A. No. When I first started they put me on this first machine, and then she asked me if they needed a binder, and she asked me if I could do binding, and I told her I could if anyone else could, and she put me on the binder.

Q. Were you an experienced operator before you went to Donnelly's?

[fol. 1244] A. Yes, sir, but not on dresses.

Q. Who do you mean by "she" put you on a binder?

A. The instructor.

Q. Who was that? A. Pearl Collins.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1246] Q. Do you know a Fern Sigler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was she ever employed by the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know when she began work there?

[fol. 1247] A. I think she started there in '36, but I don't know just when. It was either the first of the year of '36 or the latter part of '35, and I don't know exactly. I think it was in the early part of '36 she started.

Q. Is Fern Sigler related to you?

A. She is my sister.

Q. Now, in what section and under what instructor were you working from the time you went back to the plant in 1933?

A. I worked under three or four of them. I worked under Pearl Collins, and Mrs. White.

Q. Mrs. Whom? A. White.

Q. Was that Pearl White?

A. No, Pearl Collins and Mrs. White.

Q. What is Mrs. White's first name?

A. I don't know.

Q. Is it Lillian? A. I believe it is.

Q. Now, who are the other instructors under whom you worked beginning in 1933?

A. Rose Hendricks and Pearl Atchison, and then I worked a few days for Marie Patton.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1248] Q. During all the time that Fern Sigler worked there, did both of you work on the same floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how large are those floors on which you worked? A. The whole floor?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I don't know. It was about half a block one way and I couldn't say just how far, I suppose, 200 feet or more the other way. I don't know.

Q. On what floor was that that you and Fern Sigler worked? A. On the sixth floor.

[fol. 1249] Q. And on that sixth floor, how many sections were there?

A. There was either four or five on that floor.

Q. Now, is there any wall between the sections so that you can't see from one to the other?

A. No, sir; no walls.

Q. Are there any obstructions of any kind on the entire floor?

A. There is just—well, I don't know what they call them, them braces that they hold up the building with.

Q. You mean, pillars?

A. Yes, sir; pillars. I guess that is what they called them.

* * * * * * *

Q. Well, at the sixth floor of the Donnelly plant where you and Fern Sigler were working, could you see where she was working?

A. Yes, sir. She was just across the table from me, on the next table across from me.

Q. Now, what do you mean by "table"?

A. They had, in each section, they had two long tables.

Q. About how long would you say each of the tables were? A. Oh, I wouldn't know. I don't know.

Q. Would you say about anywhere near as long or longer than the Court's bench right back of you?

[fol. 1250] A. Yes. It was as long as this room, or longer. There was 20—there was 10 machines on each side of these tables. There was 20 machines on each table, and they were about 27 or 30 inches apart, the machines were.

Q. The machines were set right into a cutout of the table, were they? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did the machines receive their power off of a central drive shaft under each table?

A. One drive shaft run—

Q. (Interrupting) Each half section?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, just let the witness answer.

A. I think one of those switches run both sides of the table, a shaft on each side. It was the center, and one switch run all twenty of them machines.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, then, were there two switches then that you would have to start up to start a section going?

A. If you started a whole section, yes, one table. One switch run one table. There was a switch to each table.

Q. How far away, then, were—was the table at which you worked from the table at which Fern Sigler worked?

A. Oh, about 14 or 15 feet. Maybe not that far. It wasn't over that.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1251] Q. Now, in what section were you working as of the 30th day of April, 1937?

A. What section?

Q. Yes. A. 523.

Q. How long had you been working in Section 523?

A. Well, I don't know exactly. It was over a year.

Q. Who had been your instructor in Section 523?

A. Rose Hendricks and Pearl Atchison. I worked under Rose Hendricks first and then Pearl Atchison took the section.

Q. Do you know who the thread girls in Section 523 were during the time you worked there?

A. No, I don't remember who they were.

Q. Now, will you explain, Mrs. Fike what these thread girls do or did in the section where you worked?

[fol. 1252] A. They carry your work to you, and take it away, and bring your thread and your binding, keep you supplied, and answer the telephone when the instructor is busy.

Q. Where is the telephone in each section?

A. Ours was at the end of the east wall.

Q. Does the instructor ever work at anything?

A. The instructor?

Q. Yes.

A. Only when she is instructing some girl.

Q. When she—

Mr. Patten (interrupting): Will the witness speak just a little louder, please?

By Mr. Leary:

Q. And when the instructor is not teaching some girl or instructing some girl, what does she do?

A. Well, she usually examines work part of the time. I don't remember. I don't know just what she does do most of the time.

Trial Examiner Batten: Can you hear her now, Mr. Patten?

Mr. Patten: I heard that, yes.

A. (Continuing) She gives the girls their orders, and answers the telephone when she is not busy instructing.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Does the instructor have a desk?

A. Well, they have a table up there, yes.

Q. That is a table separate from the other two tables in each section that you refer to?

[fol. 1253] A. Yes.

Q. Who tells you what work to do or who did [you] tell you what work to do when you were in that section?

A. The instructor, Pearl Atchison.

Q. Do you know who it was who told the thread girl what to bring to each operator?

A. The instructor.

Q. Have you ever heard the instructor say that to a thread girl?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would be the circumstances or what was the circumstance when you did hear that?

A. She would tell her to bring us a certain number of work, if we should be changing work. If we wasn't changing work, she would just tell her to bring us work, if we didn't tell her. We sometimes told the thread girl ourselves.

Q. What do you mean by "changing work"?

A. A different style dress.

Q. How often would you change your work?

A. In my double needle work, it was—they was brought to us mixed up.

Q. What?

A. They were brought to us all mixed up. It was the same work on all of the—on the double needle, but on the straight binder, why, the work varied. I bound skirts part [fol. 1254] of the time, and waists part of the time; done trim binding, that was binding pockets or collars on the straight binder, but on the double needle, it was all the same work, just under arm and underneath the arm.

Q. Did you ever have any question as to what work you should do or how you should do any particular operation?

A. Well, not so much so on the double needle.

Q. Well, when you were on the single needle doing your binding?

A. On the straight binder?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the instructor would have to show us lots of times, or tell us how to do it if it happened to be new work.

Q. Well, is it a fact that she did do this occasionally?

A. I don't understand.

Q. Is it a fact that the instructor did occasionally have to tell you personally how to do your work?

A. Yes. She had to tell all of them part of the time, if it happened to be new work. They would have to tell us how to do it, how to put it together. It come to us all cut, punched, and notched.

Q. What do you mean by "notched"?

A. Well, that is places where, which ends goes together, and such things as that, and punches, if it would have to be punched, that was marked where to sew to or where to [fol. 1255] bind to, or where to leave off or where to add another piece on.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1256] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Miss Witness, when an operator did an operation incorrectly who would tell the operator that it had been done wrong?

A. Our instructor.

Q. Has that situation ever happened to you?

A. A few times.

Q. When you had any question about your prices with whom did you take them up?

A. The instructor.

Q. And did the instructor remedy the situation or do anything at all about the prices?

A. Sometimes she did. I don't know just who she took that up with. She would take that up with someone else sometimes, and sometimes we would get a raise. Most of the time we didn't.

Q. Do you know who it is who turns on and shuts off the power in the various sections?

A. The instructor.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

[fol. 1257] Q. Mrs. Fike, on any occasions were any employees laid off for a few hours or a half day or a day?

A. In slack season the girls took turns about, each one of them; or, maybe one or two or three would take a half day or a day off, but the time was divided between the girls.

Q. Who would tell you when to take your time off?

A. Our instructor.

Q. While you were employed in this section 523, or any other section, did any person other than your instructor give you any directions as to how you should do your work?

A. As to how to do our work?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. And when orders came from the office do you know who handled them in each section?

A. The instructor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1261] Bertha Estes, a witness called by and on behalf of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. What is your full name?

A. Bertha Estes.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1262] Q. Are you employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been employed by that company?

A. Twelve years.

Q. What do you do for that company?

A. I am a stenographer in the credit department.

* * * * * * *

Q. Do you occupy any position or office in the Nelly Don Loyalty League?

A. Yes.

Q. What position?

A. Secretary.

Q. How long have you been secretary?

A. Since February, 1938.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1263] Q. Were there any books or minutes turned over to you by your predecessor secretary?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you kept any minutes of any meetings of the Nelly Don Loyalty League?

A. We do not keep minutes.

Q. You don't keep any minutes at all?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether any minutes were kept by your predecessor secretary?

A. Not to my knowledge.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1264] May Fike, the witness on the stand at the time of recess, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (continued).

Mr. Leary: Have you the last question, Mr. Reporter?

Trial Examiner Batten: The last question you asked was about the Nelly Don Loyalty League, the very first question about that.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Were you ever a member of the Nelly Don Loyalty League?

A. I was.

Q. Did you become a member when the organization was first formed?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1265] Q. Tell how it happened that you became a member of the Nelly Don Loyalty League?

A. From my first knowledge?

Q. Yes.

A. There was a slip of paper sent around, I don't remember what it read on that paper, informing us of something like that.

Q. Well, I show you what has been identified as I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 2 and ask if that is the slip of paper you refer to.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was passed around where?

A. Through the sections.

Q. By whom?

A. I don't know who brought it there. It was started at one end of the tables and came down from girl to girl. I took it from the girl on my right.

Q. And when it came to you what were you asked to do with it? A. Read it and pass it on.

Q. Sign it?

A. I don't remember if we signed it that time. I think we did, though I know there was another slip passed around [fol. 1266] after this, or about the same time. They might have been both at the same time. I don't remember.

[fol. 1267] Q. I show you what has been marked for identification Board's exhibit No. 14 and ask you to state, if you know what that is.

A. That is the pledge we signed for the Loyalty League, to join the Loyalty League.

(Thereupon the pledge above referred to was marked for identification "Board's Exhibit No. 14.")

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, has that been introduced as yet?

Trial Examiner Batten: It was just marked, Mr. Lane.

Mr. Lane: I object to any further interrogation on it, except for purposes of identification, until it is introduced and we have had a chance to look at it.

Mr. Leary: I will offer it at this time.

Mr. Lane: I object to exhibit No. 14 for the reason that it has not been properly identified. There has been no showing as to where it originated, how it originated, or who was responsible for getting it up, and for that reason it could be in no way binding here on anybody.

Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

[fol. 1268] Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection, and the further objection that it is immaterial to any issue in this case.

Trial Examiner Batten: It is received.

(The pledge heretofore marked "Board's Exhibit No. 14," was thereupon received in evidence.)

Trial Examiner Batten: Have you another copy of that, Mr. Leary?

Mr. Leary: No. I will have a copy made.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you sign this Board's exhibit No. 14 at about the time you also saw for the first time International's exhibit No. 2, which I just showed you?

A. I think they were all attached, but I am not quite sure about that.

Q. Where were you when you signed Board's exhibit No. 14, the little card?

A. At my machine.

Q. Did Board's exhibit No. 14 come to you in the same manner that International's exhibit No. 2 came to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that happen during working hours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not your instructor was present when those documents came through your section?

A. She was in the section, yes, sir.

[fol. 1269] Q. Do you know whether or not she said anything at the time?

A. She said we should sign and pass that to the next girl, if I remember right.

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Examiner, I move the answer be stricken out as not binding on respondent, what the instructor said.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled. By overruling the objection I am not saying it is binding, but I am overruling the objection.

Mr. Stottle: We further object because it is not identified as to what instructor said that.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may proceed.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you at that time know Mrs. Elizabeth Reeves, referring to February, 1935, when this Loyalty League was started?

A. Mrs. Reeves?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was she?
A. I think she was production manager.
Q. About this time, in February, 1935, or thereabouts, did you have occasion to go to Mrs. Reeves' office with any other girls?

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, intervener objects to this and all similar questions with respect to the formation of the Nelly Don Loyalty League for the reason that it was long [fol. 1270] prior to the formation of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union. There is no connection between the two organizations, and this testimony could in no way be binding on the intervener here; and for the further reason it is anterior to the matters inquired about under the complaint here, and for that reason it is immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: You are not representing the Loyalty League, are you, Mr. Lane?

Mr. Lane: I am representing the intervener, and I make the objection on behalf of the intervener for the reason that what happened then does not in any way bind the intervener and does not prove any of the issues brought by this complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, it is hard for me to tell now whether it does or doesn't. Objection overruled.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent objects to the question for the reason that it relates to matters prior to the passage of the National Labor Relations Act.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

* * * * * *

A. If I remember right, we were called up there to Mrs. Reeves' office, ten at a time.

Q. Who sent you to Mrs. Reeves' office?
A. The instructor.

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, may my objection go to all [fol. 1271] of these matters?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may have a continuing objection. Mr. Lane, do you wish to have the same?

Mr. Lane: I ask that I have an objection to all of these things.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Was this during working hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to Mrs. Reeves' office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the ten other girls? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you got to Mrs. Reeves' office who was present?

A. Mrs. Reeves, and there was someone else in there but I don't remember who that was.

Q. In addition to the girls with you, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what, if anything, did Mrs. Reeves talk about in that meeting?

A. I don't just remember what she did talk about; something concerning the loyalty of the girls. I don't just remember what it was.

[fol. 1272] Mr. Leary: Was there any discussion at that meeting about your unions?

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I object to the question. It is leading. The witness has answered she didn't know what was talked about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, the witness said she didn't [recollection] just what it was. I presume under those circumstances you have a right to further question the witness, don't you?

Mr. Ingraham: I don't think counsel has got a right to suggest what the subject of the discussion was when he asked the question, and he is doing that.

A. It was something concerning that, but I don't remember—concerning the union, but I don't remember what it was.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1273] Q. Mrs. Fike, do you remember whether or not you went to any meetings of the Loyalty League after it was formed in February, 1935?

A. Yes, I attended all the Loyalty League meetings they had while I was there.

Q. Where did those meetings used to be held?

A. Most of them on the second floor. It seems to me we might have had a few on the third, but I am not sure about that.

Q. And when would the meetings be held?

A. During working hours.

Q. How many persons would go to the meetings?

A. Well, the whole factory, as far as I know. They must have went.

Q. Who would send you, if anyone, to the meetings?

A. Our instructor.

Q. Would the power continue to run while you were at the meetings?

A. No, sir. The instructor would shut the power off before we left our machines; tell us to go to the second floor, or whichever floor it happened to be on.

Q. Do you know whether or not your instructors were in the Loyalty League? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they attend the meetings?

[fol. 1274] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not any other officials or executives of the company were ever at any of the Loyalty League meetings that you attended? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were those persons?

A. Mrs. Reeves, sometimes Mrs. Nell Donnelly would be there, Reed. Well, I think most of them, but I don't just recall the names of all of them.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1277] Q. Now, I direct your attention to March 18, 1937, and ask you if you attended any meetings on that day. A. March 18th?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1278] Q. Where was this meeting held?

A. On the second floor.

Q. How were you notified of the meeting?

A. The instructor told us about the meeting.

Q. Who was the instructor?

A. Pearl Atchison.

Q. What did the instructor say?

A. She said they were calling a meeting—had turned off the power and were calling a meeting on the second floor—for all of us to go to the second floor.

Q. Did all of the girls in your section go to the second floor? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you see the girls from the other sections going to the second floor, too? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

Mr. Leary: Is that the same way in which you were sent to the Loyalty League meetings?

[fol. 1279] A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as assuming she was sent to the Loyalty League meetings.

Trial Examiner Batten: She just testified she was.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. What is your recollection, Mrs. Fike, as to the time of day when this meeting was held on March 18?

A. It was during the afternoon, I think some time between 2 and 3 o'clock.

Q. And at this meeting do you know who presided?

A. It seems to me it was Rose Todd.

Q. Do you know whether any supervisors were present at this March 18 meeting?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well now, Mr. Leary, I think you had better ask her if any of these people were there. You asked about supervisors; her idea of supervisors may be different from mine or yours.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Was Mrs. Hyde there? A. Yes, she was.

Q. Was Mrs. Gray there? A. Yes.

Q. Was Mrs. Reeves there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether or not Mr. Baty was there?

A. Yes, sir, I think he was.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1280] Q. Will you state, Mrs. Fike, what was the first thing that happened at that meeting?

A. I think Rose Todd presided at that meeting and—

Q. (Interrupting) Did somebody introduce Miss Todd?

A. I don't remember. I don't believe they did.

Q. What, if anything, did Miss Rose Todd say that you remember now?

A. She said they had received a letter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union that they were going to read at the meeting. I don't just remember what her conversation was.

Q. What about this letter? Do you know whether or not it was read? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your recollection as to who read the letter?

A. Mrs. Reed read the letter. She introduced Mrs. Reed, and she read the letter. She cried over the letter, and was grateful for the loyalty of the girls for standing by her in this—I don't know what you call it, trouble, I suppose.

Q. Do you remember what, if anything, else Mrs. Reed said?

[fol. 1281] A. She said they were not going to have any union in their shop, that she was capable of running her own business and when she wasn't capable of running her own business she would go out of business, that Dubinsky or any other "ski" wasn't going to tell her how to run her business.

Q. Go on with anything else you remember Mrs. Reed saying.

A. I don't just remember all of her conversation.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1287] Q. Mrs. Fike, do you remember signing a document known as a Loyalty petition on March 2, 1937, which read as follows:

"We, the undersigners, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company, wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the positions which we hold with this organization, and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed"?

A. Yes, sir, I signed one of them.

[fol. 1288] Q. Is that what was commonly referred to as the "Loyalty petition"? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you tell the circumstances under which you signed that petition?

A. Well, it was brought into the section—it started up at the other end. I don't know who brought that, because I was working and didn't see, but it came down the row of machines and each girl read it and signed it.

Q. Did you sign it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether your instructor was present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, do you know whether or not the instructor can see any papers that pass down the table which the girls read and sign?

A. There is never no papers come into that section that she don't know about it before the girls get them, and—

Mr. Lane: I move to strike the answer as not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: Let her finish.

Mr. Lane: I thought she had finished.

Trial Examiner Batten: She was saying something else there.

Trial Examiner Batten: What were you saying?

A. She is notified of what comes into that section be-[fol. 1289] fore the girls get it. Sometimes she personally brings it to us. At that time it was started up at the other end of the machine.

. . . . . .

Mr. Lane (Interrupting): Just a moment. If the witness has now finished her answer, I move that it be stricken for the reason that it is not responsive.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Lane: I object to it further for the reason that it calls for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Can the instructor watch what is passing down the table? A. Yes, sir

Q. Was this "Loyalty petition" passed down the table during the working hours? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not Mrs. Reed, Nellie Don Reed, ever said anything about the "Loyalty petition," when you were present?

A. She said at that March 18 meeting that she was thankful for the girls' loyalty to her.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mrs. Fike, speak louder, please.

A. She said at that March 18 meeting she was thank[fol. 1290] ful for the girls' loyalty to her, and that it touched her deeply to think they were all so loyal to her.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, do you know whether there are any rules of conduct that the girls must follow when they are working in the sections? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are some of the rules that you recall?

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute. Are they public rules, or posted rules, or what kind of rules?

A. The instructor gives you those orders when you first go to work there.

Trial Examiner Batten: Tell what orders she gives you.

Mr. Lane: May I inquire, what time is being spoken of?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Are you referring to the time you went to work there? A. At all times.

Q. Tell us what rules you are talking about.

A. That we should wear white uniforms, leave our machines once in the morning and once in the afternoon—

By Mr. Leary:

Q. For how long a period each time?

A. For 5 minutes—and that our uniforms should always be clean, changed at least twice a week, and oftener if they became soiled before, and that there was to be no talking during working hours. That is about all I remember.

[fol. 1291] Q. When was it, Mrs. Fike, that you became a member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union? A. March 15, 1937.

* * * * * *

Q. On April 23, 1937, did you work at the plant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see your sister, Fern Sigler, outside or in the corridors of the plant that morning before you began work?

A. I seen her before she went into the building.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1292] Q. At what time were you supposed to go to work that morning? A. 8 o'clock.

Q. What time would you say it was that you talked to your sister, Fern Sigler?

A. Between 7:30 and a quarter of 8.

Q. Do you know whether at that time Fern Sigler was wearing a union button? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that an International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union button? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever known of anyone at the plant of Donnelly Garment Company wearing such a button before?

A. No, sir.

Q. What, if anything, did Fern Sigler say to you about the union button?

Mr. Ingraham: I object to that as hearsay.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. She told me that she had on her pin that morning and that she was going to wear it into the shop, and I told her she had better not or she would lose her job.

[fol. 1293] She said, well, she was going to wear it anyway. And I said, "Well, I will lose mine too." And she said, well, she didn't think I would—I don't remember her exact words, but something to that effect.

She told me to go on up and not stay with her at all, so I went upstairs. Her locker wasn't in the same place mine was. That is the last I talked to her until the evening of the 23d.

Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out—I object to the part of the answer that relates to what Fern Sigler said; and I move that the balance of the answer be stricken out as self-serving.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection and the same motion to strike.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled—

Mr. Leary (Interrupting): Now, I submit this is outside of the scope of the intervener's interest.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute.

(Continuing)—and the motion to strike is denied.

Mr. Leary: Whose motion to strike is denied?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham's motion to strike.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1294] Q. Was Fern Sigler on the sixth floor in her white uniform, and so forth, when you arrived there?

A. No, sir. She came in after I went in.

Q. About how long after your arrival on the sixth floor [fol. 1295] did Fern Sigler arrive there?

A. Oh, just a minute or two. It wasn't long.

Q. Did you see Fern Sigler when she went to her machine? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

Q. Now, after the power was turned on, will you tell what happened?

A. They turned on the power at 8 o'clock. We went to work, and I heard a commotion and turned to look.

Q. How long after you started to work did you hear this commotion?

A. Oh, about 10 or 15 or 20 minutes. I don't know the exact time.

Q. And had the power been turned on in Fern Sigler's section at the same time, if you know?

A. Yes, sir. She was working.

Q. When you heard this commotion and turned, what did you see?

A. A group of girls coming into the hall, or into the building from the hall, and went up to her machine, back of her—

[fol. 1296] Q. (Interrupting) To whose machine? Fern's machine?

A. Fern's machine, back of her, and across the table and around the end. They were singing songs and yelling and throwing slurs.

Mr. Ingraham: I object to the answer "throwing slurs." Let the witness state what was said.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just tell us, Mrs. Fike, what there was said.

A. I don't remember what was said then about that.

Trial Examiner Batten: What do you mean by "slurs"? You must have heard something. How could you describe it?

A. Well, anybody that didn't have any more sense than to join the International Ladies' Garment Workers' wasn't decent, or was indecent; something to that effect.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, I move that the answer be stricken out for the reason the witness hasn't named the persons that made such remarks.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Do you recall who made those remarks?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. How many people were coming in there? How large a crowd?

A. Oh, about 25 or 30. I don't know exactly how many. There was a bunch of them. They were all yelling.

Q. You mean, coming right in through the door and right into this section you worked in?

[fol. 1297] A. Yes, sir,—

By Mr. Leary:

Q. (Interrupting) Just a moment; were you working in this section, or was it Fern Sigler's section they were coming to?

A. They went by the end of our section over to her machine. They had to pass our section to get to her's.

Q. They went directly to Fern Sigler's section; is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, the intervener makes the same motion to strike as made by the respondent for the reason that the persons alleged to be making such remarks are not identified.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1298] Trial Examiner Batten: I will deny the motion to strike, but you clearly have the right to make it upon the statement of the Board's counsel.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, in this first group, and I wish you would restrict yourself to the first group of girls that came down there, Mrs. Fike,—is it your testimony, there were how many in it? A. About 25 or 30.

Q. And did those girls come from other sections on the sixth floor, or did they come from some other sections on other floors?

A. Part of them were from the sections on the sixth [fol. 1299] floor and part of them came from outside.

Q. Did they all have their white uniforms on?

A. Yes, sir.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, Mrs. Fike, you say part from other floors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, how do you know they were from other floors?

A. Because I knew all the girls that were on our floor, and there was girls among them that I knew to be on other floors.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lane: I make the same objection and move to strike the latter portion of the answer as to what they told her, for the reason that no person making such a statement has been identified.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same objection, and the further objection that it is hearsay testimony.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1302] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Were there any instructors present when this first group of girls came to Fern Sigler's machine?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, who were the instructors that you know and saw as being present?

A. In her section?

Q. Well, in her section and your section.

A. Pearl Collins.

Q. Was she an instructor in Fern Sigler's section?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the instructor in your section?

A. Pearl Atchison.

Q. Where was Pearl Collins when this demonstration was happening?

A. Up at the east end of the table, the other end from where Fern was.

Q. But in the same section?

[fol. 1303] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was Pearl Atchison when this demonstration took place?

A. She was at the east end of our section, between the two tables.

Q. How far away would you say Pearl Collins was from the demonsfration or from the place where Fern Sigler was sitting?

A. Pearl Collins?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I couldn't judge exactly. It was lacking one machine of being the full length of that table, whatever the length of the table was. I suppose it would be, oh, maybe a hundred-foot table. It had ten machines, the length of ten machines, and they were either 27 or 30 inches apart, those machines were. There was ten of them.

* * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Mrs. Fike, when this crowd came in, how many were there crowded around Fern Sigler?

A. About 25 or 30 in the whole crowd.

Q. And were they all around her there as she sat at the table?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were there more than one talking?

[fol. 1304] A. They were all hollering and talking. That is the reason—

Q. (Interrupting) I mean, everybody was yelling, hollering and talking?

A. Yes, sir. That is why I couldn't judge just who said what, because our instructor told us to go on about our work, and I couldn't just set and look over there all the time, but I was looking, and they was all hollering and I couldn't tell which one. I heard a lot of remarks, but I couldn't tell which one said which, because I was about 10 or 15 foot from where she was at.

Q. Well, do you recall the names of any of this first group that was around her?

A. Well, Ethel Carpenter was down there, and if I remember right, she worked on eight, and I know she was in that bunch, but I don't just remember. There was one girl by the name of Sprofera.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Was that Mary Sprofera?

A. Yes.

[fol. 1305] Q. Where did she work?

A. I believe she was out in the finishing department on that floor, but I don't remember just where she worked.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, will you just tell me what you remember; first, just what was done when this group came up to Fern Sigler's chair there?

A. They all hollered, "Get up and go home. We don't want you in here." And they said she had on—that is what they hollered, that she had on both her Loyalty League pin and her union pin. Of course I never seen the Loyalty League pin and I don't know—

Q. (Interrupting) Just tell me what happened, Mrs. Fike.

A. And they started singing songs, part of them was the Loyalty League songs, which I don't remember now, and telling her they didn't want her there, and that she couldn't wear a union pin in there.

Q. Now, can you identify any of the individuals that you heard say any of those things, Mrs. Fike?

A. Well, of course they were all hollering. I couldn't describe now which ones did say which.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is all.

Mr. Lane: Intervener renews the motion to strike this testimony for the reason that the persons alleged to have made such remarks have not been identified.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

[fol. 1306] Mr. Ingraham: Respondent makes the same motion.

Trial Examiner Batten: The motion is denied.

. . . . . .

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you remember, Miss Fike, what songs these girls were singing?

A. Well, they were the Loyalty League songs, but I don't remember what those songs were.

Q. How many songs did the Loyalty League have, do you know?

A. Oh, two or three—maybe more. I don't just remember how many they had.

Q. Have you told the Examiner all of the things that you heard said to Fern Sigler by this crowd of girls?

A. They told her she couldn't belong to the International Union and work in their shop.

Mr. Lane: Intervener makes the same objection that has been heretofore made.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection heretofore made?

Mr. Lane: To this same line of testimony. I made an objection to the nature of it, and I am renewing it now.

Trial Examiner Batten: Objection overruled.

Mr. Lane: In order not to burden the record, may I have a continuing objection?

[fol. 1307] Trial Examiner Batten: You mean as to this incident of April 23?

Mr. Lane: Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves to strike the answer out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony; and for the further reason that anything the employees said is not binding on the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

Mr. Ingraham: And, your Honor, may I have a continuing objection to this incident?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, to this incident.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Mrs. Fike, do you know whose duty it was to send these girls back to their machines?

A. The instructor, if she could do it.

Q. Do you know whether or not either of the instructors who you testified did see the demonstration, namely, Pearl Collins and Pearl Atchison, did attempt to send them back?

A. No, sir, they didn't.

Q. How long did this first demonstration continue?

A. Well, about 10 or 15 minutes. I don't remember the time.

Q. And while this first demonstration was going on did any of the girls in Fern Sigler's section continue to work?

A. No, I don't think they worked, but they wasn't in that crowd.

[fol. 1308]—Q. And then finally did this group of girls leave Fern Sigler's section?

A. Yes, sir, they left.

Q. Then, how long a time passed before any other group of girls came in?

A. I should judge about 10 minutes; maybe a little more.

Q. How many girls were in the second group?

A. About 40 or 50.

Q. Do you know where those girls came from?

A. No. They were from different floors, that is, from what I was on. Of course some of the girls on our floor got up and came into the bunch when they came back; that is, from the finishers and pressers, but most of them were from off that floor.

Q. When you say "off that floor" you mean from floors other than the sixth floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many groups of girls came to Fern Sigler's section that morning?

A. How many different groups?

Q. Yes.

A. Three.

Q. What time was it that the demonstrations finally stopped?

A. Somewhere after 10 o'clock—between 10 and 10:30, I don't remember just what time.

[fol. 1309] Q. Were the instructors present when the second and third demonstrations took place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not the instructors made any effort to stop the second or third demonstration?

A. No, sir, they didn't.

Mr. Lane: I move to strike that out as a conclusion. She may state what she observed but not the conclusion that they made no effort.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand as it is.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Will you state what was said and done by this second group of girls when they came to Fern Sigler's section?

A. Well, about the same thing as the first ones said and did, only of course they made more noise because it was a larger crowd. And they pushed her chair up under the machine.

Q. Could Fern Sigler work when her chair was pushed up under her machine?

A. No, sir. They held her so tight up against the machine she couldn't move.

Q. Do you know how many girls were in the third group that came to Fern Sigler's section?

A. Not exactly, but they were a larger crowd than any one of the other two. They filled both aisles around the end, and they couldn't all of them get around past the end of our section.

[fol. 1310] Q. So that some of them had to remain in your section?

A. At the end of our section, yes, sir.

Q. Did the second and third groups likewise point right at Fern Sigler's machine and surround it?

A. Yes, sir. The first group took her Loyalty League pin away from her, the first group that came up there.

Q. Tell us what was said and done about taking the Loyalty pin away from her.

A. They told her they wanted her pin, and she told them they could have it if they would give her the 35 cents she had paid for it, and Ethel Carpenter gave her the 35 cents for the pin.

Q. How did she give it to her; was it wrapped up at all?

A. It was wrapped up in a piece of toilet paper.

Q. Did you hear any threats made to Fern Sigler?

A. The last bunch that came in there threatened to throw her out of the window. They said they didn't want her in there, and kept hollering at her to go home, that she couldn't work with them and belong to that union —to our union—the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and kept suggesting they throw her out of the window.

Mr. Ingraham: I move that the answer be stricken out for the reason that it calls for hearsay testimony, not binding on the respondent; and for the further reason, the witness has not identified a single individual in this [fol. 1311] third group, and has not identified anyone as making the remarks she has just stated.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will deny it as to the second reason. As to the third reason, the matter of identification, Mr. Leary, I think you should further identify this group.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Are you able to name any persons in the third group?

A. Ethel Carpenter was in all of them, and Mary Sprofera—I don't remember the names of all of them. I really knew more than that, but I don't remember the names of all of them. There was—I can't think of her [fol. 1312] first name, her last name is Hayward—

Q. Do you know where this person named Hayward worked?

A. I believe she either worked on the seventh or eighth floor, I don't remember which.

Q. Was she an operator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you name any other persons who were in any of the groups?

A. I don't believe I remember the names of them.

Trial Examiner Batten: The third objection, Mr. Ingraham, is overruled.

* * * * * * *

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Can you identify any of the people in the third group who said any particular thing, Mrs. Fike?

[fol. 1313] A. Well, Ethel Carpenter and May Sprofera told her they didn't want her in there. I am not sure about who said "Throw her out the window." I think that was Mary Sprofera, but I am not sure about it.

Mr. Shepard: I ask that her answer about throwing the girl out the window be stricken out for the reason that she is not sure who said it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Motion denied.

* * * * * * *

Q. Did you see any persons, men in particular, standing around the sixth floor when these three demonstrations took place?

A. Mr. Baty, if I remember right, was standing at the west end of one of our tables watching it.

Q. That is, in your section?

A. At the end of one of the tables in our section.

Q. Did you see Mr. Baty do anything?

A. No, sir.

Q. When the demonstrations concluded, some time between 10 and 10:30, as you have testified, do you know what happened to Fern Sigler?

A. I think it was Mr. Baty—there was someone else too, but I don't remember who, took her to the office.

Q. Do you remember whether Rose Todd was present?

* * * * * *

[fol. 1317] Q. Did any of the girls that you remember in Fern Sigler's section continue working during these three demonstrations?

[fol. 1318] A. No, sir, I don't believe they did.

Q. How long a time separated all of the demonstrations?

A. Between demonstrations?

Q. Yes.

A. About 10 or 15 minutes.

Q. After the demonstrations were over, did you go back to work?

A. Well, we was supposed to be working the whole time, but we couldn't work with all that uproar.

* * * * * *

By Mr. Léary:

Q. Well, had you been doing any work while the demonstrations were going on?

A. Trying to. We worked a little.

Q. Then the -then did things go back to normal and you continued to work all the time after the demonstrations ended?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear your instructor say anything to you after you went back to work?

A. Yes. She asked me if I didn't know Fern belonged to the union.

Q. Well, when was it that she asked you this?

A. During the demonstration, and I told her no, I didn't, and she kept insisting that I did know it, and I—she said, "Well, do you belong", and I said "No, I don't [fol. 1319] belong." And she said, "Now, May, you don't aim to tell us that your own sister, that you didn't know she belonged to the union," and I said, "No, I didn't", and she said, "Well, you know that this will cause you to lose your job", and I said—

Mr. Ingraham (interrupting): Now, just a minute. Your Honor, is my objection standing that it is hearsay and not binding?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I understood both Mr. Lane and Mr. Ingraham had a continuing objection to the incident of April 23, 1937.

Mr. Ingraham: That is all—this, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, concerning all of this incident.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, go on with what your instructor, Pearl Atchison, was saying to you.

A. She said "You know this will make you lose your job, don't you?" and I said "Well, it shouldn't." I said "She is three times seven; what she does is no concern of mine." And she said "Well, it would." And I said "Well, I couldn't help that, it wasn't my fault", and she still kept insisting that I belonged to the union, and that I knew Fern did, and I finally told her—of course, after the demonstration, after the demonstration was over, she came to me again and was talking about it, and she kept insisting that I belonged, and I finally told her I did.

Q. Did the other girls in your section say anything to you in Pearl Atchison's presence during that day?

A. Yes.

Q. Who were the other girls who talked to you?

A. I don't remember what Glady's last name was, the girl that sit on my right of me, said she felt sorry for me. She said that "You know, May, you will lose your job", and I said "Yes, I suppose I would." And she said "It was a shame that Fern would do a thing like that to me", and she said that if she had been a sister like she ought to have been she wouldn't have done that at all because it would cause me to lose my job, too, and Pearl Atchison said it was a shame, after I had been there these many years that Fern would do a thing like that to me, and Violet Sneed said that if it had been her sister—if her sister would do her that way that she would beat hell out of her.

Mr. Shepard: If your Honor please, I object to all of this as being absolutely irrelevant and immaterial, doesn't tend to prove anything in the case as to what these other operators have told her what they would do if Fern Sigler were her sister.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may proceed. I think we should have the whole story about these instances, irrespective of who said it.

[fol. 1321] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Pearl Atchison was present when all of this was being said, wasn't she?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1322] Q. Well, did Mrs. Atchison have a desk in your section, or a small table, where she worked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did she sit at this small table while she was making these various statements to you during the day?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where was she when she made the statements?

A. At my machine before noon.

Q. And when these other girls that you have testified about as having talked to you during the day were talking to you, was Mrs. Atchison at your machine?

A. During the day?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how far away from Mrs. Atchison's table was your machine?

A. About 8 or 10 foot.

Q. How many girls sat between you and Mrs. Atchison?

A. Two.

Q. Do you know whether Fern Sigler returned to her [fol. 1323] machine that day after she went to the office with Mr. Baty?

A. No, sir, she didn't.

Q. Did she up until April 30, 1937, ever return to work there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you continue to work the remainder of the day, April 23d?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you work the next day?

A. I believe that was Saturday morning. I did work the next day. I remember going to work, but I think that was Saturday morning.

* * * * * * *

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Now, I show you a calendar for the year 1937 and ask you to state whether or not the 23d of April wasn't on a Friday.

A. Yes, sir. I know it was now.

Q. And were you working regularly on Saturdays during that period of time?

A. Not regularly.

Q. You might have worked on the 24th of April, is that it?

A. I did work the 24th.

Q. Did you return to work on April 26th?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1324] Q. The following Monday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that month of April during the busy season or the slack season, Mrs. Fike?

A. Well, work was a little slack, not very much, though.

Q. And when—do you know what the practice was in the section where you worked when work was slack, as to laying off girls, and so forth?

A. Each girl would take a half a day or maybe a couple of them at a time would take a half a day or a day off, and they took turns about, about taking their days so some one wouldn't lose any more time than the other.

Q. Who was it, now, who told the various girls to take their proportionate time off?

A. Pearl Atchison, the instructor.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1325] Q. Then when you went to work on April 26th, what time did you start?

A. What time did I start to work?

Q. Yes.

A. 8 o'clock.

Q. How long did you continue to work?

A. 2 hours, or about that.

Q. Were you running your machine during these 2 hours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, if anything, happened after about 2 hours' work?

A. I worked the 2 hours and Pearl Atchison came to me and told me that there wasn't work enough for all the girls, and I would have to go home. I asked her why I should go home, I had taken my time off already, that I didn't see why I should go home when the rest of them was working, and she said, well, she said "That is what—that is the orders from the office.

Q. And what, if anything, did you say?

A. I asked her if I was being laid off on account of Fern and she said no, she didn't think so. So I—

Q. (Interrupting) That is Mrs. Atchison you are talking about now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do after you had had your conversa-
[fol. 1326] tion with Mrs. Atchison?

A. I went up to the employment office to Mrs. Hyde and asked her why I was being sent home, and she told me on account of no work, and I said "Well, I feel like you are sending me on account of this episode of Fern's."

Q. What else did you say to her?

A. And I said "Well, it wasn't my fault because Fern did what she did," that I didn't know why I should be sent home on account of her, and she wouldn't admit that that is why they was sending me home.

Q. Well, what finally was said between you and Mrs. Hyde?

A. I asked her when I was to come back, and she told me to call in the next morning; that would be Tuesday, the 27th.

Q. Was anything said when you were sent home on the 26th of April about the character of the work you were doing, as to whether it was good or bad?

A. No, sir.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1329] Q. Did you call Mrs. Hyde on the next day, April 27?

A. The next morning, I went to the union office first, and then I called up the shop afterwards and she told me there was no work.

Q. What time did you call the shop?

A. Oh, no. I am mistaken. Excuse me. My answer is that wasn't right. Let me change it.

Q. All right. Did you talk to Mrs. Hyde the next day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time was it that you talked to her?

A. About 10 o'clock.

Q. Was it over the telephone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say to Mrs. Hyde, or was it she personally that you talked to?

A. Yes, sir. I told her who I was, and she said, "We have been trying to get you all morning. We want you to come in to work right away." Now, that is April 27 you are talking about, isn't it?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. And I said, "All right, but I am downtown. I will have to go home first." So I went home.

I didn't work any in the morning, because the lunch hour was on when I got in. I believe it was about 12 when I went to work.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1330] Q. Did you continue to work the rest of that day, April 27, and the following days in that week?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1337] By Mr. Leary:

Q. I believe you testified you were called back to work on the morning of April 27, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to work in your regular section after the lunch hour on that day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time was it that your lunch hour ended and you began working?

A. I believe it was 12 o'clock.

Q. That was, the lunch hour ended?

A. Or 12:15. I think it was 12:15.

Q. That is when your lunch hour was over?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you began working again?

A. Yes, sir.

[fol. 1338) Q. How long were you supposed to work that day?

A. To 4:30.

Q. Did your instructor say anything to you and the other girls in your section during that afternoon?

A. Yes. Pearl Atchison said it was a shame that as good an operator as Fern was, she should do a thing like that. She said she was the fastest and best operator in Pearl Collins' section.

Q. Did you attend any meeting that afternoon?

A. Yes, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: What date was that?

Mr. Leary: April 27.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. How were you notified of the meeting?

A. At 2 or 2:30 the power was turned off and we were all told to go to the second floor.

Q. Who told you that?

A. Our instructor.

Q. What did the instructor say?

A. She sent everybody to the second floor. She said there was going to be a meeting and everybody should stay in a body so we could get back to work together, or something like that.

Q. Did you have your white uniform on at the time she [fol. 1339] shut the power off?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you wear your white uniforms to the meeting on the second floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you stay in a group with your instructor, Pearl Atchison, when you went to the second floor?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you consider that second floor company property?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Lane: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion on the part of the witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think, Mr. Leary, it certainly calls for a conclusion. If you want to let it stand, however, as it is, I will overrule the objection.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent moves that all statements as to what Pearl Atchison said be stricken out as not binding on respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: Denied. I think the objection goes primarily to the weight that can be given such testimony.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Did you go to this meeting on the second floor as soon as the power was shut off and your instructor made this statement to you and the remainder of the girls in your section?

A. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1340] Q. Did you see the girls in the other sections on your floor leave their machines and proceed, in a manner similar to the girls in your section, to the second floor?

A. I saw them all going to the elevator. We went down on the elevator to the second floor.

Q. Did you see girls coming from all of the other floors of the building to the second floor?

A. After I got on the second floor you could see them; there was some there, and there was some coming in.

Q. And when you were on the second floor do you know how many girls eventually came into the auditorium or hall?

A. All of them, as far as I know.

Q. As far as you know, was the plant completely shut down? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present during the entire time of this meeting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how long would you say it lasted?

A. Well, I didn't work any more that afternoon. I don't remember just how long it lasted but I never went back to work any more that afternoon.

Q. Did you go back to your section with your instructor at the conclusion of the meeting?

[fol. 1341] A. Yes, sir, to put our machines and working materials away.

Q. When you left to go to the meeting did you put any of your machinery away or clean it up, or put your materials away? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you fully expect at that time to return to work that afternoon? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your best judgment as to the length of time this meeting occupied?

A. Well, I don't know just what time it was when we went. It was around 2 or 2:30, and it was around 4:30 or 5 before we left the second floor after the meeting.

* * * * * * *

Q. Now, I show you, Mrs. Fike, what have been identified as Board's exhibits Nos. 8-1 to 8-11, inclusive, which purport to be notes on a meeting held April 27, 1937, and ask you to read those notes or minutes and, at the conclusion of your reading them will you state to the Examiner whether the things related in those minutes actually hap-[fol. 1342] pened, to the best of your recollection.

Mr. Ingraham: Now, Your Honor, I submit that is highly improper procedure for an examination. He can ask this witness what took place at this meeting, or what she heard, but to hand her minutes and have her read the minutes and refresh her memory or put some ideas into her head, and then have her answer the question Yes or No about the minutes I say is improper.

Mr. Shepard: Further, Your Honor, there has been no showing that the witness' memory needs to be refreshed. She says she attended that meeting. She should be questioned from her memory of that meeting.

Trial Examiner Batten: I wouldn't say it is an improper way to proceed. I would say there are more satisfactory ways, and one is to have this witness testify, first, as to what transpired at this meeting from her recollection.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1343] Mr. Lane: Intervener desires to object on the ground it is an illegal and improper method of examination.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1344] Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, as I stated, if Mr. Leary wants to proceed this way, you may go ahead and read it and answer the question.

Mr. Leary: Now, I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Leary: Who presided at that meeting, Mrs. Fike?

A. Rose Todd.

Mr. Tyler: I would like to ask if the witness has finished reading the minutes.

The Witness: I haven't finished looking through them.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1345] Mr. Tyler: I objected, that the record will show that Mr. Leary has handed the witness what purports to be, and I presume is, copies of the minutes of the first meeting, and asked her to read it, and then tell him whether that expresses what happened, and then after waiting long enough for her to almost read all of them, he then withdraws the question and presents another question as to what happened. Now, that destroys the possibility of ruling on whether it is a proper method of examination [fol. 1346] to ask her to read the minutes first, and then ask her what happened.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Tyler, I have already ruled that as far as the Examiner is concerned, Mr. Leary's question was proper. I said it was not improper and I overruled the objection and permitted him to proceed in that manner if he wanted to, and he chose to withdraw the question, which he has a perfect right to do.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1347] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Who was it who presided at that meeting, Mrs. Fike?

A. Rose Todd.

Q. Was she president of the Loyalty League at the time? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1348] Q. What, if anything, did Rose Todd say in opening the meeting, that you remember now? I don't want her exact words. I want the substance of what she said, Mrs. Fike.

A. She said that it had come to a point where the Loyalty League was not sufficient to protect the Donnelly Garment Workers, and that they would have to form a union of their own, and that they had retained a lawyer or two of them—Mr. Tyler, and I believe the other one was Mr. Gossett—or something like that, and they had retained them to form this union and that some of the girls would wonder why the Loyalty League wasn't sufficient. She explained that it wouldn't be sufficient, that they would have to have an organized union in their shop to keep out this International.

[fol. 1349] Q. Did she say what the name of the union would be?

A. Yes, she said that they had decided on a name, the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and that as bad as they hated the name "union", they would have to add that to their organization in order to make it a legal union, and then, I don't remember all her conversation. That wasn't all of it. But she introduced Mr. Tyler and he got up and spoke about it. I don't remember what his conversation was—and he had the by-laws.

Q. What by-laws do you refer to?

A. The by-laws that had been made for our union organization, our new—

Q. (Interrupting) That had been made for you by Mr. Tyler, you mean? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1351] Q. Do you remember whether any votes were taken at this meeting?

A. Yes, sir there were.

Q. Well, what was the first thing that you now remember that you voted upon?

A. Well, it wasn't exactly a vote. We passed out cards for the employees to sign to join this union.

Q. Who passed out the cards?

A. The machinists. The cards were given to the machinists.

Q. Was anything said by anyone on the rostrum as to the reason the cards were being passed out and what to do with them, and so forth?

A. Yes, sir. Miss Todd said these cards were being passed out for the employees to sign for, in order to form their union, and that they were not to be signed until Mr. Tyler had made his speech.

Q. Are these the cards that you saw passed out, namely, Board's Exhibit 3?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was one of those cards given to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom was it given to you?

[fol. 1352] A. One of the machinists. I don't remember who.

Q. And after he gave it to you, did you sign it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then what did you do with it?

A. One of the girls sitting beside of me reached over and took the card and started picking up the cards in that row of seats, and Miss Todd told her to give them back and let us hold them until Mr. Tyler was through, and then she would have the machinists personally pick them cards up.

Q. Did she go on to explain why she wanted to follow that system of picking them up personally from each of the girls?

A. She wanted him to read the by-laws before the cards were picked up.

Q. Did Miss Todd say definitely why she wanted each individual to hold onto her particular card until the machinists or one of them could pick up the cards from that person?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did the machinists later on in the meeting pick up the individual cards from each of the girls?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether everybody in the hall signed the card at that time?

A. They were all picked up but two.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, you mean does she know, personally whether everybody in the hall signed a card, Mr. Leary?

[fol. 1353] Mr. Leary: Well, when I say signed the card, I mean returned the card to the officers of the organization on the rostrum.

Trial Examiner Batten: Of course, it must be obvious she wouldn't know that.

Mr. Leary: I will withdraw the question.

Trial Examiner Batten: If I had been there I couldn't tell that, or anybody else, I don't think.

Mr. Leary: Well, she could have been told such.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that is a different question.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. All of these cards were picked up but two. Is that it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how do you know that some two individuals had failed to return their cards?

A. Because they counted, the machinists counted the cards when they gave them out and they were supposed to pick up that many cards when they picked them up.

Q. Where did you get this information?

A. Rose Todd told us, and when they picked up the cards each one counted their cards, and I don't remember which one it was said that there was two cards missing, and they called for these cards.

Q. Who called for the cards?

[fol. 1354] A. Rose Todd, and I don't remember if they turned them back or not. I don't know who had the cards.

Q. Do you remember anything in addition that Rose Todd said about the two missing cards?

A. She said they could return the cards whether they wanted to sign or not.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1355] By Mr. Leary:

Q. I believe, Miss Fike, that before the noon recess you were giving testimony concerning the meeting of April 27, 1937. Further on that line of examination, do you remember whether any officers were elected at that meeting? A. For the union?

Q. Yes. [Q.] Yes, there was.

Q. Do you remember what method was used to nominate officers?

A. They selected, I think it was four or five—there could be more, to go outside and decide who they should nominate.

Q. Who was it that selected the four or five persons to make up the nominating committee?

A. Miss Todd, if I remember right.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1358] Q. Were there any other persons' names placed in nomination than the ones who the nominating committee had brought back?

A. No, sir.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Did they vote on each office separately, or on all of them together?

A. I don't think so. No, they didn't. They voted on all of them together.

Q. You mean, they voted on the entire group of officers at one time? A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. After these persons were elected to their respective offices, do you know whether they appeared on the platform or the rostrum?

A. No. I believe they just stood up.

Q. I don't know whether I asked you or not to state whether the by-laws were voted upon at that meeting.

A. No, sir; they wasn't.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1359] Trial Examiner Batten: Go ahead, Mr. Langsdale.

Mr. Lane: Before Mr. Langsdale begins his examination, I desire to renew the objection I made at the time he began his examination of Miss Todd. I don't want to burden the record by being compelled to make that objection with respect to every witness' examination, but I do renew it here so the record is clear that I am not waiving that objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just what was that objection?

Mr. Lane: I objected to his examination of Miss Todd for the reason that his position as counsel for the International is one in unity with interest of that of the Board, and in view of that fact, he should not be permitted to have [fol. 1360] a separate examination of the witness the Board produces, separate from that of the Board itself.

Trial Examiner Batten: Supposing that you be allowed a continuing objection.

Mr. Lane: I would like the record to show that that objection will continue throughout the trial as to the witnesses the Board produces.

Trial Examiner Batten: On that matter—and I will make the same ruling.

Mr. Shepard: Your Honor, may the record show that the respondent makes the same objection and requests the same objection continue throughout the trial?

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have the same objection and the same ruling, and a continuing objection.

Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mrs. Fike, it is testified to here that some time between the 27th of March and the 1st of April, there was a meeting of employees at which each one was requested to contribute 50 cents for the purpose of raising money to pay Mr. Frank Tyler for services to the employees. Was there ever any such meeting that you know of?

A. There never was no such meeting, to my knowledge.

Q. When was the first time that you ever heard that Miss Todd or anyone else had consulted Mr. Tyler or any other lawyer in behalf of the employees?

[fol. 1361] A. On the 27th day of April, I mean in the afternoon.

Q. That was at the meeting in which the union was formed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the first you ever heard of Mr. Tyler, was it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the first information you ever had that anyone had consulted him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mrs. Todd—Mrs. Fike,—I beg your pardon—did you ever attend any dance or other function given by the Nelly Don Loyalty League at what is known as the Club House? A. No, sir.

Q. You never were there?

A. Not at this Club House.

Q. Were any dues paid by the members of the Nelly Don Loyalty League? A. You mean into the League?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you pay dues?

A. Oh, I don't remember whether there was in that or not.

Q. Now, did they have other clubs or associations within the—among the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company besides the Loyalty League?

[fol. 1362] A. Other clubs?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other club did you belong to there?

A. Each section has a club. We formed one in the section I was in that was known as the Betty Boop Club.

Q And did you pay dues in that club?

Mr. Lane: I didn't understand the name of that.

The Witness: Betty Boop.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Did you pay dues in that club? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much?

A. I don't remember exactly. I think it was 5 cents a week.

Q. Do you know what was done with the money that was accumulated by payment of those dues?

A. For entertainment, steak fries, parties at different one's houses belonging to the club.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1363] Q. Who was Mrs. Wheary?

A. She was [supervisors] over all instructors.

Q. She was over Pearl Atchison and all of the other instructors? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1365] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Ingraham?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Fike, did I understand you to say that you went to work at the Donnelly Garment Company in 1927 or 1928?

A. It was sometime during one or the other of those years. I don't remember just when I did go there.

Q. What was your name at that time? A. Sutton.

Q. Later, Mrs. Fike, did you go under the name of Dulle?

A. Yes, sir. I was married to a man by the name of Dulle.

Q. When was that?

A. That was in—I think, when I went back to work the last time.

Q. In 1933?

A. Yes, sir. No, It wasn't. It was before that.

Q. About how long before that?

A. I don't remember.

Q. I will hand you respondent's exhibit No. 3 and ask if [fol. 1366] that is in your handwriting? Is that your signature, Mrs. Fike? A. Yes.

(The application sheet above referred to was marked for identification "Respondent's Exhibit No. 3.")

Q. Is the rest of the writing your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, do you see on this application that you made to the Donnelly Garment Company, May 9, 1932, the question:

"Have you ever been employed by the Donnelly Garment Company"?

And the answer: "No."

A. I see it, yes, sir.
Q. And you wrote that "No"?
A. I don't know. I guess I did.
Q. Well, that is in your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence exhibit No. 3.

Mr. Leary: I object to the introduction of this exhibit, Mr. Examiner, for the reason that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. It neither tends to prove or disprove any of the issues in this proceeding.

Mr. Ingraham: Your Honor, it goes to the credibility of the witness.

[fol. 1367] Trial Examiner Batten: It will be received.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1368] By Mr. Ingraham:
Q. Mrs. Fike, you stated that you were at the March 18 meeting of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you stated that Mrs. Reed was there at that meeting? A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you please state again what Mrs. Reed said at that meeting?
A. She read that letter, if I remember right.
Q. Are you sure about that?
A. The letter that we got from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Q. Now, let's just stop a second there. What did the letter state? A. I don't remember..

* * * * * *

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. You do not remember anything about what was stated in the letter? A. No, I don't remember.

Q. What else did Mrs. Reed say?

A. She said they didn't intend to have any union in their shop.

[fol. 1369] Q. What else?

A. She was capable of running her own business, and when she wasn't capable of running her own business, she would go out of business.

Q. Did she say anything else?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Now, when did you remember that Mrs. Reed said that?

A. Well, it has been since the Judge Miller trial.

Q. Who have you talked to since the Judge Miller trial in connection with this case?

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner.

Trial Examiner Batten: She may answer.

A. I talked with, since the Judge Miller case?

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Yes.

A. I talked with Mr. Langsdale; Jane Palmer.

Q. Did they refresh your memory about what Mrs. Reed is supposed to have said?

A. In going over my statement after the 23d of April, it refreshed a lot of my memory.

Q. Had you made a statement prior to that time?

A. Prior to what time?

Q. April, that you have referred to. A. No, sir.

Q. You have made a statement later?

A. After that 23d of April, 1937.

[fol. 1370] Q. Well, when did you make the statement?

A. I think that was—I don't remember the exact date. I think that was on the morning of the 27th of April, if I remember right. I could be wrong.

Q. Who did you make the statement to?

Mr. Leary: Just a minute. I think you are both talking about different years. May the witness state what year she is referring to?

Mr Ingraham: Certainly.

The Witness: 1937.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Who did you make the statement to at that time?
A. Miss Jane Palmer.
Q. That is April 27, 1937?
A. I think it was. I am not sure.
Q. Where did you give that statement to Miss Palmer?
A. In Miss Palmer's office.
Q. At the union office? A. Yes, sir.
Q. What time of day? A. I don't remember.
Q. In the morning?
A. I think so, but I don't remember.
Q. And had Miss Palmer sent for you?

Mr. Leary: I will object to that, Mr. Examiner, as [fol. 1371] entirely immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. No, sir, she hadn't.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. How did you happen to go up to Miss Palmer's office? A. I don't remember why I went.
Q. Didn't you call the Donnelly Garment Company from Miss Palmer's office that morning?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what did you ask—strike that out.

Why did you call the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Because she told me to call that morning, Mrs. Hyde told me to call that morning.
Q. Did Miss Palmer tell you to call?
A. No, sir, Mrs. Hyde told me to call.
Q. Now, what else did you talk to Miss Palmer about?

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, as immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, unless there was something that had to do with this case—

Mr. Ingraham: Strike the question.

Mr. Ingraham: Did you talk to Miss Palmer about your employment at the Donnelly Garment Company?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as immaterial. I don't see as it has any bearing on this case.

[fol. 1372] Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. I don't remember.

Mr. Ingraham: Do you recall anything that Miss Palmer told you to do?

Mr. Leary: I object to that, Mr. Examiner, on the same ground.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

Mr. Leary: May I have a continuing objection to her conversation with Miss Palmer at this time?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

A. What was the question?

Trial Examiner Batten: Read the question.

(Whereupon, the question was read by the reporter.)

A. No, I don't remember.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Miss Palmer tell you to get information for her?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, why were you up at Miss Palmer's office?

A. I don't know exactly why I went there. I just went. That was all.

Q. So your memory now is blank on why you were there?

. . . . . .

[fol. 1373] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Fike, at that time you were in the employ of the Donnelly Garment Company; is that not true?

A. That was on Tuesday after I was laid off on Monday.

Q. Well, did you work after that for the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, I came up at 10 o'clock or thereabouts. She told me to come in to work; Mrs. Hyde told me to come in to work.

Q. Now, how many times before this particular visit had you been to see Miss Palmer? A. Never.

Q. Can you state whether Miss Palmer sent for you?

A. That morning?

Q. Yes. A. She did not.

Q. How did you know where her office was?

A. Well, I knew. I belonged to the union and I knew where the office was.

Q. Was Miss Palmer at the union office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else was there?

A. I don't remember who else was there.

Q. Now, I want you to take time and think of everything [fol. 1374] that occurred that morning when you talked to Miss Palmer.

* * * * * *

A. I don't remember.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Did Miss Palmer give you any money?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Miss Palmer promise you a job? A. No, sir.

Trial Examiner Batten: Now, just a moment. Are you examining this witness on the basis of part of your answer that the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union—if you want to excuse the witness, I will be glad to, but I want to know definitely whether this has anything to do with trying this Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. If it has, why, we will stop because they are not on trial here, [fol. 1375] and I am just not going to go into those matters.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, your Honor, I think that if this witness could remember what took place it would establish that she voluntarily left the employ of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, if your purpose is not the purpose I have stated, but something else, you may proceed, if you tell me it is some other purpose.

Mr. Ingraham: I expect, your Honor, of course, if this witness makes any admissions, to use it for any purpose.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, you may use it for any purpose except the purpose which I have said I don't propose to go into now, but you are to put in your offer of proof. In other words, I don't propose that any of the attorneys are now going into matters that I have called for offers of proof on. Now, if you are examining a witness for some other purpose, you may go ahead and proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Fike, when next did you see Miss Palmer after this meeting of April 27th?

* * * * * *

[fol. 1376] A. I don't remember. I don't think I saw her until, oh, for a month or more.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. When did you make this statement that you refer to?
A. The statement I made to her?
Q. Yes.
A. I told you, on the morning of the 27th.
Q. And what was that statement?
A. They have it here. I don't remember just when it was.

Mr. Ingraham: Have you got that statement?

Mr. Langsdale: Yes, we have it, but we are not going to give it to you. It is confidential.

Mr. Ingraham: I don't know anything confidential about it.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, it is. Would you give us all the [fol. 1377] statements you got from Rose Todd and everybody else in your case?

Mr. Ingraham: Mr. Langsdale, this witness says she has made a statement. She isn't a party to it.

Mr. Langsdale: I don't think it is necessary to produce from counsel the statements that have been given by clients in the trial of a lawsuit.

Trial Examiner Batten: The only time that I require the production of them is when counsel use them for examining a witness, or to refresh a witness' recollection. Then I always insist they be made a part of the record, whether there is any request or not. Now, you may make your request upon Mr. Langsdale or Miss Palmer, and if they do not want to produce them, I certainly shall not instruct them to do so.

Mr. Langsdale: Miss Palmer says that she doesn't have it here, Bob. My objection seems to be premature. It is my policy to refuse to give statements, and yours, too, in a lawsuit.

Mr. Ingraham: All right. You haven't got it?

Mr. Langsdale: Miss Palmer says she hasn't it here with her.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Fike, at this time, now, can you remember just what you said in that statement?

A. No, I don't remember, only that they had laid me off after 2 hours' work on Monday.

[fol. 1378] Q. And that is all that you remember was in the statement?

A. That is all I remember right now.

Q. Now, they laid you off after 2 hours' work on Monday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the Monday, April 26th? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so at that time you were laid off from your employment with the company?

A. For that day; yes, sir.

Q. Then you went back later?

A. I went back on Tuesday.

Q. Now, when did you go back on Tuesday?

A. The 27th.

Q. I mean, what time?

A. Well, it must have been after 11:30 because I never worked any until we went back to work after our lunch hour, and I believe our lunch hour ended at 12:15.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1385] Q. Now, you were a witness in the case before Judge Miller in the Federal Court? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And of course you talked to the attorneys for the International before you took the witness stand in that case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You told them all that you knew about the facts at that time?

A. I might not have told them all I knew. I might have told them all I remembered at that time.

Q. You told them all that you remembered at that time? Didn't counsel for the International put you on the witness stand to testify in that case?

A. What was the question, please?

Mr. Ingraham: Withdraw it.

Q. Did counsel for the International put you on the witness stand in the case before Judge Miller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And counsel for the International asked you questions? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you if this question was asked by counsel for the International:

"Q. Were you at a meeting there in the month of March? A. March 18?

"Q. At which you were all called downstairs?

[fol. 1386] "A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And who were present representing the management at that meeting?

"A. There was several there. They were all there that could get away to go to the meeting. Miss Gray, Miss Hyde."

Were you asked those questions and did you make those answers? A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Q. Was Mrs. Reed there, Mrs. Donnelly?

"A. I don't just remember. I think she was. Mrs. Reeves and they were nearly all there."

Did you make that answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Q. Was Mrs. Reed there that day, Mrs. Donnelly?

"A. Yes, I think she was.

"Q. Did she make a speech?

"A. Yes, she did.

"Q. I wish you would state, to the best of your recollection, the substance of what Mrs. Reed said.

"A. She said that— I don't remember who said this, I don't remember her speech."

Q. Did you make that answer? A. I did.

Q. "Q. Do you remember the speech of any of them, Mrs. Fike?

"A. Yes. I believe that was—someone who got up and [fol. 1387] spoke and said they wouldn't have no union in their shop."

Q. Did you make that answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. "Q. Do you remember what any of the management said at that meeting, if they said anything, with reference to the union?

"A. They said there was not—

"Q. You will have to name somebody that said it, if anything was said.

"A. I don't remember who said it."

Q. Did you make that answer?

A. I said, what?

(Thereupon Mr. Ingraham showed the portion of the transcript referred to to the witness.)

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1393] Q. Mrs. Fike, did you tell Jane Palm that the Donnelly Garment Company was a sweat shop?

A. I don't—

Mr. Leary (interrupting): I object to that as being immaterial.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I don't see how it is material.

Mr. Leary: I didn't hear you.

Trial Examiner Batten: Unless it is in line with this matter that I asked you to submit an offer of proof on.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, I think I have a right to inquire from this witness just what she thinks of the Donnelly Garment Company working conditions, to show her good faith about whether she wants her job back. That is her contention.

Trial Examiner Batten: If that is the purpose of your examination, you may proceed.

Mr. Ingraham: In your opinion, does the Donnelly Garment Company operate a sweat shop?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for a conclusion.

Trial Examiner Batten: You may answer.

A. What was the question?

Mr. Leary: I don't believe I understand what the meaning of a sweat shop is.

[fol. 1394] Trial Examiner Batten: I think I have a pretty good idea of what it means, and I haven't worked in a shop, either. I don't think there is any question—

Mr. Leary (interrupting): I don't think it can be defined.

Trial Examiner Batten: I know, but there is a lot of things you can't define, and you still have some idea of what they are, Mr. Leary. You may answer.

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Examiner, I don't recall that in this complaint of the Board any charges have been made at all that the Donnelly Garment Company is a sweat shop.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, Mr. Langsdale, on the basis of Mr. Ingraham's purpose of this question, she says that she wants her job back. Now, Mr. Ingraham states that he wants to question her on these matters to show whether she made that statement in good faith or not.

Mr. Langsdale: Well, of course, you mean that she wants her job back, that statement?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes.

Mr. Langsdale: We are not charging them with being a sweat shop in this complaint.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I told Mr. Ingraham to go ahead on the basis that he stated he was examining her i respect to these matters.

The Witness: May I have the question?

* * * * * *

[fol. 1395] A. I don't believe I ever told anybody that. I don't remember ever telling anybody that.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, is the plant, in your opinion, a sweat shop?

Mr. Leary: I object to that as calling for a conclusion and asking the witness' opinion.

Trial Examiner Batten: I don't know that it is calling for a conclusion, but I certainly don't think it is within this matter that you stated, Mr. Ingraham, what she thinks about it herself.

Mr. Leary: I wonder whether or not that would be a valid defense to the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: Just a minute—

Mr. Leary (interrupting): Pardon me, if you are not through.

Trial Examiner Batten: I mean, now, if she said these things to somebody else, or made disparaging remarks about this company, for instance, they were no good, and she never wanted to go back to work and work for them, and she wouldn't go back if somebody offered her a job.

Now, that is one thing, but to ask her, now: what do you think about it? I don't think, Mr. Ingraham, that question is—

* * * * * *

[fol. 1396] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Have you ever told anybody that the Donnelly Garment Company is a sweat shop?

A. I don't think I ever did.

Q. Have you ever told anybody that they paid low wages?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever told anybody that they have a speed-up system that ruins girls' health?

A. I don't think I ever did.

Q. Were your wages higher at the Donnelly plant than they are at these other plants at which you have worked since you left the Donnelly employment?

A. They wouldn't be if we had steady employment, as the Donnelly Garment Company has.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, the question is, were the amounts that you were receiving at the Donnelly Garment Company more than you have been receiving at these plants,—isn't that it?

Mr. Ingraham: That is right.

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, Miss Fike, you stated that you joined the International Union on March 15, 1937?

A. That is right.

Q. Where did you join?

[fol. 1397] A. At my home.

Q. Was that the time that the International was beginning its campaign against the Donnelly Company?

Mr. Leary: Objection. There has been no showing that they ever had any campaign against the company.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Ingraham: Was the International conducting a drive against the Donnelly Garment Company at that time?

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, now, Mr. Ingraham, that comes very definitely, I think, within the matter I want an offer of proof on. That is, now, if you want to ask this witness, is that the time that the union started its organizational campaign, that is an entirely different thing, but when you say, was that the time when they started their campaign against the Donnelly Garment Company, now, I am not going into that until I get an offer of proof on it, Mr. Ingraham.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, can I make an offer through this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean, as a part of the offer which I have requested you to make?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, I think all you will have to do is to incorporate the offer you would make at this time in that written offer of proof. I am not going, as we [fol. 1398] go through, Mr. Ingraham, as I said before, trying the issues as I have now defined them—I am going to limit it to those issues.

Now, when the time comes for you to make your written offer of proof on that entire matter, I want it in one place, and you may make it, I think, as we tentatively agreed upon, in any way you see fit, either by reference to testimony or by other means, but I am not going to delay this part of the hearing as we go along with these witnesses, beginning to make this offer. It has got to be present all at one time in one place so that I can pass upon the whole matter.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, now, do I understand, your Honor, that later when I submit the written offer of proof, I can include an offer that I would make through this witness?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may.

Mr. Ingraham: And not stop now to do it?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, you may. In other words, I am not going to place any restrictions upon any of the parties in the offers that I have asked you to make. You may make them just as complete as you please, just as little as you please, by any method you please, but I don't want to delay this part of the hearing to have those made.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1400] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Now, where did you sit with reference to Fern Sigler? A. Across one table.

Q. Were you facing each other? A. No, sir.

Q. Your back was to her back? A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how far away was Fern Sigler?

A. Oh, about 14, 15, 16—I don't know exactly. I am no judge of feet.

Q. Was there anything in between where you were sitting and where Fern Sigler was sitting?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Any tables, or anything?

A. There was one table.

Q. Now, did you go over to where Fern Sigler was?

A. You mean, during the demonstration?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do? A. Stayed at my machine.

Q. Did you sew? A. Part of the time.

Q. What did you do the rest of the time?

A. Watching the demonstration.

[fol. 1401] Q. Did you stand up?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were seated all the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the power on?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was on during the entire time of the demonstration?

A. Mine was; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether Fern's was?

A. No, I don't.

Q. I will ask you, Mrs. Fike, if that is a picture of the section in which you were employed, and also is the section in which Fern Sigler was employed?

(Thereupon, the document above referred to was marked as "Respondent's Exhibit 4" for identification.)

A. Which is the east end of that? Is this the east end (indicating)?

Q. Yes.

A. It doesn't look—this is supposed to be our section?

Q. I think so. I think it is this one (indicating).

A. Well, there was girls working on this other row here, up to about there. I don't see none at that end.

Q. Well, this isn't that day.

A. Oh, I see. Well, that is the way our section looked. [fol. 1402] Yes, that looks like our section.

Mr. Ingraham: Respondent offers in evidence Exhibit 4.

Trial Examiner Batten: Does that include, Mr. Ingraham, more than one section?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes. Fern Sigler's section and Mrs. Fike's section.

Mr. Ingraham: Mrs. Fike, I will hand you Respondent's Exhibit 4, and could you put a check mark where you were sitting and where Fern Sigler was sitting?

Mr. Langsdale: Mr. Ingraham, will you state in the record—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Have her mark it in ink, I would suggest.

Mr. Langsdale: Will you state in the record when this photograph was taken?

Mr. Ingraham: This photograph was taken—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): I would suggest that you put a cross, No. 1, where she was and a cross, No. 2, where the other person was.

Mr. Ingraham: This was taken just prior to the hearing in the injunction suit before Judge Miller.

[fol. 1403] Mr. Langsdale: Long after the 23d of April, 1937?

Mr. Ingraham: Yes.

A. That doesn't look quite familiar to me. I can't swear that was the section. So many of those sections look alike that I couldn't swear that was the section. I can't tell you who those girls are. If I could tell who they are, I could be sure.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Is the arrangement similar to the arrangement that was in existence when you were there in 1937? I mean by that, the tables and the machines?

A. Yes; the tables look like they are arranged the same.

Q. And will you state if you were sitting at the table at the left, or some other table?

A. Well, which would be the left on here?

Q. There (indicating on exhibit).

A. I think, if this is our section, it was about there (indicating) that I was sitting, but I can't swear just where.

Q. Would you mark that, please, with ink?

A. I wouldn't want this taken as a definite answer.

Trial Examiner Batten: You said, if that is your section, that is where you were sitting?

A. Yes.

(The exhibit was accordingly marked by the witness.)

A. It was about there (indicating).

Mr. Ingraham: Will you mark where your sister, Fern [fol. 1404] Sigler, was?

A. This (indicating) is the other table in our section. If this is the one, it was about there. (Indicating).

Trial Examiner Batten: You had better put "number 1" on the cross where she said she was, and "number 2" where she says Fern Sigler was.

(The exhibit was accordingly marked.)

Mr. Ingraham: Let the record show that "number 1" refers to where Mrs. Fike was sitting, and "number 2" refers to where Fern Sigler was sitting, in respondent's exhibit No. 4.

By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Mrs. Fike, what you saw there you saw while you were sitting at your machine? A. I did.

Q. And the power was on? A. Our power was on.

Q. When the power is on is there any noise from the shaft?

A. There is a little, but only if the machines are running is there an excessive noise.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1405] By Mr. Ingraham:

Q. Well, did you hear what was said at your sister's table?

A. I didn't hear everything.

Q. You have recited everything you did hear?

A. Well, it might not be all, but that is what I remember.

Q. Your instructor told you to keep at work?

A. She told us a time or two to get to work.

Q. And she told the other girls in your section the same thing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did any of the girls from your section join in the demonstration?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether or not the instructor in Fern Sigler's section told the girls there to keep at work?

A. I couldn't hear what she said. She was up at the other end.

Q. So, you didn't hear anything that she said?

A. Fern's instructor?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1412] Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane.

By Mr. Lane:

Q. Mrs. Fike, in connection with this meeting of March 18, 1937, I believe you stated that Rose Todd presided at that meeting.

A. I think I did.

Q. Now, who talked at that meeting?

A. Rose Todd talked.

Q. And who else?

A. Mr. Tyler.

Q. Mr. Tyler?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the meeting of March 18, 1937?

A. Oh, I am mistaken in that. I believe it was Herb Mulcher.

Q. Anybody else?

A. I don't believe I remember right now who it was. I did know at the time.

Q. Can you tell me the name of anybody else who talked at that meeting other than Rose Todd and Herbert Mulcher?

A. March 18th meeting?

Q. March 18, 1937.

A. Mrs. Reed.

Q. And anybody else?

A. There was others, but I don't remember who they were.

Q. You say there were others who talked?

[fol. 1413] A. I think there was. I don't know. I don't remember.

Q. You can't name the name of anybody other than those three that you have mentioned?

A. Not right now, I can't.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1416] Q. And wasn't it common talk around the Donnelly plant that there was a great deal of commotion out there around those Missouri, Gernes and Gordon plants?

Mr. Langsdale: I object to that as immaterial; wouldn't tend to prove or disprove any issue in this case, and opens up a new avenue for testimony. I think the Examiner has ruled that line out up to now.

Mr. Lane: They went into the matter of these busses and these identification cards, and these men on the dock. I think, therefore, I have a right to show what was taking place there with—

. . . . . .

[fol. 1417] Mr. Lane: The purpose of my making this offer, or asking this question and similar questions, is to refute the charge that has been made here by counsel for the International and Board that this union we represent is a sham union, and my purpose is to show that atmosphere that surrounded the employees at that time, and their re-[fol. 1418] action, and attitude, as having some bearing upon why they took the action they did take on the part of the union.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane, I will make the same ruling in that I did once before. That is this: if there were any actual threats or actual violence at this plant, that in any way can be chargeable to the respondent, I certainly want to receive it.

Now, I am not going into this organizational campaign that took in the City of Kansas City. Now, I am not going all over that again, and if you want to, you may make as complete an offer of proof on that, and, after all, that may be probably the best way to present that whole problem of this campaign that was going on by the union here in Kansas City, but I can say now that I am not going to receive it in this hearing.

Mr. Ingraham: Well, if your Honor please, in regard to the use of the busses and passes, I understood that you ruled that the respondent could not go into this drive of the International at this time. It, of course, is the respondent's position that on account of what the International was doing, and these other plants, threatening to do against the Donnelly plant, that that was the reason for the busses and the cards, and now, as I understood your ruling, you said that at this time we couldn't present those matters, that that was going into the evidence regarding the conspiracy and the drive of the International against the Donnelly [fol. 1419] plant, and that you didn't think it was proper to go into it.

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, I said that with respect to the respondent, but, of course, I am speaking now of Mr. Langsdale, and I think that the other day—I think, didn't we discuss this same thing and I think Mr. Tyler then brought the matter up, did you not, Mr. Tyler?

Mr. Tyler: I believe so, yes.

Trial Examiner Batten: And at that time I think I said, and you made an offer of proof, did you not, as to the witness which was on the stand?

Mr. Tyler: Yes, I think so.

Trial Examiner Batten: As I remember it. Well, now, I am going to take that position very definitely with respect to the intervener on this entire campaign that went on here in Kansas City, and I think we can just as well determine now that you shall prepare a complete offer of proof on it, because I don't intend to receive it.

Mr. Tyler.

Mr. Tyler: May I understand the Examiner's ruling? Do I understand that you decline to permit us to show that the employees of the plant, as one of their reasons for choosing their own union, were affected by both fear of the campaign carried on by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union at nearby shops, threats that it should be able to be applied to the Donnelly employees, and [fol. 1420] dislike of those methods, you decline to let us show those things as establishing one of the reasons why these employees decided to, of their own free will, form their own union? Is that correct?

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Tyler, not quite that broad. I said that if any threats were made against these Donnelly employees, or any violence there, I even question how material that may be, but I will receive that, but on the other, on your whole idea there that that was one of the reasons for the organization of a Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, and a valid reason, I want an offer of proof submitted on it.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1421] In other words, what I am attempting to do by this is to eliminate from this hearing all of this violence, intimidation, all of those matters, from the present hearing, so that I may have an offer of proof on them and determine at that time just how material they are to this hearing. Now, I don't mind saying, as far as I can see this far, I don't see that they have anything to do with these issues.

• • • • • •

[fol. 1422] Mr. Langsdale: I want to understand the Examiner's ruling on this particular matter. I have understood up to now you have permitted both respondent and the intervener to show threats made to any of the employees but not to go into disturbances that may have occurred at Gerney's or Gordon's, or anything of that sort.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is correct. I want to eliminate everything by this offer of proof except direct threats and direct violence. I think I asked Miss Todd on several occasions, "Did anybody threaten you? Did anybody ever commit any violence as far as you were concerned?" I will receive that in this hearing; I don't want that in the form of an offer of proof.

Mr. Langsdale: It is my opinion, and I think it coincides with the Examiner's, that the intervener would also have a right to show direct threats to their membership as some evidence of why they formed their union. I would hate to see the Examiner exclude that, because I believe it would be error to do so.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Langsdale, I have made two rulings already, one two or three days ago, that exclude that.

Mr. Langsdale: I know you have, but Mr. Lane has made a statement to the effect that he wants to offer evidence of violence and threats as one reason for forming their union. Now, if they can do that, in my humble opinion it [fol. 1423] is material, but to go out and show what was happening at Gordon's and Gerney's, or some remote place, that wasn't a threat or violence toward any of their members, I think that is not proper, and that has been the ruling of the Examiner up to now.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Lane may proceed in line with my ruling.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1424] Mr. Lane: I want to make this further observation with respect to the question I asked:

I desire to show the attitude or state of mind of the employees, whether that attitude was created by rumor or by [fol. 1425] ideas of terrorism, which may or may not be true, nevertheless it is the state of mind which I want to show; and to show further that that state of mind actuated to cause them to want to form their own union, and that would go to the bona fideness of their union and would be a good reason for the formation of their union, whether founded upon fact or not.

Trial Examiner Batten: I agree with you, Mr. Lane. And, even if founded upon information which was absolutely false, if it is relevant to these issues—I mean, the truth or falsity of these things is not in issue.

Mr. Lane: That was the purpose of my question, to show that fact.

Trial Examiner Batten: And that matter, of course, will be included in this offer of proof.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1428] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, don't you think when the Board's witness is on the stand and she is asked some question about buses, instead of letting them put in their case and then when we attempt to repute it, cut us out—

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle, I agree with you, when this—whatever her name is—was on the stand I did permit some of those questions. I will have the record indicate now that all of that testimony is stricken out and [fol. 1429] will have to be resubmitted in the form of an offer of proof. It was really an oversight on my part.

Last night, in working this out, I fully intended to eliminate the two allegations in the complaint. And, as I said a moment ago, if when the Board makes its offers on those, I eliminate them, the respondent has nothing to do.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1429] By Mr. Lane:

Q. Did you at the meeting on the 27th of April, 1937, sign a card similar to this? A. Yes.

Q. A card with the same words that appear on there except, of course, the signature that appears on this card? [fol. 1430] A. I don't remember whether they were the exact words, but it was similar.

Q. You did sign a card similar to this that was passed out at that meeting?

A. Yes, sir. That is April 27.

Q. That is the day on which you had been spending the morning, part of the morning, in Jane Palmer's office?

A. Yes, sir.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1435] Milton Slotkin, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. State your name, please.

A. Milton Slotkin.

Q. What is your address?

A. 4936 Troostwood Road.

Q. By whom are you employed, Mr. Slotkin?

A. By the Kansas City Chair Rental Company.

Q. And in what capacity?

[fol. 1436] A. The capacity of manager.

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. The last two years.

Q. Are you familiar with the books and records of the Kansas City Chair Rental Company?

A. Well, to a certain extent. Not as much as my secretary.

Q. But you have had occasion to review the records of that company? A. Occasionally.

Q. Now, has your company ever had an account with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. With the Donnelly Garment Company; yes, sir.

Q. And over what period of time would you say that you have had an account with the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, as long as I have been there, and I imagine since—well, I imagine about three or four years before that, roughly. I wouldn't say for certain.

Q. Now, has your company on numerous occasions during the last four or five years delivered chairs to the building at 1828 Walnut, which houses the Donnelly Garment Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has your company supplied chairs there rather regularly, at regular intervals, for that company?

A. Well, I wouldn't say that.

Q. Have you made a check of your records to deter-[fol. 1437] mine upon what dates chairs have been rented from your company by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. I have gone into that as far as I possibly could, with the books I had to work with.

Q. Now, I wonder, Mr. Slotkin, if you would turn to your books and state for the record the date, and the number of chairs delivered since 1935.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1438] Trial Examiner Batten: (Interrupting) You mean, those are the original sheets, or those are copies?

A. No, these are the original sheets from my ledger, as far back as I could go.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we object on the ground those are not the books of original entries, but his original entries have been transferred to these sheets, and, further, on the ground that the entries there have not been shown to have been made by this particular witness.

Trial Examiner Batten: I will overrule the objection.

Trial Examiner Batten: This comes out of the regular book you keep down there, doesn't it?

A. It is supposed to; yes, sir.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. You may proceed with your answer.

A. 1936, January 5, 60 chairs for 2 days. March 4—

Q. (Interrupting) Pardon me, Mr. Slotkin. Can you tell who ordered those chairs?

A. I can't tell you that at all. I have no invoices going [fol. 1439] back to this particular year. The only record I have is from 1938, August, until now, when I had a regular system installed by an auditor.

Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Examiner, the respondent objects further on the ground there is [now] showing as to who ordered the chairs that he is purporting to testify about.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, he can read into the record what this ledger sheet shows. Now, if there are any further questions, Mr. Foster, I would suggest that you wait until he has read into the record just what this ledger sheet shows.

* * * * * * *

A. (Continuing) May 9, 40 chairs. June 14, 65 chairs, 3 days.

Mr. Shepard: Would you go a little slower, please?

A. (Continuing) June 14, 65 chairs, 3 days. June 14, 20 chairs for 3 days. August 1, 35 chairs. August 18, 70 chairs, 3 days. December 19, 450 chairs. December 19, 100 childs' chairs.

Mr. Langsdale: What year?

A. 1936.

Mr. Patten: Read the last one again, please.

A. December 19, 450 chairs. December 19, 100 childs' chairs. February 19, 100 chairs, 2 days. March 21, 15 chairs. April 23, 20 chairs.

Mr. Langsdale: 1937 now?

[fol. 1440] A. No. I will inform you when I get to 1937.
Q. That is 1936?
A. Yes, all '36. April 21, 50 chairs.

Mr. Shepard: What month?

A. This is April 21.

Mr. Patten: What year?

A. 1936.
Q. What was the number of chairs on the 23rd?
A. 20.

[fol. 1441] Trial Examiner Batten: He said when he gets to 1937 he will advise all of us. In other words, what he is reading now is 1936.

The Witness: June 12, 100 chairs. April 12, 25 chairs. August 7, 60 chairs, September 26, 40 chairs. October 14, 125 chairs. October 16, 50 chairs. October 16, 50 chairs. October 27, 100 chairs.

November 3, 1,100 chairs. December 19, 154 childs' chairs. December 29, 50 chairs.

I see here by this book that the first eight dates that I gave you gentlemen were for the year 1935. I didn't realize that until I finished that page.

That is all of 1936.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. November 3, 1,100 chairs. That was 1936, was it?

A. That is right.

Q. Whose name is on that ledger?

A. There isnt any one particular person. There is a Miss Fitzgerald here on March 21.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. The account is in the name of Donnelly Garment, 1828 Walnut. Is that not what the ledger sheet shows?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by Donnelly Garment you refer to the Donnelly Garment Company at 1828 Walnut, do you not?

[fol. 1442] A. I wouldn't swear to any order that occurred after 1937, because I wasn't there and I will not take any responsibility for it.

Q. Will you proceed through 1937 as through 1936?

A. February 13, 1937, 50 chairs. February 24, 48 chairs. March 9, 50 chairs. March 9, 100 chairs. March 19, 1,200 chairs.

Mr. Patten: What was that last figure, please?

A. March 19, 1,200 chairs.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Are you positive that is March 18, or March 19?

A. As I understand the system when I came to work there, the entries were made the day after the chairs were picked up.

Q. So, those chairs were delivered for use on March 18?

A. I wouldn't say that. It might have been the 18th or the 19th.

April 28, 1,200 chairs. April 30, 65 chairs.

May 12, 1,200 chairs. June 7, 945 chairs. June 8, 65 chairs.

July 22, 250 chairs. July 22, 750 chairs. July 22, 150 chairs.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. What was the 750 chairs, what date?

A. July 22. The last three dates were all the same.

July 31, 50 chairs.

October 8, 929 chairs. October 12, 65 chairs. October 25, 50 chairs.

[fol. 1443] November 19, 595 chairs.

December 8, 500 chairs. December 8, 75 chairs. December 9, 20 chairs. December 18, 151 childs' chairs and 5 adults' chairs. December 23, 24 chairs. That concludes 1937.

Mr. Foster: What is the heading on that invoice sheet or ledger sheet?

A. Donnelly Garment Company, 1828 Walnut, Miss Fitzgerald and Mr. Price.

* * * * * *

Q. Is he usually the party who puts in the order for chairs, when you have been there?

A. I don't know. I never answered the telephone. My job is outside.

Q. How do you know about what was ordered?

A. I have personally supervised the setting up of the chairs for fashion shows.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1444] Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, may it be understood our objection continues to all of this testimony, on the same ground, the witness did not make the entries, doesn't know who ordered the chairs—

Trial Examiner Batten: You may have a continuing objection, Mr. Stottle.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. I wish you would proceed in the same manner with 1938.

A. There is one more date here for 1937—the 23d, 24 chairs.

Q. The 23d of what month? A. December.

By Mr. Shepard:

Q. I think you gave that. Were there two on the 23d?

A. That is right. It was just continued over to the new ledger.

January 5, 500 chairs. January 2, 500 chairs.

March 9, 500 chairs. March 10, 929 chairs. March 14, 65 chairs. April 6, 500 chairs. April 28, 45 chairs and 6 tables.

May 11, 500 chairs. May 12, 40 chairs and 4 tables. May 16, 25 chairs. May 16, 125 chairs.

June 13, 30 chairs. June 13, 60 chairs and 4 tables. June 15, 400 chairs. June 13, 75 chairs. June 27, 40 chairs.

July 6, 350 chairs. July 12, 600 chairs.

August 3, 500 chairs. August 8, 100 chairs. August 9, 50 chairs.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1446] By Mr. Foster:

Q. Now, do you have any separate accounts with either the Donnelly Garment Sales Company or the Nelly Don Loyalty League?

A. On the reverse side of this ledger sheet I see the girl had made a separate account for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at 1828 Walnut.

Q. When was that second account made?

A. Beginning—

Q. (Interrupting) Started?

A. Beginning of this year, 1939.

Q. The beginning of 1939 was the first time that the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union had an account with your company; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

Mr. Langsdale: What date?

A. Not because of their asking. I don't know why this is on here. I would have to call the office and find out.

Mr. Foster: What date in 1939 did it start? The first of the year?

A. It started with the first month, January 10th.

Q. What are the entries on that account?

A. January 10th, 450 chairs.

Mr. Stottle: What are you reading from now—1939?

A. Still 1939.

Mr. Stottle: I thought you said you had finished—

[fol. 1447] Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): This is the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union account, Mr. Stottle.

Mr. Stottle: Oh; I see.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. January 10—what?

A. 450 chairs. February 7, 450 chairs. March 14, 450 chairs. April 4, 450 chairs.

Now, on here I see she has a notation "Athletic Club". I don't happen to know what that is. There are six orders down here from them.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. You might read those, too, so your record will be complete.

A. March 14, 50 chairs. March 18, 500 chairs. March 19, 50 chairs. March 21, 100 chairs. March 24, 500 chairs. March 25, 450 chairs. May 2, 500 chairs, and June 6, 400 chairs.

Q. Now, Mr. Slotkin, that completes your record or account of the records of the account for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and the Donnelly Garment Company; is that true? A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1448] Q. Mr. Slotkin, do you have any records or documents, deposit slips, indicating in what manner and by whom these various accounts that you have referred to were paid?

A. Yes, sir. I have deposit slips here, only as far back as the ninth month, 1937.

Q. And with what bank are those deposit slips made? [fol. 1449] A. Union National.

Q. I wonder if you would read whatever information is on those deposit slips pertaining to the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. All the way through?

Mr. Stottle: Do I understand, Mr. Examiner, our objection continues as to this testimony, also?

Trial Examiner Batten: Yes, it may. Mr. Foster, I don't know as I understand. You want him to read into the record, you mean, the date of the deposit slip and anything that appears on that slip pertaining to these two requisitions?

* * * * * *

Mr. Foster: I want to find out, if I can, who paid for these invoices for the use of these chairs; if there is anything on those deposit slips tending to show that, I want it read into the record.

Mr. Stottle: Well, we add to our objection that this would not be the best evidence of whether the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union paid for them, as to what they might have written on the deposit slips.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, of course, I can't tell until I see what he is going to read, Mr. Stottle.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1450] Mr. Patten: I want to make a further objection and ask a qualifying question, that is, a preliminary question.

By Mr. Patten:

Q. Mr. Slotkin, did you prepare the deposit slips yourself?

A. Well, a few of them when the girl happened not to be at work or on vacation.

Q. Is the person present who prepared the deposit slips?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is she still in the employ of your company?

A. Well, part of these were prepared before she ever came to work at our company.

Mr. Patten: Now, the intervener, Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, objects to the reading or introduction of [fol. 1451] these deposit slips for the reason that they are not the best evidence. Mr. Slotkin did not prepare them himself, and what somebody, some absent person unknown to this intervener may have put on there is not binding on this intervener.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objection is overruled.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1452] The Witness: Do you want me to read these now?

Mr. Foster: Yes, please.

A. October 25, 1937—Shall I read it exactly as it is on here?

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Yes.

A. Donnelly Gar. $66.33. November 14-38, Donnelly, $19.18.

November 11, 1938, Donnelly, $22.85.

October 12, 1938, Donnelly, Gar. $2.11.

September 12, 1938, Donnelly, $11.22.

October 15, 1938, Donnelly, $10.20.

August 6, 1938, Donnelly Ga. $10.20.

July 30, 1938, Donnelly, 75 cents.

July 21, 1938, Donnelly, $19.38.

June 20, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $8.16. June 19, Nelly Don, $2.94.

Q. What year, please?

A. 1938, June 9.

Mr. Stottle: June 9 or June 19?

[fol. 1453] A. 9.

May 23, Donnelly Garment, $7.65.

May 21, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $10.20. May 20, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $3.36.

April 9, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $10.16.

March 27, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $2.68. March 23, 1938, Donnelly, $70.98.

February 14, 1938, Donnelly, $4.78. And, the same deposit slip, same date, Donnelly Gar., $10.20.

January 12, 1938, Donnelly Gar., $10.20.

December 13, 1937, Donnelly Gar., $10.20. December 3, 1937, Donnelly Gar., $12.14.

November 12, 1937, Donnelly, $5.30. November 8, 1937, Donnelly, $4.08.

January 4, 1938, Donnelly, $16.36.

By Mr. Foster:

Q. Those are all of the deposits that have been made upon the accounts which you have just previously testified to, is that correct?

A. I have a few more.

Q. Excuse me.

A. June 19, 1939, Donnelly Gar., $3.06.

Here is one that is not dated—just says Donnelly Gar., $5.31.

May 12, 1939, Donnelly, $2.04. May 5, 1939, Donnelly Works, $24.48.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1454] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. How much is that?

A. $24.48. On the same deposit slip, the same day, it says, "Nelly Don, Ath., $29.78."

April 15, 1939, Donnelly, $9.18.

March 13, 1939, Donnelly, $22.44.

January 16, 1939, Donnelly Workers, $9.18.

Q. What is that date?

A. January 16, 1939. January 7, 1939, Donnelly, $29.58.

That is all of the deposit slips.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1455] By Mr. Foster:

Q. Mr. Siotkin, I wonder if you would have any objection, when you get back to your office, having your girl bookkeeper come up to this court room and explain a few matters which you evidently have no personal knowledge of, and whether you would have any objection to leaving your books and account records here so that she could have them with her at that time?

A. Do you know specifically when you will need her. I am pretty busy this week. See, she has just came back [fol. 1456] from her vacation. I have been there two weeks, and lots of things to do for the 4th of July, or else, I will lose some orders.

Q. Could you get her up here right away now? I don't believe it would take longer than 15 minutes or so.

A. We have no car there. I imagine she would have to take the street car. You mean you would want her at the same time I am here?

Q. I would want her here as soon as possible. It wouldn't be necessary that you remain, Mr. Slotkin.

A. I see no objection.

Q. Incidentally, Mr. Slotkin, you are here, are you not, under subpoena?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your were subpoenaed to produce the various records which you have testified from. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Mr. Slotkin, we will make arrangements to have some one go with a cab to pick up the young lady at your office. Now, what is her name, please?

A. Her name is Mary Afton Alexander.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1458] Cross-Examination.

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mr. Slotkin, I hand you these pages which have been marked "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7" and ask you to state just what they are.

A. They are the ledger sheets taken from the accounts receivable ledger.

(Thereupon, the documents above referred to were marked as "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7" for identification.)

By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. And where did you get them to bring them to this hearing?

A. My file.

Q. And are those—is that the regular file that you maintain in your office in the regular course of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you any other file containing those same entries?

A. Only in those books.

Q. This is one of the regular and usual records that you keep and maintain in carrying on your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got these from that file to bring to this hearing?

A. That is correct.

[fol. 1459] Q. I mean, I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7.

Now, Mr. Slotkin, is there any other item that you know of, of any chairs having been sent to 1828 Walnut during the period covered by Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7?

A. I couldn't think of any offhand.

Q. Well, these are all of the records, aren't they?

A. They are all that I know about.

Q. So far as you know, this 4, 5, 6 and 7 contain a record of all the chairs that were sent to 1828 Walnut during the period covered by these exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: We offer Exhibits 4, 5, 6 and 7 in evidence.

Mr. Stottle: Respondent objects on the ground that they are not the best evidence, and that the witness personally didn't make the entries; that there is no showing that any person authorized by the Donnelly Garment Company ordered any particular item on the list; that it is not binding on the respondent and constitutes hearsay, and is wholly immaterial to the issues.

Mr. Langsdale: Of course, they are taken from the regular records used and maintained in the business of this witness, and are material for whatever they prove.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Patten.

Mr. Patten: Intervener objects for the reason that how [fol. 1460] the Chair Rental Company may have kept the books is a matter wholly beyond the control of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union, or the respondent, for that matter. There is no showing here, either the respondent or the intervening union directed these accounts to be mixed up and kept on one ledger sheet.

Trial Examiner Batten: The objections are overruled. They will be received.

(The documents heretofore marked as "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7" were received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 1462] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Now, do you know who wrote on this invoice "Donnelly Garment Workers' Union"?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Did you have any account with the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union at that time, as far as these ledger sheets show?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. With the union?

Q. Yes. On October 31, 1938?

A. Well, I would say no, not that I know of.

Q. Well, 4, 5, 6 and 7 contain records of the accounts of all of the chairs that were sent to 1828 Walnut, by the period covered by 4, 5, 6 and 7, do they not?

A. Yes, sir. It is designated there on the ledger sheet so, whether they were for the Workers' Union, or whatever they were for, as far as I can see. You know as much about those ledger sheets as I do.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1470] Q Now, I show you I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 4 and call your attention to the item dated March 19, 1200 chairs, Invoice No. 1497, $24, and ask you what is written in the left-hand column of that record.

A. Did you say 1497?

Q. Yes.

A. "Nelly Don Loyalty League."

Q. That is for March 19, 1937, is it?

A. 1937; yes, sir.

Q. I hand you the same exhibit, I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 4, and call your attention to invoice No. 1934, dated April 28, 1200 chairs at $24.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And ask you to state what is written in the left-hand column of that record.

A. "Nelly Don Loyalty League."

Q. That is 1937?

A. Yes, sir.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1475] Q. I suppose the payment of this account was always made by check?

A. As far as I knew.

Q. That was indicated by your deposit slips?

A. Well, we can't say that unless we actually check the slips against—

Q. Let me have those deposit slips you testified from.

(The deposit slips referred to were handed by the witness to Mr. Langsdale.)

A. Those are the ones I testified to.

[fol. 1476] Mr. Langsdale: Will you mark these as exhibits, please?

Trial Examiner Batten: I would suggest that you mark those exhibit No. 8, 8-A, B, C, and so forth.

(Thereupon the deposit slips above referred to were marked "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits No. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.")

[fol. 1477] By Mr. Langsdale:

Q. Mr. Slotkin, I hand you these deposit slips which have been marked "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit 8-A to 8-GG," inclusive, and ask you to state where you got them to bring them to this court room?

A. Out of my filing cabinets.

Q. And is that filing cabinet maintained there in the regular course of your business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where you keep that kind of records permanently?

A. Well, only for about 2 or 3 years. Then we put them in a box.

Q. But during that two or three years you keep them there, do you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is where you got them this morning?

A. Only the ones for 1939. The others came from the box.

Q. The others came from where?

A. Came from a box where we store our old records that we have there.

Q. Well, that is a box where you regularly in the course of your business store your records of that age or date, is it?

A. Well, it is where we will, the records that we have, yes.

Q. You got them from that place?

[fol. 1478] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And brought them to the court room this morning?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Langsdale: I offer International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG, inclusive.

Mr. Stottle: The respondent objects to the introduction of these exhibits for all the reasons that we have heretofore urged, including the fact that they are not the best evidence; that there is no showing by this witness—

Trial Examiner Batten (interrupting): Now, just a minute, on that point. What would be the best evidence?

Mr. Stottle: The best evidence I would say, or some of the best evidence, would be an invoice that had been sent to these different persons and the payment of this. This is just a deposit slip in the bank.

Trial Examiner Batten: You mean the payment—you mean the check it was paid with?

Mr. Stottle: Well, an invoice that it had been paid with. This is not even the check. It is just a notation on a bank slip.

Trial Examiner Batten: That is true, but I assume that what we are trying to do here is get a complete record. I presume we will have to take it in part.

Mr. Stottle: Well, that is one of the objections, that it is not the best evidence and hasn't any sufficient relation [fol. 1479] to this to have any probative effect or tend to prove or disprove any of the issues in this case. Furthermore, we object that the items on here were not made by this particular witness, and not shown to have been made by any person that would bind the respondent or the intervener, even bind this company; that it constitutes hearsay testimony and is so mixed up with other records and so mixed up between the parties here, charges to one and payment by another, that it is wholly impossible to be separated.

Trial Examiner Batten: That doesn't indicate that on these slips, does it?

Mr. Stottle: But the testimony taken together with these slips indicates that.

* * * * * *

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, we wish to add, also, that it is not made from—it doesn't constitute the original entry made in this company. It is about 3 or 4 degrees off from that. The original records, entries, would be the best evi-[fol. 1480] dence.

Trial Examiner Batten: If there is no further objection, they will be received.

Mr. Patten: Intervener makes the same objection as the respondent.

Trial Examiner Batten: They will be received.

(The documents heretofore marked as "I.L.G.W.U. Exhibits Nos. 8-A to 8-GG," inclusive, were received in evidence.)

* * * * * *

[fol. 1483] Mr. Langsdale: I think that is all.

Trial Examiner Batten: Mr. Stottle.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, Respondent now renews its motion to strike out all of the evidence of this witness, including the exhibits introduced while he has been on the stand, for the reason that there hasn't been any showing that would make them probative evidence in this case. The items are all lumped together under one account, when the witness has stated that some of them might have been for other accounts. The deposit slips are all lumped together and there is nothing here that would enable the Examiner to give any credence to the statements because they are so mixed up and were kept in such a way that they don't show the true facts, and for the further objection that we have already made, it is not the best evidence, and not the original record entries, and not binding on the respondent.

[fol. 1484] Trial Examiner Batten: The motion to strike is denied.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Slotkin, I hand you I.L.G.W.U. Exhibit No. 4 and will ask you if you know who ordered the first item there, February 13, 50 Acme, $4?

Mr. Langsdale: What year is it?

Mr. Stottle: 1937.

A. No, sir, I don't.

By Mr. Stottle:

Q. I will ask you if you know who ordered the second item?

A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. Dropping down to the fifth item, opposite which is written the notation "Nelly Don Loyalty League", March 19, 1200 chairs, I will ask you if you know who ordered those.

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know whether they were ordered for the Donnelly Garment Company or the Loyalty League or for whom they were ordered?

A. No, sir.

[fol. 1485] Q. Dropping down to the item of April 28, opposite which is "Nelly Don Loyalty League, 1,200 chairs," I will ask you if you know who ordered that item.

A. I can't say, because I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether it was ordered for the Nelly Don Loyalty League or for the Donnelly Garment Company or for the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. As far as you know, it might have been ordered by any one of those or used by any one of those?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it not a fact that it might have been ordered by the Athletic Club, as far as you know?

A. Perhaps.

Q. Is it not a fact, Mr. Slotkin, that as to all of the items, each and all of the items, on I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7 that you do not know who ordered any one of those items or for whose use they were ordered?

A. No, sir, I can't say.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1486] By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Do you know whether any of these items were ordered by or used by the Donnelly Garment Company or the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union or the Nelly Don Athletic Club or the Loyalty League?

A. I can't say specifically, no.

Q. Isn't it a fact that all of these items were lumped together in the one account under the name Donnelly Garment Company until perhaps 1939, when there was some separation?

A. Yes, sir; that is the way it was when I came.

Q. And is it not a fact that, although they were listed under Donnelly Garment Company, notations appear throughout the account of "Workers' Union"?

A. Yes, sir, those notations appear.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1489] Q. Isn't it a fact that these ledger sheets, I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7, were made up from those invoices or from other records of your company?

A. They were supposed to have been made up from the invoices.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. When you have a person call in for some chairs you immediately write out an order, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that written out in triplicate, duplicate, or—

A. In triplicate.

Q. Then, it is from that record that the entries are made on this sheet, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Then, you do have an invoice down there for each one of these items?

A. I don't know, for all of them. You see, our records were destroyed, a lot of them, when I came to work there. After a year I managed to get myself lined up so I could install a regular system.

Q. You mean, up to a year ago you had no regular in[fol. 1490] voice records?

A. Nothing I could go to like I can now.

Q. Have you anything—

A. I might have some old invoices, a few of them, pertaining to those ledger sheets, and I might not.

Q. What records were destroyed?

A. The invoices. You see, they are all mixed up.

Q. You say you destroyed the invoice records?

A. They were destroyed. I didn't destroy them myself.

Q. Someone representing your company destroyed them?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, then, you do not have the invoices or the carbons for these invoices running back over a year ago?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Stottle: Mr. Examiner, respondent now renews its objection to strike I. L. G. W. U. exhibits Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 7 for the reason that they are not the original entries but are made up from some other records which were not the original entries.

Trial Examiner Batten: I think I denied the same motion a while ago.

Mr. Stottle: I understand, Mr. Examiner, but this fact has been brought out since then.

Trial Examiner Batten: You certainly wouldn't expect him to produce invoices that had been destroyed, would you?

[fol. 1491] Mr. Stottle: No. But he says these are not the original entries.

Trial Examiner Batten: Well, that would go to the weight to be given to these.

Mr. Stottle: May I explain the point is, those original entries might have had Donnelly Garment Workers' Union on the invoice. If we had those it would show who was the person who ordered them.

Trial Examiner Batten: But, Mr. Stottle, they are destroyed. If the record is destroyed it is impossible to get it.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1520] Recross Examination.

* * * * * * *

[fol. 1534] By Mr. Stottle:

Q. Now, Mr. Slotkin, to clear up the question the Examiner asked in this particular order that you have been testifying about, which is Board's Exhibit 16-A and 16-B, which you say you wrote up, you wrote that up from some memorandum that is on a sticker on the desk?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time you thought it was the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Well, I might have thought—or I might have just seen Donnelly Garment Workers' Union and just made it out to the Donnelly Garment. You see, by our ledger, we [fol. 1535] didn't attempt to make it different.

Q. Then two days later the girl who took the order in the first place made out the corrected bill to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union because, as you say, she knew who had placed the order?

A. That is right.

Q. That is what your testimony is?

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Now, you say that was just exactly the way it was done. The girl did it because she found she had made a mistake. Is that what you mean?

A. No, because she seen the invoice wasn't made out correctly.

Q. In other words, then, the girl in your office found this error and no one called concerning an invoice, is that it?

A. I didn't state specifically that some one called. I said they might.

Q. I am asking you now, you said to Mr. Stottle, as I gatbered it, your answer was that the girl found out she made a mistake so she made out another invoice. Now, was that the way it happened, do you know?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Or might it have happened the other way?

A. It might have happened the other way.

Mr. Stottle: Now, Mr. Slotkin, does the same situation—the same situation has been gone into as to two other ex- [fol. 1536] hibits here where the original to the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union is made out that way, and the carbon copies which you have read "Donnelly Garment Company". What is your explanation on those other two instances, Intervener's Exhibit 10 and Intervener's Exhibit 8?

A. The same possibility occurred there as on the first one that we discussed.

[fol. 1593] ELSA LOU GREENHAW, a witness called by and on behalf of the National Labor Relations Board, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. State your name, please.

A. Mrs. Elsa Lou Greenhaw.

Q. What is your address?

A. 503 East Walnut.

Mr. Ingraham: Kansas City, Missouri?

A. Portland, Indiana.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Examiner, I am sorry, I can't hear the witness. Will you have her speak a little louder, if you can?

Trial Examiner Batten: Will you please speak louder, so they can all hear you.

By Mr. Leary:

Q. Is that a permanent address of yours, Mrs. Greenhaw?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Do you have a permanent address?

A. At present I do not.

Q. Were you ever employed by the Donnelly Garment Company?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you remember when you began your employment with that company?

A. I think it was in the spring of 1936.

[fol. 1594] Q. And in what capacity were you employed by the company at that time?

A. At that time I was a stenographer.

Q. What experience had you had as a stenographer before you went with the Donnelly Garment Company, in numbers of years, I mean?

A. Well, I had some years of experience as a stenographer, and perhaps about six in secretarial work.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1595] Q. When was it that you left the employ of the company?

A. November, 1937.

Q. And under what circumstances did you leave?

A. I was married.

Q. Did you resign? A. Yes.

[fol. 1596] Q. Did you have a supervisor in the order department?

A. The head of the order department was Miss Ruth Alexander. I don't believe she was called supervisor, however.

Q. How many persons were in the order department when you worked there?

A. I think about 25. There may have been some in addition to that who spent their time down in the factory, I don't know.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1597] Mr. Leary: Did Miss Alexander ever give you directions?

A. Just very infrequently.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1601] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Mrs. Greenhaw, I show you what purports to be a photostatic copy of what has been referred to here as a Loyalty petition dated March 2, 1937, as follows:

"We, the undersigners, as members of the Donnelly Garment Company, wish to make it known we are positively happy and contented with the position which we hold with this organization and refuse to acknowledge any union labor organization. We are thankful for the real humanitarian interest extended by our employer, Mrs. Reed."

Do you remember ever seeing either that document or one containing similar words upon its heading?

A. Yes, I do.

* * * * * *

[fol. 1602] By Mr. Leary:

Q. Do you remember who it was who showed you that document?

A. I believe it was Pauline Shartzer.

Q. Who was Pauline Shartzer?

A. She was either a bookkeeper or stenographer in the accounting department.

Q. And had you known Pauline Shartzer in your work around the Donnelly Garment plant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you when Pauline Shartzer spoke to you about the so-called Loyalty petition?

A. At my desk.

Q. Was it during the working hours?

A. Yes.

Q. And did she have anything in her hand when she came to you to speak about the Loyalty petition?

A. Just the petition, I think, and a pen.

Q. Were there names signed on the petition at the time?

A. I believe a few.

Q. What, if anything, did Pauline Shartzer say to you?

A. She asked me if I would like to sign it.

Q. What, if anything, did you do?

[fol. 1603] A. I read it and told her I didn't want to sign it.

Q. Well, I direct your attention to March 8, 1937, Mrs. Greenhaw, and ask you if on that date you attended any meeting which was attended by other employees of the Donnelly Garment Company.

A. Yes, I think there was a meeting of all the employees that day.

Q. How do you identify—strike that, please. Was that the first large meeting of employees that you remember as having happened about this period of March and April, 1937?

A. Of course, it is hard to recall dates, you know.

Q. Well, how do you identify it by the events that happened at the first large meeting you attended during this period?

A. One of the first meetings Mrs. Reed talked to the employees.

Q. Now, with reference to this meeting where Mrs. Reed talked to the employees, I ask you to state in what manner you were advised that the meeting would be held?

A. I think we were informed by the head of our department.

Mr. Ingraham: I move the answer be stricken out as speculative.

Trial Examiner Batten: It may stand.

By Trial Examiner Batten:

Q. Who was the head of your department?

A. Miss Alexander.

[fol. 1604] By Mr. Leary:

Q. What, if anything, did she say to you with regard to this meeting?

A. She told us there was to be a meeting of the employees on the second floor at a certain time, and we were all to be there.

Q. Did you go to the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what time that meeting took place?

A. In the late afternoon, I think, about 4 o'clock.

Q. Do you know Rose Todd?

A. I do.

. . . . . .

[fol. 1605] Q. Did you see Mrs. Reed at the meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. What, if anything, did Mrs. Reed say at this meeting?

A. She talked to us with reference to something that had been in the paper, I believe, just before that time. I think the newspaper article, or letter, or whatever it was—possibly it was a letter that had been sent to the company, and I think it was read first.

Q. It had been sent to the company by whom?

A. By the labor union.

Q. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union?

A. I couldn't be positive just from whom it came.

Q. Nonetheless, the letter was read?

A. Yes.

Q. And after the letter was read, what, if anything did Mrs. Reed say?

A. She said she wouldn't permit a union to come in and tell her how to run her business, she wouldn't be dictated to by any labor individuals, and she named Mr. Dubinsky particularly.

Q. Do you remember what, if anything, she said about Mr. Dubinsky?

A. She said, "I won't allow Dubinsky or any other 'ski' to tell me how to run my business."

[fol. 1606] Q. Do you remember at this time any other things that were said or done at that meeting?

A. Well, I believe Miss Todd spoke to us, and I think there was a general expression of loyalty from the employees—that is, in response to Miss Todd's remarks, or possibly there was some other individual.

Q. I direct your attention, Mrs. Greenhaw, to April 27, 1937, and ask you to state whether or not you again attended a meeting of the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company on the second floor of the building.

A. Yes, there was another meeting about that time.

Q. What is the outstanding incident that you remember about that meeting? How do you identify it in your mind?

A. Well, there were a number of meetings along over a period of time and it is a little hard for me to say what happened at each meeting.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Frank Tyler?

A. Yes, I have heard him speak.

Q. Where was the first time that you ever saw Mr. Tyler?

A. He spoke to the employees of the Donnelly Garment Company.

Q. Would you say that that was on the date of April 27?

A. I imagine about that time.

Q. Now, with that recollection established, Mrs. Greenhaw, do you remember how you were advised that that meeting of April 27 was to be held?

[fol. 1607] A. I think, in the same manner.

Q. That is, by Miss Alexander?

A. Yes. Somebody in the department asked us to go to the second floor for a meeting.

Q. Do you remember at what time of day that meeting was held?

A. I think, in the late afternoon.

Q. I direct your attention to May 25, 1937, Mrs. Greenhaw, and ask if on that date you attended a meeting of the Donnelly Garment Workers' Union.

A. I believe so.
